And thy neighbor as thyself -- Whoever loves his neighbor will not intentionally injure him in act, word or thought. Hence love expresses the full measure of the Law's requirements. (Rom. 13:10) R5287:2

But must first love God to the extent of being anxious to do those things which are pleasing in his sight. R4662:3

Neither should we expect a neighbor to love us better than himself. R3805:1

Every one in adversity and needing our help is our neighbor, whom we should love sympathetically, and should help. R3804:5, 5369:6

Our Lord requires his disciples to go beyond this; to have a sympathetic love for our enemies. R3804:6

Only Jesus kept that law of love in perfection of letter and spirit and we, to the best of our ability, keep the spirit of the divine law.

R3805:4, 5287:4

"That the righteousness of the law might be fulfilled in us, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit." (Rom. 8:4) R3805:4, 5287:4

Our love for the Lord and the brethren is love of the very highest type.

R3804:6

It does not say "better than thyself," hence Christ's course of self-sacrifice in our behalf went beyond this requirement. R3804:6

Luke 10:28

Answered right -- Showing that this Doctor of the Law was well versed, for he quoted correctly the most direct statement on the subject to be found in the Law. R2683:5

Jesus implying, "I confirm the Law, I uphold it; I vouch for its truthfulness; none who keep that Law can possibly die. The difficulty with all Jews who have died has been that they did not fulfill that Law requirement toward God and man. R2683:5

This do -- This is the simplest and slightest obedience that the Lord will accept. If you and I do not come up to that standard you and I will not get perfect life. This is the standard of all creation. No angel will be granted eternal life unless they have this perfection. Q439:T

The Great Teacher pointed out that the fault was not in God, that God was not unfaithful to his agreement under the Law, that the fault lay with the people. R2683:6

Thou shalt live -- The Law covenant proposed everlasting life upon the terms of keeping the Law. R5072:5

So Jesus life was not taken from him; for his life could be taken from him only by his disobedience. R5342:4

Showing him out of his own testimony that he was not keeping the Law as he and the Pharisees pretended to do. R5369:3

To justify himself -- In the estimation of some present who, by their incredulous faces, indicated that they did not think this man always acted as if he loved his neighbor as himself, and God supremely. R1940:4

Said unto Jesus -- Very shrewdly avoiding discussion of the first commandment, respecting love for God, because no one can thoroughly judge another in respect to this feature of the Law. R2683:6

Who is my neighbor? -- The lawyer sought to imply that God's Law did not include everybody as his neighbor, but only special ones. R5369:5

In a special sense the Jews recognized themselves as being God's people.

Therefore under the Law they recognized each other as neighbors; for they were all the people of the Lord. R5699:3

There was a difference of opinion here amongst the most learned Jews--some claiming that it meant all Jews, and Jews only. Others claimed that it would mean only those Jews who lived holy lives. R2683:6

The scribes and Pharisees felt that their neighbors were those who belonged to their class, to their set, to their station in life. R3804:2
Apparently recognizing this as his most vulnerable point. He knew, in his daily life, he was not loving his neighbor as himself, but making a wide discrimination between his own class and the common people, the publicans and sinners. R3804:1
We are to recognize every one who is in adversity and needing our help as our neighbor. R3804:5

Luke 10:30

Jerusalem to Jericho -- Along a bridle path, in some places quite steep, passing through a gorge in the mountains, a vicinity infested with robbers, who lived in the numerous caves. R3804:2, 2684:4

Fell among thieves -- Even today it is the custom for travelers to have an armed escort of Arabs on this journey to Jericho. R3804:2

A certain priest -- One of the highest representatives of the Law. R5369:5, 2684:1

Jericho was one of the appointed cities of the priests and Levites. It is estimated that 12,000 of them resided there. They took their turns at the service in the Temple at Jerusalem, and, consequently, were frequently on this road. R2684:4

He passed by -- The priest, most fully consecrated to the service of God in the temple, is represented as having least interest in the brother in distress. R2684:4

As if he were afraid he would be contaminated by even paying attention to the sufferer. Q808:2

Lest he also might be beset by robbers. R3804:2

We are inclined to believe that the priests and Levites, on account of their office, were generally exempted from molestation by the robbers. R2684:5

On the other side -- His effort to evade responsibility by passing by on the other side of the roadway proved that he understood the neighborly obligation of human brotherhood. R1767:6

Luke 10:32

A Levite -- Not so close, in relationship to God, as a priest. R5699:3, 5369:5

Consecrated to God's service, set apart as instructors of the people, to guide them by word and example. R3804:3, 2684:5, 5369:5

Most of the Doctors of the Law were Levites. R2684:2

Came and looked -- The Levite was more disposed to consider the poor brother. He went so far as to stand and look at the sufferer and to think over how much trouble would be involved in assisting him and how much risk he himself might run in so doing. R2684:5

Passed by -- Unwilling to spend the time necessary to render assistance. R3804:2

A certain Samaritan -- One not in relationship to God at all. R5699:6, 5369:5

A mixed people, common, and despised by the priestly class of Jews. Q808:2 Unrecognized by God and disowned by his favored people. This heightens the force of the picture. R2684:5

Introduced into the parable to make a strong contrast before the minds of the hearers, and to say, A neighbor is one who does a neighborly act, however high or low he may be on the scale of intelligence, dignity or divine favor. R2684:2

It might be that some who are strangers to God as yet, might be good Samaritans by nature, rather than by grace; and some, who have been begotten again may naturally have less of this good Samaritan element of kindness and generosity, because low born according to the flesh. R2684:5

Took care of him -- Sacrificing his own time and strength in the wounded man's interest. R5369:5

Two pence -- Representing two days' wages. R4622:3

Come again -- Return from Jerusalem. R5369:5

Was neighbor -- Would fulfill the requirements of the Law, in your judgment? R5369:5

Not that the Samaritan of the parable, by doing a kind and neighborly act, won for himself the inheritance of eternal life. R2684:1

If we appreciate the conception of a true neighbor which our Lord gave, then let us observe the Golden Rule. R5699:6

The whole world are neighbors, no matter how far apart they are. R5699:6 Every man is neighbor to every other man. To ignore the claims of human brotherhood is meanly selfish and inhuman. R1940:4; Q808:2

And he said -- He himself belonged to the Levite class condemned by the parable. R3804:3

That shewed mercy -- Jesus showed him out of his own testimony that he was not keeping the law as he pretended to do and as the Pharisees in general pretended to do. R5369:3

We are to express our love for our neighbor by being thoughtful and considerate of his welfare and interests, and helpful to him as far as in our power, other obligations being considered. R5700:1

Do thou likewise -- Go and understand that any man in the world, friend or foe, is your neighbor and is to be loved and served by you as you may have opportunity. R3804:3

Be kind, thoughtful, generous, toward any human being who is in affliction, in need of help. R5369:6

Be a living exemplification of the Apostle's injunction: doing good to all men as you have opportunity, especially to the household of faith. (Gal. 6:10) R2684:6; Q808:2

Show the spirit of love toward any man in the world, friend or foe. R3804:3, 5699:6, 5369:6, 1768:1, 1767:6

The evil designs of the unbeliever were frustrated. R1940:4

Recognize the obligations of human brotherhood, and the Golden Rule. R1768:1

Heard his word -- The Lord's people should not think that time taken for communion with the Lord and for study of his Word is wasted time. NS86:6

Let us have in mind that he is specially pleased when we give earnest attention to his words and seek to be filled with and guided by his Spirit. R5371:4

Much serving -- Martha chose a good part. She was indeed "not slothful in business, fervent in spirit, serving the Lord." (Rom. 12:11) NS86:3

Dost thou not care -- Our Lord's contrast between the two sisters would probably not have been brought out had not Martha murmured against her sister, thinking her indifferent to the proper hospitality of the home. NS86:3

And Jesus answered -- The remark being called forth by Martha's complaint against her sister. R2743:3

Thou art careful -- Worried. R4489:2*

Jesus did not disapprove of Martha and her carefulness as a cook in providing for his comfort. R5371:4

Luke 10:42

Chosen the good part -- Martha loved the Lord so that she wanted to do for him. Mary loved the Lord and the things which the Lord loved and delighted to talk about, to such an extent that she could not forego the pleasure of his company and fellowship. NS86:3

Mary appreciated more than Martha the spiritual food which the Lord was dispensing. NS86:4

Every day and every hour we are confronted with conflicting interests and propositions. NS80:2

A principle illustrated in the choices of Abraham, Jacob and Esau, Joseph and our Lord, as compared to that of Satan. NS81-84

While service is quite acceptable and appreciated, veneration and fellowship are still more appreciated. R2743:3

He is specially pleased when we give earnest attention to his words, and seek to be filled with his spirit. R5371:4

The Lord never taught the multitudes to pray nor intimated that they should. The privilege of prayer implies intimate acquaintance with the Creator. R3805:2

The prayer of God's people should not be for temporal things. R5624:4

"Prayer is the soul's sincere desire, uttered or unexpressed." R2251:2

There is a difference between worship--adoration, homage--and prayer.

Expressing thanks anyone may do; but making requests of God in prayer is a limited privilege. R5379:1

None is privileged to pray unless he is a consecrated disciple of Jesus. R5379:2

As children of God, we are to conform our prayers to what he has said. R5624:6

Luke 11

Luke 11:1

As he was praying -- Realizing the importance of his mission, Jesus kept properly in touch with the great Author of the plan of salvation, his Heavenly Father. R5378:6

If he, in his perfection, needed to have spiritual fellowship and communion with the Father, we, his disciples, imperfect, have much more need to look continually to the Lord for guidance and comfort. R3351:3

Apparently Jesus usually prayed alone. On some occasions he spent the entire night in prayer to God. R5378:3, 3351:3

Instead of urging them to pray, Jesus by his example taught them to desire the privilege and blessing of prayer. R5379:1

Perceiving his intimate communication with God, and that God always promptly heard and answered him, they evidently felt that there must be something in his manner of approach to God which secured such prompt recognition and answers. R1945:5

His disciples said -- The Lord waited until they asked him for instruction on the subject. R3805:2

No doubt they noted the Master's frequency in prayer, and the blessing which he seemed to receive therefrom. R5379:1

Lord, teach us to pray -- Not that the disciples had never prayed. In common with the Jews in general, they had been accustomed to go to God in prayer. They realized that, as our Lord's teachings were different from the scribes and Pharisees, so also his conception of prayer was probably different. R3351:2, 1945:1

Had he been much in the habit of praying with them audibly, we may presume that they would have known to take his style of praying as proper copy for their own. R3351:6

It is well that we inquire who may pray, and for what things we may petition the great Creator, else we might be praying without authority, or praying amiss, as St. James declares some do. R5379:1

When ye pray, say -- Not "say ye," but rather, as elsewhere given, "after this manner pray ye." (Matt. 6:9)--our Lord gave not the words for our prayers, but a general sample of style. R3351:6, 3806:4

Our prayers should be uttered, formulated, and, if possible, not be left merely to incoherent feelings. R2251:3

A sample prayer, a suggestion of the general character of their petitions, and not to be understood as binding their terms, their expressions, their words. R3806:4

The account of this prayer, as given by Luke, differs considerably from the account given by Matthew, which is apparently the much more complete statement. R3351:6

Our spirit or intention is accepted by the Lord in seasons of distress, when we cannot utter the words. R2251:2

We are to be constantly in an attitude of prayer. R3351:5, 3806:1

Our Father -- The term, Our Father, would necessarily be a new one to the Jews, for they were a house of servants. This prayer would assure them that God recognized them, not as servants merely, but as sons. R3352:1

Implying that the suppliant is on terms of intimate acquaintance with the great Creator of the universe, so that he is welcomed into the divine presence and heart. R3805:3

Only those who have become God's children by forsaking sin and laying hold upon Christ as their Savior are accorded the privilege of approaching the throne of grace. R3805:3

Implying: (1) faith in the divine being; (2) dependence upon him; (3) faith that a way of reconciliation has been effected through the Redeemer; and (4) a realization that the Creator no longer condemns the suppliant, but accepts him as his son. R3805:3

The God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ is our Father who hath begotten us. R297:1

It is devoid of selfishness. Instead of "I" and "me," the prayer is comprehensive of all who are truly the Lord's people, in any class--we, us, our. R5379:2, 3805:5

Does not imply the fatherhood of God to all mankind. R2252:6

We might reasonably suppose that the children of believers and justified believers, who have not yet reached the point of making a consecration, would have the right of addressing the Redeemer in prayer. R3806:3

The man of the world, when first getting a view of his lost condition, should "come to Jesus." (Matt. 11:28) After his justification he comes to the Father in Jesus' name. R469:4*

What could be more reverent than this bold approach, direct to the throne of the heavenly grace. R2005:1

God, in calling himself our Father, does not borrow the epithet from earth. In the very beginning he founded the earthly parental relation that it might explain the heavenly. It is the invisible world which is the fact; it is the visible world which is the metaphor. R29:5*

"Children of wrath" (Eph. 2:3), "children of the devil" (1 John 3:10), have no right to pray thus. R2252:6

"To as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God." (John 1:12) The affection of a true father for his child is one of the most precious in the world. R3352:1

The word "our" implies an interest in the other sons of the family of God. R3805:5

The prayer of the publican, approved by our Lord, did not address Jehovah as "Father" but as "God." (Luke 18:13) R2251:3

How inconsistent if Jesus himself were the Father!. R5378:3

In the type none but the priests offered incense before the Lord, teaching that only the Royal Priesthood now have this privilege. R3806:3

No unconsecrated believer has any acceptance at the throne of grace. R3806:3

Which art in heaven -- As the heavens are higher than the earth, so are the Lord's ways and provisions higher than our conception and in every way to be preferred. R3806:1

The Bible gives God a home, or locality, and does not teach that he is everywhere. OV375:2

Hallowed be -- Expressing adoration and appreciation of divine goodness and greatness, and a corresponding reverence. R3352:2

An acknowledgment of God's greatness, and implies our humility and littleness. R2252:6

We honor his name--put it first in our petitions. R5624:5

We should approach with humility, simplicity and reverence, and in the name of Jesus. R2251:3

The proper reverential attitude of a believer toward God. R1945:6, 5379:3, 3806:3, 3352:2, 2005:1

Reverence for God should be first in all our thoughts, but is losing ground everywhere in our day, even among the Lord's true people. R5624:5, 3352:2

Thy name -- Even his very name is revered as holy by the true worshipper. R2253:1 Thy character. R5379:3

His name stands for everything that is just, wise and loving. R3806:4

We are to pray for nothing that would not be in accord with the honor of our Heavenly Father's name, considering first the will and honor of God as superior to our own and every other interest. R3352:2

A name represents the character, the disposition or qualities or powers of an individual. R3687:3

Thy kingdom come -- These words are not found in the older manuscripts in Luke, but are found in the Matthew manuscript, and therefore properly considered a part of the petition. R3806:4

Not proceeding hastily to the lesser things of a personal character. R2005:1

As God and his glory and honor are to be first in the minds of his children, so the next thought should be for the glorious Kingdom, which he has promised shall bless the world. R3352:3

Carrying the thought of joint-heirship with our Lord in the great Millennial Kingdom. NS141:5

The promise and hope held before the Church was always the hope of the Kingdom. R1855:3

The Church is the Kingdom in the embryo sense. When glorified with full Kingdom power and glory, it shall bless the families of the earth. HG146:3

We must be born again; begotten of the Spirit now, and in resurrection power born of the Spirit, if we shall share with our Lord in this wonderful Kingdom. HG145:3; NS102:3

The "manifestation of the sons of God" (Rom. 8:19) will be their glorification as the Kingdom Church in glory. HG234:6

We are not to permit our own personal needs to be too prominent, but are to remember that the whole creation is groaning and travailing in pain together, waiting for this glorious Kingdom. R3352:3

It is fitting that all who approach God in prayer should previously have searched to know something of what he has revealed concerning his will and plan. R2005:1

We do right to pray this week after week, year after year, century after century. To grow faint or weary in prayer would not be right. The proper course is to believe what God has promised. Q539:4

Not a demand; rather, an acknowledgment of faith in the divine promise that a heavenly Kingdom shall, in God's due time, be established in the earth. R2253:1

Not a petition that God would bring in his Kingdom before his appointed time, nor an expression of an impatient longing for it, but an expression of hope, trust and patient waiting. R2005:1

No attempt to tell the Lord what must be done, and how and when his Kingdom must be established; but merely expressing acquiescence with the divine arrangement, and rejoicing therein. R2253:2

Not only manifesting faith in God and in his promise to establish righteousness in the earth, but that the suppliant is in his heart in sympathy with God and his righteousness and out of sympathy with the Reign of Sin and Death. R5379:3

Longing for the Kingdom that will bless the world, they also long for the promised privilege of being joint-heirs with their Redeemer as members of that Kingdom class. R3806:5

Our thoughts respecting the Kingdom will remind us that if we are to be heirs of the Kingdom it will be necessary that we have the appropriate discipline and training. R3352:4

World-wide, as pictured by the stone which smote the image becoming exceeding great and filling the whole earth. (Dan. 2:35) NS27:5

Established upon the ruins of present institutions. NS13:5, 57:5

Following the Armageddon of anarchy. HG674:3

This thought will make all the afflictions and trials of the present time seem to us light afflictions. R3352:4

This petition is not a demand, but an expression of faith in God's promise. R2253:1, 5379:3, 5020:2

To abolish sin and establish righteousness in the earth. R5379:3, 3352:4

For the blessing of the whole world. R1945:6, 3352:3

For a thousand years The Christ will bless mankind, uplifting them to human perfection, mental, moral, physical. R5768:5

Eventually shall be "the desire of all nations." (Hag. 2:7) R2685:2

In glory and power. R1908:3, 3352:3, 2231:1; OV359:3

The very thing that the whole world needs. R5624:5

The panacea for every ill and trouble, for ourselves and all men. R3352:3

Messianic Kingdom, the Kingdom of God's dear Son. R4973:4; SM60:2

Those who have part in the first resurrection will share in the throne, in its glory and work of blessing. R3832:5, 5761:6, 3352:4, 2924:3

There can be no paradise until his Kingdom shall come and present empires pass away. R3902:4, 5789:4 A humble acknowledgment that it has not yet come, although this prayer has been offered for nineteen centuries.

We are now living in the time when the new Reign of Righteousness shall be inaugurated. OV350:2

According to the prophecies, Messiah's Kingdom began in 1878, and will be fully inaugurated at the close of the great time of trouble. R5762:1

There are evidences on every hand that we are in the dawning of the Kingdom, even though its Sun of Righteousness cannot fully arise until the Church shall have passed beyond the veil. R5762:2

If Christ had his Kingdom, we would not be praying thus. Q523:5

Many peculiar ideas prevail because of a false theory that the Kingdom has already been set up in glory. The present war [1915] is the beginning of a series of troubles which will wind up the present order of things and inaugurate the new dispensation of Messiah's Kingdom. R5761:6

When the Church shall all have been gathered, then Messiah's Kingdom will be established for which we pray. R5768:5

All blessings are of the Father. E45

Messiah's Kingdom has various stages of inauguration. First, in his parousia, the resurrection of the sleeping saints; next, his dealing with the living members of his Body and their glorification; then the dominion of the world, revealed in a great time of trouble. Thus, the Kingdom of Messiah will be born in a terrible travail, after which "the desire of all nations shall come." (Hag. 2:7) Civ,v

The complete overthrow of all human government will open the way for the full establishment of the Kingdom. Bix

The establishment of the long promised Kingdom of Messiah is just before us, and is now in progress. B363 We pray especially for the spiritual phase, where our inheritance is. R287:4

While continuing to pray thus, let us continue to labor in character-preparation that we may be found worthy of a place in that Kingdom. R5762:2

The thought that it consists merely of a sovereignty in the hearts of his followers in the present life is unscriptural. R5049:3

Messiah's Kingdom began in 1878. It will be fully inaugurated at the close of the great time of trouble, already beginning in Europe and Mexico. R5762:1,2

Thy will be done -- Implying that the offerer has made a full consecration of his will, wishing that God's will rule in his own heart--now, in the earthly condition, even as he hopes to have it perfected in the Kingdom. R3352:5; C22

An expression of confidence that the Kingdom will effect the full restoration of the earth to its Edenic condition and of man to his primeval perfection in the image of his Creator. R5379:4

This would be impossible aside from the associated promise of the Bible that the present dispensation of preaching the Gospel is eventually to give way to the Messianic Kingdom and its reign of force. HG669:2

Surely no sane mind would claim that the conversion of the world to so-called Christendom fulfills this description of the Millennial peace and good will. C178

As in heaven -- The world of mankind will be as happy in God's favor as are the angels now. R5379:4

So in earth -- Many Christians seem to have forgotten the import of these words. B13

Our great Messiah is about to overthrow sin and evil, and establish righteousness, which will insure that to all eternity God's will shall be done as perfectly in this earth as it is now done in heaven. OV341:8

When Jehovah's feet will be established, and his footstool made glorious. (Isa. 66:1; 60:13) R287:4

The glory of God will fill the whole earth, destroying all willful opposers. R5379:4

Luke 11:3

Give us -- The only petition that can be construed to apply to even the simplest of earthly blessings. This may also be understood to signify more particularly spiritual nourishment. R5379:3

Contentment is the very spirit of this petition. R2253:2

Bless our efforts at procuring and eating. There are occasional spiritual dyspeptics who eat and work not, but the great difficulty with most Christians is that they eat not at all, or else eat so sparingly that they are dying of starvation. R23:5

God knows what we have need of, and provides these things aside from our asking. R5624:5

Whoever "asks the blessing" at table should ask something in connection with the food and not attempt to pray for neighbors, relatives, etc.

Day by day -- Literally translated, "be giving continually our daily bread." R2253:2

Matthew's statement is preferable, "Give us this day." The thought seems to be that of continual dependence upon the Lord for the things needed.

Not for a long time ahead. R2253:2

Not for superabundance or for luxuries. R2253:2, 3806:5, 3352:6, 2005:2, 1945:6

Our daily bread -- "Our needful bread" (American Rev.). There is no attempt here to supplicate delicacies. R3806:5, 3352:6, 2005:2

In the broad sense of food and raiment--things necessary. R3352:5

The child of God on common fare and in common clothing may really be much happier than are some much more prosperous in temporal matters. R3352:6

If we do nothing more than pray, God might let us starve. He puts within our reach the needful means of procuring the food, and we say the food comes from him. Neither will the asking of a blessing on food fill you, you must eat it. R376:2

Implies our realization that our sustenance, both temporal and spiritual, must come from God. The failure to specify any particular kind of food implies a full resignation to the provision of divine wisdom. R5379:4

To the Spirit-begotten these words imply more particularly the spiritual food. It is the new creature offering the petition. This will imply that it is the nourishment of the new creature that is chiefly under consideration. R3806:5

The spiritually-minded will be asking for the spiritual food, the spiritual necessities, day by day. R2253:3

Not specialization in prayer. Whatever we have, we acknowledge our dependence upon the Lord for what he provides for us; and we ask for nothing beyond what he does provide--"your bread and water shall be sure." (Isa. 33:16) R5202:4

Forgive us our sins -- Not original sin, we were freed from that condemnation in justification, but those unintentional imperfections which appertain to all, and which all the followers of Jesus are striving to overcome. R5379:4, 3806:6, 3353:1

Appropriately acknowledging, daily, that we are trespassers. R2005:2

To petition the Lord for forgiveness of sins implies that we are at heart opposed to the sins, and signifies that we recognize that the robe of Christ's righteousness granted to us has become spotted or sullied, and that we desire to have it cleansed. R3353:1

Thus we (1) learn to keep track of our blemishes; (2) are continually reminded of our dependence upon the merit of our Savior; and (3) are assisted in being merciful, compassionate and gracious toward others. R3807:1

Walking after the flesh we find that we cannot come up to the Spirit, hence our "debts." R3806:6

In his own appointed way, through Christ. R1945:6, 4615:4

"If any man sin, we have an Advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ." (1 John 2:1) R4615:5

For we also forgive -- God's mercy is proportionate to ours. R3806:6, 2005:2

Let every Christian in approaching the throne of heavenly grace daily inquire of his own heart, whether or not he has forgiven those who are indebted to him. R2253:4

A reminder of the general terms of our relationship to God. We cannot grow in grace except as we cultivate the spirit of love, which is the spirit of God--a forgiving, generous spirit in our dealings with others. R5379:5

Equivalent to a bargain with God, that we accept his terms of mercy, and will expect none, except as we ourselves exercise it toward others. R2005:2

None will gain a place in the Kingdom class, in the Bride, except they have this forgiving quality of love. R3353:4

How just and wise is the divine arrangement which requires of us, in applying for mercy, to pledge ourselves to the Lord that we are also merciful, forgiving to others. R3807:1

If fully appreciated, it would influence God's sons to be kind and generous, in thought as well as in word and deed. R2005:3

The Lord would develop in his consecrated people the spirit of the Father. R3353:3

This does not mean the forgiveness of financial indebtedness and destruction of our account books, except those of the debtor willing, but unable, to pay. R2253:4

This does not imply that we should pay no attention to the transgressions of others against ourselves, that we should not recognize offenses. R2253:4

Only as we are merciful to others will he deal mercifully with us in respect to our trespasses. R5624:5, 5379:5

The very essence of Christian principle is love, sympathy, and the forgiveness of the faults of others. R2253:3

We may not forgive in the absolute sense until our forgiveness is asked; yet we should be always in a forgiving attitude. R2295:6, 2296:4, 2253:4, 4978:1, 4650:5

Everyone that is indebted -- Matthew's rendering is better: "Those who trespass against us." As we are imperfect and cannot keep the divine law, so likewise others are imperfect. R3353:3

Lead us not -- These words are not in the original in Luke's account, but they are found in Matthew's account, and hence are properly a part of the prayer. R3807:2

The Diaglott renders it, "Abandon us not to trial". R2005:3, 5379:5

Not that we fear God will tempt us, but that we entreat him that he may guide our steps so that no temptation or trial come upon us that will be too severe for us. R3353:4, 3807:2

Implies a determination to resist sin, as well as a leaning upon God for assistance. R1945:6

To amplify for better understanding: "And bring us not into temptation [merely], but [also] deliver us from the evil one." It is a part of the divine arrangement to permit us to be put into positions of trial and testing. R2253:5

Into temptation -- "God tempteth no man." (Jas. 1:13) R2253:5

A man is tempted when he is led astray and enticed by his own selfish, fallen desires; he sins when he yields to those desires. (Jas. 1:14)

R2005:3

Indicates that we are aware that we are surrounded by the powers of evil, and that as new creatures we would be unable to withstand these successfully except as we should have divine aid. R5379:5

Temptations are of the Adversary, and of our own fallen natures--through our flesh and the weaknesses of others. R3353:4

Since chastisements and temptations (or trials) are necessary to our preparation for the Kingdom, it would not be appropriate for us to pray that the Lord would spare us from all trials. R2005:3, 3807:2, 2253:5

We will not be tempted above that we are able. (1 Cor. 10:13) R3353:4, 3807:3, 2253:5

Expresses a desire for assistance in the hour of temptation, that we may not be overcome by it. R1945:6

How foolish to pray thus and not watch! R3939:5

Deliver us -- These words are not found in the original, but corresponding words are found in Matthew's record. R3353:5

A recognition that Satan is our great Adversary; and that we are on the alert to resist him, and yet realize our own insufficiency, our need of divine aid. R5379:5

As we pray, we surely will labor in the same direction. R3353:5

Provide a way of escape when we are sore distressed. (1 Cor. 10:13)
R3353:4, 2005:3

From evil -- From the Evil One. R5379:5

Never more needed than at present. God is permitting the Adversary to bring strong delusions upon the world and the nominal church because the time has come for a complete separation of the wheat from the tares.

R3353:5

Also the Evil One, ever ready to attack us, to the extent the Lord permits. R3807:2, 5379:5, 3353:5, 2253:5, 2005:3

Luke 11:5

Said unto them -- Our Lord gives us a parable. R3353:6, 5020:2, 3807:4

Luke 11:8

Because of his importunity -- Not by way of implying that God is averse to his people's requests and will only grant them when their comings become tedious to him. R3353:6

Pray perseveringly. R5381:2*

God has the blessing, and not only is able to give it, but has promised to do so. The delay in granting the request is because his due time has not come. Hence we are not to give up nor to become weary, but to be constant in our prayers. R5020:2; Q539:4

The Lord's people need to be much more solicitous and earnest in respect to the heavenly blessings they desire. R3353:6, 3807:5

So earnest for the Kingdom, the honor of the Father's name, the bread of life, for deliverance from the evil one, for God's keeping power, that we go to him day by day. R3807:5

This is very different from the "vain repetitions" which our Lord condemned. (Matt. 6:7) R5020:4; Q539:6

He will rise -- We are not to think that our prayers for the Kingdom are unheeded. R5379:5

And give him -- This should strengthen our faith and earnest desire to come often to his footstool and tarry long in his presence. R1946:1

Ask -- Sincerely, truly. R2590:1

He would have us feel our need, he would have us appreciate the privilege, he would have us look for the response, and in all these experiences he would develop us as his sons of the new creation. R3807:4

The intimation is that the asking of the Father is a means by which we may more and more receive of the sap of the Vine, the holy Spirit, and be enabled to develop the fruits of the Spirit. R2466:3

Ask nothing that will not be hallowing and honoring to our Heavenly Father's name, nothing that would be an interference with the coming of his Kingdom, ask in harmony with the divine plan. R3354:1

Nothing here implies the seeking or finding of earthly good things. R2466:3

To be done individually. Because someone is dear to us we should not necessarily conclude that the Lord would choose such a one. We are to preach the word to such, encourage their consecration, and, in connection with that consecration, we are to urge them to ask for themselves. R3354:1

It shall be given you -- You will receive his grace and help in the direction asked. R2590:1

Let your faith grow strong by meditation upon the promises. R5381:5*

Seek -- While asking, it is our duty to be seeking the things which we lack, the holy Spirit of love to fill our hearts. R2590:1

The believer, assuming that there is superhuman wisdom in the divine Word, investigates from that standpoint. NS63:2

In the "Law and the testimony." (Isa. 8:20) E167

The more he seeketh, the more he findeth. R4983:6

We may ask for a share in the Kingdom. R3354:1

Desiring to be filled with God's Spirit, to be in harmony with him, in his character-likeness. R5379:6, 3807:6

And ye shall find -- In proportion to his consecration and Christian development, one finds more and more that the testimonies of the Lord's Word are sure, "making wise the simple." (Psa. 19:7) NS63:2

Knock -- Upon the Lord's store-house of grace and blessing by continued efforts, as well as by prayer. R2590:2

The door of knowledge shall be opened. E167

The door of privilege, of opportunity; continual knocking means increasing desire to enter. R4983:6

Luke 11:10

For every one -- If we come in the frame of mind indicated by our Lord, we shall never be turned away empty. R1946:1

Findeth -- He will reveal his true character to them. OV2:2

Luke 11:11

Ask bread -- As earthly parents set the food within reach of the family, but do not force it upon them, so our heavenly Parent has set within the reach of his spiritual family the good provision of his grace, but he does not force them upon us. E225

That is a father -- The human father's love is to men a helping image of the Heavenly Father's. R29:4*

Give him a stone -- The force of our Lord's language is seen if we remember that the bread of oriental countries very much resembles a stone. R3807:5

Traditions as indigestible as a stone. HG692:3

We should not be afraid that our Heavenly Father would give any bad answers to our requests. R5379:6

The experiences of life, its trials, disappointments, discouragements, oppositions, are not as stones, but are blessings in disguise, if we receive them in the proper spirit. R3807:6

Give him a serpent -- Some kinds of serpents resemble certain kinds of fish. R3807:6

Offer him a scorpion -- There is a small white scorpion which rolls itself up in the shape of an egg. R3807:6

Luke 11:13

To give good gifts -- A comparison between kind earthly parents giving natural food to their children, and our kind Heavenly Father giving his holy Spirit to them that ask him. E224

Earthly gifts. R1581:4, 3665:4, 2006:1

We are not to pray for earthly things--food, drink, clothing, etc. F685; 3354:2

Not injurious things instead. R3807:5

How much more -- We may expect that he will give what is best, and we may rest ourselves content in that promise of the Father. E223

The thing received will never be harmful or useless. R1946:1

He will have pleasure in giving us the desires of our hearts if in harmony with his plan. R4983:6

Jesus set forth the glorious standard of our Father. R5834:2

Your Heavenly Father give -- Although "all things are by the Son" (1 Cor. 8:6), yet here, as everywhere, he gives the glory and honor, as the fountain of blessings, to the Father. E222

Our Heavenly Father has good things; he has promised them to us; he takes delight in giving them to us, yet some of them are afar off. R3353:6

The Father will be pleased to so order the affairs of such that hindrances to the Spirit shall be overcome, that his loving Spirit may abound in them. E223

Though he give it gradually to us, and not perhaps as rapidly and as fully as we request it. R3665:4

We are to think of him as rich, benevolent, kind and generous, wise as well as loving. R4983:6

The Holy Spirit -- This is exactly what is needed, as an offset to the unholy, unloving, selfish, judging and fault-finding spirit of the flesh. R2590:2

Not the miraculous gifts of the spirit enjoyed by the primitive Church, but to the holy spirit, or disposition, "the mind of Christ". R3153:4

While it is entirely out of harmony with God's Word to pray for another baptism of the holy Spirit, it is right to pray to be kept filled with the holy Spirit. R376:2; E223

The graces of the holy Spirit are specially stated to be open to our requests and corresponding efforts. R2006:1

The one thing for which we should specially seek and specially pray is the holy Spirit--the spirit of holiness, the spirit of God, the spirit of Christ, the spirit of the Truth, the spirit of a sound mind, the spirit of love. F685; R5036:6, 2722:4

The holy Spirit is the spirit of love--to God and man. It cannot be given to us under present conditions except gradually, as the old, selfish, wrong spirit is deposed from our hearts. R3665:4

The requests of the advanced saints are for spiritual favors. R1581:4

As new creatures our desires should be specially for the things that pertain to the new creature, and it is this class of blessing the Lord invites us to ask for and to wrestle to obtain. R2865:6

The "Spirit of truth" stands ready to give us the filling we desire, but we must partake of--eat--the feast, or we will not be filled. He who will not eat of a full table will starve as truly as though there were no food. R376:2; D225

Nothing in this Scripture can in any manner be construed to imply that the Heavenly Father would be pleased to have his children ask him for another God--a third person of a trinity of co-equal Gods. E224

Given only in a very special manner, during a very special age, for a very special purpose. R5133:3

The spirit of the truth, of Christ, of a sound mind, of wisdom. R2866:1, 5202:4, 5036:6, 193:1*

The spiritual blessings and experiences which develop in his children his own Spirit. R3806:6; OV404:3

"The words that I speak unto you...are spirit." (John 6:63) E225

Set before the family as bread, fish and eggs, but not forced on any. E224

We need not, as do the unregenerate and the heathen, pray for earthly blessings. E223

To them -- Consecrated disciples of Jesus who earnestly seek it. R5379:6

That ask him -- When we ask for anything, it implies that we want it, and if wholly consecrated, we should want to receive the holy Spirit in the way God wishes to give it. R376:2

It is God's good pleasure to give us this spirit of love; but he gives it only to those who desire and seek it with patient perseverance. R3153:4

The Lord has revealed himself to his people for the very purpose of giving them this blessing; nevertheless, he withholds it until they learn to appreciate and earnestly desire it. R2866:1, 2123:4*

If we merely pray for the Spirit and do not use the proper means to obtain the Spirit of truth, we will continue to be at most only "babes in Christ." E225

Not that we must necessarily use the words, "Give me the holy Spirit," or that we should ask for a Pentecostal blessing; but that we should ask for the spirit of the truth, of a sound mind, for the wisdom which comes from above. R5202:3

Ask for more and more of the holy Spirit--a disposition more and more fully in harmony with his Spirit. E223

So that we can go forth from victory unto victory. R2123:3

It is useless to pray if we neglect to feed. E225

Luke 11:15

Casteth out devils -- Everywhere the Scriptures set forth that this host of spirit beings are associated with our earth, and not in some far-off fiery furnace torturing the human dead. R5378:1

It is estimated that fully one-half of those in insane asylums are demon-possessed. R5378:1

Through Beelzebub -- The first, and for a long time the only, enemy of the divine government. R2171:5

Satan, the prince of the demons. R3310:4, 3309:4

Some evilly declared that the demons obeyed Jesus because he himself was Beelzebub. (Matt. 10:25) R5378:2

Refuted by Jesus' refusal to accept the testimony from this demon. The Scriptures everywhere represent Satan and his fallen spirits as lying spirits, deceiving the people. R3310:4

The chief -- Doubtless because of being by nature a superior order of being. R2171:5

Of the devils -- The angels which fell at the time of the flood. R2171:5; SM548:1,2

A sign from heaven -- Saying, Your miracles are all earthly. R5378:2

Luke 11:18

If Satan also -- It would be foolish for Satan to cast out Satan; consequently their argument should have no weight. R5378:2
Whose very existence is now denied by many. F609

Be divided -- Satan has considerable of "the power of death," including disease, but we are not informed that he has the power of life, which includes health; and if he had that power, he surely has not the desire to do good and bless except as a means to delude and counteract by counterfeiting the truth. R760:4

Would signify a warfare in the camp of the evil ones. R5378:2

Against himself -- By aiding the miraculous cure of the sick. F641
As he is now doing through "Christian Science." R2189:1, 3784:3

How shall -- When he has to resort to such desperate measures as working against his own plans. R3784:2

I cast out devils--The power of Jesus in casting out demons showed that he was thoroughly competent to deal with the prince of this world, the prince of darkness, Satan. R5378:3

Your sons cast them out -- You never charged them with being the prince of demons. R5378:2

Be your judges -- Judge according to this whether your argument against me is good. R5378:2

The finger of God -- The power of God. R5378:2

God's power in small portion. A hand represents power, so the little finger represents a little bit of power. So Jesus said, If I by the finger of God do so and so, God is able to do more. These are little things in comparison to God's power. Q496:T

Each individual Christian, so to speak, is a finger of the Lord, as our Redeemer said, "I, as a finger of God." If we would be useful as God's agencies, we should seek to be guided by him. R4357:2

Which I do not claim as my own power. E271

Is come upon you -- The power of the Kingdom is being exercised in your midst. R5378:3

A strong man armed -- Satan. R5378:4

Keepeth his palace -- Maintaining his control of the world. R5378:4

Stronger than he -- The Messianic Kingdom will be stronger than that of Satan. R5378:4

And overcome him -- "And he laid hold on that old serpent, which is the devil and Satan, and bound him a thousand years." (Rev. 20:2) C341

Is against me -- There are only the two masters--people are serving either the one or the other. R5378:5

Luke 11:25

Findeth it swept -- He did not receive into it the good Shepherd of his soul, but stood for righteousness merely in his own strength. R4218:4

Luke 11:26

Then goeth he -- Satan will seek to regain control through the spirit of the world--pride, anger, malice, hatred, strife. R5378:5

If Christ has not been enthroned in the mind already weakened by previous obsession. R2173:3

They enter in -- Even if justified from past sins, we need an occupant for our hearts--the Divine One. R4291:5

With any departure from loyalty to righteousness and truth comes a corresponding separation from holy protecting influences and a consequent exposure of heart to the malevolent influences of the fallen angels.

R4218:4

Remembering that the Memorial is not only the anniversary of our Lord's sufferings, but also of Judas' treachery, false kiss and question, "Is it I?", let us remember the constant danger of Satan entering into our hearts. R1943:5

Worse than the first -- If Satan be not resisted, the danger is that the blessing received through the knowledge of God will become a curse. R5378:5 The fallen angels, ever ready to enter into such, and more seriously than ever defile them. R4218:4

And keep it -- If we had all knowledge and zeal and had not the spirit of obedience it would evidence a lack of the spirit of love, and prove us unworthy of the divine favor and blessings promised. R3678:5

For as Jonas -- The Jonah story corroborated by a report in a secular journal. R3373:3

Contrary to the belief of many modern theologians. A61; R3373:3

And condemn them -- Just as heathendom will condemn Christendom for its misuse of divine favor. D72

Hath lighted -- With the light of the truth. R5378:6; E293

A light of faith, hope and love, ignited in the hearts of the Little Flock. R3686:2

The holy mind or Spirit of God. E264; R5378:6

Under a bushel -- Showing lack of courage, appreciation, earnestness. R4967:5

On a candlestick -- Be exposed, so as to do good. R5378:5

Thine eye is single -- The eye represents intelligence. As long as we have the true enlightenment, or intelligence, the whole body is blessed thereby. R5378:6

But when thine eye -- The eye, the light, here represents the enlightenment of the holy Spirit, which has the greatest power to bless us; and if lost, means an even greater darkness than was experienced before coming to a knowledge of the Lord. R5378:6

Be not darkness -- Does not become darkness, become extinguished. E264, 294 11:36

Light -- The enlightenment of the holy Spirit. R5378:6; E264

The bright shining -- Greek, astrape. Here correctly translated; mistranslated "lightning" in Matt. 24:27. B156

A certain Pharisee -- Amongst the various sects of the Jews of our Lord's day we have every reason to believe that the Pharisees constituted the best--the one most loyal to God and his law. Their name signifies "holiness people." R5389:2

Went in and sat down -- Purposely ignoring the Pharisees' usual formalism of washings. R5389:2

He marvelled -- The host thought of Jesus as a holy man, not a publican or a sinner. R5389:2

Not first washed -- Not that Jesus was careless; rather, the washing of hands by the Pharisees was a ceremony which Jesus especially wished to ignore in order that he might have the opportunity of criticizing that spirit which the ceremony well illustrated. R5389:2

This gave Jesus the opportunity for a discourse on the subject. R5389:2

Ye Pharisees -- Not deigning to mention the other sects, which had entirely departed from God. R5389:2

With all their boasted holiness, they came far short of what would be acceptable to God. R5389:2

Your inward part -- In God's sight the heart is the important matter; outward cleansing is secondary. R5389:3

Those who do come into heart harmony with the Lord are cleansed by obedience to his message and its spirit, and are thereby made clean every whit--outwardly, as well as inwardly. R5389:3

Full of ravening and wickedness -- Given to extortion--spiritual wickedness. R5389:3

Woe unto you -- Not condemning them to eternal torment; the woe to the Pharisee was that they were about to lose the great blessing which God had promised to the Jewish nation; namely, that of chief association in Messiah's Kingdom. (Gen. 12:3) R5390:1

The expression, "Woe unto you," is to be regarded sympathetically, pityingly. R5390:1

It is not for us to judge all or any of the sects of Christendom and apply the Master's words to them. Unlike Jesus, we have not the power to read men's hearts, nor the authority to pronounce them hypocrites. R5389:5

Ye tithe -- Giving one-tenth of their income every year. R5389:3

Mint and rue -- Small seeds of which they grew but a trifling quantity. R5389:5

Love of God -- Be benevolent rather than covetous and self-seeking, otherwise God could not be well pleased with them. R5389:5,3

Ought ye to have done -- Jesus did not object to their giving 1/10 of everything, but that they should not leave the more important things undone. R5389:5

The uppermost seats -- Their covetousness took the form of pride, as well as dishonesty. R5389:5
Does not mean he was condemning them to eternal torment. R5390:1

Luke 11:44

Hypocrites -- Who proclaim the way of the Lord to others, yet ignore that way in their own dealings. NS853:4
Addressed to a class, not an individual. R5980:1
We do not have the authority to pronounce anyone a hypocrite. R5389:6, 5980:1

Luke 11:45

One of the lawyers -- Some of the Pharisees, especially educated, talented and well-versed in the teachings of the Law and the prophets, were style doctors--Doctors of the Law, the equivalent of what today are termed Doctors of Divinity. R5389:6

Luke 11:46

Ye lade men --They gave such hard interpretations of God's Law as were discouraging to the common people--setting before the publicans and sinners standards of excellence and perfection which they themselves would not think of every trying to live up to. R5389:6
Ye yourselves touch not -- Let us take heed that we practice what we preach. NS853:4

Woe unto you -- Our Lord seems to have arraigned the clergy as a class, and to have held the modern representatives responsible, because they gave evidence of having the same spirit that their predecessors had, even though they condemned some of their practices. NS504:4
This does not apply to every individual of the Jewish clergy, the doctors of the law, but rather he spoke of them as a class, ignoring the few exceptions. NS504:5
Very soon a period of disintegration set in, which affected everything and every prospect of the wealthy and professedly religious class of the Jews, especially the Doctors of the Law. This led up to anarchy and ultimately the destruction of their national polity in AD 70. NS503:6

Ye allow the deeds -- How apt we all are to think of our own day as being different from other periods. So today many extol the Lord and the Apostles, and denounce their persecutors, while they similarly persecute. SM218:T

Them shall they slay -- Their fathers killed the prophets, while they killed the Lord himself and persecuted his followers. NS504:5

Blood of all the prophets -- Similarly, respecting the end of this age, the Scriptures imply that there is a great back-account of retribution owing to the rest of the world which will be fully squared up in the awful trouble with which this age will end. R4273:6; OV346:1

The sins of the persecutors must be liquidated, even though the persecutors themselves will all eventually be forgiven. OV346:1

May be required -- As expiation for the taking of the life of Jesus was required of the Jewish nation, so at the end of the Gospel age, the sacrificed life of the Church will be in a measure required of nominal spiritual Israel. R5256:5

Declaring the great time of trouble which came upon that nation at the time of Jesus' crucifixion, and reached its completion in AD 70 in the total destruction of their city and polity. R5390:4

Civil strife and hostile invaders accomplished the fearful recompense. D48

The Scriptures indicate that a great time of trouble similar to that which came upon the Jewish nation will now come upon all Christendom. The experiences of Israel in the year 70 will be paralleled in the experiences of the year 1915. R5256:5; D49

The trouble day with which the Jewish age ended is paralleled exactly in time and in character by the period of trouble which will consummate this age. NS504:2

It is the "recompense of the controversy of Zion" (Isa. 34:8)--the saints, the true Church. OV345:6

The great tribulation is a legitimate effect from preceding causes. D49

The law of cause and effect is nowhere more prominently marked than on the pages of history. D51

The same principle applies to the rich--a realization of the wrongs done by the rich toward the poor in past times should, under the light of this day, lead the same class to greater sympathy for their less fortunate fellows. R1423:6

While mercy comes to all mankind through the sacrificial death of the Savior, this does not alter the fact that Justice calls for punishments for crimes more or less wilful and therefore not included in the Savior's atonement. OV345:2

Of this generation -- Greek, genea; not used with the significance of race, but in reference to people living contemporaneously. D603

The last generation of the Jewish age. OV345:5

It may seem strange that a subsequent generation of humanity should suffer the penalty of the accumulated crimes of several preceding generations. D47

Those people had far more responsibility than all who preceded them. They had a great light amongst them, shining from Jesus and the early saints.

The Great Company will suffer for the sins of others--the accumulated sins of this age against light and knowledge. R4274:1

As a legitimate effect from preceding causes. D47

Because the chief light of each Age comes at its close, bringing responsibility and more severe judgment. R5462:6; OV345:5

A squaring up of sins against divine justice, leaving the world without anything against them on the books of justice. R4856:2

There are certain things charged up against Christendom for their evil deeds, including all the persecutions of this Gospel age. R5256:5

Of Abel -- Who typified Isaac, Jacob, Spiritual Israel and the wheat class. R2778:3,4

Shall be required -- The satisfaction for wilful sins is shown in the scapegoat, the Great Company. These will pass through an experience similar to that which our Lord foretold would come upon the Jewish nation, squaring up for sins against divine justice. This will leave the world at the opening of the Millennium without anything against them on the books of justice. R4856:2

Lawyers -- This word corresponds in meaning to the present title of D.D.--Doctors of the Law they were then called, but now Doctors of Divinity. R1001:6; Q798:2

Have taken away -- Through their traditions and speculations. Q798:2

Whoever misrepresents the divine character and the divine plan is taking away the "key of knowledge" of God. NS503:5

The ecclesiastical powers of today, professedly sitting in the seat of Christ, have been to a greater or less extent hiding "the key of knowledge," to a greater or less extent imposing on the superstitions of the people. R5750:1

By substituting your own traditions and doctrines for those of God's Word and thus misrepresenting God. Q798:2

Putting "darkness for light, and light for darkness." (Isa. 5:20) R2693:4

Those who relied on the Pharisees for information were hindered from joint-heirship with Christ. R5390:4

Evidently the "key of knowledge" is as thoroughly lost to the Doctors of Divinity of our day as it was to the Doctors of the Law at the first advent. R2485:4

It was lost during the "dark ages." Luther and some of his coadjutors did valiantly in striving to recover the key, and at least got hold of the handle. But, alas! little progress has since been made. NS504:5

"My people perish for lack of knowledge." (Hos. 4:6) NS505:5

The key of knowledge -- The Bible, the Standard of Truth. Q798:2

Today the learned of the colleges and the principal pulpits are telling the people that the Bible is not the divine message which Jesus and the Apostles declared it to be. R5087:2

"The reverence of the Lord is the beginning of knowledge." (Prov. 1:7) NS503:5

Knowledge of God and reverence for him. R1532:2

The holding of the ransom is the key to every truth; the "hub" from which all other truths must radiate. R1452:5

Ye entered not -- We would probably find a larger proportion of honest Bible students out of the pulpits of the nominal churches than in them. R1001:6

The elder son "would not go in" (Luke 15:28) to greet the returned prodigal. "The publicans and sinners shall go into the Kingdom before you." (Matt. 21:31) R1460:2,4

Yourselves -- To this day they are jealous, and will not go in. R1460:4

Ye hindered -- In avoiding the knowledge, they were hindering others who were in quest of it. NS505:1

By their false teachings and misrepresentations, putting darkness for light, and light for darkness. R2693:4

Their hypocrisy was not only hindering themselves from preparation to be joint-heirs with Messiah in his Kingdom, but was also hindering the masses of the people, who relied upon them for information. R5390:4

The common people, relying largely upon the holy professions and teachings of these leaders, were the more thoroughly deluded and the more thoroughly alienated from God by reason of their professions of sanctity. NS503:6

Luke 12

Luke 12:1

The leaven -- Symbol of an evil influence; the hypocrisies of the Pharisees were impurities, contaminating in their influence. R5390:2
Of the Pharisees -- The false doctrines and corrupt influences proceeding from the scribes and Pharisees. R2635:1, 1670:6
The learned people of that time. R5390:2

Is nothing covered -- This prophecy is as true in the judgment of nations as of individuals. D541
Be revealed -- Greek, apokalupto, uncovered, unveiled. R2979:3,2
A testimony dreaded but disbelieved by unjust stewards of wealth and power. C20
When the power of the resurrection shall be exercised, all the hidden things of darkness shall be abolished. R5390:2
A feature of retribution upon the world during its Millennial trial will be the publicity which will then be given to the deeds of the past. This will come about in a natural way when all that are in their graves shall come forth: the murderer and his victim, the debtor and his creditor, the thief and his dupe, the defamer and the defamed. R1655:1
This judgment, in the case of the Lord's consecrated people, culminates with the present life; in the case of the world, it will culminate in the age to come. R2058:5*
"The eyes of the Lord are in every place, beholding the evil and the good." (Prov. 15:3) R1653:3
Neither hid -- Not only the hidden things of creeds and systems of iniquity, but also the hidden things of individual character. R1362:4
Be known -- The secrets of mankind will be exposed, no doubt constituting the basis of the shame and contempt which will be the punishment of many. (Dan. 12:2) R5390:2
All hypocrisies, sins and secrets will be exposed. R5390:2
Our words and works should be such as need not to be covered. R5390:2

Luke 12:3

Heard in the light -- Today we see that many real exhibitions of vice, immorality and wrong-doing are brought to light. Q579:4

Luke 12:4

My friends -- Those who believe in a future existence secured through Jesus, the life-giver. R581:1

Be not afraid -- Honesty of life would bring persecution from the hypocrites, but they should not fear even though the persecution resulted in their death. The present life is but ephemeral, at best. R5390:3

Kill the body -- The killing of the body represents the loss of the present measure of life. R581:1

Revived souls will have new bodies (spiritual or natural), and these none will have liberty to kill. R2602:4

No more that they can do -- Nothing they can do will affect our future being. R2602:4; OV169:3

Fear him -- Be fearful of anything that would separate from God and his gracious provision of a future life. R5390:3

The fear of God is the beginning of wisdom, and a reverential fear is always proper. R5390:3

To lose fear of God, in the sense of losing fear of his displeasure, would be a most serious loss, as it would probably cost us our eternal life.

After he hath killed -- And brought again from death. R527:5*

Cast into hell -- God alone has power to destroy utterly--soul and body.

Fear him who is able to destroy in Gehenna, the second death, both the present dying existence and all hope of future existence. R2602:4, 581:1; OV169:3

Gehenna in the Greek; primarily a valley outside Jerusalem where offal was cast for utter destruction, a type of the second death. R5390:3, 2601:2

This is the "fiery indignation which shall devour the adversaries" (eat up opposition). (Heb. 10:27) R527:5*

Jesus used it as a type of the second death, the portion of the willfully, intelligently and deliberately sinful. R5390:3

No living thing was ever to be cast into Gehenna; the Jews were not allowed to torture any creature. R2601:2

The life that is worth considering is the everlasting one which God has provided for all the willing and obedient. R5390:3

The very hairs -- Everything he permits to come to his people he assures them will work out for some blessing. R5390:5

Are all numbered -- You may not suffer injury without his knowledge or consent. HG294:6

Fear not therefore -- These are to realize their heavenly Father's care for them and his wisdom. R5390:5

Many sparrows -- Our smallest interest is not overlooked. R1906:4
As he forgets not the sparrows, so he will not forget us. R5390:5

Confess me -- Not merely by baptism, but in the life, conduct and words of his followers. They are to have his spirit. R5390:5

Whoever confesses Jesus, confesses the Father who sent him. R5390:5

Before the angels -- Ultimately be acknowledged in the resurrection as members of the Bride of Christ. R5390:5 12:9

Denieth me -- Whoever makes a profession of being a disciple and then ignores the Master's teachings, misrepresents, slanders and denies him, and will not share in the bride. R5390:5

Denied before the angels -- Not acknowledged as disciples in glory. R5390:5

Against the Holy Ghost -- When some declared that his good works of the holy Spirit were accomplished through the power of Satan, Beelzebub, they were committing inexcusable sins that would not be passed over. R5390:6

The responsibility of each individual is proportionate to his enlightenment. The mentally and morally blind have comparatively little responsibility. It is the spirit-begotten disciples of Jesus that are in danger of grieving the holy Spirit. R5390:6

Maliciously attributing to an evil source what cannot be denied as a good work, free from sin, selfishness and ambition. E271

The world in general knows not God, and hence could not sin against the holy Spirit. R5391:1

Not be forgiven -- If the punishment would bring reformation, well and good; but if not, it would eventuate in utter destruction, the second death. R5390:6

Take ye no thought -- They need not anxiously premeditate what their answers would be, but commit all to the Lord, expecting divine assistance. R5391:4

Nothing here implies that the ministers of Christ should attempt to represent the Lord in the pulpit or class meetings without studying their subject. There is a difference between standing before a congregation of God's people as a mouthpiece of his Word and being called before magistrates. R5391:5

Teach you -- They would have wisdom superior to that which was naturally theirs. R5391:4

Luke 12:13

One of the company -- The case would have been different had the two brothers come together, and, indicating that they wished to do right, requested his judgment of what would have been the right course. R2685:2
Seeing in the teachings of Christ only that which he thought might be used to further his own selfish interests. R2685:1

Speak to my brother -- Tell him that he ought to deal generously, and perhaps threaten him if he failed to do so. R2685:1

That he divide -- Perhaps finding that, through some technicality, he could not obtain what he considered to be his just rights under Jewish Law. R2685:1

Many there are who see just this much and no more in the teachings of Christ--a channel through which to serve their own interests, a means of securing justice to themselves. R2685:1

He had undoubtedly appealed to his brother and to Jewish authorities for the relief which he thought he ought to have. Similarly it is proper for a Christian to appeal to the person and the laws of the land; but if he fails, he should content himself. R2695:3

Coveting what his father had really intended should go to his brother, and hence asking something outside of his legal rights. Jesus' refusal to intervene implies that the estate properly belonged to the brother. R5396:1, 2685:6

Who made me a judge -- Jesus is not the Judge or divider of earthly things now. That will be the work of the Millennium. R2130:5*

Too many are disposed to be busybodies in other men's matters, and overlook the fact that their commission of the Lord is to preach the Gospel. R5396:1

As our Lord was not willing to impose himself as a judge or an arbitrator in his day, so his followers now should not seek to interfere in secular affairs. R2685:2

Jesus had another work to do, so have his followers: the preparation for the glorious Messianic Kingdom. R5396:1

A divider over you -- Or, an arbiter. R2685:1

Society has provided certain rules, laws and regulations. Whatever these laws will not accord us we should drop. R5396:1

Beware of covetousness -- Implying that the estate properly belonged to the brother, and that the one addressing Jesus desired more than his legal rights. R5396:1, 2685:6

If he were asking for what was only reasonably his due, our Lord's words would show that whether or not he got all of his rights in the present life would be a comparatively unimportant matter. R2685:6

As a rule, quarrels in the family and in the church arise from selfishness and covetousness. R3939:6

To covent the whole trade and to attempt sharp practices in business, selling commodities at below cost, interfering with another's bank credit, slandering another would be covetousness in action. R4741:6

The tendency of our time, with its increase of knowledge and independence, is to look only at the side of questions closest to self-interest, and to fail to appreciate the opposite side. D273

Illustrated in the covetous choice of Lot whose eyes, opened in Egypt to the luxuries of life, when he made a choice for a home separate from Abraham, chose that which most nearly paralleled the richness of Egypt. R3939:3

One of the most crying evils of our day. R4742:4

We should be content with such things as we have. R5396:1

Our Lord's words would also be a lesson to the older brother, if he were seeking to defraud or was covetously ungenerous. R2685:6

Consisteth not -- The basis of happiness is measured by the soul's relationship to God and hope in him. R5396:1

In the abundance -- Undoubtedly poverty is a greater aid to discipleship than is wealth. The cost of discipleship is the surrender of every earthly ambition to follow in the footsteps of Jesus. The rich are disadvantaged because theirs would be the greater sacrifice, and because wealth preserves them from many trials. R5004:2

A man may be miserable while rolling in wealth, or be happy in comparative poverty. R5396:1

Which he possesseth -- Their time and attention are all engrossed and their interest absorbed in the accumulation and care of the earthly treasures, which shut out all nobler aspirations toward spiritual things. R2129:3*

Unimportant as compared to having experiences favorable to eternal life. R2685:6

All earthly riches not consecrated to God are weights and hindrances to the Christian; and if consecrated to sacrifice and yet never subjected to the flames of the altar, they are of no avail except as a broken vow, to rise up against us in judgment. R2129:3*

A parable -- Illustrating the comparative foolishness of all earthly ambitions. R5396:3

A certain rich man -- It is not stated that he had obtained his wealth by unlawful means. He is not charged with having defrauded his brother or his neighbor. R2685:6

Luke 12:18

This will I do -- I will hold and greedily enjoy my selfish hoardings.

R2686:2

The right attitude of mind would have answered: "These bounties of divine providence are a trust, and I am a trustee. My position will permit me to be a source of great blessing to others not so bountifully supplied."

R2685:6

Build greater -- Instead of using his riches in doing good, he was miserly, taking pleasure in accumulations. R5396:4, 2686:2

Soul -- Being, self. R276:3, 205:2

Much goods laid up -- The majority of covetous people never so succeed. Their selfishness is not less reprehensible from the fact that it fails of success. R2686:4

"There is that scattereth and yet increaseth, and there is that withholdeth more than is meet, and it tendeth to poverty." (Prov. 11:24)

The hoarding of earthly wealth tends to poverty of heart. R2686:1

Luke 12:20

But God said -- Through the prophets. D273

Thou fool -- He should have enjoyed himself in spending it wisely for the good of others and to the glory of God. R5396:4

This night thy soul -- During the dark night of the time of trouble. D273

Leaving you to enter the next life a pauper as respects material, mental and moral wealth, and handicapped by a load of selfishness. R2686:2

Shall be required -- The hoarded treasures of the wealthy "shall not be able to deliver them." (Ezek. 7:19) D273, 274

He lost his life; he died in poverty when he might have used his riches sacrificially, laying up treasures in heaven. R5396:4

Treasure for himself -- Instead, he should have enjoyed himself by spending it wisely for the good of others and to the glory of God. R5396:4

Is not rich -- His life had been a failure; he would enter the next life a pauper, as respects mental and moral development in good qualities. R2686:2

Take no thought -- Be not anxious. R2686:4

We must be freed from distress of mind with reference to earthly things. R873:3

Not an encouragement to carelessness or sloth, but rather not to be anxious in the sense of being fretted and worried about food or clothing. R873:2

For your life -- Greek, psuche--soul, being. E336

What ye shall eat -- Many who know nothing of actual want of life's necessities, are much exercised by the loss of luxuries when adversity comes. R873:6

More than meat -- Realize that everything of the present life is quite unworthy to be compared with the future and eternal interests. R2686:5

If, in divine providence, you receive poverty as your unavoidable portion, accept it as best for you. R2686:5

Consider -- Reflect, think, study, ponder. R3312:3

The heart that thus considers makes progress, grows in grace, in knowledge, in love. The heart that fails to consider the little things fails to be able to appreciate the larger things. R3313:3

How much more -- Teaching us that his power and wisdom could similarly, if necessary, provide for the necessities of his people, miraculously or otherwise. R3313:2

Consider the lilies -- God had not forgotten or failed in his care of even these insignificant things. R2129:6*

How much more -- He will not withhold any really good thing from us. (Psa. 84:11) R2129:6*

Will he clothe you -- It would be a mistake to suppose, in view of the Lord's promised care over all our interests, that he would, in every case, make things work together for our temporal advantage. R2130:3*

Need of these things -- These earthly things which you do not need to pray for. F679
And in his service he will not let you starve. B119

Seek ye the kingdom -- Give all the surplus of our time and energy, over and above that spent in providing things needful, in the accumulating of the heavenly riches. R874:4

Daily, hourly. The heart will be with the treasure. It will be the theme of their thoughts by day and of their meditations by night. R5397:1

All these things -- Earthly occupations will still be necessary to provide things needful and honest, but no earthly prize will have any value in comparison to the heavenly prize. R5397:1

Fear not -- Fear not to carry out your consecration to the full, keeping your little all upon the altar of sacrifice and subject to the consuming fire. R2130:6*

Neither the world's ignorance and unbelief nor the lukewarm indifference and prejudice of the great majority of professed Christians shall prove stumbling blocks to God's elect. Such cannot stumble; nor is it possible that they should be deceived. B189

Little flock -- The faithful Gospel Church. R1908:6

In contrast with a Great Company before the throne. R828:4, 778:3*, 772:1*; NS236:5

Christians will not be counted by the hundreds of millions. R5407:1; NS388:6

It is difficult for many of the Lord's true followers to learn that they must not expect everybody to enlist with them; that they must be content to let the world enlist in its own warfare and fight for its own projects. NS61:6

The great majority, being tares and not real wheat, will be rejected as unworthy of the chief favor to which they were called, and will not be counted among the Lord's jewels. B205

Not all who have their names upon earthly church rolls, but only those "whose names are written in heaven," and whose names will not be blotted out because of unfaithfulness. HG315:6

The gospel has not converted nations. It was not designed to do so. A72; HG271:4, 540:2; NS190:2, 513:1

Not many, as compared with the world, or even as compared with those that take the first step of faith unto justification. R4133:6, 4148:1, 3707:6; SM680:1; NS41:4, 364:6

Amongst those who hear, and are thus called, only a few will be chosen. NS474:4

Saintly Christians are a rarity today, as they have always been. OV387:2; SM383:1

Scarce, like jewels. HG752:1; NS150:2

So small is the number of these and so insignificant their influence that they are nor recorded among any of the great denominations of the world, but are counted as offscourings of all denominations--sometimes pitied, sometimes scorned. SM383:2; NS49:3

So we need not be on the lookout for the largest organization as the true church of Christ. R1102:6

"Not many wise, not many mighty, not many noble, hath God chosen." (1 Cor. 1:26) NS128:3, 318:5, 388:6

Chiefly of the poor of this world. NS66:1, 647:1

The number in the first resurrection is extremely limited. HG230:6, 615:4

It is therefore evidently not the saints who are to constitute the Lord's great army. D543

It should be observed that the number of priests (five), in comparison with the hosts of Israel, who represented the whole world, was very small. R1836:3; T118

When we remember that two of the five priests were destroyed by the Lord, we find the proportion of 3 priests to 8,580 Levites to be only 1 to 2,800. T119

From both Jews and Gentiles, responsive to the Lord's message of mercy, and willing, yea, anxious, to walk in the footsteps of Jesus. HG685:4

The conditions of the present trial of all accepted as probationary members of the heavenly church are severe and exacting. The selection is consequently much smaller than Christian people generally suppose. R1570:6

Only a few apply their hearts unto instruction and wholly follow divine direction; consequently only a few know the blessedness of the realization of the Lord's tender care. R2130:1*

Composed of all the saintly followers of Jesus, who walk in his steps in the narrow way during the Gospel age. R6013:3

The Lord is not a shepherd of wayward goats (however, he may permit the common blessings of sun and rain to come to all). R1396:2

Selected from the world through the preaching of the truth. R3004:6

Only a little flock in the present time; but, in due time, he will draw all men (John 12:32), and it is for this purpose that the little flock shall be exalted and associated with himself. R1055:4
Represented by pyramid n on the Chart of the Ages. A235; R275:1
The holy company, a faithful remnant, selected here and there during the Gospel Age. A72; R5707:1, 2773:5, 2407:5, 1983:4
Precious jewels of the Lord's own choosing. B190; R5038:2, 2972:2
The Bride of Christ, his joint-heir in the glorious Millennial Kingdom. SM313:T; R5769:1, 5038:3, 4148:1, 3004:6, 2972:4, 2442:1
"Not many wise..., not many mighty, not many noble are called." (1 Cor. 1:26) OV297:T; R2693:2, 1102:6
There will be as many Jews as of any other nationality in that spiritual company. CR156:3
"Partakers of the divine nature." (2 Pet. 1:4) R270:3, 5677:4, 4390:1, 1360:4, 828:4
The first-fruits. (James 1:18) R5870:2, 4702:4, 2490:2
"That hath part in the first resurrection." (Rev. 20:6) R331:4, 4914:6
Of "the high calling." (Phil. 3:14) R4714:5, 2490:1
The "overcomers." (Rev. 3:21) R1360:4, 5575:2, 2123:2, 828:4, 275:1
Who come forth to "glory and honor and immortality." (Rom. 2:7) R5407:1
A Royal Priesthood. (1 Pet. 2:9) R4999:1, 4591:1, 4537:4, 4397:6, 3115:6; T119
"An holy nation." (1 Pet. 2:9) R2364:2; OV251:2
"Kings and priests." (Rev. 1:6, 5:10) R4298:3, 5575:1
The "called and chosen and faithful." (Rev. 17:14) R4397:6
The "Church of the first-born." (Heb. 12:23) R270:3, 5870:2, 5066:5, 4999:1
"The very elect." (Matt. 24:24) R2490:1, 5407:1, 2966:2
The "wise virgins." (Matt. 25:1-12) R2978:6
The Temple class. R828:4
The Kingdom class. R1855:3
A saintly company. R5066:5, 4999:1
Copies of God's dear Son. R4401:1, 4928:6, 2972:1
Justified, sanctified new creatures. R5032:2
The true sheep of the Good Shepherd. R2441:6
The true virgin Church of Christ. SM408:2; R1718:4
Those with the eyes and ears of faith. R3701:3
Those who faithfully perform their consecration vow. SM636:2
Members of the Messianic body, of which Christ is the Head. R4848:4, 4298:3, 4914:6, 828:5, 779:6
To be associated with Jesus in destroying evil and blessing all the families of the earth. R188:5, 4793:3, 1571:1, 1079:2
Will stand out as bright stars, and shine as the sun over a restored earth. R779:6
The spiritual seed of Abraham, spiritual Israel. R4390:1; CR156:3; OV251:2
144,000 (Rev. 14:1), a small number compared with the millions of Christendom. CR156:3

The saints, therefore, cannot be the "Lord's Great Army" (Joel 2:11) that shall overthrow the kingdoms of this world. D543
Not the clergy of the Catholic Church, as claimed. OV124:4
Typified by Noah. R188:4

Father's good pleasure -- "The Father himself loveth you" (John 16:27);
"He shall cover thee with his feathers and under his wings shalt thou trust." (Psa. 91:4) R3331:2
To give you -- But not to keep. Earthly restitution blessings are theirs to sacrifice only. OV251:3
Teaching us to wait for it. CR69:6; OV237:6; SM408:2
When the Father shall give these the kingdom, as joint-heirs with their Redeemer, everything will be changed. The prince of darkness will be bound, the prince of light will shine forth. R5038:3
Who have made a consecration to God of obedience and righteousness, and later a special consecration to sacrifice earthly interests for the heavenly. "Ye were called in one hope of your calling." (Eph. 4:4) F125
The kingdom -- The spiritual, unseen Kingdom of Messiah, as joint-heirs. SM205:2; R5038:3
Only the Royal Family will get the Kingdom. All others will be subjects of the Kingdom. SM680:1
The dominion of earth. R2520:6
The Kingdom and life eternal which the Lord has to give away are those of Adam, which were lost through his disobedience and repurchased by our Lord at Calvary. OV251:3
These are to be the Royal Priesthood, to whom (under Christ, the King of kings and Priest of priests) shall be committed the full control of earth during the "times of restitution of all things." (Acts 3:21) R2490:2
Representatives of the stone kingdom of Dan. 2. CR42:4
The affairs of earth will be turned over to the Little Flock. R2983:5
Theirs is the high calling to joint-heirship in his Kingdom, which is soon to bless the world. R4714:5
The Kingdom of God per se consists only of our Lord Jesus and the overcomers, who constitute the reigning class. R5575:2
As our Lord suffered and then entered into his glory, so his elect Church must suffer, and then enter into the glory of her Lord--become sharers of his Kingdom. NS579:3
In an age to follow this. A72
This Kingdom cannot come until the Church has been completed. R1718:4
They must be first made spiritual because "flesh and blood cannot inherit the Kingdom of God." (1 Cor. 15:50) R1855:3
Not until this Kingdom will they reach a plane of full equality; and even then there will be differences: "as star differeth from star in glory." (1Cor. 15:41) NS67:1
"I appoint unto you a kingdom as my Father hath appointed unto me." (Luke 22:29) A274

The Kingdom heirship was taken from Israel, the Jews, and transferred to the nation bringing forth the proper fruits. (Matt. 21:43) R2125:5

With the establishment of that autocratic Kingdom under the direct supervision of the Lord and his glorified Church, will come the greatest reformation the world has ever known. SM786:T

Right and truth must and shall prevail when our Kingdom is established, however feeble now may be the voices lifted in our defense. R3068:4

Cannot come and the blessings begin until the Church has been completed. R1718:4; CR244:5

The Lord purposely left his followers without definite information respecting the time for the establishment of his Kingdom. R5399:2

The Kingdom for which the world waits. OV237:6

When the prince of darkness will be bound, and the Prince of Light shine forth. R5038:3, 4148:1

"That ye may eat and drink at my table in my Kingdom, and sit on thrones." (Luke 22:30) A274

The Messianic Kingdom, for the work of blessing, enlightening and uplifting all the poor world of mankind. R4148:1, 5345:6, 5399:2

To constitute the reigning class. R5575:2

As "kings and priests." (Rev. 5:10) R2074:4

Though through much tribulation ye shall enter it. (Acts 14:22) R1801:6

Sell that ye have -- The inference is that what we possess naturally is not of lasting value, while that which we may obtain instead is of priceless value and everlasting. R1656:2

Give alms -- Dispose of your natural abilities and talents, wisely of course, for the benefit of yourself, your family, and all who have need of such service as you can render. R1656:2

We should be ready to share our last loaf or last dollar with any more needy than we. R873:6

Wisely, however, as becometh God's steward. F576

Treasure in the heavens -- "The Lord is the portion of your inheritance; yea, you have a goodly heritage." (Psa. 16:5,6) R2130:6*

Let your heart be there. R2130:5*, 5397:1

That faileth not -- No earthly prize will have any value in comparison to the heavenly prize. R5397:4

Moth corrupteth -- We might learn to trust in uncertain riches, if moth and rust had never corrupted nor thieves stolen the little or much of our earthly possessions. R2130:2*

Luke 12:34

Treasure -- That heavenly Kingdom beyond all comparison of value; the theme of one's thoughts by day and by night. R5396:6, 5397:1

Be girded about -- The loins of their mind girt up and active in thought. R2692:5

Girt with truth; that is, being nerved up, made strong by the truth and ready for any service. R87:2

Ready for service all the time, actively engaged in promoting the interests of the kingdom. Ancient, loose garments had a girdle at the waist to be drawn into place for the ordinary services of life, and loosed when rest was sought. R3354:2, 2692:3

Your lights burning -- The lamp of the divine Word, so necessary to their enlightenment, should be with them, and well supplied with the oil of the holy Spirit; and well trimmed, in the sense of rightly dividing the word of truth. R2692:5

Lamps were necessary in the night and should not be permitted to grow dim, but be trimmed as necessity required. R2692:3

The great light, the glorious sunrise of the Millennial morning, has not yet taken place; the Lord's people are still in the world as little lights, shining in the midst of general darkness. R3354:3

Men that wait -- Continually on the alert. R5399:3

For their lord -- A wealthy householder, representing our Lord Jesus at his second advent. R2692:3,4

Return -- Greek, analusai, sometimes rendered "depart," but properly "return" here. F671

From the wedding -- Diaglott, nuptial feasts. R87:1

Not that he will come to us, or to the Great Company, from the nuptial feast. Q635:3

Our Bridegroom does not come to us after the marriage, but when he comes we are to be as those servants were under those circumstances. R87:3

Amongst the Jews there would be no occasion on which the servants would be expected to be more alert than when their master would come to his home bringing with him his bride. R3354:3; Q635:3, 636:2

Not that he would bring his Bride with him. Rather, he comes that he may receive his Bride. Indeed, the faithful followers are to be made the Bride. R5399:3, 3354:5

And knocketh -- Implied that, at our Lord's coming, he will have arrived before any of his faithful servants will be aware of the fact. R3355:5

Knocking gently with the prophecies to arouse the virgins, but not to arouse the world. R2978:4

The prophetic arguments have rapped loudly enough for some to hear who were awake and ready. R87:3; Q636:T; NS199:6

The knock will be inaudible to human ears and heard only by the ears of understanding with the hearing of faith; it will not be a denominational knock or call; and it must be heard and responded to individually. R2978:4

The knock corresponds to an announcement, through some special servant or servants, either orally or by the printed page, setting forth the evidences of the Master's presence. R3354:6

This knock, or proclamation of the Lord's presence, as indicated by the Old Testament prophecies, has been given since 1875 and is still being given. R3355:2

An individual work, as indicated by Rev. 3:20: "Behold I stand at the door and knock: if any man [individual] hear my voice [knock] and open the door, I will come in to him and sup with him, and he with me." R3355:2

Faithfulness and watchfulness necessary to quickly and readily discern the presence of the Master. R1946:5, 2693:5

Watchfulness for the great event marks those worthy to be called true servants or brethren. R2693:5

Some of the consecrated, overcharged with the cares of this life, will be slow to hear this knock. R5400:5, 4525:2

Those awake have heard, have discerned his presence. R4525:2

As at the first advent he was present some time before his presence was recognized, so at his second advent. R1796:6

They may open -- Those who hear are not compelled to respond. However, only those who do respond and open by faith to the Lord are to have the great blessing of spiritual nourishment. R2978:4

By faith to open their hearts and minds to acknowledge promptly the Master's presence. R5399:5; Q636:T

Immediately -- It was expected of such servants that they should not only not retire to bed, but that they should not even get drowsy: they should be thoroughly awake, quick to hear and to respond to his knock. R2692:3

Don't wait to wake up then, but be awake to hear the first intimation that the Master has arrived. Q636:2

Intent to note the first sound of his approach. R4525:2; Q635:3

Luke 12:37

Blessed -- Truly blessed has been our experience since we recognized his presence and received him. R87:3

They begin to enter into the joy of their Lord now (Matt. 25:21), of being taken into full confidence with God. R1797:1

Those servants -- Referring to all of the Lord's servants who will be living at the time of his second coming. R5400:4

At the parousia of Jesus, his second advent, he will first of all make himself known to his faithful followers. R5399:3

Having come. R149:4*, 191:4

The fact that we received a harmony of truth just at the right time, according to our chronology, promised by our Lord when he would serve his watching servants, is an evidence that the time features, as we understand them, are correct. R5368:3, 4067:5

Find watching -- Some will see the fulfillment of the prophetic declarations respecting the day of the second presence in the marvelous unfolding of the divine plan of the ages, and will recognize it as one of the signs of the presence. D599

Not watching the sky, as though they would see Jesus; but watching the Bible testimonies, watching the trend of the times, watching their own hearts, watching also the interests of the Church of God. R5400:5

Alert, watching for opportunities of usefulness in the proclamation of the Kingdom message. R5400:5

Watching and praying go together; prayer represents faith, and watching, works. R2692:3

Watching keeps fresh in mind the hope of the Church, the reunion with Christ in glory, the reign with him to bless the world, and keeps the heart in harmony with the Lord. R1796:5

He shall gird himself -- The Master of the household turns to be its servant. R3355:1, 5368:4

The Master himself will be the servant, the revealer, the setter-forth of these viands of truth. R5399:6

The Master--the great Servant of God and his people--"the Messenger of the Covenant"--Christ. (Mal. 3:1) D613

Served, first of all by the Master himself, and incidentally by each other. D612; NS43:4

While these "things new and old" (Matt. 13:52) are handed from one servant to another and to the entire household, can any of us doubt that the Master himself is dispensing the delicious viands which so refresh us? R3415:5

For the Master of the house to do this would imply the bringing forth of the very best that he possessed. R2692:4

In our writings we have presented the Lord's message as his message, and not as our own, giving the chapter and verse for every doctrine.

Notwithstanding this, we fear that many lean upon us and upon others. R4709:3, 1867:3

The work that Pastor Russell did was not his work alone, but it was and is the Lord's work. R6015:2*

Sit down to meat -- They should not only know of his presence by the testimony of the Scriptures, but they should have a special demonstration of it by the clearness and beauty of the plan as it would shine into their hearts under his ministrations. NS199:6

A special spiritual feast--special because on a special occasion and as a special reward for their manifestation of interest and devotion. R3355:1
This service will be rendered at a time when the world will not know of his presence. NS7:3

By faith we are already seated at the Master's table, and he himself, according to promise, has come forth and is serving us. C197

Present Truth. R4211:6* Food--refreshing and strengthening truth. R515:4
Meat to eat of which the world knoweth not. R4446:6; D612

Strong meat--not especially intended for babes in Christ, but for those more developed, "who have their senses exercised" (Heb. 5:14) to discern and appreciate this meat now in due season. (Matt. 24:45) B196

Out of the divine Word he will bring things new and old for their refreshment and comfort. R5399:5

Since 1874 he has opened to us the Scriptures, showing us truth concerning his present glorious nature, the object, manner and time of his coming, and the character of his manifestations to the household of faith and to the world. B171

Only those who have at least some hunger and thirst after righteousness (truth) are at all welcomed at this table. R4782:3

Only those baptized unto death have access to the true communion table of the Lord. HG603:4

We are in the harvest time since 1875. The Lord promises that at that time he would cause his people to sit down to a bountiful repast of spiritual food. Studies in the Scriptures are identified with that promise. R4709:6, 4448:5; NS155:3

The table of truth. R4782:3

Treating them as his friends. R2692:4

A special knowledge respecting heavenly things. R2693:5

"Meat in due season." (Matt. 24:45) R1897:5, 2693:5, 2200:1, 1867:3

In "the banqueting house." (Cant. 2:4) D612

Such as the world knoweth not of. D612

We already have this foretaste of the good things to come. C196

A sumptuous feast of rich spiritual food, refreshing and strengthening truth. R4525:2, 5399:3, 4710:1, 4448:5, 515:4

And serve them -- With all the bounties of the harvest season. R2036:3, 1899:2

We must not sit down and expect our Lord to serve us until after we have proved faithful in serving him. R1953:5

With truths concerning his glorious nature, the object and manner of his return, the time features of the plan, the harvest work and the time of trouble. B171

The Master himself will be the servant, the revealer of truth. R5399:6, 5368:4, 4525:2 Expounding to us his parables and dark sayings; disclosing the mystery hid from ages and generations. R5399:5, 713:2

Making known to them the secret of his presence. R1796:6

Making them a feast out of the divine Word. R5399:5

Each faithful watcher will participate in this feast. R5399:6

Luke 12:38

And if -- Not stating in which watch the Master may be expected. The faithfulness of the servants would be tested in proportion to his delay. Many would find it easy to keep alert during the first watch, but not so many during the second and still fewer during the third. R3355:3, 2692:5

In the second watch -- "A thousand years are as a watch in the night." (Psa. 90:4) R3355:2

Intimating that his followers might be looking for him sooner than he would come. R5399:3

From ten to two o'clock. R3355:2

Third watch -- From two to six o'clock, when very few are awake. R3355:2,3

The time is fulfilled--the prophecies marking events of the close of the Gospel Age and the opening of the Millennial Age are accomplished. "A thousand years...are...as a watch in the night." (Psa. 90:4) R3354:6, 3355:2

"After two days will he revive us; in the third day he will raise us up." (Hos. 6:2) R2294:5

And this know -- Understand the reason why the time is so secreted under symbols and parables. D611

The goodman -- The master of the house. Satan, the prince of this world, is the master of the present order of things on earth. R5399:6

Here signifying earthly governments, the powers that be, the representatives of the ten toes of Daniel's image and of his fourth beast. R3355:4, 1946:5

Of the house -- The present social structure. R3355:4

Had known -- But he sleeps in ignorance of the true state of affairs, and dreams of his own greatness and prosperity. R1946:5

The thief -- The reference here is to a thief-like coming--quiet, unostentatious, unknown, without heralds or commotion likely to disturb. R3355:4; B143

Jesus will be present for a time, unobserved by the world. R5399:6

Not have suffered -- Altering their course from fear in order to perpetuate the present imperfect order and to hinder the establishment of the better Kingdom. R1946:5

Showing quite distinctly that none except the servants are to appreciate the knock; that the world in general will not know of the time of the Master's return. R3354:6

Broken through -- The Greek means literally, "dug into." Many olden houses were of dried mud and entry would be gained more quickly by digging through the wall, rather than by forcing the door. R3355:4
The breaking up of the strong man's house--the breaking up of present institutions, civil, religious, political, financial--is already under way. R3355:5

Ready -- Ready for his presence, to render up at any hour their accounts and experience the change. R5399:6

When ye think not -- The Lord purposely left his followers without definite information respecting the time for the establishment of his kingdom. R5399:2

It is not a matter that is left in such a form as to be speculated upon in advance. His knock will be the first intimation of his presence. R3355:5
Not, "Watch incessantly, for you will not know when I do come." All who are faithfully watching shall know when the event occurs, so surely as those who do not watch shall not know. R2693:5
The parousia of the Lord is recognizable only by the wise and foolish virgins. R4692:6

Peter said -- Peter, a leader of the apostles, was perplexed. R5400:1, 1946:5

Our Lord measurably ignored this question in his reply. R3355:6

Unto us -- The twelve. He had already discerned that the Lord had some special favors for "the twelve" alone. R1946:6

Even to all -- All faithful brethren. R1946:5

The Lord said -- These words are not a parable, but an explanation of a parable. R1946:4

Not answering the question directly. To have done so would imply the Lord was not coming in the early watches of the Gospel night, and would have been in contradiction to the very teaching of this parable--that he must be watched for all through the Gospel night. R2693:6

Our Lord's answer indicated what would be his method in the presentation of dispensational truth. R2303:4

Who then -- At that time--at the time of the second presence of the Lord. R2303:4

At the time of the parable's fulfillment the Lord would appoint a servant in the household to bring these matters to the attention of all the servants. R3355:6, 2693:6

That faithful -- In the Greek text the emphasis here is in double form--the faithful, the wise steward. R3356:2

Special servants, appointed to dispense meat in due season at various times, are required to prove, test and determine whether or not the teaching is of God. R5400:1

Wise steward -- A general steward, overseer and dispenser of the Lord's goods. R1946:3

The stewardship mentioned is not a stewardship of talents and opportunities, but a stewardship of spiritual food merely. R2694:1

Implying that, during the Gospel age, it would be his method to make use of certain agents or agencies in the presentation of dispensational truth.

R2303:4

Not a composite steward, because we are not to recognize a clerical, or authoritative class; and the word "that" ("the" in the Revised Version), implies a particular one. R3356:1

The angel of 1 Kings 19:7, the preparer of the Dawns and Towers. R4211:6*

A place of special danger, as well as of special privileges. It may be inferred that if the chosen one should fail, another would be chosen to be that servant or steward. R1946:4

Every child of God is a steward--a steward of his own talents, opportunities, privileges and abilities in the Lord's service. R2694:1

Shall make ruler -- In no sense of the word constituting him a lord, a dictator, a master, or implying his inspiration. R3356:2

Not that "that servant" would be the originator of that meat, nor inspired, nor infallible. D613

Given a general charge respecting the spiritual food to the Lord's family. R5400:2, 3356:4

Not very different from the Lord's usual method of dealing with his family; he has been pleased to use special instrumentalities at various times. R5400:1

Over his household -- His faithful people in general. R1946:2

Not nominal Christian professors in general. R1946:3

Clearly distinguishing between the "household," the "fellow servants" (plural), and that servant. R1946:2

If neither the household nor fellow servants were mentioned, it might be questionable whether the expression "that servant" referred to one or to all faithful servants. R1946:2

To give them -- While the Lord will be the real Provider and Servant, yet the food will be dispensed through a special steward to fellow servants and the household in general. R1946:6

Not that the special steward alone would have to do with the dispensing of food for the household. Matthew speaks of "fellow-servants" who cooperate in this work. (Matt. 24:45-51) R2694:1

Which he will then serve through his visible, human agencies. R1946:5
Impossible from any sectarian creed or storehouse. We might bring forth some things old and good from each, but nothing new. A24

Meat in due season -- Things new and old for the strengthening of his household for this present time of trial and for the perfecting of the saints for the work of ministry, to which he has called them. R2693:6
God's Word is a great storehouse of food for hungry pilgrims. There is milk for babes and strong meat for those more developed. It also contains food adapted to different seasons and conditions. A24
Truth as it becomes due. A349; R4211:6*
Spiritual food, in a manner and to a degree never before enjoyed by the saints. R5651:5, 5400:2; Q554:4
The Bible is the Lord's bountifully spread table of good things for the household of faith. (Gal. 6:10) R4971:2
It is required of each who partakes to prove, test, and determine whether or not the teaching is of God. R5400:1
Can we suppose the Lord would thus honor one who by his teachings or silence supported the eternal torment theory? R2599:1

Luke 12:43

Blessed is -- Whoever will occupy that position, happy will it be for him, if the Master, on coming, shall find him thus employed--diligent in the service of the household. R2303:5

That servant -- During the Lord's presence, and at the time of the gathering of the elect, our Lord, the great Servant of his people, will make choice of one channel for dispensing the meat in due season. D613
A special servant, indicated as the Lord's agent in dispensing present truth as food to his fellow servants and the household. R1946:2
Thousands of the readers of Pastor Russell's writings believed that he filled this office, his modesty and humility precluding him from claiming the title. OV447:6*

Lord when he cometh -- Greek, erchomai, arrives. B163

At the end of the Age. R5400:2

Shall find so doing -- Shall find thus employed. D613

Luke 12:44

Ruler -- The Revised Version is preferable: "set over his household to give them meat" as a steward, not as a lord or master--rather a general servant, a servant of all. R1946:6

Faithfulness on the part of this steward would imply larger and continued service in dispensing the meat to the household of faith at that time. R2693:6

All that he hath -- All the vast storehouse of Present Truth. B163; D613; R1797:1

The whole storehouse of divine truth shall be open to such to be ministered by them to others of the household of faith. R1797:1; B163; D613

Should not be understood to apply to future glories and honors.
R3356:4

But and if -- But if he should prove unfaithful. R5400:2

Every servant is to remember that unfaithfulness would surely lead to his removal, even as every manifestation of humble faithfulness on his part will endear him to the Master. R2694:4

The Church's dangers have always arisen from those who sought to lord it over God's heritage, and to dispense their own wisdom. R3356:4

That servant -- The greater and more important the service, the greater the responsibility to the Master. R2303:5

One previously spoken of, who had been giving the household meat when the Lord came. R149:5*, 1946:2

Must not act or be regarded "as being lords over God's heritage." (1 Pet. 5:3) R3356:4

Say in his heart -- Losing faith. D614

My lord delayeth -- Losing faith in the Master's presence. R2303:5

The coming in the glory of his Kingdom, his personal presence being already recognized. R1797:4

Begin to beat -- Become arrogant and tyrannical to his fellow-servants. R2303:5, 2694:1

Manifest an unkind spirit toward the household. R5400:2

The men-servants -- Those who are faithfully declaring that the Lord is present. B163

To eat and drink -- Ministering to his own earthly wants rather than to the spiritual needs of the family of God. R5400:2

Seeking to gratify present fleshly ambitions with the prestige of the truth. R1797:4

To be drunken -- With false doctrine. D614

The drunkenness referred to is of the spirit and mind, and its effects are described in Isa. 29:9-16. R591:4*

Be intemperate in his words and deeds. R2303:5

Intoxicated with the spirit of the world, the spirit of selfishness. R1797:4

Luke 12:46

Will come -- Greek, heko, be here: "will have come," Rotherham. R591:4*

Cut him in sunder -- Cut him off from being his servant. D614

Be removed, separated, allowed to go into outer darkness with the world in general, in utter ignorance of the times and seasons. The assumption is this would mean the recognition of another to supply the household of faith. R5400:2, 2694:1; D614

Cut him off from being that servant who is entrusted with the dispensing of the Truth as it becomes due in this harvest time. D613, 614; A349; R2303:5, 1797:5

Be removed, separated, cut off from further opportunities. R5400:2, 2694:1
Separated him from the household of faith entirely. R2303:5

With the unbelievers -- A severe experience with the unbelievers in the time of trouble. R2694:1

Share with them the great time of trouble which will follow the gathering together of the Lord's elect. R2303:5

Allowed to go into outer darkness with the world in general. R5400:2

With the hypocrites. (Matt. 24:51) R1797:5, 2303:5; B164

And that servant -- On the basis of the parable, the Lord explains a general principle of his dealings. R5400:2

While applying, in general, to one particular servant, the same principle would apply to each servant in turn, as he would receive either food or stewardship. R3356:5

Which knew -- Those understanding the principles of righteousness and wilfully violating them. SM426:2

Knowledge increases responsibility. R3550:3, 2409:2, 2385:4; SM315:1

Knowing the Master's will, knowing what is right, has to do with the responsibility of the world. NS334:1

A moral man, restrained from outward violence by the respect for the opinions of others or by a fear of the consequence may, because of light enjoyed, have greater difficulties to overcome in the reformation of his character than the grosser, but ignorant, murderer. R1655:4

Shall be beaten -- The beating referred to has reference, not to the world, but to Jesus' disciples who will be living in the end or harvest of this age; but the principle will apply during the next age also. R249:6

With many stripes -- Disciplinary judgments, in proportion to resistance to light, and failure to use it. R2385:4

These stripes are corrective and not vindictive nor eternal. It is not the second death either; for stripes are not used to kill or destroy, but to correct. R779:6*, 570:2, 527:5*

Deliberate transgressions cannot be forgiven, but must be expiated. If committed with considerable, but not full light, the expiating penalty may be stripes, but if committed with full willfulness against full light, the penalty could be nothing short of death--the second death. R2658:2, 1986:3, 1618:3, 570:2

Every sin against light increases the danger of going into the second, or eternal, death. R1736:5

In the great time of trouble, some will pass through a severer ordeal than others. R249:6

By reason of the breaking down of their characters and the greater demoralization of their consciences, they will need, and proportionately receive that much more chastisement from the corrective rod of discipline during the Millennial age. NS439:5

All the stripes will be reformatory, and with a view to helping and encouraging the transgressors to abandon the ways of iniquity and walk in the paths of righteousness. SM426:2

Partially wilful sins are partially unpardonable; in proportion as God sees it to have been wilfully committed. R2612:2

Every sin against light increases the danger of going into the second, or eternal, death. R1736:5

Some of these stripes may come to the transgressor in the present life; but whether in the present or in the future life, every wilful transgression will receive "a just recompense of reward." (Heb. 2:2) HG616:5

Many and severe will be the stripes which a present life of self-indulgence and gratification will naturally demand and receive under the reign, before such will learn the lessons of that kingdom. A303

In proportion to the degree of knowledge and opportunity and willfulness. R5400:4, 3356:4, 2612:2, 2385:4, 259:1; F719

Chastisements; corrective, not vindictive nor eternal. Q603:6; R570:2, 4114:4,5, 1736:5, 779:6

Suffer shame of conscience, contempt and other chastisements. F716-720

If they do not walk according to the light which they received. R2409:2

God's punishments will always be administered in justice, tempered with mercy. R2613:2, 1471:4

In compensation and retribution. R2701:4

"A just recompense of reward." (Heb. 2:2) R724:1

With the Church, these stripes, or punishments, come in the present life.

R5318:5, 4271:6

When we receive grievous chastisement, we should accept it as from a loving Father for our correction. R2613:2

Those who sin, knowing of and imposing on God's love and mercy, will have special punishment. CR271:1

That knew not -- The heathen, for instance. HG720:6; SM426:2, 315:1
Infants and idiots, who have no knowledge whatever, have no responsibility whatever, and will evidently deserve no stripes or punishment during the Millennial age. SM315:1

Those who have never heard of the ransom. R779:6*

And did commit -- Ignorantly. R5400:4

Things worthy of stripes -- Only for such portions of transgressions as have been in the nature of wilful wrong doing. R4114:4 Proportionate to their ignorance. SM426:2

Forgiveness of sins in the future age will not mean that no stripes will be put upon the transgressors. HG647:3

The blessed opportunity of attaining eternal life and earthly perfection will not mean an escape from the penalty of willful sins of the present life. HG720:5

Much is given -- Not speaking of the Church, but of those who have more or less light of conscience, or light from the Divine Word, but who make no use of their light, who in greater or lesser degree live in violation of their conscience. SM315:2

According to their improvement or neglect of light enjoyed during the Gospel age. R259:1 In the way of knowledge, opportunity, etc. R1655:4 To Christendom. D72

Be much required -- Judgment will be according to knowledge and ability to do right--a just recompense of reward. R1655:4

The opposite is also true--where little is given, little is required. R569:6

"Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." (Gal. 6:7) HG720:5

If the men of Nineveh and the queen of the south shall rise up in judgment against Israel (Matt. 12:41,42), then Israel, and every previous generation, and the heathen nations shall rise up against this generation of Christendom. D72

That judgment will be according to knowledge and ability to do right--a just recompense of reward. R1655:4

In proportion as we are enjoying the light, we have increased responsibility to tell it to others. CR464:5

Ask the more -- That time will be tolerable for all in proportion as their sins had been sins of ignorance. (Matt. 11:24) HG336:3

Luke 12:49

To send fire -- Trouble came upon them until their entire polity passed away in the year AD 70. So we see now that more or less there are fires burning here and there, exposing, to some extent, the evil-doers. R5317:3

Luke 12:50

I have a baptism -- While this is a daily dying, yet, in another sense of the word, it is a sacrifice to the end of life. In one sense, his sacrifice was accepted at Jordan. In another sense it was day by day until that baptism was completed on the cross and he cried, "It is finished!" (John 19:30) R5031:6; Q156:6

He said these words three and a half years after his water immersion, and could not have referred to that. HG733:1

Of which immersion into water is the symbol. F435; R1543:1, 5542:6, 2417:5, 445:1

To be baptized with -- It required all of the Lord's three and a half year ministry to complete the consecration symbolized by this baptism. R2417:5; Q277:2

A sacrificial death, as man's redemptive price or sin-offering. PT388:3*; F438; R5599:3

How am I straitened -- In difficulty. F438; HG602:4, 733:1; NS52:1
In our Lord Jesus, holy, harmless and undefiled, there was a contrast--the earthly interests drawing one way and the heavenly interests another. R5211:3

Realizing himself near the close of this death-baptism, when it would be fully accomplished, and feeling the weights, trials and difficulties growing heavier each moment, and having not a sympathizer. NS51:6
As he neared the completion of his baptism unto death, he experienced the greater difficulty, and was longing for its completion. HG602:5
If we have indicated our willingness, we have the promise that the ability will be supplied. R445:1

I am feeling greatly straitened, I find that connected with my death are difficulties that I had not expected. R5599:3

He was anxiously awaiting its completion, which was reached at Calvary. R5061:1

Spoken at about the Passover season, a time for peculiar temptations. R3178:3

A conflict with the flesh was going on; but the Lord's spirit was firm. R5211:5

Until it be accomplished -- Fulfilled very shortly after, when he died, crying: "It is finished!" (John 19:30) F439; HG602:5; PD57/69; NS52:1
The next day he would die, as he well knew. He anxiously awaited the morrow, the completion of his sacrificial death. R5599:3

This evidences the fact that our Lord did not receive water immersion as the real immersion, but merely as a figure of the real baptism, baptism into death as man's redemption price or sin offering. F438

Being perfect, he could do the things that he would. In our case the matter is different. We are by nature fallen. Hence we need the merit of Christ to assist us. R5211:5

Luke 12:51

That I am come -- In the harvest of either the Jewish or the Gospel Age. B236

But rather division -- Separation; applicable now, until his Church has been gathered and glorified, and his Kingdom set up in authority. R1577:6
Between those who love the truth supremely and others of the family; this division cannot be avoided. B236

Because the children of darkness wage a continual warfare against the light. F533

Luke 12:53

Against the son -- In the harvest the separation will mean, in many instances, the uprooting of earthly friendships and the sundering of many tender ties; and the truth will do the separating. B236

Luke 12:56

Ye hypocrites -- You are proud and hypocritical, and draw nigh to God with your lips while your hearts are far from him. R1713:3

Jesus denounced them as a class. R5679:4

Ye do not discern -- If we are too much engaged in work or in pleasure to have time to study, to watch properly, we find ourselves in difficulty. R5202:1

This time -- That you, as a people, are even now en route to judgment. R1713:3

Their ignorance was a mark of carelessness and unworthiness. R2981:4

They did not discern "the time of their visitation." (Luke 19:44) R5202:1, 1713:2, 1611:3*

None are so blind respecting the times in which we live and the great changes impending as the leaders of religious thought. R2981:4

Thine adversary -- The divine law, which condemned all to death. (Rom. 7:10) R1713:3

Give diligence -- Admit the justice of the Law's condemnation, because you have come short of its righteous requirements. R1713:3

That thou mayest -- While the offer of mercy is still made to you as a nation, through faith in Christ, who, by his sacrifice, offers an atonement for you. R1713:3

Delivered from him -- By acceptance of the atonement offered by Christ. R1713:4, 4559:1

Permitted to come into God's favor at Pentecost. R4559:1

Lest he -- The Law, whose demands you fail to meet, though you claim to meet them. R1713:4

To the officer -- To some power that would execute the penalty. R1713:4

Into prison -- Into a position of disfavor, such as that nation has experienced ever since their rejection of Messiah. R1713:4

All that Jewish nation who rejected Jesus stumbled into prison nationally. R4559:2

The very last mite -- In the forfeiture of the chief blessing, which was offered to them first, but which they rejected. R1713:4, R3354:6

By the end of the Millennium they will have "paid the uttermost farthing" (Matt. 5:26) and get free. R4559:2

Luke 13:1

Pilate had mingled -- God permits the wrath of men and of Satan, within certain limits, in connection with the world of mankind; but in respect to his elect Church it is different. F646

Luke 13:2

Sinners above all -- It is very seldom that God visits punishment upon the world in the present time. R569:5

Luke 13:3

Nay -- Calamities are not always punishment for sin. R2668:4, 4148:6, 1773:3, 569:4

"Some men's sins are open beforehand and others they follow after." (1 Tim. 5:24) R1618:5

The Lord points forward to the day of judgment, when the guilty shall receive their just deserts, and penitent sinners may return to God. R1618:5

Except ye repent -- Unless your knowledge of God, whenever it comes, shall lead you to repentance. HG222:6

The prerequisite, on man's part, to salvation. R1437:2

The death sentence is over all, and only by getting into relationship with the Life-giver can any of us hope to escape it. R4148:6

Likewise -- Our Lord Jesus used the calamities of his times as illustrating the just penalty against all who do not flee sin and lay hold upon the Redeemer and Life-giver. HG294:2

Perish -- Death, in whatever form it may come, is perishing, ceasing to exist. HG293:4

Finally, all who fail to repent and lay hold upon the gracious Life-giver shall perish; they shall fail to obtain the full restitution provided; they shall never see (perfect) life. HG293:6

But while calamities may come to the saints, they never "happen"; nothing that befalls them is of accident. F646

Luke 13:4

Tower in Siloam fell -- Calamities are to be regarded as accidents, attributable to human imperfection and lack of experience, or to disturbances incidental to the preparation of the earth for its more quiet and perfect condition during the Millennium. HG294:3

Likewise perish -- Not all perish in the same manner, but all shall die. R4148:6

Luke 13:6

Had a fig tree -- The Jewish nation. D604; R5503:2, 2564:4, 384:2, 127:1
Found none -- During the Gospel age, as a nation, they have borne no fruit. R127:3*

Luke 13:7

These three years -- The three and a half years of our Lord's ministry to the Jewish nation, and their final rejection by him, are represented in this parable. R2564:4, 127:2*

Luke 13:10

On the sabbath -- Since Jesus according to the flesh was a Jew, and therefore bound by all the commandments of the Jewish Law, he could do nothing contrary to that Law. He could not set it aside, nor was it proper that he explain to the Jews the real meaning of the Sabbath. R5405:6

Thou art loosed -- Jesus released her from her bondage. R5406:1

Luke 13:14

Not on the sabbath -- A special rebuke to Jesus, intimating that he was not so holy and so careful of the Sabbath as he should be, but was a violator of the Law. R5406:1

Jesus did many of his miracles on the Sabbath days, partly to emphasize the fact that the great Sabbath, the seventh thousand-year day of earth's history, will be the time of his kingdom, in which all mankind will be privileged to be healed from sin and sickness. R5405:6

So, during the antitypical Sabbath, the Millennium, it will be declared to all the world that "whosoever will" (Rev. 22:17) may have life and health eternal if he will take the steps of faith and obedience. B40
Making the reasonable Law of God to appear unreasonable to the people.
R5406:1

Thou hypocrite -- Exaggerating the letter of the Law while ignoring its spirit. R5405:6

Luke 13:16

Whom Satan -- The prince of death and darkness. (Compare Heb. 2:14)
R2014:5

A malevolent being, opposed to God and to righteousness, with a certain power for evil-- occult powers. SM323:2

Has adopted "mind cures" to draw the attention of the world and keep them blinded. R2014:5

Hath bound -- He does possess certain power for evil. SM323:2

Mrs. Eddy's son declared his belief that his mother was under occult influence. SM324:T

From this bond -- From her special infirmity, but not from all the bondage of corruption. She was still subject to pain and death. (Rom. 8:21) R816:6

Sabbath day -- Typical of the times of restitution. R816:6

Unto what -- The different parables illustrative of the kingdom treat it from different standpoints, just as we might take different photographs of persons or a building at different stages of development or from different angles. R5406:3

The kingdom of God -- Few have noticed that nearly all of Jesus' teachings related to the Kingdom of God. This was because the Kingdom of God is the great divine remedy for sin. All that took place prior to the coming of Jesus was merely preparatory. R5406:1

A term synonymous with "the Kingdom of heaven." (See Mark 4:30,31) R397:1
The Church is the Kingdom now, only in the prospective sense--by faith.
R397:4

Grain of mustard seed -- A small beginning. R5406:5, 45:6

A great tree -- A picture of the outward appearance of the church--very prosperous. R5406:5

The fowls of the air -- Elsewhere Jesus declared that the birds represented the wicked one and his angels, ever ready to take away the seed of truth and to work adversely as respects the Gospel program. (Matt. 13:4,19; Rev. 18:2) R5406:5

Which have grievously befouled the tree. C187

"Babylon is a cage of every unclean and hateful bird." (Rev. 18:2) C187, 162; R5406:5, 5050:1

Luke 13:20

The kingdom of God -- The sacrificial death of Jesus was the foundation to the setting up of God's Kingdom. R5406:2

Illustrating the process by which the Church would get into the wrong condition. R4636:3

The Church as an embryotic Kingdom. R5406:5

Like leaven -- Leaven, in the Bible, is always used as a symbol of corruption, of sin. R5406:6; F464; T98

"Purge out, therefore, the old leaven [sin, malice, hatred, strife, etc.], that ye may be a new lump." (1 Cor. 5:7) R5050:1, 2635:1

Which a woman -- A woman, in symbolic language, represents a church system. (Rev. 2:20) R5406:6

And hid -- Corrupting the divine message, the spiritual food which God had prepared for the church. R5406:6

Today the entire mass of theological doctrine is putrid, offensive to all Christian people. R5050:4

Luke 13:23

And he said -- Jesus did not give a direct answer to the question for two reasons: (1) the holy Spirit had not yet come; and (2) it was not the due time to explain the particulars of the two salvations. R5407:1

To have answered their question in full would have led to many other questions for whose answers they were not prepared. R1951:3

It is not for us or anyone to answer the query which our Lord refused to answer. The most we are privileged to do is to point out that "a ransom for all" (1 Tim. 2:6) has been given by our Lord. E401

The fact that God had in purpose another call, to another class, in the Millennial age, may cheer and comfort us now, but it should not encourage any one to reject a present call and to hope for another. R1951:3

Strive -- Make great effort. R1951:3

The way of morality, temperance, moderation and wisdom, although a commendable way, is not the way in which the Christian of this Gospel age is invited to walk. R2074:4

How different from that easy-going Christianity which seems but a very little removed from the spirit of the world, and which views the zeal which strives, fights, runs and watches as extreme, peculiar, fanatical and foolish. R2123:2, 1951:3

The rich, the popular, those absorbed in business, are content with the things of this life and scarce likely to leave them for things for which they feel no need. R108:2*

"Give all diligence to make your calling and election sure." (2 Pet. 1:10)

To enter in -- To the Kingdom. R5407:2

The strait gate -- Difficult. R1951:3

For a certain period of time, the door to the high calling stands ajar.

Many -- Of the "many" who accept the call, "few" will be chosen. R1113:2

The way is made narrow by the circumstances of the present time, by the opposition of the worldly spirit against truth and righteousness. C207

Within are ministering spirits, all conspiring for our ultimate membership in the new creation. F152

Luke 13:25

Of the house -- The Church. R224:5 Shut to the door -- Not the door of mercy, thank God! but nevertheless a door--the door of opportunity of entering into and becoming members of the Kingdom class, the elect Church. NS319:6

To the "narrow way." R224:5

When all the faithful "wise" virgins shall have been proved so, and have entered into the joys of the Lord. R1112:6; C221

The illustration is that of an eastern wedding, as represented in the parable of the ten virgins (Matt. 25:1-13). When the Master and his ready, accompanying friends have entered, the door is shut. R1951:6

As soon as the last one completing the number shall have qualified for glory and shall have passed through the door, it will be shut. R5407:4, 1951:6; NS319:6

This may also be understood to refer to the closing of the door of Israel's favor eighteen centuries ago. Both views are true to the facts and to Scriptures, though the Gospel age application fits some further details. NS319:4

What may be the outward indication that the door is shut we know not, but we will expect to see some evidence of it. R224:5

Of opportunity; to the narrow way. "They that were ready went in with him to the marriage, and the door was shut." (Matt. 25:10) C221; R1952:1, 1112:6, 224:5

"I am he that shutteth and no man openeth." (Rev. 3:7) C195

All opportunity to become of the wise virgin class by engaging in the harvest work will be thereby ended. C210, 213, 221

This does not mean that the foolish virgins will be consigned to eternal torment. F75

When the full predestinated number of the Church has been called, chosen and found faithful. (Rev. 17:14) R1951:6, 5407:4, 1112:6; Q75:1

The door through which the Bride class will enter will close, never to open again, perhaps a year or more after the door to service has closed.

Q75:1

Knock at the door -- Apparently glad then to give their all for an opportunity to enter, but it will be too late. R225:4

We have done many mighty works; are we not to be of the Bride class? R5407:4

I know you not -- As my Bride. R1112:6, 224:5; C221

All outside are treated as strangers and the festivities proceed without them. R1951:6

They will then realize they have failed to make their calling and election sure. R1952:1

Luke 13:26

Then shall ye -- Then many will begin to see matters differently--to see what privileges and opportunities for sacrifice they once enjoyed and missed. R1112:6; C221

About that time a great awakening of religious thought will come to the world, in the midst of a great time of trouble. R5407:4

We have eaten -- There will be a great lamentation, crying, Lord, Lord, are we not to be of the Bride class? R5407:4, 224:5

Some would be found to be very prominent, confident and boastful, whom he would not be willing to acknowledge as his bride. Some will be found busily engaged in building up Babylon, but neglecting the divine Word and their own character building. NS319:5

I know you not -- Many believing, praying and working Christians will be disappointed; for prophesying, casting our devils, praying Lord, Lord, and doing many wonderful works are all insufficient to obtain the reward of heaven. HG555:6

The Lord will disown them as respects the Bride company. R5407:4

There shall be weeping -- Right here on the earth, amongst a class who neglected the privileges of the high calling when they knew of it. R5407:4 Not alone will there be disappointment in losing the great prize, but some of the trouble and tribulation will arise because they will find themselves suddenly in the midst of a "great time of trouble." R1952:1 Grief is indeed implied, but not one word about an eternity of grief. HG303:2

Signifying chagrin, disappointment, savage animosity; as in the case of Stephen: "They gnashed on him with their teeth." (Acts 7:54) R4329:1; Q732:2

Ye -- Unfaithful Jews. R4071:6

Shall see -- The Kingdom itself will be invisible to men, but its earthly representatives will be seen and known to all mankind. HG440:4; NS679:4

The Ancient Worthies will become visible representatives to men of the glorified spiritual Christ, Head and Body. R5762:1, 5407:5, 1872:5, 1851:3, 1693:2; D619; SM226:1

Not merely as they were, but resurrected to human perfection, samples of what mankind may attain. R5299:2

In each one of these Ancient Worthies God will be manifest in the flesh. They will be princes at that time and will rule the earth, under Christ's Kingdom. R5291:3

The world will never see Messiah, except as they see His mind, His disposition, His character, through these earthly representatives. SM733:T

Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob -- Jesus said not one word about any one seeing himself or any one of the apostles in Kingdom glory. R5199:5 Indicating identity in the resurrection. R678:4

Who died before the ransom was paid, and were not therefore called to a place in the spiritual Kingdom, the "better thing for us." (Heb. 11:40) D625; F86, 112; R5836:3, 5407:5

The world will have contact with them, and be blessed by their instruction. SM733:T

The glory and perfection of these Ancient Worthies will be an example and incentive to men to strive to attain the same. A290

And all the prophets -- From John the Baptizer back to Abel. D625

In the kingdom -- Those who will be in the Kingdom of God will not be the subjects of it, but the rulers in it. R860:4

These intermediaries, while not the Kingdom in the proper sense of the word, will be so fully the representatives of it amongst men that they will be recognized as the Kingdom by men. D619

The earthly phase. R4071:6, 1634:6, 1580:1; D619; OV56:4

The earthly phase of the Kingdom was all that had ever been revealed until Jesus came and taught concerning a Kingdom higher, into which humanity (flesh and blood) could not enter. R219:5

Therefore not a contradiction of Matt. 11:11: "He that is least in the Kingdom of heaven is greater than he (John the Baptist)." R637:3*

There is only one Kingdom per se, and that is the Church; but it will have servants and representatives which to the world will be its Kingdom or direct government. R2052:1

These will be in communication and cooperation with the heavenly phase of the Kingdom. R4071:6

Yourselves thrust out -- They will not even have a share in the earthly Kingdom. It will be given to the worthies of the past who lived and died before the high calling was opened up. R5407:5

Not in power or occupying ruling positions, but they will not be deprived of the blessings of that Kingdom which are for "all the families of the earth." (Gen. 12:3) R860:2

All the unworthy of the Jewish age shall be excluded. R1580:1

They -- Some of the Gentiles. R5407:5

From the east -- The heirs of the Kingdom will not be entirely Jewish, because the Jews as a nation were not sufficiently holy and because the Lord could accept only the holy. R5407:5

Luke 13:30

Last which shall be first -- The Gentiles were last in God's favor. R5407:5

The last to die will probably be the first to be awakened. D641; R4499:1, 5531:6

Adam and Eve will probably be the last of the human family to be awakened. D641; R5531:6, 4499:1

First which shall be last -- In point of time, God called fleshly Israel first; but in point of favor, and in time of realization, Spiritual Israel comes first. B206

The Jews were first in God's favor and the Gentiles last; yet some of the first with privilege and opportunity would fail. R5407:5

The heavenly rulers, the Church, developed last, will be first in grandeur of position and time of installment. A293; B206; R219:6

The earthy rulers, the Ancient Worthies, developed first, will be installed last, under the Church. A293; B206; R219:6

Some who have not been favored during this Gospel age will be granted the chief favor during the coming Age. F118

When the Kingdom is ushered in, God's special favor will pass again to Natural Israel. F118

The race will come out of the "prison-house" of death in reverse order to that in which they entered. R5531:6, 4499:1; D641; SM441:T

That fox -- Herod. R1695:3

I cast out -- Jesus, as the Head, represents the whole Christ so thoroughly, that whatever might be said of him could be applied on a still larger and grander scale, to the Body and seed of which he is the Head. R292:2

I do cures -- Partly to represent the higher work of the healing of spiritual maladies. On this principle, he and the Church have been doing this work, but in only a limited and imperfect manner. R92:3*

To day and to morrow -- The cures and blessings of divine grace have prevailed during the fifth, the day in which our Lord and the apostles lived, and also during the sixth thousand-year day. R2294:5, 1695:5, 292:2, 92:4*

The third day -- On the seventh, the grand Millennial Sabbath, Christ and his Church will be perfected and the cures correspondingly increased. R2294:5, 1695:5, 292:2, 92:4*

Be perfected -- He is not perfected until all, both the living and dead members, are glorified with him. As Eve was the glory of Adam, and his complement, so of the Church in relation to Christ. R92:3*
In which the Temple is to be "raised up" in Kingdom power and glory. R1695:5, 2294:4, 292:1

Then the great work of restitution will begin. R3080:6
See also comments on Hosea 6:2 and John 2:19.

Luke 13:33

To day and to morrow -- The use of the word day in two senses in the same connection, without an explanation, is similar to his use of the word death in two senses in the statement: "Let the dead bury their dead." (Matt. 8:22) R92:2*

A prophet perish -- Showing he was not to be put to death until he had reached Jerusalem. R92:2*

Killest the prophets -- When Jesus came, those who had been under such special divine instruction were, as a nation, totally unready to receive him as the Messiah, and crucified him. R5768:6

As a hen -- Greek, hon tropon, in like manner. R341:1

Ye would not -- The people, under the guidance of the scribes and the Pharisees, the theologians of that time, made light of the message and went their way--one to his farm, and another to his merchandise. (Matt. 22:5) R5510:5

The literal seed of Abraham having thus failed to accept the Kingdom, the next step was to form a new nation, "an holy nation, a peculiar people" (1 Pet. 2:9), to be the Kingdom. R2276:2,3

Your house -- These are the ones who the Apostle says count themselves unworthy of the grace of God, the ones who God blinded and turned aside during the full period of this Gospel age, during the period of the gathering of the elect of this Gospel age. NS370:5

Left unto you -- Here assuming kingly office; a date parallel to the spring of AD 1878. R5772:5, 181:6*

The "coming" of the Son of Man referred to in Matt. 10:23. R2645:2

Desolate -- A very short time afterwards it began to lose its power; and the Jewish nation lost its identity completely as a nation in the year AD 70, 37 years after. R4788:5

Failure in their trial or judgment meant the loss of their privilege of making them God's Kingdom for the blessing of all the families of the earth, and their remanding again under a death sentence, as unworthy of life under the Law. NS641:5

The typical sacrifices were repudiated by the Father, as the antitype followed immediately upon the cessation of the type of the Atonement Day sacrifices. R5967:1

Ever since, the Jews have been desolate and blighted as a nation, but there is a promise that this blighted fig tree (Mark 11:13,14) shall again become a living tree, a living nation. R5920:6

Just so now it is with professedly Christian nations. Desolation is coming upon them even as it came upon the Jews in the end of their age. CR495:5

The literal seed of Abraham having thus failed to accept the Kingdom, the next step was to find another nation more worthy than the Jews. R2276:3

The first Palm Sunday was the turning point marking the rejection of natural Israel as a nation and the inauguration of Spiritual Israel as the "holy nation." NS630:5

A turning point with the Jewish nation; a short time afterwards it began to lose power and 37 years later lost its identity completely as a nation. R5495:3, 4788:5

The favor which has been exclusively yours is now withdrawn. A72, 223; B70; R1966:4

"Even today do I declare that I will render double unto thee." (Zech. 9:12) B225

These words, pronounced as our Lord's first act on assuming office as King of the Jews, 33 AD, typified the rejection of nominal Spiritual Israel in 1878 AD. B225, 246; C151; R5772:5, 229:1

As natural Israel was tested in the "harvest" of the Jewish age, so spiritual Israel is tested in the "harvest" of the Gospel age. R2645:3

Until the time come -- The curse did not seal their eternal doom. This was "blindness" only for a time, Paul says. (Rom. 11:25-27) R127:3*
Nearly nineteen centuries later. R5495:3

The Millennial day. Q107:2

When ye shall say -- From the heart. B226

As prophesied by David in Psa. 118:26. D639

Blessed is he -- Our Lord's words of this verse emphasize five points: (1) the Jews had the first opportunity to become the elect of God; (2) the time had come to end their national favor; (3) furnishing the opportunity for the installation of the antitypical house of sons (Heb. 3:6); (4) the selection of spiritual Israel during our Lord's absence, when natural Israel would not see him; (5) that their blindness shall be turned away and favor return to them. R3539:2

Luke 14

As he went into -- Evidently before entering the dining room, probably in the courtyard. R2699:3

To eat bread -- Jesus never refused an invitation to a feast, always using such occasions as opportunities for the presentation of the truth. R3831:2, 2699:2

Our Lord was prompt to avail himself of all such table-talk opportunities. On each occasion of his attendance we find him utilizing the opportunity for the inculcation of some truth--natural or spiritual. R2700:2

The custom of having Bible talks during the meal hour is profitable. To partake of heavenly food at the same time that we appropriate the natural is quite proper. We see that this was Jesus' custom. R5414:3, 2700:1

The practice at the Bible House for table talks described in detail. R3832:6, 2700:1

On the sabbath day -- The Sabbath was quite a feast day amongst the Jews, but in accordance with the requirements of the Law the dishes were served cold--cooked previously. R3831:1, 2699:3

Considerable blessing might be experienced, and additional opportunity for spiritual development enjoyed, if Christian people were to cook a double portion on Saturday, and thus leave themselves freer from domestic responsibilities on the day of worship. R2699:3

Our celebration of the first day of the week as a Christian Sabbath should not be with the thought that it is a law, but rather an appreciation of the privilege of leaving the ordinary affairs of life for spiritual things. R3831:5

They watched him -- Critically, rather than sympathetically; looking for faults rather than for virtues. R3831:2

Doubtless these men were interested in coming in close contact with him, with a view to judging according to their own standards respecting his character, teaching and miracles. R3831:2

Luke 14:2

A certain man -- He may have been a member of the household or family; indeed our Lord possibly may have been invited there with a view to proposing the healing of this one with the infirmity. R3831:2

Jesus answering -- Discussing the subject in advance on this occasion. R5406:4

Heal on the sabbath -- Our Lord was still under the terms of the Law Covenant; hence nothing that our Lord did on the Sabbath day--healing the sick, etc.--could properly be esteemed a violation of the fourth commandment. R3831:4

His custom was to do a large proportion of his miracles on the Sabbath day because that typified the Millennial day in which he will scatter blessings of healing amongst all the people. R2699:6

So, during the antitypical Sabbath, the Millennium, it will be declared to all the world that "whosoever will" may have life and health eternal if he will take the steps of faith and obedience. B40

They held their peace -- No doubt feeling themselves somewhat incompetent to discuss any question with one whom they had all learned to recognize as a great Teacher, however much they rejected his Messiahship. R2699:6

No objection to healing on the Sabbath day having been cited from the Law, our Lord performed the miracle. R3831:3

Showing his own understanding of the matter, that it would be right to heal him. R2699:6

Touched him, so that it might be manifest that the miracle was of divine power through him. R3831:3

Luke 14:5

An ass or an ox -- As it could not be wrong to assist a dumb animal out of difficulty on the Sabbath, much less could it be wrong to relieve the distress of a human being made in the image of God. R2700:1

Another reading is: "Which of you having a son or even an ox." R3831:3

Luke 14:6

Could not answer -- They all knew that, where their selfish interests were involved, they would decide that there was nothing in the Law to hinder lending assistance on the Sabbath. R3831:3

Luke 14:7

A parable to those -- Speaking in a manner that would not be appropriate to any but himself, criticizing the gathered guests. R5414:3, 3832:1
He called attention to the wrong self-seeking course, not by saying anything against the action in this particular case, but by suggesting a propriety of conduct in a general way. R2700:3
Probably in answer to some question. R3832:1
How they chose -- Thus showing the pride and ambition of their hearts. R2700:3

In the highest room -- We are frequently charged with seeking selfishly for something superior to what others will receive, but we are interested not so much in the dignities of the Kingdom as for any place in that great marriage feast. R3832:2

Luke 14:9

Take the lowest room -- An ambitious striving for position in the present time will surely mean a loss of the Lord's favor and a much humbler position in the Kingdom, if pride did not hinder entirely from being accepted as members of the Little Flock. R3832:3

Luke 14:10

In the lowest room -- We may safely assume that our Lord and his disciples took the less distinguished seats, in harmony with the Scriptural injunction, "In honor preferring one another." (Rom. 12:10)
R2700:3

A quotation of Prov. 25:7. R2053:2

He that bade thee -- It would not occur to any of us to think of ourselves in connection with high honors and dignities except as we find it plainly stated in the divine Word; but finding it there it is the duty of faith to accept whatever we may be deemed worthy of. R3832:3

Go up higher -- The chief places will not be given to those most bold, most inclined to usurp authority; but, on the contrary, the Lord will not forget the man or woman of humble mind. R3832:1

Exalteth himself -- Praises himself. R4115:3

Amongst the Gentiles the rulers are lords, who do not service but are served, but among the followers of Jesus the rule is to be reversed.

R3363:1

Ambition is a very necessary faculty of the human mind, without which the world would make comparatively little progress; but it is a very dangerous element as respects the formation of Christian character. R3832:2

A man has no right to aspire to be an angel, never having been invited to that position; nor has an angel a right to aspire to the divine nature.

That was the crime of Satan which brought his abasement, and will end in his destruction. (Isa. 14:14) R612:3; A189

Knowledge without humility might puff up. R5988:4

Such could not be trusted in a high position. R5414:6

A true elder, a real servant of the Lord, is to avoid a self-seeking spirit. R5389:1

The Lord has no use for the proud and self-sufficient, either in the present age in the instructing and building up of the Church, or in the future age in the instruction and uplifting of the world. R5988:1

Shall be abased -- God would do this abasing, not of a vengeful spirit, but because the one who would vaunt himself must be brought low. R4928:2

The self-seeking, the proud in spirit, could not be trusted by the Lord in a high position. They might do damage to themselves and to the Lord's cause with such a spirit. R5414:6

As illustrated by Satan. A189

Inflated values must at some time come down to a solid basis. R1486:6

What degradation can await such self-exaltation as is shown in the utterances of the Papacy! B313

Humbleth himself -- Humility is important, not only on its own account, but also because the other graces of the holy Spirit cannot be cultivated without it. R4787:1

If we look at our own imperfections and the good qualities of others, we shall find ourselves more and more appreciative of others. R4928:3

Only as we are in a humble attitude of mind can we get a view of the lengths, breadths, heights and depths of the divine plan. Otherwise we would continually find our view of God and of his Word and plan obstructed by self. R2860:4

There is always plenty of room at the bottom of the ladder of honor. F296

Ones who would not be injured by the exaltation, nor in danger of deflecting in the future work to which all of the Kingdom class are called. R5414:6; HG623:5

Ambition is necessary in the Church as well as in the world; but in the new creation it must not be a selfish ambition to be great and prominent, but a loving ambition to serve the Lord and his people, even the very humblest. F296

A self-seeking brother should be passed by, however capable; and a less capable, but humble brother, should be chosen for elder. F296

It becomes all God's intelligent creatures to receive, with humble gratitude, whatever God may bestow. R612:3

One of the secrets of the greatness of Joseph: he honored God, and was therefore of the kind whom God is pleased eventually to honor and exalt. R3978:6

Illustrated by the contrast between Joshua and Korah, Dathan and Abiram. R3079:2

Illustrated by the contrasting course of Jesus and Satan. NS623:3

Illustrated by the behavior of John the Baptist. R4115:2

As Christ did, to become man's Redeemer. E425

By facing popular opposition and enduring popular reproach. R1487:2

This principle applies to both human and spirit beings. R5535:6, 5844:5

None will be granted life everlasting who do not cheerfully humble themselves under the mighty hand of God. R5535:6

If divine favor is expected, it must be sought, not in pride and self-sufficiency, but in humility. 2700:4

The other graces of the holy Spirit cannot be cultivated without humility. R4787:1

A lesson of vital importance to all who would be ready for and enter the Kingdom. R2700:3

The path of humility is the path to glory. R5535:6 Now the proud are happy (Mal. 3:15), but in the next age all the blessings will be upon the contrite and humble. R5218:5

Shall be exalted -- The statement of a philosophical principle of divine law. R1766:6

A principle of divine government illustrated in the opposite courses of the Logos not meditating a usurpation to be equal with God (Phil. 2:6), and Lucifer, who said: "I will be like the Most High." (Isa. 14:14) R5844:5 Now the humble and contrite are trodden down in the street. Now the proud are happy. R5218:5

But not necessarily to the highest position. A189; R612:3

In due time; in the new Kingdom. R1766:6, 5218:5

God's blessing will come to us along this line or not at all. R1537:4

The Church should follow this general rule in selecting elders. F296

He who would serve most was to be esteemed most highly. R3363:1

Those who would not be injured by exaltation nor in danger of deflecting. R5414:6

"Humble yourselves therefore under the mighty hand of God, that he may exalt you in due time." (1 Pet. 5:6) R3079:2, 5844:5, 4928:2, 3978:6, 3832:3, 3363:1

Luke 14:12

Said he also -- Perhaps in answer to another question. R3832:3
Probably considerable was said in the interim that was not recorded or pertinent. R2700:5

When thou makest -- Words of counsel to his host in so kind and so wise a manner that it would surely give no offence. R2700:5

Call not thy friends -- Not that it would be wrong to invite friends, neighbors or kinsmen who might invite us in turn, but we are not to think that in so doing we are laying up any treasure in heaven. R5415:1, 3832:4

A recompense be made -- If we get our rewards for good deeds in the present life, how will there be anything coming to us in the future?

Luke 14:13

Call the poor -- The Pharisee had done something of the very kind in inviting Jesus and probably his disciples to dinner. He well knew that they were poor and would be unable to ask him in return. R5415:1
Perhaps the Lord wished to show his host that in inviting himself and his disciples he had really done a gracious act, provided he had the gracious motive back of it. R3832:4, 2700:5

Whoever enters into paying support of the poor in a proper spirit is doing something meritorious; but whoever pays such taxes from compulsion merely, without appreciation, evidently would not be deserving of any credit.
R5415:1

Luke 14:14

Shalt be recompensed -- Our Lord intimates that every good deed willingly done from the right motive may be sure to have a blessing in the present or in the future life. R3832:4, 1008:4

Not that those works will justify any, but being then justified by faith in the ransom, these shall be rewarded for those good deeds done before the light of truth was made so clear. R570:2

Every act of kindness which anyone may now do for those more distressed than themselves will have its effect upon their own hearts, not only blessing them for the life that now is, but preparing their hearts through a greater nobility for a higher relative position in the future during the Millennium. NS536:5

Let us therefore, in the world and in our families and amongst those who are not of the consecrated class, encourage large benevolence, kindness and generosity, knowing that these will be beneficial to our friends.

A reward that would fully compensate every such benefaction. R2700:5

Not a reward of glory, honor, immortality and joint-heirship in the Kingdom of God, but a good reward, more than compensating for the kindness they performed. R2701:4

At the resurrection of the just -- There is a general division line between the just and the unjust, those who please God and those who please him not, the first resurrection class and the latter resurrection class. NS535:1

The Greek word anastasis here has the article, showing emphasis and indicating that the first or special resurrection is surely meant. R1512:2
The reward of such good works will not be a share in the resurrection of the just, but, when the just are resurrected, a blessing will accrue to these for having done kindness to those who could not return the kindness. NS536:2

Not in the first resurrection, but at that time--after the first resurrection shall have glorified the Church and inaugurated the Kingdom. R2701:4, 3832:6, 1512:2, 1008:4

That is, when the just, the justified, the Church, shall be resurrected in the first resurrection, then every good and every evil word and act will be recompensed--in Paradise. HG437:6

Full recompenses, either rewards or punishments, are not to be expected before the resurrection. R1881:5; HG334:1

Thus those who have "fallen asleep" have not already "gone to their reward." HG347:4

Blessed is he -- Doubtless uttered in a reverent spirit, possibly by one of the apostles, with a view to turning the attention of the company to the message which the Master and his disciples were proclaiming--the Kingdom of heaven is at hand. R3833:1

That shall eat bread -- Be counted worthy to share with Christ in the honors and glory of the spiritual Kingdom established. R1958:4

The reference to eating bread in the Kingdom, viewed from the oriental standpoint, would signify to be on good terms with the King, and a new regime, and to be a participator in the blessings of that glorious epoch. R3833:2

Then said he -- Thus gradually the minds of the company present had been led from earthly things and from commonplace matters and social chit-chat to the consideration of the gracious promises of God. R2701:2

A certain man -- God himself is the host in this parable. R2701:3

A great supper -- The Jews usually ate two meals a day: a very simple breakfast and the second and principal meal consisting of more elaborate dishes. The great feasts were usually made about sundown. R3833:3
Evidently the marriage feast of another parable. R3834:1

The feast announced as ready at the beginning of the Gospel age; first, by John the Baptist, to the Jewish nation. R1957:3

The great feast is the high calling which has come to us. R2701:6
Representing the rich blessings of God's providence for the Church--the knowledge of the truth, justification, spirit begettal and the privilege of appropriating the exceeding great and precious promises of God's Word. R5415:4

Not the feast of Isa. 25:6. R1957:2, 342:3

The feast of this Gospel age pertains to the spiritual phase of the Kingdom, while that of the age to come will pertain to the earthly Kingdom. R1957:3

Only a select number are invited. R1957:3

The nuptial feast; the marriage supper of the Lamb. R5415:5, 3834:5

The good tidings pertaining to the spiritual phase of the Kingdom: "O taste and see that the Lord is good." (Psa. 34:8) R1957:3

And bade many -- It is not for all people, but for the "few selected" among the "many invited" in the present age. R342:3

The story shows three divisions, or parts, to the one call which gathers the guests. R2300:3, 1958:1

To enjoy the great feast of the Kingdom for which they had waited and hoped and prayed over sixteen centuries. R2701:5, 3833:1

Long years before he had sent word to the Jewish nation that in due time such a great blessing would be open to them--the privilege of becoming members of the Kingdom of God, sharers of it with Messiah. R5415:3, 2701:3

It was customary to send out the notifications long in advance, without specifying exactly the time, which would depend upon contingent circumstances. R3833:3

Luke 14:17

Sent his servant -- On the day of the feast, when it was assured that there would be no miscarriage of the arrangements, servants were sent to those already notified or bidden that they might come promptly to the feast. R3833:3

The message of Jesus and the twelve, and later the seventy, throughout all Judea, was the invitation. R2701:5

The first invitation represents the first years of our Lord's ministry. R2701:6, 2301:1

At supper time -- The feast had been in preparation for more than eighteen centuries since its first announcement. R3833:5

The feast was not ready until our Lord's day, and hence the invitation to partake of it did not go forth until then. R2701:3, 2301:1

During the three and one-half years of our Lord's ministry, in which he was being slain as the bullock for the feast. 2301:1,2, 2701:3

Them that were bidden -- Previously bidden, and who had during the three and a half years of our Lord's ministry refused to come. R2301:1

Those who were originally bidden, but who began to make excuse, were the Jews. R3833:4, 1958:1

The ones especially invited were the ones who specifically claimed to be the "holiness people" --the Pharisees and the Doctors of the Law. R5415:4, 2701:6, 342:5

Come -- Come in condition of heart to enter into the Kingdom, to be begotten of the Spirit, become new creatures, joint-heirs with Messiah. R3833:5

We have been invited, we have accepted, we have the white garment that we might enter. CR301:2

All things are now ready -- Jesus came saying, "The time is fulfilled, and the Kingdom of God is at hand." (Mark 1:15) R1957:3, 4679:2, 2701:4, 2301:1, 342:5

They all -- Those who did receive our Lord were so few as to leave them almost unworthy of being mentioned. Additionally, those who received Jesus, were, in a large measure, the publicans and sinners. R3833:6

With one consent -- The great majority of the Jewish nation failed the test, not accepting Jesus as Messiah. R5837:4

To make excuse -- The servant looked so meek and, as lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God, they did not believe they would enjoy the feast. They would not say this in so many words, but preserve an outward form of godliness, instead making excuses as being too busy. R3833:5

The cost was too much! Those who were found in that condition of mind were none of them living up to their profession. R5837:4

They dishonored the host who had invited them to his banquet. R5435:4

Contrary to all precedents, these guests declined. Our Lord purposely made the parable contrary to the custom. R3833:4

When the point was reached of making a positive decision as to whether they would accept God's conditions, but few were ready. R5837:4

He had no time for responding to the divine invitation to the Kingdom. 2701:5

Overcharged with the cares of this life. R4679:2

And this sentiment of fleshly Israel is largely that of spiritual Israel also, now that the spiritual Kingdom is announced. R2701:5

I have bought -- The invited ones were full, covetous, money-lovers, too busy with worldly prospects. R5415:3

The rich, the popular, those absorbed in business are content with the things of this life and are scarce likely to leave them for things for which they feel no need. R108:2*

It is impossible to be thorough-going business men, wealthy, influential, etc., and at the same time follow in the footsteps of Jesus, giving all of our hearts, talents and energies to the Lord. R2702:5

This does not debar those who have riches of any kind, but really gives them all the greater privilege and opportunity; for they have that much greater talent which, if they will, they may sacrifice. R2702:5

A piece of ground -- With one the pressure came in the direction of seeing to his farm, and thus being not slothful in business. R2701:5

Have me excused -- They had no desire to have their own plans superseded by God's plans. R342:6

In one sense, this is all right, for it merely keeps out of the Kingdom a class which the Lord does not desire should be in it, and which if it did come in would need to be sifted out later. R2701:6

Many feel that those things which they would call the real, practical affairs of life need all of their attention. R2701:6

Luke 14:19

Five yoke of oxen -- It might do very well for people who had nothing else to do but to give attention to a spiritual feast, but as for him, his time was fully occupied with his property. R2701:5

Luke 14:20

Married a wife -- Another felt that his duties, social ties, wife, children, etc., demanded all of his attention, and that therefore he could not accept the Kingdom privileges. R2701:5

Being angry -- Not mad or in a rage, but indignant, and with perfect propriety. R3833:6

As he had every right to be. It was a shameful procedure to accept an invitation, to allow the host to expect the invited one and to make elaborate preparations, and then at the final moment to make some trivial excuse. R3833:4

Go out quickly -- At once. R342:2

After the nation as a whole proved unworthy, and for a number of years after the crucifixion, the Gospel message went again to Israel, to individuals of that nation. R2301:1, 2702:1

Streets and lanes -- In the days of our Lord it would be easy to thus collect a large crowd of indigent and infirm. R2702:2

Of the city -- Or, government. R342:6

Both of these first calls belong to the city--that is, Israel, the nominal kingdom of God. R2702:2

The poor -- The apostles were sent to gather, not the nation, but such individuals as were of humble mind. R2702:1

The poor had the Gospel preached to them. Publicans and sinners were received by our Lord, invited to accept forgiveness of sins and participate in the Kingdom in joint-heirship with their Redeemer. R5415:4, 3834:1, 342:6

The prodigal-son class. R1958:1

The morally and mentally poor, blind and maimed. R2301:2, 342:6
Jesus came to his own, and his own people received him not; but as many as received him (believed his message), to them (publicans, harlots, etc.) gave he power (liberty) to (come to the feast) become sons of God. (John 1:12) R342:6

Nearly all the preaching of Jesus and his disciples was to the poor of Israel. R5415:4

After the nation had proven itself unworthy, and Jesus had wept over the city, the apostles were sent to gather humble-minded individuals. R2702:1
Invited to accept forgiveness of sins, and come in and be heirs of God, joint-heirs with Jesus Christ. (Rom. 8:17) R5415:4

The maimed -- Who confessed that they were not perfect, but who desired perfection, and who rejoiced in the call to partake of the Kingdom privileges, and gladly forsook all else for it. R2702:1

The better educated--the less morally lame and less spiritually blind--rejected our Lord. R3834:2

Luke 14:22

Yet there is room -- Some came, but not enough to fill the places already provided. R5415:5, 2301:2

About 500 accepted the invitation in our Lord's time and several thousand more at Pentecost, while several thousand more responded further on. But, in all, only a remnant of Israel was found worthy. R3834:2

"Though the number of the children of Israel be as the sand of the sea, a remnant [only] shall be saved." (Rom. 9:27) R2702:4, 2301:2

The servant -- The servant that calls the world is always the Christ, either Head or Body, while the servant that guides the Christ is always the holy Spirit. R343:1

Go out -- This third call is now nearly complete. Nearly all the places at the table have been provided with guests, only a few are yet vacant. R2702:4

Into the highways -- Into various parts of the world. R3834:3

We Gentiles were children of wrath, strangers from the commonwealth of Israel. R343:1

For 1800 years the message has gone out. R5415:4

Because a sufficient number was not found in Israel to complete the elect number, the message must be sent outside the city, outside of Judaism--to the Gentiles. R2702:2, 2301:4, 1958:4, 5415:5, 343:1

Compel them -- The call was confined at first, during our Lord's ministry, to Israel after the flesh; but now, as many as the servants of God meet are to be urged to come to this special feast of favor. A195

Better rendered constrain or urge as in the Diaglott. The Lord never compels the acceptance of his favors, but he does constrain by his love and grace and promises those who love righteousness and truth. (2 Cor. 5:11,14,15) R1958:4, 2702:2; A195

Urge all that they met, up to a certain number, to come to the feast. R3834:3

To come in -- Here is food to satisfy every longing, more and better than we could ask or think, a spiritual feast of future good things--joys and pleasures in the presence of the Lord. R343:1

To come to this feast involves a leaving of worldly hopes, aims and pursuits. In proportion as earthly things are abandoned, each may feast now. R343:1

May be filled -- We at once begin to enjoy and feast upon God's bounteous provision; by hope and faith we have a joyful anticipation and rich feast on the promises of God. R343:1

God, knowing the end from the beginning, had determined a definite number to constitute the Church--144,000. R3834:2, 2301:4

The parable shows three classes called: (1) those of Israel striving to keep the Law; (2) the publican and sinner class; (3) the Gentiles. R1958:1

Luke 14:24

None of those men -- Though, thank God! divine provision has arranged for another banquet, which through the Kingdom, will be spread for all nations, kindreds, tongues and peoples--"a feast of fat things." (Isa. 25:6-8) R5415:6, 3833:6

Luke 14:25

Went great multitudes -- According to the requirements of the Law, going up to Jerusalem to keep the Feast of the Passover. R5425:3

And hate not -- Love me not more than. R1944:6, 2986:4

The word hate is apparently used in contrast with love. To be a disciple of Christ means that we must love supremely the Lord and the principles for which he stands, so that love for others would comparatively be hatred. R5426:2

Signifies a cutting off of every love that would conflict with our love for the Lord. Our earthly loves are to be counted as nothing in comparison. R5426:2

There is a reasonableness in the hard terms of discipleship. Only those willing to comply with such terms could properly be entrusted with the great power, glory and honor which will be granted to the Kingdom class.

R5426:1

Our Lord evidently used this word to impress the thought that the terms of discipleship are very rigid and exacting. Q782:4

His father and mother -- Jesus himself reproved the Pharisees for saying that a son who would make a large present of money to the temple might thereafter be excused from any responsibility to his parents in their support. (Mark 7:10-13) R854:6

We cannot suppose that Jesus, who in his dying hour provided for his own mother's care, taught neglect of parents. R854:6

And self, and popularity, worldly prosperity, honor of men and human theories and systems. D268

And wife -- One of the apostles, under the influence of the Spirit of Christ, said that a man should love his wife and cherish her as his own body, and as the Lord loves and cherishes the Church (Eph. 5:25). Surely he did not contradict the Master in this. R854:6

The Apostle wrote that any professing to be Jesus' disciples who neglect and fail to provide for their own households are worse than infidels. (1 Tim. 5:8) R854:6

And brethren -- Does not mean that we should not love one another (John 13:35) and even our enemies (Matt. 5:44). Q782:4

His own life also -- Greek, psuche, soul, being. E336

Not in the sense of starving from neglect of the necessities of life. R854:3

The present existence or being is under sentence of death anyway. The call of this Gospel age is to lay down our lives in the Lord's service, as living sacrifices. E336

Christ is to be enthroned in our hearts preeminent over all things, yea, preeminent over self. With many this submission of self is the most difficult proposition. R2986:2

Reverencing human theories and systems more than the Word of the Lord. D268

Cannot be my disciple -- Because few live up to these conditions. Therefore few of the many called are chosen. The call was a genuine and effectual call in every case; but the response of the called ones was frequently insincere and ineffectual because they did not comply with the conditions. R1310:4

These will not come out until Babylon falls and they come through the "great tribulation." Such shall not be accounted worthy to share the Kingdom. D268; HG718:5

The Master did not say that only his disciples could ever gain everlasting life. For the time being he was merely inviting disciples, and not attempting to reach the world. R5425:6

Whosoever doth not -- If we turn aside from the path of humiliation and daily cross-bearing, and strive for present exaltation and preference, we are forgetting the very conditions upon which the future exaltation depends. R1988:2

Bear his cross -- Cross-bearing signifies endurance of trials, difficulties, disappointments--the crossing of the human will and preferences by circumstances and conditions permitted of the Father. R3236:4

The taking up of the cross is done after we come to a knowledge of the truth. R5223:2

None can gain glory and joint-heirship with Christ except by cross-bearing. R1988:1

Bearing the cross does not mean running away from it, or getting alarmed at it, but enduring it. R5223:4

Cross-bearing must be a daily matter. Our crosses are those oppositions of the world, the flesh and the devil which conflict with the divine will as laid down for us in the Lord's Word. R5426:4

The Master's cross-bearing did not consist in fighting the weaknesses of the flesh, for he had none; nor are these weaknesses of the flesh our crosses. R3237:2

Our faithfulness in cross-bearing consists in our willingness to stand up for the truth and every principle of righteousness no matter what the cost of friendships broken or enmities enkindled. R3237:3

The opposition of husband or wife, only if engendered by faithfulness to the Lord; the endurance of opposition by business competitors because of our faithfulness to Christ; but not the above for other reasons. R5223:3

The bearing of the cross is the way of growth in character for the consecrated child of God. R5223:5 If we were in heaven, where all is in full accord with the divine will, we could have no crosses from the time that we fully consecrated to the Lord. R3236:4

The cross is to be not merely lifted, but carried faithfully unto death. R5223:2

Come after me -- Walk in his footsteps, being first forgiven of sins. Q367:3

Be my disciple -- One who follows a teacher or leader. R5223:1

To build a tower -- His followers should count the cost of discipleship in the same cool, methodical, calculating manner in which they would count the cost of the erection of a building. R3235:6

Counteth the cost -- Instead of urging everybody to become his disciples and threatening them if they did not, the Master treated the subject in the very opposite style. NS344:5

The Lord would not have any one take upon himself the responsibilities of this relationship without due deliberation and forethought. R2072:1*, 5208:1

The Master does not deceive any to becoming his followers by assuring them it would cost little or no sacrifice. R854:3

Jesus apparently reprov'd even a spirit of enthusiasm that might becloud the cool judgment. They were not to be brought into the family of God by prayers or excitement, but by the declaration of the divine terms and conditions. R5454:5

Some count more rapidly than others. HG694:4

If we have a sufficient love for righteousness, truth, honorable and noble principles of life to desire to glorify the Creator by following the paths of righteousness, we will, after complete consideration, determine that duty calls to a full self-surrender. NS450:4

It is fortunate for us that at the outstart we do not, cannot, estimate or appreciate the full meaning of the words cross-bearing. Doubtless few of us would have the courage to make the consecration and the start. R3236:5

Important because, as with Jesus, the trial, temptation and testing of loyalty comes more particularly after consecration than before. R4970:1

"Are ye able to drink of the cup that I shall drink of, and be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized with?" (Matt. 20:22) R2072:2*; NS770:3

But if you can afford it, the investment will bring good returns. One would not be certain of success in any earthly venture who did not apply time, means, heart and mind to the acquiring of his object. Can less be expected of him who lives for God? R108:4*

God had a well-defined plan in his own mind before it found expression in the slightest development. The great Architect of the universe first counted the cost, and reckoned that all should culminate to his honor and glory. R421:2, 338:1

Whether to trust to the Lord's promised aid to enable him to overcome, or to forfeit his justification, "receive the grace of God in vain." (2Cor. 6:1) F126; R5454:5

"Better is it that thou shouldest not vow than that thou shouldest vow and not pay." (Eccl. 5:5) "It is a snare to a man to make inquiry after [having made] vows." (Prov. 20:25) R2081:1*, 4238:2

The putting aside of all earthly ambition or honor to be counted as loss or dross in contrast with God's glorious promises. R4975:4

Intelligently and freely; with due deliberation and forethought. R2072:1*

We make no impassioned appeal for one to become a follower of Christ, but do earnestly urge the importance of decision. R5614:6

All who espouse the cause of Christ should do so with a full, clear understanding and a fixed determination not even to look back. R5426:5

Sufficient to finish it -- It would be better not to take up the cross unless we have the determination to do so unto the end. If you take up the cross, it is to be not merely lifted, but carried faithfully unto death.

R5223:2

In harmony with this, we oppose so-called "Revival" methods. R4238:4
Those who, having made a consecration, decline to exercise faith in the Lord's promised aid, and refuse or neglect to go on to perform their "reasonable service" by making their consecration complete, unto death, have been favored of the Lord in vain. (2 Cor. 6:1) F126

Luke 14:30

Not able to finish -- We may rest assured that our Father's original plan will be carried out to the letter. A65, 66, 95; E34; R1560:2

And consulteth -- Going to war without adequate preparation would result disastrously. R5426:4

Whoever enlists under the banner of Jesus takes his stand against Satan and sin, and must expect to have a hard battle. He must not expect to receive the victor's crown except by faithful perseverance in well-doing. R5426:5

Whether he be able -- Else they will not be persevering enough, nor zealous enough, to "fight the good fight of faith" and overcome. (1 Tim. 6:12) R3236:1

It is well that we count the cost and see our own weakness, littleness and inability to cope with and to vanquish the world, the Adversary and our own imperfect flesh. NS174:3

Forsaketh not all -- This does not mean merely to forsake all forms of sin. No one has a right to commit sin, whether he be Christ's disciple or anybody's disciple. That is taken for granted. NS172:5

The conditions of fellowship with Christ in the heavenly Kingdom are nothing less than the sacrifice of every earthly interest, and earthly life as well, in his service. But this service and sacrifice is a reasonable service, and never implies that we must become paupers to make others affluent. R855:1

In contrast, the Israelite was to consider one-tenth of what he had as holy unto the Lord. Likewise, the Jew gave God one-seventh of his time, but the Christian is to give him seven-sevenths. HG538:1*

Present all these things unreservedly to God, and yield yourself as his servant also--reckon yourself God's steward, commissioned by him to use all those goods, as well as all your personal talents, to his glory. Think not of these goods henceforth as your own, and talk not about giving them again to the Lord; for once given, they are his forever. R855:1

Remove from your pathway at once every hindrance and stumbling-block which the Adversary may put in your way, and keep right on running for the prize of the high calling, keeping your eye on Jesus and Paul as examples of endurance and overcoming. R758:5

We are to give all in as direct a way as we can, and the remainder is to be given in a more indirect way. We give him the money we spend for food and clothing because our body belongs to him and is being used to glorify and serve him. Food gives us strength to do more for him; therefore the money we spend for food is being spent for our Lord. HG583:1*

The abandonment of earthly aims, hopes and ambitions and the substituting for these of heavenly hopes and ambitions which would transform the mind by renewing it. NS172:1

How different from that easy-going Christianity which seems but little removed from the spirit of the world. A zeal which strives, runs, fights and watches with sober vigilance is generally regarded as extreme, peculiar, fanatical and foolish. R2123:2

Not one professed Christian in a hundred has reached this standard. HG555:5, 734:2*

Whoever will not submit to be "salted with fire." (Verse 34) R508:4*

Cannot be my disciple -- Modern theology is forced to conclude from this that all who do not make this utter sacrifice of every earthly interest are sure to be consigned to eternal torment. R4551:2,3,4, 3236:2

Discipleship would require a growing faith which would rise to every emergency of his requirement. R1967:2

Discipleship requires nothing less than a full, complete consecration. R2071:6*

True disciples make progress in the school of Christ, overcoming the spirit of the world. 1967:2

Luke 14:34

Salt is good -- Salt has preservative qualities, brings out the flavor in food, and in olden times was used as a symbol of faithfulness and loyalty. Jesus used it as a symbol of his own loyalty to God and that which followers must have and maintain. R5426:5

A healthful, cleansing, preserving element in the midst of a world of moral decay and sinful pollution. R2073:2*

Several of the oldest and best manuscripts (among which are the Sinaitic and Vatican) insert after the word salt, the word then; connecting this verse to the preceding verses. R508:3*

Lost his savour -- If we are clinging to the world, worldly ways, worldly thoughts and worldly associations, then the salt is losing its savor, if it has not already lost it. R508:4*

Neither fit for the land -- It will not serve as a fertilizer, for it has an opposite effect. R5426:5

For the dunghill -- Absolutely useless, except for its intended purpose. So the Christian has a special purpose in the world--to be a preservative power, having antiseptic qualities to draw out all the good qualities of those with whom he is connected. R5426:5

Men cast it out -- Good for nothing, unsavory salt! castaways from divine favor, and left to be trodden under foot of men! R2073:2

Ears to hear -- Few have the ear to hear the Lord's message--few are so out of accord with sin, shame and ungodliness as to desire to escape from these and to come into full sympathy and accord with the Prince of Light at this present time. NS173:1

Let him hear -- All followers are to take heed to these words. Whoever neglects them despises the one who gave them, and will surely fail of a blessing that might otherwise have been secured. R5426:6, R1958:4, 2702:2; A195

The call was confined at first, during our Lord's ministry, to Israel after the flesh; but now, as many as the servants of God meet are to be urged to come to this special feast of favor. A195

Urge all that they met, up to a certain number, to come to the feast. R3834:3

The ear of faith must be attuned to the melodies of divine truth if the soul would catch its blessed inspiration. R1945:1

Luke 15

Luke 15:1

Publicans -- The publicans were Jews who had become somewhat estranged to their laws and to the patriotic sentiments of the nation, and who accepted service under the Romans as tax-gatherers. R3360:2

Being cast off from the sympathies and friendship of the Jews in general, they were naturally less influenced by their prejudices and hence more ready to receive the truth. R1783:3

And sinners -- The sinners were the more or less immoral, who made no professions of keeping the Mosaic Law, observances of the more sacred rites and ceremonies, holy days, etc. R3360:2

Luke 15:2

Pharisees and scribes -- The scribes and the Pharisees held themselves aloof from the common people--the scribes, because the masses were illiterate; and the Pharisees, under the claim that the people were sinners, cut off from relationship to God. R5426:3
Whose holiness was of a hypocritical character, delighting in outward show rather than in purity and holiness of heart. R2706:2
They refused to acknowledge others as brethren and fellow-heirs of the divine promises. R2706:2

Murmured -- Whatever did not harmonize with their standards they could only contest. Their difficulty in part was that they had too high an opinion of themselves. R5426:6
For his having anything to do with the disreputable backsliders. R1460:1
Their view was earthly, selfish, proud, haughty, not pleasing to God. R5427:2

Receiveth sinners -- His superior knowledge did not make him haughty, and his superior righteousness did not make him proud and unsympathetic. R5426:3

This inclined them to repudiate Jesus, whom they would have been glad to have had as one of their number if he had been willing to be known as a Pharisee and to conform to their customs. R2706:2

When they found that he received sinners, they began to realize that his righteousness was a different sort from theirs, and, as darkness is opposed to light, they hated him. R1460:1

There was a measure of truth in the assertion of the Pharisees that the majority of people were living in sin, neglecting the divine Law, and thus living much after the manner of the Gentiles. R3360:1

But the Pharisees, accustomed to thinking of themselves as the holier class of the Jews, had gradually separated themselves from the lower elements of the people, so that in our Lord's time the two classes mingled very little. R2706:2

Publicans and harlots were not made the subjects of special missionary efforts. It was when these classes came to his ministry, manifested interest therein and signs of repentance and reformation, that he received them cordially. R2414:2

Bible Students should always seek to view the jewels of the Lord's Word in the settings in which they have been placed. To neglect this is to lose a portion of the lesson intended. R5426:3

Even his disciples were shocked that he should converse with a woman of Samaria. (John 4:27) CR125:3

There is no intimation that our Lord went "slumming" after them. R2414:2

Spake this parable -- By way of reproof to the murmuring of the Pharisees and scribes, to correct their wrong ideas. R1958:2, 2706:2

Luke 15:4

What man of you -- Representing the Lord Jesus, the Good Shepherd (John 10:11), as the representative of the Father, the Great Shepherd (Psa. 23:1). R2706:5, 5427:2

An hundred sheep -- Representing the entire family of God. R3798:4
A sheep, a docile creature, always represents one who wills to be in harmony with God and in the fold. A goat is the Lord's symbol for the wayward and willful. R1216:3

One of them -- The one stray sheep represents Adam and his family. R5427:2, 3835:2, 3798:4, 2706:3, 1217:1

The race was lost, not merely a few, the Church; and their recovery is to include all that was lost. R5427:4

The lost sheep, which originally was represented in one (Adam and Eve), in its recovery will be represented by hundreds of millions of the redeemed and restored of mankind. R2707:2

To suppose it to represent the degraded element of humanity and the ninety-nine sheep a holiness class would be inconsistent because "There is none righteous, no not one" (Rom. 3:10), and "We all like sheep have gone astray" (Isa. 53:6); the illustration would be inapt because it is only a small minority that are in a condition of harmony with Jehovah. R2706:3
Representing Adam and the human family. "All we like sheep have gone astray." (Isa. 53:6) "There is none righteous, no not one." (Rom. 3:10)

Doth not leave -- Leaving them well cared for by under-shepherds in the wilds (not in a desert). R2706:3

Representing our Lord Jesus, leaving the glory which he had with the Father before the world was, and coming into human conditions in the interest of mankind. R2706:3, 1217:1

The ninety and nine -- Just persons, needing no repentance, representing the holy angels. R5427:2, 2706:3, 1217:1

In the wilderness -- The true Church is the Church in the wilderness, separate from the world, and under divine protection and guidance. R1841:6

And go -- Representing the Lord's first advent. R2706:5

That which is lost -- Our Lord did not deny that the publicans and sinners were in the wrong and in some respects further estranged from God than were the Pharisees, but he wanted the latter to see that they should not feel so indifferent toward their brethren. R3360:3

Lost, as used in connection with mankind, has quite a different meaning in the Bible from that commonly given it in modern theology. R2706:1

"The Son of Man is come to seek and to save [recover] that which was lost." (Luke 19:10) R5427:4

Until he find it -- His mercy will pursue the lost sheep until every member of Adam's race shall have been brought to a knowledge of the truth and to a full opportunity of returning to the fold of God. R5427:3

Any who, after being found and rescued by the Shepherd, follow him not, but prefer to follow Satan, will no longer be counted the Lord's sheep; for his sheep are those who hear his voice and follow him. R1217:1

Restore it to its original condition--restitution. R2706:5

How much am I sacrificing of my time and strength in going after the lost sheep? R5427:5

All the willing and obedient. R5427:4

Until every member of Adam's race shall have been brought to a knowledge of the truth, and an opportunity of returning to the fold of God. R5427:3

An illustration of the divine care. R2706:3

Luke 15:5

When he hath found it -- Already the sheep is found, in the sense of being located; indeed, in that sense of the word it was not lost. It will require the entire Millennial age to bring back the sheep in the full, perfect sense of the parable. R2706:5

Having restored to perfection all of the human family who possess sheep characteristics. R2707:2

Recovered, brought back, by process of restitution. (Acts 3:19-21) R2706:5

Rejoicing -- Illustrates the attitude of God and the holy angels. R5427:1

Luke 15:6

He cometh home -- Bringing the lost back to the fold--to fellowship with God and the enjoyment of his favor, everlasting life. R3835:2

Not that all will be universally and everlastingly saved, but that all will be brought to conditions of salvation, to a clear knowledge of the truth and to a full opportunity for accepting the same. R3798:4

We do not yet see the sheep recovered. We do see God selecting the members of the Good Shepherd to prepare to join in this work of seeking the lost sheep during the Millennial age. R2706:5, 1217:1

According to orthodoxy, eternal torment; but from the Scriptural standpoint, having wandered from God into sin and degradation. R2706:2

The fall of man and our imperfections to not stand as a bar if we return to God, who will abundantly pardon. R5427:1

Luke 15:7

Joy shall be in heaven -- They have a special feeling of interest in those who have strayed, and especially rejoice in the recovery of such.

R5427:1

In proportion as we become Godlike we have an interest in sinners--especially in those who, through heredity or evil environment, are more deeply steeped in sin, ignorance and superstition. R5427:3

Like the angels' song in Luke 2:13,14, this shows how the angels of God are interested in the affairs of men, and how they sympathize with us and rejoice over our prosperity. R1478:6

That repenteth -- All mankind, in coming back to God, must come back repentantly, and there is joy in heaven over all the human family as they come back in harmony with God and in harmony with righteousness. Q510:T Whether he come back now under the condition of the Gospel call, or whether he shall come back in the next age under Messiah's Kingdom. Q510:T The interest is in the repentant one or in the one who has not sinned beyond repentance. Any sheep, having been found by the Shepherd, and then preferring the wolfish, would no longer be interesting to the heavenly ones. R5427:2

What, then, will be the joy in heaven when the Body of Christ is received into glory? R1821:3

Ninety and nine just persons -- The angels of heaven, alone, would seem to fit this description, as being just persons who need no repentance. Q510:T

Ten pieces of silver -- Prized as a marriage memento. R3360:3

It was the custom among Jewish women to wear on the forehead a fringe of coin bangles. These might be of gold or silver, and sometimes represented her dowry. R5427:4

The women of those times usually wore a bracelet on which was fastened ten coins. Such a bracelet was generally the gift of the bridegroom at the time of marriage, and each piece associated with it was highly esteemed by its wearer. R3835:3, 2707:2

Each had stamped upon it, as is the custom with coin, a certain image or likeness. And so all the sons of God, including angels and archangels, are made in the image and likeness of God. It was one of these that was lost--the human one, man. R2707:3

The human piece, mankind--the dirt floor of the home representing the defilements which have obscured the divine likeness ever since man's fall. R2707:4

Lose one piece -- Representing more than its intrinsic value; its loss marred the beauty of the whole. R5427:4

Sweep the house -- The lighting of the candle and the diligently sweeping represent the work of God through the Christ, which will be accomplished by the end of the Millennial age. R2707:4

Seek diligently -- An illustration of divine energy on behalf of lost humanity. R2707:3

Not that the woman represents divine energy. Q739:2

Till she find it -- "That which was lost." (Luke 19:10) R2707:4, 5427:4

And when -- At the end of the Millennial age. R2707:4

Rejoice with me -- Representing the time coming when all things in heaven and on earth will rejoice in the full accomplishment of the Lord's work. R2707:5

Which I had lost -- The Scriptures use the word "lost" in reference to the original loss, and not at all in respect to those who will be destroyed in the second death--the latter are not said to be lost; they cease to exist. R2707:3

There is joy -- We are sure that the angels in heaven rejoice to see the lengths and breadths and heights and depths of the love of God as exhibited toward his fallen creatures. R3631:5

This must be the attitude of the Lord's people today, a feeling of loving interest in the recovery of others from sin, and a disposition to assist them back to harmony with God. R2707:5

Over one sinner -- The great time of rejoicing will come at the close of the Millennial age; but now, in advance, all the heavenly host rejoices in every evidence of the accomplishment of the great work. R2707:5 The manufacturer should ask himself, To what extent am I allowing the accumulation of coin to interfere with the giving of proper protection to my employees and all for whose welfare I have a responsibility? R5427:5 Each Christian should ask himself, How much of my time am I giving in helping my fellow-men out of their difficulties and trials back to God? R5427:5

And he said -- Seeking, in this parable, to show the Pharisees that their position respecting the publicans and sinners was wrong. R5434:6

A certain man -- Evidently representing Jehovah God. R5435:1, 3360:3, 2708:1

Had two sons -- Originally all the Jews entered into covenant relationship with God, and thus became, typically, his sons. R1460:1

Cannot represent Jews and Gentiles or Little Flock and Great Company.
R1459:3

While illustrating the two classes into which the Jewish nation divided itself, the principles set forth in the parable are more generally applicable. R5435:4, 2708:1

Luke 15:12

And the younger -- Representing the publicans and sinners. R3836:1
Representing the common people, not so strict in their ideals. They were known to others, and acknowledged by themselves, as publicans and sinners--not attempting to live godly lives. R5435:1, 3836:1, 3360:3, 2708:1, 1958:2, 1459:6, 1460:1; PD60/72; Q554:7

Representing, in a secondary sense, all the remainder of mankind outside of those few in Israel who were seeking to do the Father's will. R2708:4
There is still the Lazarus class, the returned prodigal class, to which the Father is pleased to grant riches of grace, the robe of righteousness, the feast of fat things and the ring, symbolizing his eternal love and mercy. R3836:2

Gentiles cannot have been meant or illustrated by the prodigal son, for they had never been sons, and could not have left the Father's house when they were never in it. R1459:3

The class of today described by Rom. 1:21,22, 24,26,28,29. R3361:1

Give me the portion -- It was the custom that the elder son should inherit the principle part of the estate if he chose to remain at home.

The younger sons were usually given some portion and allowed to embark in some other business or profession. R3835:3

He divided unto them -- They were inheritors together of certain wonderful blessings and promises. R2708:1

Not that the father unwisely retained nothing to himself, but that he gave a reasonable individual portion to each son, retaining the remainder, which, however, was intended for the elder son, if faithful, at the father's death. R3835:3

A man's estate is his stewardship from the Lord, and while children may be properly recognized in this stewardship, the responsibility of a Christian should extend beyond his own immediate offspring, while including them. R3835:5

The younger son -- Careless of spiritual privileges and opportunities, estranged from God. PD60/72; R5435:1, 3360:2

Took his journey -- The publicans and sinners should have been glad to remain under divine protection and care and to have enjoyed the Father's house and all of its blessings. R3360:4

A far country -- Afar from God, in sin and disregard of the Law. R2708:1

Satan may be said to be master of this far country--afar from God, his love, protection and care. R3360:4

From one standpoint, nearly the whole world of mankind is still in a far country, in the land of the enemy, under the blinding influences of the god of this world. R3361:1

Riotous living -- As a matter of fact, while the one had preserved and the other had wasted his inheritance, neither had rightly valued all that was implied in their share of the inheritance of Israel; and while the one had grievously sinned, neither was the other without sin. R1958:2

Misused their privileges and opportunities as members of the nation of Israel, their inheritance in the Law Covenant. R5435:1, 2708:1, 1958:2; Q554:7

In that land -- In a foreign land, of which Satan is the master. R3835:5, 3360:4

To be in want -- The publicans and sinners felt their degradation. They were spiritually hungry. They were ragged. R5435:1

Sin always brings misery in some form, and often in many forms. R1460:2
In slavery to sin and receiving sin's wages: discontent, unhappiness, heart-aches, body-aches. R2708:2

"The way of transgressors is hard." (Prov. 13:15) R2708:1

Luke 15:15

Swine -- Representing the worldly, those engrossed in the things of the present time and wholly indifferent to spiritual matters. R3360:4

Luke 15:16

With the husks -- Why dost thou toil among the husks of mammon, when to his rest the Father bids thee come? R1460:6*

The swine did eat -- There was a difference between him and the swine, for while the swine could fill their bellies on the bean pods of the locust or carob tree, the prodigal found it hard to subsist on that diet. R3360:5

No man gave -- He was in an attitude of want, of hunger, of dissatisfaction, discontent; a condition of sin and receiving sin's wages. R2708:2

Luke 15:17

He came to himself -- Sin and degradation have brought unreason, unbalanced judgment, and have made the good to appear bad, the light to appear darkness, and the true to appear false, and contrariwise. R3361:6

He realized that he had been insane, stupid, dreaming, when he left so gracious a father's house and so great blessings as he had once enjoyed. R3360:5

Awakening to his dire necessities, remembering his father's abundance, realizing how stupid he had been to leave it. R5435:6, 3360:5

Thoroughly disgusted with his condition. R2708:2

It is of divine providence that our eyes open to see our need and our loss. R3361:6

Hunger -- Starving for any satisfying portion, for the blessings of the home he had left. R3360:4,5

I will arise -- The first thing that he did was to resolve to will, and then he proceeded to do. The willing would have amounted to nothing had it not been followed by the doing, but the doing could not have preceded the willing. R3360:5

It was the will of the elder son which for a time kept him in his father's house; it was the will of the prodigal that led him forth. Likewise, it was his own will that led him to retrace his steps; and it was only the will of the elder son that hindered him from entering in to the joys of the festal occasion. R2708:4

Being a despised and cast-out class, the publicans and sinners were ready to appreciate the love and kindness of the Lord. R1958:5

And go -- Arise and go, before thy doubts shall harden. R1460:6*

Return in all thy rags of sin's defilement; return with all thy want and sore distress; thy Father's voice bespeaks his reconciliation: flee to his breast, and there thy guilt confess. R1460:3*

To my father -- The proper attitude of all repentant ones--reliance upon the love and mercy of the Heavenly Father and the provision which he has made in Christ Jesus for the forgiveness of sins and for reception again to his love and care. R5435:6

I have sinned -- God evidently wishes to have a class honest enough to acknowledge their own imperfections and their own unworthiness of his favors. R5435:5

The publicans and sinners realized in a large measure their own unworthiness, and sometimes smote upon their breasts saying, "God be merciful to be a sinner." (Luke 18:13) R3836:1

Luke 15:19

Thy hired servants -- Not expecting to be an inheritor, not hoping to be received as a son. R2708:2

Luke 15:20

Came to his father -- With contrition of heart, and full confession of his error. R3362:4

Those who received Jesus' message included not many great, wise or noble, but chiefly penitent prodigals. PD60/72

The first returning prodigal under the new dispensation will be the poor Jew. R3361:2

Jesus represented the Father's house to the younger-son class. R5435:1

A great way off -- In our Father's name, he would have us meet them, while they are yet a long way off, and encourage their return with assurances of a hearty welcome and a blessed feast. R1958:6

His father saw him -- His elder brother, represented by the Pharisees, was not on the lookout for him; but the father, representing God, saw him a long way off--was looking for him. R3360:5

The time when the father accepted the prodigal was at Pentecost. R5435:2

Had compassion -- The prodigal must will and strive to return, but the Father will meet him on the way to encourage him, receive him, bless him, and bring him into all the glorious things which he has in reservation for them who love him. R3361:6

And ran -- Lest he should be discouraged in his fearfulness. R3360:5

Fell on his neck -- Nothing in this parable shows the necessity for the ransom. It is evidently therefore the picture of the return of a backslidden son, and not that of the redemption of a condemned stranger and alien. R1460:5

How this must have touched the hearts of the publicans who heard--to think that God was willing to receive them back again, not to spurn them as the Pharisees did! R2708:2

This loving, helpful spirit is the spirit which the Lord would have all his people exercise toward even the most degraded of men who manifest any disposition to forsake sin and return to the right ways of the Lord. R1958:6

Kissed him -- The seal of our reconciliation, the mark of our adoption into the divine family. R1460:5

The seal of the Father's love. R1958:6

His reception was as though he had never sinned. R3360:5

Not only were the publicans and sinners pardoned, but because of their penitence, they were granted special manifestations of God's favor. R5435:2

We are glad that our Heavenly Father gives us and our brothers and sisters and children opportunities to recover themselves after they have wandered into sin; opportunities to profit by the lessons of life and the sad experience of being aliens from God. R3361:4

The seal of our reconciliation and our adoption into the divine family, first applied at Pentecost. R1460:4, 5435:2

Luke 15:21

I have sinned -- Let him not return in any self-righteous, self-excusing attitude of mind. He must go back as did the prodigal, with contrition of heart, full confession of error and a willingness to take the very lowest place in the Father's family as a servant. R3362:4

Luke 15:22

The best robe -- The robe of Christ's righteousness, justification. (Isa. 61:10) R3836:1, 3361:5, 1958:6, 1460:4

The robe and all the blessings are provided through Christ as a covering for all the imperfections of the fallen nature. R5435:2

Replacing the filthy rags of our unrighteousness. R1460:4

A ring -- Representing the witness of the spirit that we are sons and heirs. R1460:4

As a signet of his everlasting mercy, forgiveness and love, the Pentecostal blessing. R3836:1

A symbol of unending divine favor. R1958:6

Shoes on his feet -- Preparing us for the sharp contact often to be experienced from the beggarly elements of the present evil world. R1460:4

Luke 15:23

The fattened calf -- The feast of fat things provided for the sinners in Israel corresponds to the feast to be opened ultimately to the whole world of mankind under the Kingdom. (Isa. 25:6-8) R2708:4, 5435:2, 3836:1

Let us eat -- The feast and merry-making represent the blessed promises of God and are the marriage-feast represented in another of our Lord's parables. (Matt. 22:2-14) R5435:3

God provides a "feast," a blessing which all may share, if they will. PD60/72

Represents the blessed promises of God to those covered by the robe of Christ's righteousness and begotten by the holy Spirit. R5435:3

Was dead -- Having died to the privileges of his father's house, just the same as sinners are dead in trespasses and sins; so this son was dead to father, to home and every interest--a figurative situation in the Word. HG205:6

Is alive again -- The parable ignores the second death. The son that was lost was lost in his going away into sin, and not lost in eternal torment. He was found in his return to God. He was dead, so far as the Father was concerned, when he was away; but he was alive again when he willingly returned. R2708:4

How grandly this illustrates to us the lengths and breadths and heights and depths of the love of God. R5435:2, 3361:5

Luke 15:25

His elder son -- Representing those who sat in Moses' seat and who remained loyal to God in their outward profession, at least, and in their endeavors outwardly to keep his Law. R5435:1, 2708:1

The Pharisees and Doctors of the Law, who outwardly and theoretically were in harmony with God. R3835:6, 3360:3, 1958:2

Who customarily inherited the principal part of the estate if he remained at home with his father. R3835:3

The Pharisees and all who had respect unto their inheritance in the Law Covenant. R1958:2

The Pharisees, strict observers of God's Law, but proud, boastful, self-righteous. R1459:6, 3360:1, 1958:3, 1460:2

The Pharisaical class delighted to proclaim that they were the heirs of God's favor. R3360:2

Was in the field -- Striving by daily obedience to the Law to remain at home with God. R3835:6

The elder brother, representing the Pharisees, was not on the lookout for his brother. R3360:5

In spiritual Israel there is a similar class--some who are self-righteous and self-confident, moral and religious, but who, like the Pharisees, lack the spirit of love to appreciate the Father's conduct. R3836:2

There are noble characters in the world who love to do right; nevertheless not many of this kind may be expected to be of the Kingdom class--not because God is unwilling, but their noble qualities make them less ready to accept the terms. R5435:4

This better class seem to feel that, in contrast with the lower strata of society, they are perfection itself, and that God would be sure to desire them. R5435:5

He was angry -- How true to the facts was this picture of the Pharisees objecting to his telling those poor prodigals about the love of God and his willingness to forgive them, and to welcome them back home again. R1460:2

There are two ways of departing from the Father--open sin and wantonness, or a failure to attain the divine likeness in our hearts. There is more hope for those gone into sin returning to God than of some who, while outwardly moral and religious, fail to acquire the Lord's spirit of love and mercy. R3836:2

Lacked the spirit of love and hence was not at all prepared for the feast. R3836:1, 5435:3

Likewise the elder-brother class of Jews did not show the right spirit.
R5435:3

The Pharisees were bitter, instead of being glad, to find the people hungering for God's Word. Q554:7

The attitude of the Pharisees--complaining, disappointed, offended, self-righteous, scorning the returning prodigal, angry with the Father because of his goodness. R2708:2, 3835:6, 3360:6, 1958:6

Today the message of restitution for a "groaning creation" (Rom. 8:22) is received in much the same manner. R2708:6

All who are in harmony with God will rejoice to see sinners returning to divine favor. Any other spirit will surely work injury, as it did to the Pharisees, who, as a class, were unfit in their selfishness to share the blessings God had or ever will have to offer. R1460:5

Would not go in -- They were blameworthy in that they were proud of their religion and boasted of their goodness; and because they despised and spurned and would not recognize, nor speak to, nor eat with, the irreligious class. R1459:6

While the Pharisees were really in the most favorable position to receive the blessing, being schooled in the Law, the publicans and sinners were going into the kingdom before them simply because this "elder son" class had cultivated a spirit of pride and boastfulness. R1958:3

Jesus said, if you stay out, then you will stay out, for God is receiving the prodigals. Q555:T

The loss would be theirs, the gain would be that of the more humble minded. R3360:6, 2708:3

They thus showed that they lacked a very important quality of heart--they lacked the spirit of loving kindness, and hence were not at all prepared for the feast. R3836:1

The jealous spirit on the part of the Pharisees apparently kept many of them from appreciating the gift of God in Christ--they refused to enter in. R5435:3

As they were not in the right attitude of heart to receive their repentant brethren, neither would they have been in the right attitude of heart to be the Lord's instruments of general blessing in his Kingdom. R2708:3

"Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites, for ye shut up the kingdom of heaven against men; for ye neither go in yourselves, neither suffer ye them that are entering to go in." (Matt. 23:13) R1460:5

As in the parable of the marriage feast (Matt. 22:2-10), those who were originally bidden appreciated it not, dishonoring the host. R5435:4

Poor, self-righteous Pharisees! Their jealous spirit kept them from appreciating the gift of God in Christ. To this day they will not go in.

R5435:3, 1460:4 Refusing to enter into the joys of the occasion. R3835:6, 3360:6

If they would not share the Father's hospitalities with the prodigal, they could not share them at all. R3360:6

There are similar classes among spiritual Israel now: the self-righteous, self-confident, moral and religious, but without love; and the returned prodigals to whom the Father grants riches of grace, mercy and truth.

R3836:2

All who participate in the Gospel feast must come in under the Father's terms. R3360:6

Much the same spirit is manifested now by the outwardly religious, as they hear of the coming Times of Restitution, in which all the degraded of earth may return to the Father's love. R3361:1,5

Luke 15:29

Do I serve thee -- The elder son represents the class which, having respect to the promises, enjoys the blessings at home with the Father, and is in fellowship with God as his people. R2708:1

This thy son -- Declining to call the prodigal "brother." R2708:3

Luke 15:31

Is thine -- Is for thee; may be yours if you will have it so. R3835:6

Luke 15:32

It was meet -- The Lord showed them that they were angry with the Father because of his goodness. R3360:6

This thy brother -- In contrast with the elder brother who said, "this thy son." R2708:3

Was dead -- So far as the father was concerned, when he was away. R2708:4

Is alive again -- When he willingly returned. R2708:4

Was lost -- In his going away into sin; not lost in eternal torment. R2708:4

And is found -- His return to God--the younger brother class realizing their need of forgiveness and help. R2708:4, 5435:5

Luke 16

Luke 16:1

He said -- As a rebuke to the spirit of the Pharisees, who bound heavy burdens on others but themselves shirked them, while pretending hearty obedience to the Law. R5436:2

Perhaps no other parable has been so helpful to the poor and needy, the sinful and the weak who have a desire to return from the ways of sin and be received back into the family of God. They see themselves in this parable and are encouraged by its representing the Father as willing to receive them. R5435:5

As well as to the Pharisees at the same table. R2715:3; Q724:9

Unto his disciples -- The parable was primarily addressed to Jesus' disciples, in the presence of the Pharisees. R5386:3

The fourth in a series of parables, representing the unwisdom of the Pharisee class in hypocritically pretending to others that they kept the Law and were acceptable stewards, whereas they themselves were well aware that they came short of fulfilling their stewardship, and must therefore be rejected from it; the parable points out to them a proper course, which they did not take. R2717:3

A steward -- You sit in Moses' seat. R5386:4; Q725:7

Representing Moses and the Law Covenant of which Moses, as Mediator, was the original steward, and the scribes and Pharisees now the steward, as Moses' representative. R2715:3

Corresponding to the elder son of the preceding parable, and to the rich man of the succeeding parable. R2715:3

Such a steward had as absolute control of his master's goods as had the master himself; he had, as it were, the power of attorney. R5436:2, 2715:6, 1626:3; Q724:9

Today a class corresponding to those who sat in Moses' seat sit in Christ's seat, as respects the Gospel Church. This class is composed of elders, Sunday School teachers, superintendents, ministers, bishops, archbishops, etc. R2716:5

The consecrated are merely stewards of their time, talents, influence, wealth, etc. R5436:5

His goods -- "The oracles of God" (Rom. 3:2), the knowledge of God, with typical justification and at-one-ment with him, and an interest in the promises made to the fathers. R2715:3

Luke 16:2

Give an account -- The scribes and Pharisees should have sought to win the love and gratitude of their Jewish brethren. R5749:6

Thou mayest be no longer -- A new dispensation is about to be ushered in. R2715:6, 2716:2,5; Q726:1

You scribes and Pharisees are near the end of your term. R5386:4

God knew when he gave them the stewardship that they were weak through the fall, and incompetent. He knew they would fail to keep the Law perfectly.

He fully intended in due time to depose them from the stewardship and give it to the one whom he had foreknown--to Messiah. R2715:3

We should not be surprised if the priests and ministers will suffer more distress in the great trouble time than will the people, because of their having hoodwinked the people. The Catholic priests suffered terribly at the time of the French Revolution, which was a picture on a small scale of the approaching great cataclysm. R5750:2

Nominal church clergy and leaders will particularly suffer because they have failed to conserve the interests which they pretend to serve. R5750:4

Luke 16:3

Then the steward -- The Lord proceeds to show what a literal steward in olden times would have done under such circumstances. R2715:6, 2716:6

What shall I do? -- Encourage your brethren to do the best they can.

R5386:4

A wise steward would be alert to his own future welfare. It would be wise for the steward, in consideration of his own interests, to keep the future good will of the man, and let him pay half. R5386:3

Yourselves not being able to pay the divine requirements of the Law, you scribes and Pharisees should feel sympathetic with the poor Jews who keep it only partially. R5386:3, 2716:2; Q726:1

The proper course for the nominal church steward class would be to candidly confess the errors of the creeds and their own failure to properly use "the oracles of God." (Heb. 5:12) R2716:6

Am ashamed -- Conscientious preachers know not what to do. R5154:4

Luke 16:4

Resolved what to do -- Scale off the debts of those who could not pay all. R5436:3

Luke 16:6

Write fifty -- So that the debtors probably could pay before he turned over his office to his successor. R5436:3

He minimized their accounts, as he had a right to do. In olden times a steward had the right to make contracts, etc., for his master. So this steward cut down the accounts and made friends of the people. R5749:6 Today bankruptcy laws similarly release debtors from obligations which they could not pay; and similarly, creditors, in their own interest, agree to accept sixty percent or some other portion of the original sum as the whole of a debt. R2716:1

The Jewish Jubilee year of full release from all debts was along the same line of leniency and wise business policy represented in the "Bankruptcy Law" of today. R2716:1

If he had waited until he was put out of the stewardship, he could not have reduced the bill. Q725:3

As exponents of the Law, it was with them to say whether this thing should be a very severe application of the Law, or a very slack application of the Law; and Jesus said they went to the extreme of exacting the very last item and exaggerating the Law to the people. Q725:7

You ought to feel sympathetic with some of these poor Jews who cannot keep the Law. You should say to them, Cut it down somewhat--keep half the Law, if you cannot keep it all. R5386:3

Jesus said they bound heavy burdens on the poor people without sympathy for them--burdens that they themselves were unable to carry. Q725:8

Merely requiring that they keep it to the best of their ability--fifty percent or eighty percent, according to circumstances and conditions--according as you are able, keep the Law. R2716:3; Q725:10

The clergy today should say to the people, If we said that you were to receive a penalty of eternal torment, count that now as being an error, and write down instead "a just recompense of reward." If we taught you that your obligations are to perfectly keep the Jewish Law, amend that feature of your faith, and write instead that God will accept imperfect works, provided those imperfect works are the best you are able to offer. R2717:1

So we should tell man that God has provided a Redeemer, that God through Christ will be very merciful. By telling the people thus, we may get the ill-will of the scribe and Pharisee class; but we are getting the good will of the people and those in harmony with God and righteousness. R5386:5

A hundred measures of wheat -- 500 to 1,400 bushels. R5436:3

Write fourscore -- The steward's course may not have worked injury to his employer's real interests. In view of the disproportionate reductions, it seems not improbable that the steward saw that the debtor never could pay more. R1626:3

The lord commended -- For his worldly wisdom, shrewdness and prudence. R1626:3, 5749:6, 5436:3, 5386:3

He did not commend the steward's injustice, but his shrewdness in adopting a policy which would win the favor and friendship of those whom he had unjustly treated before. R5749:6

The unjust steward -- Unjust in his previous use of his master's affairs; that is, unrighteous, unsatisfactory, imperfect. R2715:6

Done wisely -- Made good use of his time to "feather his nest." Q752:7

Children of this world -- The worldly man, possessed of wealth, is in that sense a steward of God's things, and may now use that "mammon," and with it make for himself friends. T93

In their generation -- Greek, genea, not with significance of race, but in reference to people living contemporaneously. D603

Wiser -- The scribes and Pharisees would have been wiser by more promptly recognizing that a change of dispensation required a changed attitude toward those about to be taken from their control. R2715:6, 2716:2,3

The disciples of the Lord should use all they have wisely and energetically in the divine service. R5436:5

Children of light -- You, as God's people, and more favored than any others with light on God's character and plan, are not acting wisely. R2715:6

Had the scribes and Pharisees followed the course of this steward, they would have made friends of the publicans and sinners. R5436:3

Now that these Doctors of the Law see the present dispensation ending, they should correct their former mistakes and make some reparation for past delinquencies. R5750:1

Luke 16:9

I say unto you -- "Likewise I say the same unto you." The application of the parable to his followers is somewhat different from its application to the scribes and Pharisees. R5750:1

There is room for dispute in respect to the teachings of this parable, but to us it seems clear that Jesus meant that the wisdom of the unjust steward should be exercised by his disciples in their dealing with the mammon, the riches, of the present life. R5436:5

They were each talents of certain talents, opportunities, money, etc. R1626:3

Friends -- Not necessarily those whom we make friends. God is our friend, the Lord Jesus, the glorified saints, and all the holy angels. R5750:5

Applied to his time, our Master's words would teach that the scribes and Pharisees should have sought to win the love and gratitude of their Jewish brethren. Had they tried to make the people happy and contented, it might have gone better with them afterward. R5749:6, 5436:3, 5386:3

To do otherwise, on their part, was hypocrisy; for they could not help knowing that they themselves were unable to comply with the requirements of the Law, which is the full measure of a perfect man's ability. (Eph. 4:13) R5436:3

Their proper attitude would have been to confess their own shortcomings, to strive to do their best, to appeal to God for mercy, and to teach the common people to do similarly. R5436:3

Wherever you can use earthly blessings, money, influence, or anything else, to make friends, do so; do not try to make enemies out of the people in general. Q726:1

Live in harmony with the people as far as justice will permit. R5386:4

Out of -- By means of. R1626:6

The mammon -- In other words, lay up treasures in heaven by the sacrifice of the Mammon of unrighteousness. (Matt. 6:20) R2717:4
Use whatever of the unrighteous mammon you may have in doing as much good as possible, in blessing and assisting others; and thus they will make grateful, appreciative friends. R5750:1

Of unrighteousness -- Of this present time of unrighteousness, "this present evil world." (Gal. 1:4) R2717:4

The earthly wealth or valuables under your control now, which at one time were in whole or in part controlled by Sin, your long-time taskmaster. R1626:6

They will not be counted unjust squanderers, as they use their earthly opportunities for advancing their heavenly interests. R5436:6
We should not be sticklers for full justice and the last penny in earthly matters. R2865:4

When ye fail -- Our failing will be the reaching of the end of our sacrificial course. R5750:5, 1626:6

When this age of Satan's domination is ended. T93

They may receive you -- Although we may be excluded from the high functions of the nominal systems, many of the common people are hearing gladly and sympathetically and are wishing to share their homes with us. And so we have homes all over the world, wherever God's people are. R5386:5
Those who could receive us into everlasting habitations would be only the Lord and his angels. R5750:4

Everlasting habitations -- In their case, the Gospel favor in the end of their age. R5436:3

The place prepared for the faithful class of "more than conquerors," the "house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens." (Rom. 8:37; 2 Cor. 5:1) R5750:5, 5436:5

Into heavenly conditions--the using of our talents, once active in Sin's service, in the Lord's service being counted as laying up treasures in heaven. R1626:6

Whosoever shall give even a cup of cold water unto one of the least of these priests, because he is such, shall by no means lose his reward when the Kingdom of Christ is organized and its rule begins. (Matt. 10:42) T93

In that which is least -- Unselfish, willing to sacrifice. R5436:6

In the use of earthly things in God's service. R5436:6
Even in the smallest affairs of life we are to look for the Lord's will. R5740:3

The trifles of life have an important bearing upon our character-building. R5740:1

"Trifles make perfection; and perfection is no trifle." R5509:1
Even the very thoughts of our minds. SM373:2

Let us be careful in the little things, the little opportunities, hours and moments. R4132:2, 5595:4

How do we know that we would use a thousand tongues if we do not faithfully use the one we have? R5419:3; CR5:1

If we had a million dollars, it would be only a small thing in his sight. Our grandest opportunities for service are comparatively insignificant. But we are to appreciate even the least service we may be able to render. R5741:4

Faithful service to the Lord will manifest itself in economy in the home and in consideration for others around us. R5740:5

The Lord is specially judging of our professions and heart desires by the little things in life, rather than by the greater things. NS448:6

Present opportunities are to be prized as opportunities for indicating what is our real attitude of heart. R5740:2

Faithfulness to principle, even in small things, will give evidence of character, to which may be entrusted the responsibilities of the Kingdom. R2924:1

Some may have very little of mammon at their disposal to sacrifice. The Lord accepts the little sacrifices which we are able to make as though they were greater ones. It is not the amount that God is seeking, but the character. R2717:4

As pupils, as employees, as servants, clerks, let us learn that there is a principle involved in even the slightest affairs of life; that whoever is obedient to these principles is making character, and whoever is neglecting them is undermining character. NS446:3

The Lord's method is to advance only him whose zeal and faithfulness and perseverance in well-doing have shown themselves in little things. There is always plenty of room at the bottom of the ladder of honor. F296

When we practice carefulness in little things, we are thereby developing our characters along right lines. R5740:6; R5509:1

Whosoever wills, need not for long be without opportunities for serving the Lord, the Truth and the brethren in humble ways which the proud-spirited will disdain and neglect, looking for service more honorable in the sight of men. F296

Little courtesies, little acts of thoughtful consideration for others, how much they mean! R5509:1

Jesus, having the opportunity to preach, even if it were only to a Samaritan woman, improved his opportunity. He knew that through her the truth might go to others. The disciples could not understand why the Master should be speaking to this woman instead of to a crowd. R5740:3

The work which the Apostle Paul did upon the tents passed to his credit as a part of his priestly sacrifice just as much as the other part of his time which he spent in more congenial methods of proclaiming the Gospel. R3266:2

This does not mean that the Lord's people are to be content with the usual routine of daily life, but that each day by day carefully scan his earthly duties to see in what manner he could justly cut off moments, hours or days from the service of earthly interests to be given to sacrifice for spiritual interests. R3266:2

We should esteem it a privilege to address wrappers for tracts, or whatever the opportunity of the hour may be in the Lord's service. If our work is in the kitchen, it is a service of the Lord if we do all as unto him. R5740:5

Eternity alone will show the value of some of the little things, the feeble efforts put forth in the name of the Lord, who judges us by our faithfulness in little things and small opportunities, rather than by our great achievements. R4132:2

Habit is a wonderful power, either for good or evil. He who has not learned self-control in respect to little things cannot expect to be able to exercise self-control upon the greatest and most important affairs merely. R2494:1

Also in much -- There are many who are exceedingly careful about handling a large sum of money, but who are very careless in handling a small amount. R5740:1

An equal faithfulness in the presence of larger opportunities. R3266:2

Sharing with Messiah in his Kingdom as priests and kings, entrusted with all of God's favors to be bestowed upon mankind. R5740:2, 5471:4, 5436:6

Unjust in the least -- (Examples cited in referenced Reprint)--small matters, but one who is careless, thoughtless and inattentive in these is like to be untrustworthy in larger matters. R5740:2,5

Some can treat lightly their vows to men, and twist and turn a human creed to suit their own convenience; when they come to God's word, the same spirit of conscienceless twisting and avoiding issues will hinder their getting at the simplest elements of divine truth. R1308:6

Also in much -- Unfaithfulness in the present time respecting things of trifling value in comparison would mean unfaithfulness in the future great things. R5436:6, 4206:6

Luke 16:11

Not been faithful -- Whoever selfishly appropriates to himself the things of which he is steward will not be trusted with the future great things. R5436:6

The true riches -- The glory, honor and immortality of the Kingdom. R1627:1, 5436:6

How can we be expected to be entrusted with heavenly things while we set a higher value on earthly things? R450:4*

Luke 16:12

Another man's -- The things of the present life belong to God, because we have consecrated or devoted them. R5436:6

Your own -- The things of the future life belong to us, because God has promised them to us. R5436:6

Luke 16:13

Serve two masters -- Righteousness and sin; love and selfishness; God and Satan. R1626:3, 5437:1 "A double-minded man is unstable in all his ways." (Jas. 1:8)

God has purposely put the matter so that we cannot be servants of wealth and servants of God at the same time. He wishes to bring us to the testing point--the test is: "God first." R5465:6

Despise the other -- In order to be acceptable, we must reach the place where we love righteousness and hate iniquity--inequity, injustice. SM395:T

Ye cannot serve -- One or the other must conquer. The choice we make must be a permanent one. In proportion as we are faithful to one, we are unfaithful to the other. R5437:4

If we attempt to divide our love and attention, the results will be unsatisfactory to God, unsatisfactory to mammon and unsatisfactory to ourselves. R2717:2

And mammon -- Two masters claimed their allegiance--Sin and Righteousness. R1626:3

Self or wealth or fame or position and honor amongst men, one or all of these. R2717:2, 1626:6

God, his spirit and his teachings, are represented by the word Love; while Satan and his course are represented by selfishness, covetousness, mammon. R5437:1

We should have no idols--either wealth or fame or selfish ease--which might attract our devotion away from God and tempt us to ignore the rich blessings which he is now offering to the faithful. R5465:6

Of one form of mammon, Jesus said: "How can ye believe who receive honor one of another, and seek not that honor which cometh from God only" (John 5:44); and of another form, "Ye devour widows' houses, and for a pretense make long prayers." (Mark 12:40) R3047:4

The spirit of selfishness, covetousness. R5437:1

Riches, honor of men, dignities and titles, place and position. R3047:4

The test is "God first." Our choice must be permanent, and counted the greatest of privileges. R5465:6, 5437:4

The Lord seeketh not such as are double-hearted to be his joint-heirs in the Kingdom. R3764:6, 5465:6

Luke 16:14

The Pharisees -- Because the Pharisees were the leading exponents of the Law, Jesus pointed many of the parables against them, while he comparatively ignored the irreligious Jews--the Sadducees, who made no profession of faith. R5436:2

Who were covetous -- Who dearly loved the riches and honors of the present time. R1627:1

In the Diaglott, "for they were money-lovers." "Covetousness is idolatry" (Col. 3:5). Illustrated by Israel's worship of the golden calf. R3047:4

They derided him -- They had a plan and system of their own arrangement; they had no desire to have their own plans superseded by God's plans. R342:6

Luke 16:15

Which justify yourselves -- You succeed in getting men to think you very holy. R1627:4

God knoweth your hearts -- That much you do is merely of outward show, mock humility and pretended self-denials. R1627:4

Highly esteemed -- Not earthly things needed for our physical well-being, but things that are most highly esteemed include reputation and money. R285:2, 210:1*

Among men -- So anxious to be highly esteemed of men that they seem to forget altogether the one from whom they received their stewardship, and who is about to take it from them. R2716:6

Those who love the praise of men more than the approbation of God suppress their convictions and hypocritically adhere to the popular multitude. R582:1*, 468:3*

Had our Lord Jesus joined hands with the popular leaders in the Jewish church and abstained from pointing out the false doctrines of his day, he probably would have been highly esteemed amongst men. E236

Inwardly unclean--given to extortion--spiritual wickedness. R5389:3

Honor, fame, a name among men; not so much to be superior as to be regarded superior; probably the greatest effort that men make is to be worshipped. R210:1*, 285:2*

To those not well established in the truth, skepticism is infectious; they need only the word of someone highly esteemed to turn them away from the truth to fables. R3295:5

Is abomination -- Some, esteemed because of outward moralities, may be an abomination in the sight of God because of coldness or dishonesty. R2456:2

In the sight of God -- Illustrated by the rejection of seven of Jesse's sons because God saw some unfitness at the core, at the heart, which was not apparent to the outward observer, who like Samuel, would have concluded otherwise. R4210:1

Luke 16:16

Law -- Of which you are the representatives. R2716:4

Including the Decalogue, as well as the ceremonial features of the Law.
HG584:1*

Were -- Were recognized of God. R2716:4

Until John -- Until John the Baptist. R2716:4

Though a loyal servant to the Lord and a martyr for the truth, John was not a member of the Gospel Church. He belongs on the lower plane, with the overcomers of the Jewish age. R2279:3

"God, having provided some better thing for us, that they without us should not be made perfect." (Heb. 11:40) R2122:6

The heavenly calling was not possible until after the ransom had been paid, and John died before the sacrifice of atonement had been completed.
D625; F87, 112

He will be a member of the earthly phase of the Kingdom, one of the "princes in all the earth." (Psa. 45:16) R2279:3

Since that time -- The privilege of heirship in this spiritual phase of the Kingdom of God was the only offer then being made, and has been the one hope of our calling during the entire Gospel age, which then began.
A277

In order of development it was first the natural (earthly), afterward the heavenly rulers; but in order of grandeur of position and time of instalment, it will be first the spiritual, afterward the natural. A292

The kingdom of God -- The new, the Gospel dispensation. R2716:4, 1627:4

Is preached -- Teaching that a new dispensation is at hand, and the Law Covenant which they represented should die. R1627:4

From the time of our Lord's baptism and consecration unto death, the work of redemption having begun, the work of proclaiming the Kingdom was due.

Although our Lord collected a goodly number of disciples during his ministry, none of these were actually received into the Kingdom relationship, into an adoption of the holy Spirit, until after our Lord had finished his sacrifice. NS185:2

Every man -- Who accepts the testimony as a message from God. D620
Should press toward it. R2716:4

Every man desires to get into it. You, therefore, should at once begin to dispose of the stewardship yet in your hands that you might at least be on favorable terms with those who shall soon possess the power of the Kingdom. R1627:4

Luke 16:17

Than one tittle -- Because of the greater and more important things typified by it. T12

"One iota [smallest Greek letter] or one tip of a letter." (Matt. 5:18, Diaglott.) R52:3*

Of the law -- It is needful that the Law should die, that Israel may be liberated, prepared to be united to Messiah. R2716:5

The moral precepts of the Law never have passed away and never will. R1527:3

To fail -- Types cannot pass away unfulfilled. Example, the Jubilee type. B179

Luke 16:18

Putteth away his wife -- Thus the Jewish institution was bound to Moses and the Law as a wife to her husband--so long as it liveth. It is needful, therefore, that the Law which you represent should die, that Israel may be liberated and thus be prepared to be united (married) to Messiah by a New Covenant (Rom. 7:1-3). R2716:5

Luke 16:19

There was -- Was there a certain rich man, or is this a parable? HG225:1
If it be a statement of literal facts, then all the facts must be taken literally. NS818:5

It is accepted as a literal statement, notwithstanding the fact that we read again, "Without a parable spake he not unto them." R5004:3

It is a parable without doubt; because to take it literally would make of it an absurdity. R1966:1, 1086:5; HG385:2; OV163:2; Q597:2

A parable, not to be taken literally, any more than the other parables and dark sayings of our Master. R5444:2

The great difficulty with many in reading this Scripture is that, though they regard it as a parable, they reason on it and draw conclusions from it as though it were a literal statement. R2603:6, 1086:5, 1000:1, 283:3; HG385:2

We admit that, since our Lord did not interpret it, anybody has the same right as ourselves to seek to find and to make known an interpretation which will fit all of the various parts of the parable and be reasonable, Scriptural and harmonious. HG428:1

The culmination of the entire series of parables, picturing the favored class as the rich man, who enjoyed, but did not rightly appreciate, the blessings showed upon him--selfishly shutting up his heart against the poor sinner at the gate. R2717:3,6

Rich man -- Not a word is said about his wickedness. R2603:6, 5004:3, 1086:6, 1000:1, 283:3; HG225:1, 427:6; OV163:2; Q597:2

The rich man was the Jewish nation, which had been in God's favor for more than 16 centuries. To the Jew had been given the promises, the prophets, the blessings and privileges of the Law Covenant. R5444:3, 5004:3, 2604:2, 1000:2, 284:1; HG225:1, 385:4, 428:2; NS819:1

Representing the scribes and Pharisees, the elder son in the parable of the Prodigal Son. R1966:4

Dives [from the Vulgate, the Latin word for "rich (man)"] represented the Orthodox Jews, and not the "outcasts of Israel." R2604:6

Compare with Ezek. 16:1-14. The same denunciation is uttered in Matt. 21:41-43, and its accomplishment recorded in Rom. 11. R802:3

In a word, this parable seems to teach precisely what Paul explained in Rom. 11:19-32. HG387:5

To be rich is not necessarily an evil. Abraham was very rich, likewise Isaac, Jacob, King David, King Solomon, etc. God himself is very rich. R5444:1; Q597:2, 529:4

Clothed in purple -- To them belonged the promise of the Kingdom. OV364:2
As God's typical Kingdom. R5004:3, 5444:3, 2604:2; Q598:2; PD60/72

Invested with royalty; the promises made to Abraham and David. R2604:2, 1966:4; OV163:3; Q598:2; PD60/72

Symbolizing royalty. They were the typical kingdom. R5444:3, 5004:3, 2604:2, 1966:4, 1086:6, 1000:2, 284:1; HG225:1, 385:5, 426:2; OV163:2; NS819:2

Although the crown had been taken off in Zedekiah's day, God had promised that he would give it in due time to him whose right it is, and that Messiah should be of the stock of David. Q598:2

And fine linen -- Fine linen is a symbol of righteousness. (Rev. 19:8)
R284:1; HG385:5

The purging of their sins, typical justification, accomplished on their annual Atonement Day. OV364:2

Symbolizing their typical justification through typical sacrifices.
R5444:3, 5004:3, 2604:2, 1086:6, 1000:3, 284:1; HG225:1, 385:5, 426:3; OV163:2; Q598:2; NS819:1

Enjoyed but did not appreciate his blessings. R2717:6

"Chiefly, because to them were committed the oracles of God." (Rom. 3:2)
R1086:6, 2604:2, 1000:2

Having the rich promises of the Law and the prophets. R5004:3, 5444:3; OV163:3, 364:4; Q598:2; PD60/72

Their sumptuous fare represented the divine promises, as St. Paul's words imply in Romans 11:9. R5444:3, 5004:5, 2604:2, 1966:4, 1086:6; HG426:3; Q598:2; NS819:1

Their table was furnished in the presence of all their enemies, as they themselves boasted. HG225:5

"Let their table become a trap and a snare and a recompense to them."
(Psa. 69:22) NS819:2

A certain beggar -- Representing an outcast class, including publicans and sinners, also including Gentiles. These had no fine linen of typical justification, and no purple, representing a share in God's favor as part of his Kingdom. R5444:4, 2604:2, 1086:6; HG385:5; OV163:2

Lazarus represented the Gentiles--all nations of the world aside from Israelites. R1000:3, 284:1; HG225:6, 426:4; Q600:T

Not all the Gentiles, but certain ones concerning whom Jesus said, "I have not found so great faith, no, not in Israel." (Matt. 8:10) NS820:1

Lazarus represented the hopelessness of the sinners and Gentiles, who hungered for a share in the promises to Abraham. PD60/72

We read not a word about his good qualities, his purity of heart, his generosity to the poor, his reverence to God, etc., but merely that he was poor. HG427:6; OV163:2; Q597:5

Laid at his gate -- Outside the gate of favor--aliens, strangers and foreigners to the commonwealth of Israel. R5004:6

Outside of the pale of the Jewish influence. HG225:6

Full of sores -- Sores represent sin. Q600:T

The sores represented moral defilement in this class, for whose justification no sin-offering had at that time been made. R1086:6; HG426:4

Sin-sick, covered with sores--because not sharers in Israel's yearly sin-atonement sacrifices. R5004:6; PD60/72

Luke 16:21

Desiring to be fed -- Hungry, because all of the promises of God primarily belonged to Israel. R5004:6

They had no table prepared with divine promises, no share in the promises of royalty, no justification from sin. OV364:4

With the crumbs -- Occasional crumbs of comfort. OV163:2

Signifying that Jesus did, on a few occasions, allow some special blessings of healing, which were for the Jews, to go to this worthy class of Gentiles. NS820:2

Two such crumbs given by Jesus: healing the Roman centurion's servant and the daughter of the Syro-Phoenician woman. R5444:4, 5004:6, 2604:3, 1966:4, 1087:1, 1000:4 284:2; HG225:6, 244:6, 385:6, 428:4; OV163:2, 365:T; Q600:1; NS820:2

The dogs came -- They were companions of dogs, aliens, foreigners from divine favor. HG428:5; OV164:T, 364:7

Licked his sores -- Also intimating that they were Gentiles. R5004:6, 2604:2, 1000:3, 284:1

The typically clean Jew considered all Gentiles fit associates of dogs, which were regarded as detestable creatures in those days. OV164:T; R5004:4, 2604:3, 1087:1, 1000:4, 284:2

In the sense of considering the Lazarus class upright and godly, and in some sense having sympathy with them. NS820:2

Luke 16:22

The beggar died -- As the Jews died to their favor, so the outcast publicans, sinners and Gentiles, died to their disfavor. R5444:5, 2604:3
The death of the beggar occurred three and a half years after the cross, at the end of Israel's specified seventy weeks of special favor. HG429:1; OV164:T

He did not die ordinarily; he was carried by the angels. HG225:3

The poor Gentiles, "strangers from the covenants of promise," were then "made nigh by the blood of Christ." (Eph. 2:12,13) R5005:1, 2604:4, 1000:5, 284:3

Was carried -- Not buried. Q601:1

Bringing hitherto aliens into the family of God as children and heirs of the Abrahamic promises and blessings. HG303:3

By the angels -- The angels were the apostles and ministers of the Gospel--specially St. Peter and St. Paul, declaring to the Gentiles that, whereas once they were "aliens," they were now "brought nigh" through faith in the Lord Jesus. R5005:1, 2604:3, 1000:4; HG386:1

The early Jewish Church, messengers of God and Christ, received believing Gentiles into full fellowship as brethren of the Seed of Abraham. OV364:5

Into Abraham's bosom -- Not to heaven, not to purgatory, not to some intermediate state. NS820:4

Became the children of God and children and heirs of the Abrahamic promise. "If ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise." (Gal. 3:29) R5444:5, 5005:1, 2604:3, 1966:4, 1087:1, 1000:4,5, 284:2; HG429:2, 386:2, 226:1; Q601:1; NS820:4; PD60/72
Symbolically saying that the outcasts of Israel and the worthy Gentiles became children of God and heirs of Abraham, who typified God. R5005:1
Thus the Gentiles have become Abraham's seed, and heirs of the spiritual part of the Abrahamic promise. (Gal. 3:29) PD60/72

If Abraham's arms are only for the poor and sick, he surely has them more than filled long ago. R1966:1, 1086:5; HG225:3, 244:5, 428:1; OV163:2

If the whole statement is literal, bosom must be literal. Abraham's bosom would not hold very many of earth's millions of sick and poor. R283:6, 4644:2, 2604:1, 1086:5, 1000:1; OV364:5; Q597:5

How absurd to interpret that Lazarus is blessed, not because he was good, but simply because he was poor and sick. R283:3, 4644:1, 2604:1, 1086:5, 1000:1; OV363:7

Rich man also died -- In Jesus' day Jewish favor began to wane. They were completely cut off in AD 70. During the interim of 40 years the rich man, the Jewish nation, sickened, died and was buried. R5444:3, 5004:5; HG428:6; Q598:2; NS819:3

Ceased to exist as a nation. R1087:1; HG225:5

The dying process began from the time of our Lord's crucifixion. HG428:6; NS819:3

When the typical righteousness ceased. R1000:4; HG386:1

The Jewish nation rejected and crucified the Son of God and died to all their previous special advantages and favor. R2604:3, 5454:2, 5444:5, 1000:4; Q598:2; PD60/72

The death of both beggar and rich man at the same time represented a change of dispensation: "Your house is left unto you desolate." (Luke 13:35) R1966:4, 2604:3

Was buried -- Amongst other people, dead in trespasses and sins. HG386:3

In hell -- Entombed in hades as a nation. HG428:6; OV164:3; NS819:3

As a nation they are still in hades, oblivion. Q598:2

He was not taken to Gehenna. He was taken to hades. Hades never refers to future torment. HG225:2

Whatever goes into hades must come out. That is the very thought of hades. It means a temporary stopping place from which the person or thing will come out. Q598:2

Nationally, they went to hades, to the tomb; and their resurrection has not yet been accomplished, although Zionism is the beginning of it.

R5444:3, 5004:5

In a cast-off condition. HG386:1

The Lord wished to show that great sufferings or "torments" would be added to the Jews as a nation after their national dissolution. HG386:3

How absurd to conclude that simply because a man was rich, he must suffer through all eternity! R4644:1, 5444:2, 2603:6, 1966:1, 1086:5

In tribulation and affliction. R1000:4, 2604:3, 284:2

He lift up his eyes -- The dead cannot lift up their eyes, nor converse; for it is distinctly stated, "There is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave." (Eccl. 9:10) R2604:4

Being in torments -- As a nation dead, yet as a people scattered amongst all nations, Israel lives and has suffered torments since the rejection of Messiah. E377

These "torments" have been the penalties attached to the violation of their covenant. HG386:4

History has borne out this parabolic prophecy. The Jews have been relentlessly persecuted by all classes, including professed Christians.

R2604:5, 1966:4, 802:3; HG386:4; Q599:T

The fire and the torment are as truly symbolic as the other features of the parable. HG303:3

For many years this parable has caused distress of mind to God's people. No other Scripture seemed to agree with this parable. Its one support text in Revelation [19:20, 20:10] speaks of a symbolic beast and a symbolic false prophet in torment. But now we see that it is not to be taken literally. R5444:2

Afar off -- God no longer favoring him. R2604:5 Lazarus -- The spiritual seed of Abraham. R5444:5

In his bosom -- No longer aliens, but children. R5444:5

Luke 16:24

He cried -- Although nationally dead and buried, the Jews individually have been very much alive, have had anguish of soul and have cried out to God. R5444:3, 5004:5; HG225:5; OV164:3; NS819:6

As a people they are alive, but as a live people they have been suffering torture all through this Gospel age. HG225:5

Father Abraham -- Representing God. R5444:3, 5005:1, 2604:2; HG429:2

Send Lazarus -- Representing the Jewish people, in great distress, asking God to allow Christians to give them some help from their troubles. R5445:1, 5005:4, 2604:5

Example: The appeal of the Jews to President Roosevelt to use his influence with the government of Russia for the amelioration of Jewish persecutions. This drop of water was denied by President Roosevelt. R5445:1, 5005:4; HG429:4; Q599:T

Cool my tongue -- With a symbolical drop of water of comfort or refreshment. OV164:3

I am tormented -- Not only the torment of a Law which none of them ever did or ever could keep perfectly, but another kind of torment--persecution. R1042:6

The parable does not go on to show that the time will come when the Jews will come out of that time of trouble. It merely leaves it there, in the trouble. Q599:T

Luke 16:25

Son -- God still recognizes the relationship established in his covenant with them, and addresses them as children of the covenant. HG386:4

Luke 16:26

A great gulf fixed -- Until the fullness of the Gentiles be come in. R802:3

The "great gulf fixed" represents the wide difference between the Gospel Church and the Jew. R2604:5; HG386:4

The gulf of unbelief, and consequent separation from divine favor. NS820:5

The great gulf between Judaism and Christianity has been fixed for more than 18 centuries. Thank God, another change of dispensation will resurrect the rich man from hades. While God's Kingdom will be represented on the spiritual plane by the Lazarus class, it will be represented on the earthly plane by another class, which will be Jewish. R5444:5,6

Though the parable mentions no bridging of this gulf, other Scriptures indicate it was "fixed" only throughout the Gospel age, and that the rich man, having received the measurement of punishment for his sins, will walk out of his fiery troubles over the bridge of God's promises yet unfulfilled to that nation. R2605:1; HG387:3

They are leaving their hadean state of torment and coming, the first of the nations, to be blessed by the true seed of Abraham, which is Christ. Their bulwark of race-prejudice and pride is falling in some places. R1043:1

Prejudice, pride and error on the Jewish side, which hinder the Jew from coming into the condition of true sons of God; and on the side of the Church a knowledge that "by the deeds of the Law shall not flesh be justified." (Rom. 3:20) R2604:5, 1087:1, 1042:3; HG386:5

Since Christ's first advent, no Jew can come near to God aside from Christ, nor Gentile take the former position of the Jew or to claim favor aside from Christ. R5444:5

To you cannot -- The bulwark which hinders true sons of God from going to the Jew is their knowledge that by the deeds of the Law none can be justified before God. R2604:5, 1042:3; HG386:5

We, who are of the Lazarus class, should not attempt to mix the Law and the Gospel, knowing that they cannot be mixed. R2604:6, 1042:3; HG386:5

Neither can they pass -- True, a few Jews probably came into the Christian faith all the way down the Gospel age, but so few as to be ignored in a parable which represented the Jewish people as a whole. R1042:6; HG386:6

God has not wished that the Jewish nation should amalgamate with other nations nor with Christendom. OV164:3

Until the end of the Gospel age. R2605:1

Five brethren -- The suggestion of the parable that something be done for these five brethren is for the purpose of showing us that nothing would be done for them. HG429:5

Doubtless introduced to show that all special favor of God ceased to all Israel (the ten tribes as well as the two more distinctly addressed).

HG387:2

The Jews of Palestine in Jesus' day represented chiefly the tribes of Benjamin and Judah, while the majority of the other ten tribes were scattered abroad in various lands. Whereas two tribes, Judah and Benjamin, were represented by the one rich man, so proportionately the other ten tribes would be represented by five brethren. R5445:4, 5004:6, 2605:1, 1000:5, 284:3; HG245:2, 387:1, 429:5, 364:6; Q599:1; NS819:5

Luke 16:29

They have Moses -- Identifying the rich man and his brethren as the twelve tribes of Israel. OV165:1, 364:6; R5445:4, 2605:1

Let the hear them -- No special favor would be shown to those brethren. OV165:1

Luke 16:31

If they hear not -- The majority of the ten tribes had so far disregarded Moses and the prophets, it would be useless to attempt further communication with them. R2605:1

Moses -- This proves that Jews only were referred to; for no Gentile had Moses and the prophets. R5445:1, 5004:6, 2605:1, 1000:5, 284:4; OV364:6; Q599:1; NS819:5

One rose from the dead -- The figuratively dead, but now figuratively risen Lazarus class. R2605:1; HG387:2

Luke 17

Offences -- More particularly signifying stumblings, or still more literally, ensnarement. R5445:2

It is not in the power of any today to crucify the Lord and put him to an open shame, but it is within our power to put to shame, to crucify, his "brethren," the members of his Body. R2471:1

Woe unto him -- Not unjustly condemning anybody for ignorantly or unintentionally offending, but cautioning those who would deliberately attempt to deceive and ensnare or discourage his followers. R5445:3

Though ignorant of what they do, they nevertheless put themselves under the Lord's sentence. R2471:1

In the Truth, these contentious persons are to be found in considerable numbers, doing a destructive work, an injurious work, instead of a helpful work. R4502:2

Luke 17:2

Better for him -- He would lose merely the present life, and not the future life during the Millennium. R5445:3

In a word, whoever sins against light and knowledge is endangering his own opportunities for everlasting life. R5445:5

Sowing seeds of discord, and planting roots of bitterness, which are sure to bring forth an evil fruitage, hurtful to many. R4502:2

God has expressed a special reprobation for those who do injury to the Church. R4502:2

Little ones -- The consecrated followers of Jesus are called little ones because they are new creatures who have only started in the new way of full consecration to God's will--"babes in Christ" (1 Cor. 3:1); "little children" (1 John 5:21). R5445:2

These were the "little ones" in malice and pride and in the world's estimate. R2063:4

They may be old in years and gray-headed, but their hearts are young and preserve the sweet simplicity of childhood. R1972:2

Little in the world's estimate; not many great or wise. (1 Cor. 1:26)
R2063:4

Luke 17:3

Take heed -- Verses 3 and 4 are apparently a part of the same discourse recorded in Matt. 18:15-22. R5445:5

To yourselves -- The lesson is addressed to the followers of Jesus, not to the world. R5445:5

If thy brother -- It relates primarily toward their duty toward their brethren of the household of faith, but secondarily it has a broader application. R5445:5

Trespass against thee -- Not trivial affairs, not evil surmisings or imaginings, not fancied insults, but positive wrongs done us. R4978:2

Rebuke him -- Some intimation that we recognize the wrong, and that it has grieved us and hurt us. R2296:1

With the majority of people, however, it would probably be quite unnecessary to urge the propriety of repentance--unless they were the transgressors whose duty it is to repent. R2296:1

Our duty to do so, kindly, lovingly, wisely. R4978:2

If he repent -- God does not forgive our sins until we acknowledge them and ask his forgiveness. We are not to accept one portion of the divine direction and to ignore another portion. R4978:1, 2295:6

It is as much the Lord's command that we do not forgive until he turns again and repents, as it is command that we do forgive, from the heart, when he does turn and repent. R1694:2

To require less than this is to disobey our Teacher's instruction and to do injury to the transgressor by giving him lax ideas as to his duty.

R1694:2

But while some need to correct their hearts and conduct against over-forgiving, more, probably, need to guard against an unforgiving spirit. R1694:4

Most people are sufficiently disinclined to forgive to wait until their forgiveness is asked. R2296:1

Forgive him -- The lesson is mercy--boundless mercy. The basis of the argument is that all need mercy, divine mercy, because all are imperfect. R5445:5

But not otherwise, though always remaining in an attitude of forgiveness, waiting for the desired and necessary repentance. R1694:2, 4650:5

The large majority apparently do not "forgive from the heart" (Matt. 18:35), but merely from the lips. R2296:1, 3801:5

Heart forgiveness leaves no sting, no animosity, no grudge. R2296:1

Like the father of the prodigal, when we see the repentant one coming in an attitude of humility, we should go out part way to meet him. R4978:4

Luke 17:4

Turn again to thee -- If he trespass seventy times seven he should be rebuked as often, either by word, conduct, or both, and should repent in words and turn in conduct just as often; and as soon as we believe him sincere, we must be prompt and hearty in our forgiveness. R1694:2,5

Thou shalt forgive -- The disposition to forgive should be with us always. R4978:3

The Lord's blessings to us shall be dependent upon our endeavor to exercise this God-like quality of mercy. R5445:5

Luke 17:5

The apostles said -- Impressed with the grandeur of Jesus' teachings, and the difficulties lying ahead. R5446:2

Increase our faith -- Our Lord's teachings were so adverse to the world's policies that his disciples felt that to adopt them involved a revolution of their former ideas. In yielding themselves, they felt the need of a stronger, firmer faith than they had yet been called upon to exercise. R1967:2

By a continuous, humble and faithful service. R1953:5*

Luke 17:6

The Lord said -- He made no direct answer, but dwelt on the power and desirability of faith. R1967:3

If ye had faith -- A great deal passes for faith which is merely credulity. The faith commended in the Bible is that which relates to things which God has promised. R5446:2

Sycamine tree -- Regarding the trees and mountains as symbols of difficulties and obstructions in our individual Christian course, or in the general course of God's work, we know that "miracles" are wrought to those who exercise faith. R1967:5

Plucked up -- Thus it was when the Lord caused the barren fig tree to wither for a definite and wise purpose, to teach an important lesson, and also to convince his disciples of his divine recognition and authority. R1967:5

It should obey -- Not to attempt to command mountains to be carried into seas, but if they should receive a command from God to move a mountain into a sea, they should give the command with faith and the results would follow. But God gave no such command in respect to mountains or trees. R5446:4, 1967:3

But which of you -- Part of the reply to verse 5--A continuous, humble and faithful service and discharge of duty will result in an increase of one's faith, to a degree greater than indicated by the mustard seed, said to be the smallest of seeds. R1953:5*

Luke 17:8

Afterward -- We must not sit down and expect our Lord to serve us until we have proved faithful in serving him. R1953:5

Luke 17:10

Unprofitable servants -- We will still be his debtors; and the more faithful and diligent we are in his service, the more will it be to our own profit--to the increase of our faith, as well as to our upbuilding in character. R1953:5

In the sense that God could just as easily do without us, indeed, could more easily do his work otherwise. He could use as his messengers angels or providences of life. None of us is indispensable to his work and to his glory. R5446:5

As servants of God we owe him the full measure of our ability; hence we may not feel that we have merited or earned the great blessings of heavenly inheritance and joint-heirship with Christ. R1967:6

Though a servant, Jesus was not an "unprofitable" servant, but a "righteous" servant who could redeem the rest--a very profitable servant. R489:1*

Our duty to do -- We may not expect rewards of divine favor. When they are received, we are not to regard them as evidences that we have done any more than it was our duty to do. R1967:6

Luke 17:11

To Jerusalem -- It is surmised that this was his last journey to Jerusalem, which eventuated in his death. R5454:1

Samaria and Galilee -- In this locality leprosy still abounds rather more than elsewhere, and groups, somewhat like the one described here, are frequently to be seen. R2722:3

Ten men -- Drawn together by their common trouble which ignored the racial barriers between Jews and Samaritans. R5454:1

Were lepers -- From the standpoint of the Law, it was evident that leprosy was meant to represent sin and its loathsome, contagious and consuming character. R2722:1

Leprosy, a symbol of sin, corrupts the blood, and the joints twist, decay and slough off. R5454:1

Leprosy has long been regarded as incurable and, therefore, is used as an illustration of sin, which is also incurable. CR413:1

Afar off -- The isolation of lepers was distinctly enjoined in the Law, but no cure or remedy was prescribed. R2722:2

They were not allowed to approach others nearer than about 150 feet, for fear of contamination. R5454:1

So sinners by divine decree are isolated from the pure, the holy, the righteous. CR413:2

They were obliged to keep at a distance, on the approach of a stranger to cry out, "Unclean! Unclean!" R2722:1; CR413:1

Luke 17:13

Jesus, Master -- As only the Master's word could heal the lepers, so nothing short of a divine remedy can cure the leprosy of sin. CR413:1

Jesus is the only physician who can heal the leprosy of sin. CR413:4

Have mercy on us -- Ordinarily their appeal was for money. R5454:1, 2722:3

Luke 17:14

Go -- He did not, before granting healing, bargain with them, saying, "If I heal you, will you consecrate your lives and become my disciples?" R5454:4

Shew yourselves -- Implying a healing, and suggesting that by the time they should reach the priest they would be ready to have him pronounce them clean. R5454:2, 2722:3

Unto the priests -- The disease was treated from a religious standpoint, and in every case made amenable to the judgment of the priests. So, in the great malady of sin, God commits to the antitypical priesthood the work of making manifest what is sin, as distinct and separate from what is righteousness. R2722:2

Under the Law Covenant they were to have no sicknesses except as these should represent sins; and the priests were to pass judgment upon cases of leprosy, determining whether or not the disease was indeed leprosy. R5454:1 This implied that the leprosy had ceased its ravages, and they would be pronounced free from contagion. R2722:3, 5454:2

The priests must pass upon a leper's cleansing before he would be readmitted to society. R2722:2

As they went -- The lepers must have exercised great faith; for instead of crying out for instantaneous healing, they followed his direction and started for the priest to have an inspection. R5454:2

Thankful for a release from their sufferings. R2722:4

Luke 17:15

One of them -- How many of the tens, the hundreds, the thousands, whose devotion and faith the Lord has accepted--healed, forgiven and received according to their profession of discipleship--really have become his true followers? R5454:5

Only a "little flock" appreciate the favor of sins forgiven during this age. PD64/74

Luke 17:16

Giving him thanks -- The degree of our acceptance with God is measured by our gratitude. It leads to obedience to the divine laws and regulations, whether understood or not, and it leads to self-sacrificing labors in the service of God. R5453:3

Representing consecration. CR414:6; R2723:1

Thankfulness of heart is a very sure sign of the character God is seeking. R2722:6

He was a Samaritan -- The Samaritan seems to represent a class of grateful followers of the Lord who seek to give him glory in their words, thoughts and doings, while the majority, similarly receiving his favor, are disposed to pursue the ambitions and pleasures of the present life. R5454:6

We cannot doubt that he will receive a blessing eventually, though he did not receive it then, for he was a Samaritan, an alien, a foreigner from the commonwealth of Israel. R5454:2, 2722:5

Being a Gentile, his healing was a "crumb from the children's table."
(Mark 7:28) R5454:2

Ten cleansed -- Representing justification. R2722:6

Where are the nine? -- We are not told that the nine were, because of their unthankfulness, in any degree deprived of the blessing already received. R2722:5

We may surmise that the nine never came into the Church. On the contrary, we have good reason to hope for the Samaritan that, his heart nearer to the Kingdom requirement, would, subsequent to the Gospel being preached to the Samaritans, be a ready hearer and receive the good message. R2722:6, 1967:6

Amongst all who receive such blessings and favors at our Lord's hands, how few, comparatively, return and lay themselves at his feet living sacrifices. R2722:6

The majority, hearing of God's loving and merciful plan, go on their way rejoicing because delivered from the bondage of error, but will not offer themselves in service. R5441:3

Luke 17:18

There are not found -- Not having a sufficiency of love, appreciation and thankfulness to return in their cleansed condition to, first of all, acknowledge the giver of the blessing they had received. R2722:4

Save this stranger -- A Samaritan, an alien, a Gentile, a foreigner from the commonwealth of Israel (Eph. 2:12), debarred, for the time, from spiritual blessings. R5454:2, 2722:5

Luke 17:19

Go thy way -- Had the returning one been a Jew instead of a Samaritan, no doubt he would have been invited by Jesus to become one of his followers. R5454:3

We cannot doubt, however, that when the time came for the opening of the door to the Gentiles, he was amongst those who gladly received the message, and made a full consecration. R5454:3

Thy faith -- Not that it was the man's faith aside from divine power, but rather that it was the Master's using divine power in connection with the faith of the individual. The power of God and the faith of the man cooperated for his healing. R5454:3

When -- Supposing the Kingdom would be visible, composed of himself and his followers in the flesh; and seeing no army or other evidences of temporal power for the establishment of an earthly kingdom. HG346:6, 366:1

He was demanded of -- Not with any hope of correcting him, but with a view to opening the eyes of his followers to the weakness and fallacy of his teachings. SM751:2

Being insincere; when their questions, intended to trap the Master, were answered and foiled, they merely acknowledged their defeat by their silence. SM752:1

Should come -- Appear--When will we see it? HG346:6

He answered -- With "Our Lord's Great Prophecy"--Compare Matt. 24; Mark 13; Luke 17:20-37. D563

The Kingdom of God -- They purposed to entrap Jesus. If he should say, A long time, his followers would be disheartened. If he should say, A short time, they would proceed to query, Where will you get your army? R5455:2

Not with observation -- Without manifestation, outward show (margin).

R5181:3, 189:1; A276; B142; HG33:1, 664:6

Without noise or other demonstration to attract attention. B143

Earthly show, display. HG366:1

My Kingdom, the Kingdom of heaven of which I am the King, will not appear at all. SM752:1

That is to say, when the Kingdom should come, people would not see it. R5455:2

Unseen, and for a time, unrecognized. A277

His Kingdom, when established, would pervade all society and control all, but be seen by none. R113:3

There will be no outward demonstration until the Church is gathered, whenever that takes place--soon or in the distant future. R264:4, 20:5

Christ and his glorified Church will be as invisible to men as are Satan and his angels now, because they will be spirit beings. R3075:3

The entire glorified Church will be as invisible to the world as the Heavenly Father is, and as our Lord Jesus was after his resurrection.

R2981:3

His Kingdom will be observed plainly enough, for there is no single question that must not pass through the fire. Yet his presence is unseen, except as revealed by these, his acts. R794:4*

But it shall act through visible agencies and produce visible results, not baneful and atrocious, but grand and glorious. R210:6*

Doing a work of which the world, for a time, will be entirely unaware. B143

Outward display. Jesus said not one word about anyone seeing himself or any one of the apostles in Kingdom glory. But he did say, "Ye shall see Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, and all the prophets" (Luke 13:28,29). R5199:5

The Lord and the glorified Church will all be spirit beings, fully able to administer the world's affairs and yet be unseen by mankind. They will be manifest in the rewards, punishments and judgments of that day. R5181:5
2 Pet. 3:4 tells us that so unperceived will be his presence that scoffers will say, "Where is the promise of his coming? for since the fathers fell asleep all things continue as they were from the beginning." R794:1*; B167
The signs of the time will not be in the outward condition of the world. On the contrary, everything will be going along in as quiet and orderly a manner as ever, just as in the days of Noah. R5455:6, 793:6*
They err who divide the second advent into two parts: with Jesus going away with his Church, unseen to the world; and then coming again with them in the flesh, visible to human sight. R631:5
Jesus' first advent had been obscure and unrecognized by many. R710:2

Luke 17:21

Neither shall they say -- For the Kingdom of God would be the power of God exerted everywhere in the midst of the people. R5455:2

Lo here! -- They cannot observe it with the natural eye, nor can they point it out or locate it, although it will be everywhere present amongst men; an omnipresent and omnipotent rule, or reign of righteousness. R2980:3; HG347:1

They were expecting him who would be the glory of the world, and whose capital would be located at Jerusalem. NS697:3

There was a measure of truth in the Jewish expectation concerning the promised Kingdom, which will in due time be realized; but our Lord's reference here is to the spiritual phase of the Kingdom, which will be invisible. A277

The kingdom of God -- A kingdom is always represented by its king. R5455:3

"God's Royal Majesty"--Diaglott. R629:6

The glorified Church. R102:1

Is within you -- Among (margin). HG33:1

A closer examination of the original would have shown that the text would better be translated, "The kingdom of God is in your midst." R5455:3, 2980:3; HG347:1; NS511:4

The Diaglott and Rotherham's translation render this "among you," which is synonymous with "in your midst." A276 "In the midst of you"--a present, but invisible authority, government, rule of righteousness. R2981:4, 397:4
In the midst of men--good, bad and indifferent. HG366:2

It will be amongst mankind, everywhere present, but wholly invisible. R2980:3; A276; HG347:1

Present in power, though hidden from view; revealed by its operations and through its servants, but not to natural sight. HG664:6

The Kingdom of God will be among but invisible to men in its coming. It is only after it has come and done a work that the visible phase is due--during the Millennial age. R287:1,4

In due time it will bring mankind into harmony with itself. Then the Kingdom of God will be among men; then men will be the visible representatives of the invisible or spiritual Kingdom. R397:4

Unseen by the natural eye, and at first undiscovered by the world. R629:6
Jesus, as the King, was present in their midst, but they did not recognize him. Similarly, all through the Gospel age, the Church of Christ, his "Body," has been undiscerned by the world. R5455:3

It could not have been our Lord's intention to say that the Kingdom of God was then or ever would be within the hearts of the class addressed, which elsewhere he styled "hypocrites, whited walls and sepulchers." R2980:3, 397:4; HG347:2, 366:2; NS511:5

Unto the disciples -- Turning from the silenced Pharisees. R5455:4

To see -- As you now see me present and in the flesh. R113:6

Ye shall not see it -- Now he has a work to do alone, and requires no eye witnesses. HG25:4

They shall say -- False teachers who will exercise much influence upon the Church. R113:6

See here -- Greek, idou; not horao, as in Matt. 24:30--"then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn and they shall see the Son of Man coming in the clouds of heaven." R555:2*

Go not after them -- Do not believe anybody who will tell you I will come in any such manner. R5455:5; D583
Beware of false teachers. R123:5

Luke 17:24

The lightning -- Translate the Greek word astrape as "shining" instead of "lightning." It evidently refers to the sun, which rises in the east and sets in the west. R5455:5; B155

Not suddenly, like lightning; but gradually, like the dawning sunlight. B156

"The bright shining of a candle doth give thee light." (Luke 11:36)
R5455:5; B155, 156

"The Sun of righteousness shall arise with healing in his beams." (Mal. 4:2)

B156, 165; D583

Invisible, its presence recognized only by the thunder and the flashes of light which come from it. R228:2

As the lightning is discernible only by its shining and power, so will I be in my day recognizable to my waiting bride by the light of truth, and afterward to the world, in the light of events and the "flaming fire" of the day of trouble. R189:2

As the flashes of truth upon all subjects and questions lighten up more and more the understandings of mankind. R794:1*, 629:6, 123:5

It shines in the heavens (the Church), but it is sometimes a very destructive agent on earth (to the world). R114:5

Man can see by the destruction it leaves, where the lightning has been; so, in the day of the Lord, men will come to recognize by the national trouble and overturning that the great day of his wrath is come. R598:2

Lightning and thunder give evidence that atmospheric changes are taking place, that the vitiated and corrupt "air" is to be changed, and we rejoice that it will be pure after the storm. R153:1

Not that he will come like the lightning, but he will be like the lightning after he has arrived and is present. R348:5

Electricity, unseen, can go six to ten times around the earth in one second. R123:4, 114:4

It is the electric fluid that lightens or causes the flash; then let us read: "As the electric fluid which causes the flashes of light." R348:5, 153:1, 114:4

Not as he was in the flesh, But "as the lightning." HG29:1

Spiritual bodies are represented as shining as the lightning--Luke 10:18; Matt. 28:3; Dan. 10:6; 1 Cor. 15:8. HG25:5

Shineth -- Everywhere, instantly, noiselessly, gradually bringing to light the truth on every subject; to be first discerned by those first awake. B160, 165; D583

The Son of man -- The seed of Adam, through Eve, the Son of the Man. E152, 153; R944:1

In his day -- This word day [Greek, heemera] is the same as in verse 26. Hence, notwithstanding Christ is to be "as the lightning," in his day; yet it is to be "as it was in the days of Noe," when they planted and builded, and knew not. HG28:5

The days of Noe -- The presence of Christ is not compared to the flood, but to the days of Noah, the days that were before the flood. R580:5; HG24:6

The end of the first dispensation and that of this present dispensation are wonderfully similar. Previous to the end of the first dispensation a superhuman influence had entered into the world. Today we find a similar condition. R4797:2

The great teacher, Jesus, here confirms the narrative of Noah and the flood. A61; HG317:5

Apparently God will soon cease to restrain the fallen angels, and they will then proceed to vent their fury upon humanity, so that the whole earth will be full of violence. R5470:4

When the end comes, it will find the earth in much the same state that it was when the flood came in the days of Noah--unconverted. R2798:2*

There will be no outward sign to the world of the Lord's presence and when he will begin to deal with them and set up his Kingdom. R5455:6, 2974:5

The ignorance of the impending trouble here will be similar to that of the people of Noah's day. R2974:5

In the -- Not before his day, nor after his days, but in (during) his days. B162

Days of the Son -- As the "days of Noah" were not days before Noah's time, neither are the "days of the Son of Man" days before the Son of Man's presence, but the days of his parousia, or presence--invisible and unknown to the world; known only to the watchers, and seen by them only with the eye of faith. R2974:5

Surely the days of the Son of Man are not before his days. R580:5, 264:3, 20:5

Clearly teaching that our Lord will be present in the end of this age, entirely unknown to the world, and unseen by them. B162

Closing days of this Age, in which we are now living. R5696:2; T86

All Scriptures referring to this day point to the great time of trouble. R5696:2

Luke 17:27

They -- Only Noah and his family knew; the people knew not. Similarly now, the only ones who will know of his presence, or have a clear apprehension of what or who is coming, or the outcome, will be the Lord's people. Others will "know not." D606

The world in general was pursuing the ordinary, proper affairs of life, ignorant of the impending catastrophe. R1874:1; D607

Did eat -- Proceeding with its usual affairs. HG305:4

The world's affairs will not be interrupted by his presence. NS200:3

These things are not signs of wickedness, but are mentioned to show us that there will be no outward sign to indicate to the world the time of the second presence of Christ. R5455:6, 4797:2, 2974:5, 349:1; B161; NS7:6, 33:6

Without the slightest faith in the preaching of Noah. So, in the early part of the Day of the Lord, the world, having no faith in the announcement of his presence and of the impending trouble, will go on as usual, giving no heed. B143 They were too busy to consider the testimony carefully. B168

The world is going into large contracts, etc., quite unaware of how near we are to the new arrangement, the incoming Kingdom. R5470:4
They did know when the flood came; and they will now know when every eye shall behold him. HG24:6

The words of Paul, "Ye brethren are not in darkness that that day should come upon you as a thief," indicate that the Church should possess a light on the subject while the world would be in ignorance. (1 Thess. 5:4) R289:3
Not only does Jesus intimate that his coming and presence will be unknown to the world, but that many of his servants will be so asleep and overcharged with things of this world, that the day of the Lord will be upon them as a snare. R123:4

They may have been wicked then, doubtless were, and may be similarly wicked now, but wickedness is not the point of comparison. R580:5, 20:4; B161

Married wives -- Producing giants--today known as the Sugar Trust, Coal Trust, etc. As the giants were in control in the days of Noah, so the giants are getting more and more control of the situation now. But we read that they will be utterly destroyed; that there will be no hope of resuscitation. R4797:5

Until the day -- The presence is not likened to the flood, or the days of the flood, but to the days that were before the flood. NS200:4
Referring to his parousia, his presence before the apokalupsis, or revealing in flaming fire or trouble. NS200:3

Let time be the last part of the "good news" and tell no one of the time and presence, except they show that they have "an ear to hear." R216:6
There must needs be just such scoffing in the days of Jesus as was in the days of Noah. R349:4; B167

Noe entered -- The Little Flock, typified by Noah, going from among men into the condition of safety (from the coming storm), represented by the ark--"one taken and another left." R188:4

Into the ark -- Type of Christ and the power in him which will replenish and reorganize society. A318

The flood came -- Though there shall never be another flood to destroy the earth (Gen. 9:11), it is written that the whole earth shall be devoured with the fire of God's jealousy (Zeph. 3:8)--not the literal, physical earth in either case, but the existing order of things in both cases. B162

Contrary to the teachings of many modern theologians. A61
As the flood came suddenly, so would come the time of the ushering in of the new dispensation. R4976:6

Destroyed them all -- Picturing that Messiah's Kingdom is to be established upon the wreck of present institutions. R5455:6

Luke 17:28

They did eat -- Lot endeavored to get his relatives, married to Sodomites, to flee with him. His words seemed to them like idle tales. Even Lot and his family were so tedious that the angels laid hold of their hands and urged them out. R228:6

The same day -- Emphasizing the suddenness with which the calamity will overtake the world. R5456:1

Lot went out -- Called to go out before sunrise. R228:6

Those who, like Abraham, are the friends of God, will be far off from the danger; others, not so faithful, will be in the full midst of the trouble, yet, if loyal at heart to the Lord, will be delivered with great loss.

R2858:1

God tells his "friends," represented by Abraham, who live separate from the world, of what is coming upon Sodom, and delivers the class who become almost overcharged with the affairs of this life. R228:6

Of Sodom -- Christendom is "that great city [Babylon] which spiritually is called Sodom." (Rev. 11:8) D608

Sodom sinned grievously, but they had little light, and practically no knowledge of God. R5076:4

Fire -- "Sodom set forth for an example, suffering the vengeance of eternal [Greek, aionios, age-lasting] fire [destruction]. (Jude 7) R1618:2

Destroyed them all -- God saw good to make the destruction of the Sodomites an example of the fate of sinners--death, not everlasting torture. PD24/35

They were temporarily destroyed by fire as an example of the absolute annihilation which ultimately will come upon all willful sinners, the second death. But before any will be thus cut off, they must first be brought to a full knowledge of the truth and have a full trial. R4599:5

It was not a preservative fire. HG222:6

Those Sodomites had no share in any day of judgment, except in the sense that they were children of Adam, and by heredity they were condemned in him and shared in his death sentence. OV43:2

The death of the Sodomites was merely the Adamic death, hastened; not the second death. OV43:2

Yet the Sodomites were not so great sinners in his sight as were the Jews, who had more knowledge. HG345:4; OV227:T; NS833:1

Why should not the Sodomites have an opportunity to reach perfection and everlasting life, as well as Israel, or as any of us? A110; OV227:T

Why did not God send Abraham to preach to them? Why did he not give Lot a commission to start a revival meeting? NS703:3

An example of the fate of sinners--death, not everlasting torture.

PD24/35; R4599:5

"If the mighty works which have been done in thee had been done in Sodom, it would have remained unto this day." (Matt. 11:23) A110

"Sodom and her daughters shall return to their former estate" (Ezek. 16:55), implying their resurrection. R659:4, 545:5

Their temporary destruction is an illustration of the ultimate absolute annihilation of all willful sinners in the second death. R4599:5

Even thus -- There was nothing special to alarm the antediluvians before the day that Noah entered into the ark; nothing special to startle the men of Sodom ere the fire from heaven fell. R661:6*

Therefore there could be no thought of such a thing as the conversion of the world before the second advent. R1343:6*

Shall it be -- The similarity here pointed out is that of ignorance, not wickedness. D606; R2974:5, 264:3

The Son of man -- Already present. D607

Is revealed -- Greek, apokalupsis. The judgments of the coming time of trouble will begin as soon as the saints have all been changed. Thus the Son of Man will be revealed a present Judge who already had for some time been present sealing and gathering his "elect." R2979:4

The Greek text shows a difference between the parousia, or presence, of Christ before the time of trouble, and the later epiphania, or revealing. R5456:1

Now present and being revealed to the living members of the Little Flock, though others know not of his presence. T86

Made manifest--first to his watching "virgins," later, in the trouble, to all men. D607

"He shall be revealed in flaming fire." (2 Thess. 1:7,8) R5456:1

In that day -- Of his parousia, presence, before his revealing. R5456:2

He which shall be -- Members of the nominal household. R228:3

Upon the housetop -- Those nearest heaven, the most devoted and consecrated ones, the jewels which the Lord says he will gather. R228:3

His stuff -- Individual interests centered in the organizations, such as honor, respect, family ties, friendship. R228:3

In the house -- The nominal church. R229:5, 228:3

Not come down -- Some seek to take it with them; this involves delay, and is dangerous. R228:5; 5456:4

To take it away -- Leave the stuff--sacrifice it in obedience to the Lord's Word. R229:4, 5456:4

In the field -- In the world, not a church member. D574; R5456:4

Not return back -- Not join the nominal church. D574; R5456:4

Remember Lot's wife -- An injunction for the foolish virgins. C194

She began to remember her goods. R228:6

Lot and his family were not accused of sharing the evil practices of the Sodomites. His wife's outward fault was merely that of looking back. We may reasonably suppose that this implied a heart out of harmony with her deliverance and in some degree sympathetic with the things God had condemned. R1860:2, 5948:3

If we love the things behind so that we, with any degree, look back or long for the evil things doomed to destruction in the coming trouble, it will mean that we will not be worthy of having any part in the deliverance. R2858:1

The Lord's people, when they flee, shall not covetously look back to the things which, under divine condemnation, are to pass away. R4706:2

Those who assume to be more gracious and long-suffering than the Lord make of themselves opponents, who, instead of being students of the principles of righteousness, attempt to be judges and teachers of Jehovah. R1860:2

Let us be of one mind with the Lord. His friends only must be our friends; his enemies only our enemies. If we affiliate with the Lord's enemies we will at least get into a lukewarm condition toward him and his friends; and the lukewarm he will spew out of his mouth. R1861:1

While we should always be on the alert to render assistance wherever needed, to convert a brother from the error of his ways, we should make no such effort for him as would tend to make us fall from our own steadfastness into the error of the wicked. R1860:3

Neither are we to waste sympathy upon those who depart. If we can neither persuade them nor pull them out of the fire, we must let them go, and should turn at once and render aid to others more worthy. R1860:6

Those who, under the special guidance of the Lord, are now fleeing for safety to the Mountain of the Lord's Kingdom, will be held to a much stricter account than are others. R5948:2, 1860:2

Applies particularly to the Lord's people who have "come out" of Babylon. Let them not look back or otherwise manifest sympathy with that which is condemned of the Lord to overthrow and destruction. R5949:3

How slight would be the appropriateness of this injunction if applied to those who fled from Judea in AD 70; but how intensely forceful it is as a caution to God's people now, in the close of the Gospel age. D607

"No man, having put his hand to the plow, and looking back, is fit for the Kingdom of God." (Luke 9:62) C194

Jesus' reference authenticating the literal accuracy of the story of Lot's wife turning into a pillar of salt. Q834:1

Who became a monument of the folly of sympathizing with evil and evil-doers after God has given them up. R5948:3, 1861:4

Type of some who sympathize and fraternize with those who once enjoyed, but have left, present truth and are condemned by the Lord. R5948:3, 1860:2

Type of the Great Company, more in sympathy with the things behind than the things before. C194; D607, 608; R2858:1

The Lord's people will be tested along the line of their separation from the spirit of the world. R2858:1

Seek to save -- By compromises of conscience and staying in Babylon. D607

His life -- Greek, psuche--soul, being. E336

Honor, reputation, friends, etc. R229:4

Shall lose it -- If, after made a partaker of the holy Spirit, tasting the good word of God and the powers of the coming age, one should stifle these blessed influences and turn again to the spirit of the world, he would destroy his spiritual life. R1981:5, 859:6*

Shall lose his life -- Greek, psuche--soul, being. E336

Willingly sacrifice his life for the Lord's sake. R859:6*

Those who hold new title to the divine nature, have of course relinquished all former claims to the perfect human nature. R859:6*

Shall preserve it -- We are on the race course for life, and must be faithful unto death if we would receive the crown of life. R294:4

Luke 17:34

In that night -- Before the day has dawned, yet a part of that day. R229:1

There shall be two -- This verse is omitted by Matthew. D608

In one bed -- A bed is a place in which to rest. It is here used to represent the resting place of the Church--its belief or creed. R229:1; D608

The same as the short one mentioned in Isa. 28:20. R513:6, 229:1; D608

One shall be taken -- Referring not to a change from natural to spiritual bodies, but to a translation out of the kingdom of darkness into the light and liberty of the Kingdom of light. R513:6

Not out of one "bed" into another of about the same size; not out of one "mill" into another "mill." D610

Other shall be left -- Some will be so short that they will feel no inconvenience, and others so sleepy and drowsy as to not notice the matter. R229:2

There are two classes of Christians: one is to escape all these things which are coming upon the earth; the other class is to be left in the midst of these troubles. HG81:6

Women -- This word is spurious. D609

Grinding together -- Representing teachers seeking to prepare food for the household of faith--some of these will be taken, others left to grind on at the unsatisfying husks and chaff. R513:6, 229:4

Luke 17:36

In the field -- The field represents the world. R5456:4
Representing a condition outside the nominal "house"--outside of Babylon.
D609

And they -- The disciples. D610

Where, Lord? -- Where will these be taken? D610

The body is -- Carcass, dead body. The attraction is the point of the illustration: as the eagles are, by an unerring instinct, sure to find the carcass, so the Spirit in the saints will surely bring them to him whom their soul loveth. R211:4*

The gathered and gathering ones come together because they "hunger and thirst after righteousness" and they are finding the satisfying portion which the Lord himself has provided, and each for himself is eating thereof. D611

Carcass, food, the real food, a satisfying portion; away from the short bed and from grinding the husks of human tradition. R513:6

The food of "present truth." D610

What causes the assembling together of the eagles from various quarters?
Hunger! R229:5

The eagles -- They live high up above the world, in the mountains, far-seeing; having eyes adapted to looking at the light; representing intelligently earnest Christians. R229:4

As the eagles seem instinctively, without call, noise or warning, to assemble from every different point, near and far, so, we understand the Lord to teach, will be our gathering together unto him. R114:2

Be gathered -- From the four winds of heaven--from every quarter of the Church-- attracted as eagles are attracted, by food, for which they have a keenness of vision and appetite. D610

Together -- Such as thus seek food find it and meet the others similarly hungry and feed together. R229:5

Luke 18

Luke 18:1

A parable -- A word-picture designed to illustrate some truth. Not necessarily a statement of the facts, but merely a suppositionary case. In a parable the thing said is never the thing meant literally. R5707:3

Always to pray -- The thought of the abiding presence of the Father and the Son is that their thought and care and interest will be constantly upon us, and that at any instant we may engage the special attention of either or both. R1865:2

True faith makes sure of its ground by giving careful heed to the Lord's Word; and then, asking according to that Word, it has confidence in the results, and waits and prays and watches, perseveringly and patiently. R2005:5

After we have made sure that our prayers are in accord with the promises, those things which lie very close to our hearts become our continual prayers. R4983:5

We are to recognize a distinct difference between this and the vain repetitions of the heathen, which our Lord condemned--merely formal prayers, which are reprehensible in the Lord's sight. R5020:1,4; Q539:2 Not that they should never get off their knees, nor never do anything except pray, but that they should continue in their prayers and not grow faint or disheartened. R5310:3

Teaching continuity in prayer--not merely that we pray once, and then say, "I have prayed about this matter, and now I will leave it." R5708:3

God wishes us to be persistent, and our persistence measures and indicates the depth of our desires. R2865:6

Pray perseveringly. R5381:2*, 5310:6

Scripture examples fully warrant all-night prayer meetings, even for several days, such as our Lord's remaining all night in the mountain in prayer, and his long and repeated prayers at Gethsemane. R4347:2

Those who believe little of the Lord's promises, who trust him little, will pray to him little, will exercise little faith, and will have little joy and blessing in consequence. R3841:6

No amount of praying will make up for a neglect of a study of the Lord's Word. R5709:5

For eighteen hundred years the Church has been praying for deliverance, and God has not answered this prayer. But he will. Q539:3

We pray unceasingly, "Thy kingdom come," not by repeating the words every moment, but by continuing the thought, the expectation, the waiting for it, and by laboring in the interests of that Kingdom. R5709:5

Our prayers will not bring God's Kingdom one minute sooner than he has planned, but we pray by way of assuring the Lord that we are waiting for the Kingdom and expecting it in harmony with his sure promise. R5710:4, 5020:2, 2005:6

Other requests, for daily food, succor in temptation and deliverance from the evil one, have been promptly answered. R2005:6

Prayer is required, not to change God's plans, but to bring our hearts into such a condition as will prepare us to receive and appreciate the blessings God has freely promised. R1972:5

Whoever has not become a new creature has no privilege of prayer whatever. R5310:6

There is a difference between worship--adoration, homage, expressing thanks--which anyone may do; but making requests of God in prayer is a limited privilege. R5379:1

To be in the attitude of prayer at all times, full of thanksgiving to God. Q542:T; R5203:6

"Continuing instant in prayer." (Rom. 12:12) R1865:2, 5481:3

Delay in answering our request may be because it is not his due time; or he may want to develop in us faith and patient endurance. R5020:2, 3664:6

We should pray for strength and wisdom to overcome the flesh and develop the fruits and graces of the holy Spirit. R5708:5

Prayer is absolutely indispensable to Christian growth and spiritual existence. R5709:4

Asking only for the things pleasing to God. R5708:1

That we may have God's sentiment, mind and will, as our sentiment, mind and will. R5709:2

We cannot come too often to the throne of heavenly grace, or tarry too long. R1865:3, 5311:5

And not to faint -- Yield. R2005:5

Grow disheartened and discouraged because of the delay in the answer. R3841:1, 5310:3

Grow weary, hopeless, faithless. R4983:5

Used in the sense of faint-heartedness--"Consider Jesus lest ye be weary and faint in your minds," "for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not." (Heb. 12:3; Gal. 6:9) R5710:1

Patiently waiting for the Lord's due time, faithfully trusting him that he is willing to give the blessing which he promised, even though he may for a time withhold it with a view to our becoming the more earnest in seeking it. R2865:6

God has the blessing and not only is able to give it, but has promised to do so. The delay in granting the request is because his due time has not come. Hence we are not to become weary, but to be constant in our prayers. R5020:2

It may be that, while we are praying, the Lord is not only preparing us for the blessing, but also preparing the circumstances and conditions which will bring us these opportunities and privileges in the best form.

R3664:6

Our heavenly Father may will to bring us into such a condition of heart that we can appreciate his blessing. It may be God's will to delay the answer for our highest good. R5203:3

Not grow disheartened and discouraged because of delay in the answer. R3841:1, 5310:3

Have unwavering faith in God's willingness to give us his best gifts. R5481:3

One reason for delay in answering us is to test the strength and depth of our desires. R4983:5

After we have prayed for a certain thing, we should continue to keep it before our mind. R5311:5

By delaying the answer, God may want to bring us into such a condition of heart that we can appreciate his blessing. R5203:3, 3841:1

Jacob wrestled all night with the angel, unwilling to let him go until he blessed him. R2865:5

Luke 18:2

A judge -- In olden times judges were to a large degree lawmakers as well as executives. R3841:1

Judges in oriental countries are notoriously corrupt and ready to violate public opinion in the attainment of selfish ends. R3841:1

Luke 18:3

Avenge me -- As with the Church at the present time, we realize that we are suffering injustice. Q539:3

Luke 18:5

I will avenge -- So careful of his own convenience, that he would give her justice lest, by her continual coming, she would annoy him. R3586:6

Although he cared little for the principle itself. R5310:2, 3841:2

The woman's persistency illustrated what Jesus wished to emphasize. R5708:1

Luke 18:6

Unjust judge -- Not that the Heavenly Father is an unjust judge, nor that the Church is a widow. R5708:1

Luke 18:7

Shall not God -- This parable does not compare this unjust judge with our heavenly Father. On the contrary, it contrasts the two. R3841:2
If an unjust judge be moved on account of importunity to do justice, how much more a just judge! R5020:1, 3841:2, 3586:6; Q539:2
Implying that the prayers are proper ones for the Lord to answer. In prayer we should make sure we ask only for the things pleasing to him. Christians who live near to God are the best qualified to offer acceptable prayer. R5708:1

Who is not unjust, and whose only object in delaying answer to our prayers is to work out for us a blessing of increased faith and trust. R3841:1

Avenge his own elect -- Although he has permitted them to be maligned, slandered, misrepresented, for over eighteen centuries, the time will come when he will give them justice, when he will exalt them. R3586:6, 2920:4
Injustice will not forever obtain. The time will come, as we are told, when Satan shall be bound and deceive the people no more. (Rev. 20:2,3) Q539:3

Which cry -- "O Lord, deliver us! deliver us from the adversary!"
R5020:1; Q539:3

When his children thus cry to him, our Heavenly Father is sure to hear their prayers. R5708:1

Not with a hope of changing the Almighty, altering any of his plans and arrangements, but because they believe his promises and desire to assure their hearts in prayer that the Father has a due time for deliverance.
R3841:3

As illustrated by the Syro-Phoenician woman's importunity. R2653:5
This implies that the prayers are proper ones for the Lord to answer.
R5708:1

Though he bear long -- Though he manifest no special haste in the matter, have confidence in God and in his promise that eventually the right shall triumph. R3841:3

If the answer be not quickly forthcoming, we neither conclude that God is an unjust judge, nor is selfishly careless of our interests except as we would bother him, but is as a loving heavenly parent. R3841:2

If the Lord shall not see best to grant a prompt response, we may be sure that it is not from lack of interest in our welfare. R2653:4 18:8

He will avenge -- According to their deeds, he will repay recompense to his enemies. He will render unto Babylon a recompense. (Isa. 59:18; Jer. 51:6) D39

Taken as a whole, the lesson to the Lord's people through this parable is that we are to have patience and not attempt to render vengeance upon our opposers. R3841:6

In the time of trouble. D39

"Avenge not yourselves. Vengeance is mine." (Rom. 12:19) "The day of vengeance is in my heart." (Isa. 63:4) R3841:5

Speedily -- Either that, when the Lord's time shall come, he will make a short work with the great Adversary, or that the Lord will not really long delay in bringing in his Kingdom of righteousness. R3841:4

"A day with the Lord is as a thousand years." (2Pet. 3:8) From this standpoint the whole period would be less than two days. What we need today is to take the Lord's standpoint in viewing matters. R3841:4

Nevertheless -- A separate and distinct point from the parable. R3841:4

When the Son of man cometh -- Is present. R2875:5

For the establishment of his Kingdom. Then the true faith would be seriously lacking, almost extinct, just as at the first advent. R3841:4

Shall he find faith -- The faith. Q775:2; D592

The faith in this text would have the meaning of a system of belief or doctrines, as expressed in the Bible statement, "The faith once delivered to the saints." (Jude 3) Q775:2

This great falling away was predicted for the end of this age, and it therefore becomes another sign of the times. HG317:5, 369:5; R2875:5; D592; NS426:5

The intimation is that faith will somehow or other be on the decrease at that time. HG146:5

It would appear that, with more advantages than any previous generation, ours has less faith in God and less trust in the Bible as His Word. HG662:5

Associating these words with the parable foregoing, the implication is that the Church will not actually be helped until the first resurrection, at the Master's second advent. R3841:5

Perhaps a warning to his believers not to be lacking in faith as a guard against worldly influences; perhaps a declaration that the time would come when faith would become weak and small; or perhaps the pleading voice of a loving Master who would win our loyalty by suggesting the possibility of our failing in devotion. R3118:3*

The comparatively small results of our efforts to reach the ripe wheat in Babylon convince us, all the more, that the wheat is very scarce in comparison with the tares. R2740:3

Very scarce at present; and as the higher critics proceed, and as the evolution theories spread, faith in God and in his Word becomes more and more vague and lifeless. R2898:5

The Lord would permit or send strong delusions, that nominal professors, lacking the spirit of the truth, should be deceived. NS426:6

Reasons within the church: Higher Criticism, pulpit themes, the ways of the church and the neglect of parents to bring up their children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord; outside of the church: the character of the present strife for wealth, the love of pleasure, ease and self-indulgence, unrest under authority, the prevalence of suicide and the ready acceptance of the various forms of new thought. R3118:5*

Following the guidance of so-called Higher Critics, the rank and file of professors of colleges have lost their faith. Having lost faith in the Bible themselves, they think they are doing a real service in destroying the faith of others. HG662:6

Because our wise men tell us that the Bible is unreliable, that Christ's death was not redemptive, that future happiness depends upon cultivation of our mental and moral qualities and that Shakespeare and other writings are quite as good as the Bible. R2695:1

Because of the denial of the fall of man, and consequently the redemption from the fall by the precious blood of Christ. R1794:5

Higher criticism, evolution, worldly philosophy are undermining the faith of God's people, so that they are not believing nearly as much as their fathers did of God, his power and his character. HG146:5

Owing to the hundreds of conflicting creeds and doctrinal systems; the many "isms" and the strong delusions and multiplied errors. Q775:2

Contrary to the concept of world conversion before the second advent. R3004:3

The world will be far from being in a blessed condition at the Lord's second advent. R5573:6

These are the "perilous times" mentioned by the Apostle in 2 Thess. 2:10-12 and 2 Tim. 3:1-5. R2875:5

Not flourishing--not predominating. R2693:2

Evidently not to any great extent. It surely is very scarce at present. R1794:5, 2898:5

Implying that then the true faith would be difficult to find; almost extinct. R2740:3, 3841:4

Luke 18:9

Unto certain -- Illustrated in our day by so-called "Holiness People," who claim they have not sinned for years. F157

They were righteous -- Outwardly, they were very correct; but with many of them religion was a ceremony and the keeping of the law an outward obedience, which did not extend to the heart. R5464:1

Because their religious system was in advance of every other religious system in the world, the learned attributed a like superiority to themselves individually. R5926:3

Israel never fully appreciated the requirements of their Law Covenant, which no one but a perfect man could fulfil. R2121:3

There is a similar class in Christendom today, who are outwardly moral, very particular, exact, scrupulous, and yet not pleasing to the Lord. They are proud of their righteousness. R3841:6

Some today trust in church membership, their benevolences and general morality, for salvation, ignoring the fact that all are sinners. R5464:3

Despised others -- A loveless sentiment which despised others and boasted of self, a self-satisfied and complacent condition of mind and heart, very reprehensible to the Lord, a condition of heart unready to be blessed with divine mercy. R2592:1

This was the secret of Israel's blindness to the Gospel. The religious leaders relied so implicitly upon their interpretations that they could not regard the humble Nazarene and his unlearned followers except as imposters. R5926:3

They had forms of righteousness, outward obedience to God and his laws, and piety and sanctity in outward appearance. R3360:1

A Pharisee -- A moral man, in many respects a good man, but very conscious of all his righteous deeds and perfunctory observances of divine rules. R3842:1

In our Lord's parables he dealt chiefly with the Pharisees and the publicans: for the Sadducees were Jews in name only, not believing the Scriptures nor expecting a future life. R5464:1

A publican -- Of a lower class, who did not profess holiness, but confessed estrangement from God. R5464:1, 3842:1

Disesteemed by the Pharisees as no longer Jews nor heirs of the Covenant promises. R3848:6

Luke 18:11

The Pharisee -- Illustrating the lack of the quality of humility. R3842:6
Presenting the extremes of conceit, selfishness and hypocrisy. R1972:1

Prayed -- It was merely self-adulation. R3842:2

Unlike lip prayers, heart prayers are always accompanied by efforts of life in harmony with the prayer. R1972:5

His prayer was not the kind the Father invites: "Worship . . . in spirit and in truth." (John 4:23, 24) R3842:1

With himself -- Apparently his prayers did not ascend to the Lord, and it would be strictly true to say that he prayed with himself--heard himself pray, congratulated himself in the prayer, and rejoiced in his own self-consciousness generally. R3842:1

I am not -- There are many approaches to this disposition which give sure signs that those who have and who are cultivating them will by and by mature the same kind of fruit unless they change their course. R1972:1
Trusted in his own imperfect works and asked no forgiveness. R5464:2, 3842:2

As other men -- It is the intoxication that comes from imbibing the spirit of the world that leads to that foolish boasting of which man in his sober senses would be ashamed. R1972:2

Under false teachings, many professed Christians are indulging in false hopes, in thinking they are the Lord's people without having consecrated themselves to be his followers. NS410:4

All Christians, by virtue of their relation to God, have every reason to give thanks to the Lord that they differ from the majority of their fellow-creatures; but they have nothing whereof to boast. R3842:1

As this publican -- The first thing for all such to learn is what constitutes a sinner from God's standpoint. In consequence of heredity, all are sinners, all are imperfect. NS410:5

Who realized his blemishes, and prayed for mercy. R5464:2

Luke 18:12

I fast twice -- Going beyond anything that the Law required. He doubtless felt he was to be specially commended therefore. R3842:3

If we were to fast, starve ourselves to death, it would not be meritorious. No works can be of value except as based upon proper recognition of our own imperfections and proper acceptance of divine justification. R3842:3

Self denials of food are not the most estimable in God's sight. There are other desires of the flesh we are to strive to control, diminish and starve out, that we might proportionately flourish, be nourished spiritually and made strong. R3842:4

I give tithes -- Proper enough, but the followers of Jesus are expected to consecrate their all to the Lord. How little the most energetic is able to accomplish! R3842:4

He was trusting in his own works of the flesh and was, therefore, as a Pharisee, rejecting the imputed righteousness of the Atonement Day sacrifices. R3842:2

A tenth of their increase was rendered to the priests. God has left spiritual Israel without any specific instructions of this kind. R2542:1, 3842:4, 2486:3, 2485:1

Giving one-tenth was nothing to boast of when it is remembered that the Lord is the bountiful giver of all good. R3842:4

Instead of merely one-tenth, we lay our little all upon the Lord's altar in consecration. R2486:4,5, 3842:4 18:13

The publican -- Illustrating the quality of humility. R3842:6

Afar off -- He did not approach close to the holy precincts of the Temple. He recognized the great difference between God's perfection and his own personal unworthiness. R3842:5

Would not lift up -- The weight of sin was upon him. He could not look up to heaven. R5464:2

Smote upon his breast -- Upon his heart, indicating that he accepted the divine sentence of death as well-deserved and merited. R3842:5 Be merciful -- The simplicity of childhood, realizing its need, confesses it and asks mercy, instead of attempting to deceive itself by philosophizing. R1972:5

Somehow the unreasonable idea prevails that this prayer for a moment preceding the last gasp of life would change the eternal destiny of that person from the roads of ruin to the fields of Paradise and glory.

Humbly realizing his own unworthiness. R3842:5, 5464:2, 3836:1

This prayer, approved by our Lord, did not address Jehovah as "Father," but as God. R2251:3

A sinner -- We all come short of perfection and need divine mercy. The sinner who recognizes this is more pleasing to God and nearer to forgiveness than the more moral person who fails to see his blemishes. R5464:2

If you do to the very best of your ability you will get a great lesson as to your inability to do perfectly. Q797:6

Prayers need not be lengthy, but they must be sincere, from the heart, and not a lip service. Heart prayers are always accompanied by efforts of life in harmony with the prayers; while lip prayers are usually in contradiction of the living epistle. R1972:5

This man -- The less moral, less scrupulously careful man. R4987:2

Justified -- He was more nearly in a justified condition than the Pharisee. They were both in a condition of partial justification, like all the Jews; both were in a condition of tentative justification. Q699:3
Inwardly more acceptable to the Father. R3842:5

More acceptable because of his acknowledgment of sin. CR413:3; R3842:5; Q699:3

We must continue to admit our own imperfection, our need of mercy, and to trust in the precious blood, if we would continue to be "justified."

R1972:4

Both classes are still represented in the world, amongst Christians. R5464:3

Than the other -- From God's standpoint, both men were sinners, both needed forgiveness. R5464:2

That exalteth himself -- The quality of pride is specially abominable to the Lord, because there is not a creature in the universe that has anything to be proud of. Everything that everyone has is a gift; it is not of his own manufacture or creation. R4898:2

What have we that we have not received from the Lord? Who hath made us to differ? (1 Cor. 4:7) R3842:2

Pride signifies self-satisfaction, and the corresponding ignoring of the all-sufficiency of our glorious Head, who said to us, "Without me ye can do nothing." (John 15:5) R3942:6

The besetting danger of spiritual pride. R5955:6

Shall be abased -- He that exalteth himself is not to be exalted by the Church; for he will not be exalted by the Lord. R5322:4; F296

As illustrated by Satan. A189

Inflated values must at some time come down to a solid basis. R1486:6

What degradation can await such self-exaltation as is shown in the utterances of the Papacy! B313

Humbleth himself -- As Christ did, to become man's Redeemer. E425

By facing popular opposition and enduring popular reproach. R1487:2

Pride, in its every form, should be so thoroughly humiliated, killed, that it can never rise again to destroy us. R4898:5

Shall be exalted -- He that humbleth himself will be exalted, either by the vote of the congregation, or by the Lord's will. R5322:4

The Church should follow this general rule in selecting elders. F296

"Humble yourselves, therefore, under the mighty hand of God, that he may exalt you in due time." (1 Pet. 5:6) R3079:2, 5955:6

This is God's rule, and blessing will come to us along that line or not at all. R1537:4

Luke 18:15

Infants -- To enforce the teaching of the Pharisee and the publican, our Lord calls attention to the beautiful, artless simplicity of childhood as a pattern of what all must be who would enter the Kingdom of God. R1972:2

Luke 18:17

Feeling that the Lord's time was too valuable to be thus used. R5362:1

Suffer -- Permit. R5362:1, 4853:4

Little children -- The great Teacher was a lover of children. R5362:1

Of such -- Not as a little child in stature, nor in blankness of undeveloped character, but in humility, simplicity, guilelessness. "Be not children in knowledge [character], howbeit in malice be ye children." (1 Cor. 14:20) R2063:2

The joint-heirs of Messiah's Kingdom will all be childlike, teachable, simple, trustful, obedient children of God. R4853:4, 5362:2

Kingdom of God -- The Kingdom is now ours by faith, in the same way we have every other heavenly blessing. R397:4

Receive the kingdom -- Receive the message of the Kingdom. R5362:2

As a little child -- Trusting the Lord implicitly, as a little child would trust its earthly parent. R2671:1

The simplicity of childhood, realizing its need, confesses it and asks mercy, instead of attempting to deceive itself by philosophizing. R1972:5

They may be old in years and gray-headed, but their hearts are young and preserve the sweet simplicity of childhood. R1972:2

Luke 18:18

A certain ruler -- Probably a publican or tax-gatherer. R1783:3
Supposed by some to have been Lazarus, whom Jesus later awakened from the dead. R3529:1

Asked him -- He was anxious for a perfect conformity to the will of God; and so anxious that he manifested his willingness to bear reproach for it in thus coming to Jesus. R1774:6

Notwithstanding the persecuting spirit of the rulers and teachers in Israel against the Lord and all who believed in the validity of his claims, he came to him openly and saluted him with reverence due to so great a teacher. R1774:3

What shall I do -- Indicating a realization that by deeds of the law no flesh had yet gained the life the law promised for obedience. R1774:3
Indicating most commendable candor and faith in the teacher. R1774:3

Jesus said -- Our Lord, while dismissing the self-satisfied, fault-finding quibbles of the Pharisees with dark or evasive answers, took time and care in making truth clear and plain to the humble, earnest seekers. B27

Illustrating the great difficulty of getting a full, fair view of one's self, the value of every applied test of character. R1774:2

Callest thou me good -- Are you addressing me as Good Master only as a complimentary salutation? If you really believe me to be good, you must believe in me as the sent of God. If my testimony is untrue in any particular, I am not good at all, but a falsifier, hypocrite, blasphemmer. R2727:6

Everything really good must be of God and in accordance with God. R5465:2, 4658:3

Luke 18:20

The commandments -- The Law Covenant was still in force. It had not yet been "nailed to his cross." (Col. 2:14) R3843:2, 5465:3

Luke 18:21

Have I kept -- Was living an exemplary life, but was merely doing his duty. R5438:6

He was a sincere Pharisee. R5464:2

From my youth -- Sought to fashion his character to the precepts of the divine law. R1774:3

Luke 18:22

Lackest thou one thing -- There is none so perfect that he lacks nothing. R1775:4

There was a lack: his attitude, though he did not realize it, was not that of entire consecration to the will of God. R1774:6

Sell all -- All thy possessions, all thy time, all thy reputation, all that hitherto has been dear to thee. R1775:1

One who believes that every dollar belongs to God, and is to be used by him, will not imagine that he has discharged all obligation by giving a tenth to the Lord. R1045:1

It may be quite true that giving one dollar now out of your capital would prevent you giving five dollars fifteen years hence. But one dollar now may be worth ten dollars fifteen years later. R1045:4

In the present age this implies self-sacrifice and daily cross-bearing in imitation of Christ. R1774:6

Distribute -- To follow Christ is not to make unwise disposition of our possessions and talents, but as wise and faithful stewards, to use them to the best possible advantage in his service. R1775:1

Unto the poor -- Not necessarily with the bread that perisheth, but first, rather, to feed the spiritually hungry with the bread of life. R1775:2

If there were a famine in the land, it would be folly to grind up all the seed-corn for food. But if, after feeding their families, the farmers were to put all the increase back into the ground while the world was starving, it would be worse than foolish, it would be criminal. R1045:4

"Love is the fulfilling of the Law." (Rom. 13:10) R2728:1

Treasure in heaven -- Received of the Father, begotten of the holy Spirit. R5438:6

Joint-heirship with me in the Messianic Kingdom. R5438:6

Come, follow me -- Following closely in his footsteps will bring ingratitude and even persecution, as it did to our Master. R1775:1

Luke 18:23

He was very sorrowful -- He loved self more than either God or his neighbor. R1774:6

Let no man deceive himself by saying: "I will give when I have amassed wealth. I desire money that I may do good with it; but I will not give now, that I may give the more largely in the future." R1045:5

We hear nothing of his subsequent conversion, but in all probability he remained in sympathy with the Jewish teachers and partook more and more of their spirit of opposition to Christ and his teaching. R1774:6

Was very rich -- The Lord sought to show what was the weak spot in his character. R1774:6

Luke 18:24

He was very sorrowful -- No doubt the heart of Jesus was sad also when he saw the blight of selfishness and self-will attacking that promising half-blown rose of character. R1774:6

How hardly -- Though difficult, it is not impossible. A man can have riches and use them conscientiously as a sacrificer. R1775:2

That have riches -- Whether those riches be of reputation, fame, learning, money, or even common ease. HG716:6

Because of faith in their wealth instead of in God, because of the pride which riches foster, because of the friends which riches bring, and because of the proportionately larger sacrifices which must be made.

R2729:1

If a Christian grows rich, it should be with fear and trembling. It is more dangerous than dynamite. R1045:5*

The kingdom of God -- Used interchangeably with "kingdom of heaven." (See Matt. 19:24) R397:1

The Body of Christ; certainly not the nominal church, for rich men find very little difficulty in getting into it. R2761:3

Luke 18:25

A needle's eye -- A small gate in the walls of ancient cities for the convenience of belated travelers after sundown, after the main city gates were closed. These needle-eyes were so low that camels could enter them only upon their knees and after being stripped of their burdens. R2762:3

Rich man to enter -- He cannot get into the Kingdom at all except as he strips himself of his riches, sacrificing them and devoting them to the Lord. R2762:1

Kingdom of God -- The Church is the Kingdom now, only in the prospective sense. R397:4

Possible with God -- He has made provision for the rich young ruler and all the families of the earth, under his established Kingdom. R3845:1

If a rich disciple be honest-hearted and humble, the Lord can show him how to wisely use his wealth, or else may strip him of it, to fit him for the Kingdom. R5466:2

Luke 18:28

We have left all -- The Lord communicated to them a measure of his spirit and power--the equivalent to much that is now granted to the spirit-begotten ones of this age. R4909:1,2

Luke 18:29

He said unto them -- The special light of both harvests is for the Israelites indeed. B26, 27

That hath left house -- The harvest is not a time for peace, but on the contrary it will surely produce separation and alienations between true wheat and all else. R969:6

We are not to get the mistaken idea from this that the Lord wishes us to sacrifice others. It would be wrong to deprive our families of necessary comforts and temporal provisions; but having provided these, the surplus is the Lord's. R3845:5

Kingdom of God's sake -- Fathers, mothers, sons and daughters, brothers and sisters, will oppose and seek to separate you from the truth and its service. R969:5

Manifold more -- The more we leave, the more we sacrifice, the greater our reward, both now and hereafter. R3845:3

Those who sacrifice nothing need expect no reward. Those who receive little of the Lord in the present life and have small hope of a share in the Kingdom, are those who have sacrificed little for his sake. R3845:3

The world to come -- The Millennial age. HG12:4

Put him to death -- The treatment due the vilest of criminals--crucifixion. R5483:2

He shall rise again -- Incomprehensible to the disciples, and dismissed as a dark saying. R5483:2

He was come nigh -- With our Lord and his apostles was a considerable number of friends, together with numerous Pharisees. R3847:6

A blind man -- Bartimeus. R3847:6

Physical blindness is a terrible affliction, but how much more serious is mental and spiritual blindness. These are cut off by false doctrine from the ability to see the grandeur of the divine character and plan. R3848:2 These are blind and cannot see afar off--they can merely see the affairs of the present life with its eating and drinking, planting and building, laughing and crying, living and dying. R3848:2

"The god of this world hath blinded the minds of them that believe not." (2 Cor. 4:4) R3848:2

Sat by the way side -- Hoping to excite the sympathy of the passers-by. R3847:6

Begging -- In those days there was no special provision for the blind, and there were many of them in those parts. R3847:6

Thou son of David -- "The Lord shall give him the throne of his father, David." (Luke 1:32) C257

The long-promised King of David's line, the Messiah. PD65/77; C257; R3847:6; SM210:2

Luke 18:39

Rebuked him -- When the spiritually blind cry for help, there are sure to be some, even amongst the Lord's friends, to rebuke them instead of to encourage. R2730:4

Hold his peace -- Intimating that the great Teacher should not be interrupted by a wayside beggar. R3847:6

The thought is suggested to such that there are many more worthy than themselves to have the Master's attention, that they are too insignificant, too sinful for him to recognize. R3848:3

So much the more -- The persistency which belongs to true faith. R3848:1

Luke 18:40

To be brought -- He did not shout for him to come, but commanded, "Let him be brought." R3847:6

Giving those about him an opportunity to share in the work of blessing. R2729:3

Luke 18:41

What wilt thou -- Many today, when asked this question, request riches, honors of men or temporal blessings of some sort. R3848:4

Luke 18:42

Thy faith hath saved thee -- He was of a sincere heart, and was persistent. R3848:1

Luke 18:43

Received his sight -- There were many blind men throughout Palestine, yet only comparatively few received such a blessing; undoubtedly because few had the requisite faith. R3848:1

Illustrating some at the present time who are brought to the Lord and graciously receive the opening of the eyes of their understanding. R3848:3
Such do receive enlightenment, and enlightenment by which they can see Him who is the Way, the Truth and the Life. R3848:4

Only the great Physician is able to open the eyes of the understanding. R2730:4

Glorifying God -- An evidence that he was of sincere heart. R3848:1

All the people -- So today, when one comes to a knowledge of the divine character and plan, all who are in accord with the Lord are not only ready to assist them to the Lord, but ready also to join in praise on their behalf. R3848:5

Luke 19

Luke 19:2

There was a man -- Several observations in this narrative claim our special attention: (1) the desire and earnest effort of the publican to learn of Jesus; (2) the courage and generous kindness of the Lord in running against the popular current of public sentiment to bless an outcast from the public favor; (3) the proper attitude of heart in coming to Jesus, as illustrated in the publican; and (4) the reward of obedient faith. R1783:2

Zacchaeus -- His name in the Hebrew comes from a root signifying pure, and the inference is not unreasonable that his ancestors had been noble and holy people. R2730:6

Apparently a prominent and wealthy citizen. R3848:5

Not a Pharisee. He did not profess holiness of life. He was one of those condemned and ostracized by the Pharisees. R5464:4

The chief -- Probably employing under-collectors to assist him in his contract. R2730:3

A prominent one amongst them, and rich. R3848:6

The publicans -- He had accepted a minor office under the Roman government; he was a tax collector for the Romans, a publican. On this account he was despised, and declared to be disloyal to Judaism. R5464:5, 3848:6, 2730:2, 1783:3

A disreputable class amongst their own people, esteemed as financially immoral, and unworthy of the confidence and honor of faithful Jews. R2730:3
To be a publican came to signify an irreligious, unpatriotic, unscrupulous character. R3848:6

And he was rich -- Some of his wealth having, no doubt, been dishonestly acquired. R3848:6

Luke 19:3

Sought to see Jesus -- Evidently it was not a lukewarm curiosity. R1783:3
Probably he had qualms of conscience respecting his business and business methods, and a longing for peace with God. R2730:3

Probably he had heard that, unlike the Pharisees, this great Teacher did not spurn publicans and sinners, but, on the contrary, treated them kindly. R2730:3

It is a hopeful sign when we see any desiring to have clearer views of the Lord or his Word or his plan. R3849:1

For the press -- There was a throng at this season, going up to the Passover, and so notable a person as Jesus would always be an attraction. R2730:3

Little of stature -- Though one may feel himself sadly short of the stature of a man in Christ, if he has in his heart a longing desire for righteousness and to behold the Lord's face, he will find opportunity to do so. R2731:4

Ran before -- We admire the courage of this little rich man, ordinarily probably dignified enough in his bearing, but now running along like a boy and climbing the tree. R2730:6

Climbed up -- And sat on one of its branches over the road. R3849:1

Luke 19:5

When Jesus came -- Possibly by that power of knowledge which is beyond our comprehension, or possibly by reason of hearing the crowd jeer and laugh at the little rich publican in his lugubrious position. R2730:6

And said unto him -- So he would have his followers "mind not the high things"--popular ideas, methods, etc.--"but condescend to men of low estate"--the despised, the poor and the unpopular. (Rom. 12:16) R1783:5, 1104:3*

Is your former pride crucified, so that you would not be ashamed to be seen with that coarse, uncouth neighbor, or to be called her friend, if thereby you can feed her with the bread of life? R1104:3*

Today I must -- And the disciples also, we may presume. R2730:6

So great an honor as this Zacchaeus had not dreamed of, and the multitude of Jews were likewise surprised. R2730:6

We have here evidences of the Lord's knowledge of what is in man, that he reads the heart and makes no mistakes. R3849:2

We find today some backsliders, living in a measure of sin, in business which they admit is unjust. We are not to pass them by with the Gospel message if any such manifest an interest, but are to seek to assist them.

R2731:4

Abide at thy house -- Perhaps in part to give the Pharisees a lesson, as well as to provide for his own entertainment. R2730:6

Our Lord showed courage and generous kindness by thus running against popular public sentiment. R1783:2

A sinner -- Being cast off from the sympathies and friendship of the Jews in general, publicans were naturally less influenced by their prejudices and hence more ready to receive the truth. R1783:3

Zacchaeus stood -- In the presence of his own family, in the presence of Jesus and his disciples, and probably numerous friends and neighbors.

R2731:1

Nor was he content merely to determine upon reform in his heart. He would seal the matter by a public confession. R2731:1

Evidently the murmuring reached his ears, for forthwith he addressed the Lord in self-defence--as though urging that these charges against him should not hinder the Master from coming to be his guest. R5464:5

Said unto the Lord -- The rich Zacchaeus had been soundly converted. R2735:2

Making a full surrender of his heart, that henceforth he would not only forsake sin and evil customs, but so far as possible would make restitution for wrong doing and injustice. R3849:2

Lord -- His acceptance of Jesus as his Lord, his teacher. R5464:5

Half of my goods -- Not merely a half of his annual income, but a half of all the principle. R3849:4

Our reasonable service should surely be more than the one-tenth of the Jews. The hymn expresses our sentiments: "All my little life I give thee, use it, Lord in ways of thine." R3849:4

To the poor -- Probably to off-set many cases of small injustices which it would be impossible for him to ever correct in detail. R2731:1

Taken any thing -- The methods of collecting the taxes were frequently along the lines of extortion. R3848:3

False accusation -- Publicly acknowledging that he had gained part of his wealth by unjust exactions. R2731:1

I restore -- Not "I have restored fourfold," but "I will restore fourfold." R3849:3

When he did so, the change, the conversion, the transformation of life, must have been appreciable, even by the most unsympathetic of Zacchaeus' neighbors. R2731:4

The intimation is that Zacchaeus was more than ordinarily upright as a publican, otherwise to have restored fourfold would of itself have ruined a large fortune. R3849:3

Many today make a great mistake in not following the course of Zacchaeus in that they continually hold on to something which really belongs to another; and secondly, they do not consecrate more of their wealth to the Lord. R3849:4

Sincere reformation today must be like that of Zacchaeus; it must make some outward manifestation expressive of contrition and of a desire to make reparation to the extent of ability. R2731:5

Fourfold -- Probably this interest was measured by him by the amount of former extortions. R1783:6

The conversion that includes recompense--and that not merely in a skimped manner, but abundantly--four-fold--undoubtedly signifies a true conversion. R2731:4

Zacchaeus consecrated one-half of his possessions to the poor, and out of what remained he would make good fourfold, and still he hoped a reasonable competence would be left. R3849:3 Far exceeding the requirements of the Law. R3849:4

To undo any damage done to others, with large interest. R1783:6

Zacchaeus made a personal (purse-and-all) consecration. R2731:5, 3849:3

Is salvation -- Not in the complete sense. Salvation came to him in the sense that his heart was turned from sin and selfishness toward God and righteousness. R3849:6

Salvation begins to those of the spiritual house when they repent of their sins, come into harmony with the Lord, and seek to walk according to his ways. R2731:2, 5464:6

Two salvations--one savior. R5465:1

A son of Abraham -- In reference to the fact that the gospel was to be preached first to the house of Israel. R1783:6

From the Lord's standpoint, all the sons of Abraham were eligible to discipleship. The thing required was an honest confession of imperfection, a turning from sin, a hearty acceptance of Christ and an endeavor to walk in his steps. R5464:6

All who have the faith of Abraham may be counted in as children of Abraham by becoming related to the divine plan as disciples of Jesus. R5464:6

Implying that the Gospel was to be preached first to the house of Israel.

R1783:6

Now all who have the faith of Abraham may be counted as children of Abraham as disciples of Jesus. R5464:6

Luke 19:10

Son of man -- The implication is that since he had come to save the thing lost, men were unable to save it for themselves, which experience and many scriptures clearly prove. R603:2* The seed of Adam, through Eve; the Son of the Man. E152, 153; R944:1

Is come -- To give a universal blessed opportunity for life. Christ died for all--redeemed all. R2049:3

To seek -- The Lord was seeking to reach the heart of Zacchaeus when he offered to be the guest of one popularly despised and hated. R1784:1

Let us imitate the Master's care in seeking the heart; for the seeking is more than half the work of saving, so far as the will of the individual is concerned. R1784:4

Jesus did seek out a certain class, the meek, who were waiting for the promised salvation. R604:2*

To save -- Reckoning saved. R604:2*

To justify or restore the redeemed race to the perfection and glory and dominion of earth lost in Eden. R1267:2

To understand what is to be saved or recovered, we must first learn what was lost. R1264:3

We do not say that you are saved, but that you will be saved. R604:4*

They are not yet saved. It will be the great work of Christ's Millennial Kingdom to save them. They will be saved by a restitution process. R1264:6

Although we might truly say men are saved when first awakened from death, they are not "saved to the uttermost" (Heb. 7:25) until brought to full perfection of being. R604:6*

Then he purchased them with his own blood, and though not liberated from the prison of death, they may be truly reckoned as saved ever since their ransom was paid, for their raising out of death was from that moment made sure. R603:5*

Men could only be saved by a payment of their penalty which would be the basis of their reconciliation and atonement with God. R604:1*

Christ will do this in such a manner as will do man most good. He will make known to him its advantages and opportunities (bring him to "a knowledge of the truth") while saving him out of Adamic death. (1 Tim. 2:4) R770:3

We see in our Lord the manifestation of the perfection of restitution life, and we see in his sacrifice how he secured that restitution life for all who will have it at his hand. R4155:5

All are to be saved, as all were ransomed. (1Tim. 2:5,6) For all to be thus reached by the knowledge, ability and opportunity of salvation is for all to be saved. Whether they make a good or bad use of God's gift after it has reached them is another matter. R1265:2,4

As all mankind shared by heredity the sentence of death which came upon the first man Adam, so the redemption accomplished by the second Adam shall be co-extensive with the fall. OV291:2

The whole world will have a full opportunity to come to a knowledge of right and wrong, a full opportunity to come to perfection of human life and to attain all that was lost in the fall of man. R4629:5

He beheld mankind as a treasure in a field and bought the whole field that he might develop the treasure. (Matt. 13:44) HG423:4

This salvation from what was lost is a gift from God through Christ Jesus, our Lord. We do not merit it, and could not demand or secure it for ourselves in any way. R1265:4

But though nothing that you have done nor could do could save you from death, that which Christ has done procures your release from it. R604:5* "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved." This is the condition on which we receive the reckoned salvation now, and it will also be the condition on which the world will receive their actual full salvation in the ages to come. (Acts 16:31) R604:5*

There is a special salvation for some, as well as a general salvation for others. Jesus is here speaking of the general salvation of all men.

R603:3* Some are saved by faith in advance. R1264:6

The key to the Gospel of Luke. Matthew presents Christ the king, Mark shows him as the worker, Luke as the philanthropist and John as the manifestation of God. R1046:6*

That which was lost -- Adam lost life. He did not lose heaven, for he never possessed it. He lost earthly life, an Eden home, human perfection. R4941:6

Man, by disobedience, lost the right to eternal life. It was this life-right that Christ came to give back to him. NS3:1

Man did not lose a heavenly, but an earthly paradise. Under the death penalty, he did not lose a spiritual, but a human existence. A177

Man could not lose what he never had. R603:2*

What therefore will be restored in due time will be that which was possessed by Adam in the beginning, and representatively by him for the whole race--the glorious perfection of human nature, pronounced "very good" by God himself. HG131:2

Everlasting life was lost, Eden was lost, human perfection was lost, the image of the divine character was lost. R5464:6; SM48:1, 153:3

Human nature--a fleshly image of the divine--in all its beauty and perfection of mind and body, and a right as such to live forever. R609:3, 603:3*

Let us not get the thought that our Redeemer's death was intended merely to justify Adam to an enfeebled condition. Adam will be awakened in the condition in which he died, but he will be granted the opportunity of standing up again, of resurrection, of full recovery from his fall into sin and imperfection. HG228:6

Including the power with which his Creator endowed him, when he gave him power over every creature, to prevent or destroy such formation as bacteria. R1685:2

The whole world was lost in father Adam because, when he came under the penalty of sin, the impairment of his dying process extended to all his posterity as yet unborn according to the laws of nature. R2395:3

All men are lost until found or recovered. R857:5

Our Lord's mission is for an elect class, but in conjunction with that election, he is to give the opportunity for life everlasting to every man. NS352:5

Even the prodigies of manhood--musical, poetic, mathematical, etc.--cannot give us a correct concept of the perfect man, as he was before sin marred the likeness of God in him. R1683:6

According to the Evolution theory nothing was ever lost, all that we have as a race is gain. According to this theory, therefore, our Redeemer's statement was a falsehood. R2395:2, 866:3; HG492:6; NS427:5, 562:5

Man and all his forfeited rights and possessions. R2454:3; E153, 457

Home, happiness, communion with God, health, life itself. R603:2*

A fleshly image of the divine, in all its beauty and perfection of mind and body, and a right to live. R609:3, 1264:3 19:11

Luke 19:11

And spake -- Addressing those who be alive at his second advent, and speaking as if they were the representatives of His faithful followers throughout the Gospel Age. Changing times and circumstances vary conditions, but the principles enunciated in the Scriptures continue in force and meaning. SM629:2

A parable -- To point out to the disciples, and vaguely to others, that Kingdom glories were yet a considerable distance in the future. R2735:3, 1972:6, 1951:6, 1093:2, 603:5*; HG664:1

Showing that before revealing himself in any manner to the world, he calls first his own servants and reckons with them. R2956:6*

We are not to confound the parable of the pounds with the parable of the talents. They teach totally different lessons. R5492:2, 2764:1, 2736:2; Q536:4

The Parable of the Pounds and the Parable of the Talents, as companion parables, illustrate from different standpoints the responsibilities of the stewardship of God's people. R1972:3

This parable ignores the individual abilities of the servants and shows them each as receiving the same thing and for the same purpose. R2736:2, 1972:6; HG665:2

Jerusalem -- Where shortly he was to be crucified. R5492:2

The kingdom of God -- Telling us clearly that the kingdoms of this world are not the kingdoms of our Lord. R5204:4

The Millennial Reign, which should bless all the families of the earth. R396:6, 3213:4

The Church is the Kingdom now, only in the prospective sense, by faith. R397:4

Immediately appear -- When Jesus stated that he had now come to save the lost (v. 10), they at once concluded that the Kingdom of God should immediately appear. R603:5*

That they would see Jesus assume regal robes, power and authority. R2735:2

Luke 19:12

A certain nobleman -- The Lord was drawing an illustration from Herod's course, who went to Rome to be invested with authority as king. Herod, when he came back, rewarded those who would be faithful to him and punished those who were unfaithful. HG146:6

The Lord referred to himself as the nobleman. R2735:5; CR491:4; HG663:2

Went -- His going away was necessary to the exaltation to the right hand of God--an exaltation which is also greatly to our present as well as our future benefit. R1829:3

He had gone to prepare a place for the Church, and would come again and receive them. (John 14:2,3) B120

A far country -- Heaven. CR491:4; HG663:2

To the central seat of government and receive his commission from Jehovah, the Father, and return. R2735:3; HG663:2

Jesus was the appointee for the Messianic Kingdom of the world; but he would go to heaven itself and there appear in the presence of the heavenly Father, the Overlord or Emperor of the universe. R5492:2

Jesus had talked of the Kingdom, but not until now had he explained that he must die, and must then leave them to go into a far country to receive the Kingdom and to return. E265; R372:1

Evidence that heaven is a place, and not merely a condition. R2075:5

To receive for himself -- One of the Herods went to Rome, seeking an appointment to a kingdom. Some who hated him sent a message to Rome, discrediting him and declaring their preference for another king. Jesus seized this circumstance as an illustration in his own case. R5492:2, 2735:3; HG146:6

A kingdom -- Jesus would be invested by the Father with the ruling authority, and later return to earth and exercise his dominion. R5492:2; CR491:4; HG439:1, 663:2; Q91:4

This is exactly the presentation of the matter given us prophetically in Psa. 2:8. R5492:3

Mentioned in such an unequivocal manner, that none can doubt that the Millennial Reign is referred to. R396:6

Clearly the kingdoms of this world are not the kingdoms of our Lord. HG569:3

Not only was the Kingdom the topic with which the Lord began his public ministry, but it was really the main topic of all his preaching, other topics being mentioned merely in connection with or in explanation of this one subject. A273

And to return -- To take possession of his Kingdom and to share its honors with those faithful to him during his absence. R1951:6

And set up his Kingdom at the second advent. A249, 283; R5386:6

To receive his faithful people as "joint-heirs." (Rom. 8:17) R1908:6

This parable was intended to inform them that a considerable period of time would elapse before the Kingdom would be established. R5492:2

Luke 19:13

His ten servants -- The Revised Version points out that these were only a part of all the nobleman's servants. They would seem to represent the consecrated class who have professed full devotion to the Lord. R2736:1 Chosen as a general number to represent all of the consecrated, but only three of these are mentioned as illustrations of faithfulness and unfaithfulness. R2736:4

The Lord avoids even intimating how many of the whole will prove faithful and how many will fail; and, of these, how many accounted worthy of the Second Death and how many will come, through faithfulness in tribulation, to be honored servants in the Kingdom. (Rev. 7:9-15) R2736:4

Nothing is committed to the masses of the people, and no judgment or reward is made in their case at the return of the Master as King. R5492:3

Delivered them -- Individually, not collectively, as in a commune. R1862:5; D480

As stewards of God we have nothing of our own, nothing with which we may do as we please: for, says the Apostle, "What hast thou that thou didst not receive?" (1 Cor. 4:7) Nothing. R1972:3

Unto them -- Only to his servants did he give the pounds--only his servants had the responsibility of those pounds, and only those servants will be reckoned with or held responsible. R5492:3

Ten pounds -- This parable deals with something that is common to all of the class to whom reference is made. R5492:2

The pound is the same to all. It represents justification. R5492:5; HG665:4; Q536:4

Not the holy Spirit, for all have not the same measure or capacity; not faith, for all cannot exercise it in the same degree. HG665:3

"A measure of the spirit is given to every man [in the true, consecrated Church] to profit withal." (1 Cor. 12:7) It is the same gift to all, the same spirit working amongst all, and the duty of each one is to use this gift of the Lord for its increase. R2736:1

Fitly represents those blessings of divine grace which are common to all God's people--the Word of God, helps to its understanding, the influences of the holy spirit, faith, prayer and communion with God and fellowship with Christ and his people. R1972:6

Worth approximately sixteen dollars each. R5492:2

Special opportunities as a justified person that he would not otherwise have had. R3948:3; CR491:5; Q536:4

The one thing which the Redeemer does for all who become his followers is to justify them. R5492:5, 5387:1,4; Q536:4

"A measure of the Spirit to every man, to profit withal." (1 Cor. 12:7) R2736:1

Occupy -- In old English, signifying "do business with," "use," "traffic with." R1973:1

Take that which my blood has justified and made acceptable, and which you have in sacrifice presented to me and use in my service until I come and reckon with you. HG665:5

To show their loyalty as his servants by the degree of their activity in his interest. R664:2

It is a steward's place to seek and find places where he can dispose of the talents and moneys consecrated to the Lord to the best advantage, as his sanctified judgment, under the guidance of the Lord's Word, may dictate. R855:4

Here is the work of the gospel. The reigning and the gospel are distinct. HG13:4

The duty of the hour is not the uplifting of heathendom--for which work God has specially appointed a coming age and is specially preparing teachers, who will be granted plenary powers for that work. R2490:2

"Moreover, it is required in stewards that a man be found faithful." (1 Cor. 4:2) The entire body of Christ is called, not to indolent, self-complacent ease, but to diligent and enterprising activity; not in the spirit of a hireling, but with the intelligent, loving interest of sons and heirs of God. R2157:5*, 1972:3

Till I come -- Not pointing to a special moment, hour or day, but to the period of his presence (Greek: parousia), during which his "harvest" work will gather and glorify his saints and establish his promised Kingdom. R3652:6

Citizens hated him -- Showing that, during the absence of the Nobleman, the opponents of his rule are in the majority and hold sway. R1093:3

We will not have -- Preferring to be let alone as they are. R1093:3

More or less in love and in league with the darkness of sin. Everyone who opposes righteousness, or who loves and serves unrighteousness, is thereby declaring his opposition to the reign of righteousness. R2735:5

The world will need strong restraints, coercions and stripes during the Millennium to enforce obedience. R4310:5

This man to reign -- The Jews were willing to concede that our Master's teachings were grand in many particulars, but they did not wish to be put under such restraints--they would not have him for their Master, their king, their lawgiver. NS191:5

They esteem him not as a ruler. They prefer to keep the reins of their own hearts and in their own hands. They prefer their plan to his, even as respects the establishment of his Kingdom and the method by which the world shall be blessed. NS191:6

Herein the world differs from the true followers of Jesus, who so desire that Christ shall be their King. NS191:5

Luke 19:15

When he was returned -- We are living in the very time represented--the time when our Lord, invested with the authority of the Father, is about to take to himself his great power and reign. R2736:3

Invested with the majesty, authority and power of a Kingdom. SM52:1

Having received -- This Kingdom was not "set up" at the first advent of Christ. Not until his second advent, will Christ take the Kingdom, the power and glory, and reign Lord of all. A249, 283

Christ is in the Kingdom first, or is inaugurated in the kingly office, before others can share that honor as his cabinet. R82:1*, 60:4*

A rebuke to those who claim that the Kingdom of God was set up at Pentecost or who claim that in some manner the second advent took place 1800 years ago, at the time of Israel's overthrow, about AD 70. R2735:6

The kingdom -- Preparatory to that reign, he is reckoning with his servants now living, with a view to their appointment to a place in the Kingdom he is about to inaugurate. R2736:3

Then he commanded -- The first work of the King on coming into his dominion is not to deal with the public in general, or even with his enemies; but he will first call for his own servants and reckon with them. HG664:5; F419, 663; Q91:4

This makes evident the fact that at first the Kingdom of Christ will not be generally recognized by mankind. HG664:6

The judgment of Babylon, Christendom, social and ecclesiastical, is another sign that the Judge has come, and is reckoning first of all with those to whom as stewards he committed his goods. D599

These servants -- At his return, all these servants will be reckoned with, and the degree of their zeal and efficiency as servants will be manifested by the results; and the rewards given them will be proportionate. R5492:3

To be called -- It is evident that the inspection is a work done in reference to the living, while they are yet mortal, for two reasons: first, the reward follows the inspection, and second, the unfaithful was cast out. R58:5*

As a test of their fidelity of stewardship, to determine what place, if any, should be granted them in his Kingdom. R1973:1, 817:5, 58:5*; Q615:T "We [the Church] must all appear before the tribunal of Christ." (2 Cor. 5:10) F418

That he might know -- A work of examination after he had returned, and before the reward. R155:1*, 82:1*

As to the faithfulness or slothfulness of their stewardship. R817:5
Our business we manage as trustees for the Lord--not to be turned over at death in prosperous condition to children or friends, possibly to their injury, but to be used by the trustee as wisely as he knows how before death; for then his trusteeship ends, and he must render his account. R3148:6

Fortunately for us, the reckoning is not one of an instant, but time is granted to us to make up our account. R2736:4

Luke 19:16

Then came the first -- Reckoning with them as individuals, and not by groups or classes. R1973:1

Gained ten pounds -- Proportionately increased talents, blessings, opportunities and authority over the one who gained five pounds. F725
The right use of the "pound" is to diligently profit by all the means of grace for the spiritual upbuilding of ourselves and others. R1973:1
So such noble characters as St. Peter, St. Paul, St. John and others, sacrificed themselves over and over again in the divine service. R5492:6; HG665:6

Luke 19:17

Said unto him -- In the first resurrection. NS137:1

Thou good servant -- How few of those who recognize their trusteeship are faithful to it, and will be able to render their report with joy. R3148:6

Thou hast been faithful -- He did not say, "Thou hast done great things," but, "Thou hast been faithful over a few things." He knew that they could not do very much, but they had shown their loyalty, their faithfulness, and that is what the Lord desires to see. CR491:5

We may be ever so faithful and have so many difficulties in the way that what we do might seem slight, or we might be able to do much more. Let each do in the sight of the Lord what we believe would be pleasing and acceptable to him. CR345:1

The Lord's method is to advance only him whose zeal and faithfulness and patient perseverance in well-doing has shown itself in little things. F296

Have thou authority -- The Master is now teaching us to rule ourselves that we may know how to rule others; opening our eyes to the weakness of our own flesh, that we may have patience with those over whom we will be given authority. R405:4*, 12:6*

This giving of the dominion to his faithful servants signified their sharing with him in the Kingdom at the time of its establishment at his second coming. HG439:2

The high reward of being joint-heirs with Christ. NS627:2; Q91:4

"He that is faithful in that which is least is faithful also in much."

(Luke 16:10) F296; CR344:6

Over ten cities -- Ruler over what? Some say everything is to be destroyed. Not so. The world will be to rule over, to be brought into harmony with God. HG147:1

These ruling judges would not take personal cognizance of each offender, because there might be many trying to do wrong at the same time. Therefore it will be necessary to have somebody to look out for each of these. Q437:3

These, who have gladly spent themselves zealously in the service of the Lord, are to have the highest rewards. R5492:6

The degrees of exaltation in the Kingdom differ according to the measure of their fruitage here. R1973:4; Q500:4; SM512:1

Greater sacrifices in the present work out "a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory." (2Cor. 4:17) R2736:2

Those who are rich in talents, opportunities and privileges, if faithful, achieve a larger victory and grander reward than those who sacrifice less.

"The saints shall judge the world." (1Cor. 6:2) CR345:4; Q437:2

Luke 19:18

Gained five pounds -- The various means of grace to the heart differ in different individuals, and the consequent fruitfulness also differs.

R1973:2

Luke 19:19

Said likewise -- Perhaps the differences of opportunities are to be understood as implied, because the Lord expressed as hearty approval of the one who gained four pounds as he did of the one who gained nine. R2736:2

Over five cities -- The rewards will not all be alike as respects glory and honor, though all will be glorious and honorable--"as star differeth from star in glory." (1 Cor. 15:41) F419, 725; SM512:1; NS608:5
Even the same means of grace do not profit all to exactly the same extent. Some, for instance, are by nature more studious and thoughtful, or more generous, or grateful. R1973:2 Another illustration of the same thing is also found in the parable of the sower (Matt. 13:8), where the seed in good ground produces fruit in varying quantities--some thirty, some sixty, and some an hundred fold. R1973:2
A less influential place in the Messianic Kingdom. R5492:6, 1973:4
He had been less faithful and the reward was less. R5492:6

Luke 19:20

Another came -- He represented quite a large class of the Lord's servants who are seeking merely to live in a justified condition and are not striving to use the time, influence and opportunity in the service of the Truth. HG666:1

Perhaps he represents a class whose love for the Lord has been greatly marred by reason of the false teaching and "doctrines of devils" which so egregiously misrepresent him. HG666:1

Although he returned it, he had failed to use it. R5386:6

If one fails to use his opportunities and privileges, they will be given to another. Q537:1

Kept laid up -- By neglecting to ponder the precepts and principles of God's Word, to follow the leadings of the holy Spirit, the privilege of prayer and communion with God and cultivating the fellowship and communion of saints. It cannot yield its legitimate increase while thus unused.

Represents a fully consecrated class, that say, I endeavored to maintain my justification, but I did not sacrifice myself. R2736:2, 5492:6

Christian character cannot grow and develop in the neglect of the very means which God has provided for its perfecting. R1973:1,5; CR254:5

Luke 19:21

I feared thee -- The servant had more fear than love, and the fear hindered his usefulness. HG666:1

Fear is not a good motive to obedience. Loving obedience is an expression involving both heart and life. As fear was the cause of unfaithfulness, so love is the cause of faithfulness. R21:5*

In fact he did not have enough zeal to use it. HG666:1

An austere man -- He believed the Lord was unjust because he was unjust himself. R21:5*

"Who through fear of death were all their lifetime subject to bondage." (Heb. 2:15) R5493:3

Luke 19:22

Of thine own mouth -- Since we are in the day of accounting, we understand each one is now giving account. The merciful may expect mercy, the unmerciful may not expect mercy. R4473:2

Because you have prayed, "Thy Kingdom come." (Luke 11:2) C21, 22

Will I judge thee -- What a fearful retribution apparently awaits the professed ministers of God and of Christ, who, instead of using their great opportunities for emancipating the people from the slavery of ignorance, superstition and error, are using them to promote mental bondage. OV389:1

Each one is now giving an account to the Lord. R4473:2

"It is required in stewards, that a man be found faithful." (1 Cor. 4:2)
R2157:4*

Wicked servant -- Still a servant, but a wicked servant. R5493:1

Wicked, not because he had committed murder or robbery; but because, having assumed an obligation by which he was entrusted with certain of the Master's goods not given to others, he failed of his covenant. R2736:3

This class is represented in the foolish virgins, who failed to enter in to the wedding; and so these will fail to become members of the Bride, the Lamb's wife. R5493:1

Representing a class, not merely justified, but sanctified--consecrated fully to the Lord, and made recipients of the holy Spirit, even as the other members of the body. R2736:2

Represents a considerable class who have entered into a covenant with the Lord, but have neglected self-sacrifice. R5493:1

Punished because he was unfaithful: he failed in the obligation he had assumed, becoming unfit for any share in the Kingdom. R5386:6, 2736:2, 3

Had he not professed to be a servant, he would have received no pound and had no responsibility. R5493:1

Luke 19:23

Mine own with usury -- Interest on a business loan is quite proper. F568

Luke 19:24

Take from him -- Not lost, in the worst sense of that word. They will indeed lose the great prize, but because they still remain servants and have a love for righteousness, they will be saved so as by fire; that is, through tribulations. R5493:2

His loss was a heavy one. He failed to enter into the privileges and blessings of the faithful servants. That failure would be punishment enough for him. HG666:2

Give it to him -- If one fails to use his opportunities and privileges, they will be given to another. Q537:1

Which hath -- Hath used. R2496:6

Shall be given -- Following this just principle, the Logos had always proved faithful in all things. "It pleased the Father that in him should all fullness dwell." (Col. 1:18-19) Faithfulness shall have its reward even though this shall mean trials. F64

That hath not -- Hath not used. R2496:6

Even that he hath -- This parable illustrates the differing abilities of God's people, and their duty to make good use of them. R2764:1, 1973:1,2

But those -- Not until first he shall have finished dealing with his own servants at his second coming will the glorious Messiah begin to deal with the world, and especially with his enemies. R5493:3

Mine enemies -- Representing not only the Jews who cried, "Away with him!" but including also all who, having come to a knowledge of Christ and his coming Kingdom, are so out of accord with righteousness that they do not desire the promised Millennial Kingdom. R1973:5

Which would not -- The parable implies four classes: (1) The king's servants; (2) those specially granted the pounds for use in his service; (3) the citizens; (4) the class of the latter opposed to the king and his laws. R2736:5

When mankind is brought back in the Millennial age they will be given the opportunity to decide whether they are enemies of him or not. HG148:3

After the Kingdom has been established some of the citizens, who had misunderstood the King's character, will have the eyes of their understanding opened. Many of them, instead of longer being enemies, will become staunch friends and supporters. R2736:5

Slay them -- Wrath will come upon these, a great "time of trouble, such as was not since there was a nation." (Dan. 12:1) R1973:6

Chastening and correcting all who have sympathy with wrong principles, and who are his enemies, and ultimately to destroy them if they continue in their wrong attitude. HG666:4

Those who are in opposition to the Kingdom of God, and its scepter of righteousness, impartiality and justice, are being gathered to the great slaughter. R817:5; B300

Not literal carnage, but a great triumph of the Word of the Lord over all during the reign of the Millennial Kingdom. SM53:T

He will be doing the greatest good for his enemies in bringing upon them punishments for their wrong course--shame, publicity, contempt. These things will be necessary to arouse them to an appreciation of their true condition and show them their privileges. R5493:5

The Lord smites to heal, and when his Word cuts to the heart the effect is to destroy the enemy. Unless the enemies of the Lord be thus brought into subjection to him, nothing will remain for them but the final extinction.

"Thine arrows shall be sharp in the hearts of the King's enemies; whereby the people shall fall under thee." (Psa. 45:3-5) SM53:T

There surely will be some lost as well as some saved. Such destruction is reasonable, just and merciful. R3083:2,6

The slaying of the enemies represents clearly and distinctly the punishment which the Lord prescribes for the enemies of righteousness, viz., the Second Death. R2736:5

Those who will not have this King to reign over them shall eventually die the Second Death, from which there is no recovery. HG148:3

"His enemies shall lick the dust." (Psa. 72:9) B300

Corresponding with the Revelation picture of the sword of Messiah's mouth which will smite the nations (Rev. 19:15), and the sharp arrows of Messiah in the hearts of his enemies (Psa. 45:5). SM52:1, 53:T; R5493:5,6

The Lord's righteous indignation against evil-doers; but leaving hope of forgiveness for those who will repent and become loyal subjects of the King. R1973:6

The sword of the Lord, the Word of Truth, shall discover the secret springs of their hearts and either slay their enmity ("cut them to the heart" --Acts 7:54) and make them friends, or utterly destroy them in the second death. R5493:5, 2736:6; SM440:1; CR62:4

Ascending up -- After the feast made by Lazarus, Martha and Mary, at which were present some of the Pharisees from Jerusalem. R5230:3

Luke 19:29

Bethphage -- Though a short distance from Jerusalem, nevertheless the city was hid from view by the Mount of Olives. R2746:1

Luke 19:30

Go ye -- On previous occasions, when they sought to make Jesus a king, he withdrew himself. But now he knew his hour was come and hence, instead of hindering, he helped on with the enthusiasm by sending for the ass, etc. NS779:5

Cast their garments -- As marks of honor of the King. R2296:2

Luke 19:36

As he went -- The triumphal entry into Jerusalem, together with its chronological order, prefigured the coming of Christ as king, in the end of this Gospel age, the antitype of the Jewish age, the two being exact parallels in both time and circumstances. R1795:2

In the way -- Forming, as it were, a carpet in the road leading to Jerusalem. NS779:5

Luke 19:37

The whole multitude -- Which had come from Jerusalem to see Jesus because of the awakening of Lazarus. NS779:4

Some thought that now was the moment of Jesus' glorification, and this, they felt sure, meant also their own glorification. R5230:3

Thus selecting its Paschal Lamb on the 10th of Nisan. F461

The Lamb of God offered himself to Israel as a nation, as their Passover Lamb. R2296:6

Began to rejoice -- Their unstable and fickle minds, swayed by their false teachers and unwilling to act upon their convictions in the face of opposition, would only a few days later cry, Crucify him! crucify him! R1795:2

Ours is Palm Sunday in the highest sense of all. How are we receiving the great blessings which betoken the parousia of the Master? NS781:5

Luke 19:38

Blessed be the King -- It is in order for all of God's people who now get awake from the slumber of worldliness to join hearts and voices in a great shout--the shout that the Kingdom is at hand! The shout of Hosanna to the Son of David! NS781:4

Our Lord's previous ministry to Israel had not been as their King, but as John had introduced him, as their Bridegroom and their Teacher. R2296:3

As the King, he is now taking possession of his Kingdom--first, as with the Jews, offering himself to his professed people--but now, as then, finding only a remnant in the nominal mass truly anxious for his Kingdom.

"He is King of kings and Lord of lords." (Rev. 19:16) D17; B238

That the people would receive him as King looked very favorable. R5230:3

The heads of Israel will acknowledge him as King of kings and Lord of lords at his second advent. R2746:2

"Ye shall say, Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord" (Matt. 23:39), the very shout the Pharisees objected to. R2296:6

This exercise of kingly power and authority in the Spring of 33 AD marked a parallel point of time in this harvest for the raising of the sleeping saints in 1878 AD. C233, 234

"Even to day do I declare that I will render double unto thee." (Zech. 9:12) B225

Luke 19:39

Rebuke thy disciples -- God might have avoided sending our Lord in this formal way, knowing in advance that they would reject him, but had he done so, his course would not have been so clear. God's judgment would have been just, but the justice would not have been apparent to his creatures.

R2296:3

Although they could not object to anything which our Lord said or did.

R2746:4

As the chief priests, the clergy, do today against those whose blindness and lameness the Lord has healed. R1795:5

Luke 19:40

Cry out -- In order that the prophecy of Zech. 9:9 might be fulfilled.

B225; R5362:4, 5090:6, 2296:3, 1795:5; NS630:1

How strengthening it is to faith to realize that even the jots and tittles of prophecy must all be fulfilled. NS630:1

Today, while the King of glory has actually come, and while the great majority of his professed living witnesses are dumb, the very stones of the Great Pyramid are crying out in no uncertain tones. C376

And when -- At the time of his triumphal entry. B226

He beheld the city -- Jerusalem, typifying Christendom in the harvest of the Gospel age. R1847:1

Wept over it -- The deep solicitude of a noble heart which grieved for a nation that failed so sadly to realize both its privileges and its degradation, and which therefore must soon receive the fearful visitation of divine wrath. R1846:5

As Paul's tears (Acts 20:37; 2 Cor. 2:4; Phil. 3:18,19), the grief of an unselfish heart yearning over the salvation of others, and dreading lest they should be lost, or lamenting because the Christian profession of the Lord's people was marred and their Christian life hindered by their unholy walk. May he make us like himself in this--strong to bear our own griefs and tender to feel the sorrows and sins of others. R1886:5*

Reminiscent of King David sobbing, "O, my son Absalom, my son, my son Absalom! would God I had died for thee, O Absalom, my son, my son!" (2 Sam. 18:33) R4278:2

If thou hadst known -- From this language it is evident that our Lord did not consider the multitudes who were with him as, in any sense of the word, representing the city and nation. R2746:2

These words of lamentation apply with equal force to Christendom--nominal spiritual Israel. R1847:1

Even thou -- God had greatly favored Israel, but chiefly in that to them were committed the oracles of God--the law and the testimony of God. (Rom. 3:2) R1846:2

The Messiah had been born a Jew, of the lineage of David; his advent was announced by angel messengers; his anointing received divine testimony from heaven, his claims and teachings had received the most marked seal of divine approval, and his personal character and demeanor commanded the most profound respect. R1846:2

In this thy day -- The Lord's earthly ministry was fast nearing its close, as was also the time of Israel's special favor. R1846:1

The things -- Nothing short of the fullest acceptance of Christ and his teachings, and obedience to them. R1847:2

The favor of God was, there and then, taken from fleshly Israel. R2746:5

Unto thy peace -- The peace of God which passeth all the understanding of those who do not possess it, keeps our hearts. (Phil. 4:7) R1847:2

But now -- Henceforth. B226

Hid from thine eyes -- This was their blindness. R599:5

Now, that their "double" is complete, we can see that their blindness is beginning to be turned away. B226

Luke 19:43

The days shall come -- All the elements of strife and discord which shall eventuate in the predicted and unparalleled trouble are in active operation. R1847:4

Thine enemies shall cast -- As soon as God's call and the various siftings of divine providence shall have found the worthy ones, then the plagues shall come upon the residue, the nominal system. R2297:4

Compass thee round -- Cutting off their supplies of food and driving them to all the horrors of famine, when parents actually killed and ate their own children. R1846:6

Luke 19:44

Thou knewest not -- Israel's hope of the glory and honor of their coming king, inspired as it was by the types and prophecies of his greatness and power, caused them to overlook another set of types and prophecies which pointed to a work of suffering and death. A79

Even his immediate followers were sorely perplexed when Jesus died; and sadly they said, "We trusted it had been he which should have redeemed Israel." (Luke 24:21) A79

So far from marshalling that nation in rank and file before him, they were not even aware of the test then made. The second great separation has actually been going on in our midst, and the world and worldly church know nothing of it. R267:6

Not only failed to recognize the time of their visitation, but they also conspired against the Lord to slay him. R1846:3

Their great national sin was the rejection and crucifixion of the anointed Son of God. On the part of the minority, the rulers, the sin was active; on the part of the majority the sin was passive, they weakly failed to express their right of private judgment. R1846:5

They did not know that the time had come for the establishment of the Kingdom; hence they were not alert to their privileges and failed to be in the proper condition of heart to receive the blessings. NS781:2

Not only ignorant of the matter collectively, but they were not in the heart condition to understand or appreciate. NS779:6

His words imply that their ignorance was a mark of carelessness and unworthiness, and of divine disfavor. R2981:4

They were left in ignorance because their hearts were not right. They were not worthy of the truth. R2297:5

Owing to their pride, love of self, having an imposing ceremonial service and love of the applause of men. R591:2*

Consequently, as a nation, they were blinded and cast off from divine favor for a "double," for a period of disfavor equal in length to their previous period of favor, 1845 years. R1713:2

Only a remnant in the close or harvest of each dispensation is prepared to receive and appreciate the truths then due, and therefore to enter into the special privileges and blessings of the dawning dispensation. B26
Although, according to the promises, they were looking for and expecting the Messiah about this time. R1846:2

Although there has always been a right and a wrong side to every question, yet the harvest in the end of the Jewish age brought a new issue and a fresh division along new lines. R3883:2

Their failure to recognize the time of their visitation meant to them a great loss of privilege--that their house must be left desolate, abandoned of the Lord during this Gospel age. R2746:2

Nominal spiritual Israel, at the parallel point of time, the harvest of this age, similarly fails to recognize the time of her visitation. R1847:2; NS781:1

The nominal Christian church, instituted by Jesus, is in a similar condition of unconsciousness regarding the time of her visitation, and for similar reasons. R591:2*

The visitation (presence) of the Lord is as a stone of stumbling and rock of offence to both the houses of Israel (Isa. 8:14; Heb. 3:5,6) The fleshly house failed to recognize his presence in the flesh; the spiritual house refuses to acknowledge his presence in a spiritual body. R505:5*

If Christendom today would awake and realize the true meaning of present conditions, it would mean a great change to the comparatively few who have made full consecration to the Lord--but others would not be able to receive the lesson: for it is written, "None of the wicked shall understand." SM700:1

They recognized not the opportunities and privileges that were theirs. NS42:5

The tests of this "harvest" must be like those of the Jewish or typical "harvest." One of them is the cross, another is the presence of Christ, another is humility, another is love. R3437:4; B237

As Israel recognized not Jesus as the Messiah and that his work was a harvest work, so likewise Christian people in general today are unaware that we are living in the second presence of the Messiah and that a similar harvesting work is now in progress. R3883:2

They are blinded by the false theory that the Lord's commission is that the church should convert the world into a kingdom of God. R2981:5

The blindest are the leaders of the blind, like their Jewish types. B237
"The light shined in the darkness, and the darkness comprehended it not."
(John 1:5) Consequently the glory of the Lord was not then seen upon Israel. R2036:1

"Ye can discern the face of the sky; but cannot ye discern the signs of the times." (Matt. 16:3) R2981:4

The worldly are really in a better condition to discern the signs of the times than many prejudiced nominal Christians. R2981:5

Indifference to time prophecies is clear evidence of lukewarmness; the majority of God's professed children were ignorant of Christ's presence at both advents. B26, 237

They did not realize they were in the harvest, nor that they were being specially favored of God. CR175:2

They did not appreciate the Greater than Solomon, nor inquire for the terms of membership in the Kingdom. R5722:5

They did not discern the signs of the times; their ignorance was a mark of carelessness, unworthiness and divine disfavor. R2981:4

Only a few were able to understand the character of the times in which they were living, and the changes in progress. R5454:6

Those who knew not were burned as "chaff" in the great trouble which overthrew their nation. R5443:2

This did not refer to the multitudes who were with him. R2746:2

Our Lord's language indicates that a time will come when Israel shall gladly acknowledge him as King. R2746:2

The time -- There time of visitation was, in a sense, the whole forty years to the destruction of the nation, but there had been the time of trial first, for three and a half years. R176:6

Of their visitation -- If, during the three and a half years of their trial, they had been in a condition to receive Jesus, the visitation following would have been of blessing, but unready and rejecting him, it became a visitation of wrath. R176:6

As a nation they were blinded and failed to enter into the rest of faith then offered them. R5388:5, 2036:1, 1713:2

Meant a great loss of privilege, being abandoned during this Gospel age, and the elect gathered from the Gentiles instead. R2746:2

Had they accepted their privileges, the Church would have been completed in Jesus' day. R5722:5

This time was, in a sense, of 40 years' duration to the destruction of the nation. Had they accepted Jesus in the first three and one-half years, the visitation would have been of blessing instead of wrath. R176:6; SM185:2

So here, during the first three and one-half years of harvest, from 1874 to 1878, the opportunity was given to the Gospel church to receive the presence of Christ, but they stumbled similarly and are given over to a visitation of wrath. R177:1

Into the temple -- Not to Herod's palace, to demand possession of it; nor to Pilate's palace, to demand recognition of him; but, as the representative of Jehovah, he went appropriately to the Father's house or palace, to the Temple. R2746:3

Typifying the cleansing of the consecrated Temple class since 1878, in which every selfish, carnal thought, and all worldliness, must be cast out, that the Temple may be clean, God's dwelling place. B239

Cast out them -- Whether because of the dignity of our Lord's person and presence, or whether because of the large multitude, no attempt was made to resist him. R2296:5

As a typical act, indicates that in the end of this age judgment begins with the professed house of God. (1 Pet. 4:17) R1795:5

The consecrated or temple class in the nominal church stands related to the nominal church, as a whole, as the literal temple stood related to the holy city Jerusalem, as a whole. B239

The temple class, the little flock, must be purged, cleansed, before the Temple, composed of living stones, shall be ready to be filled with the glory of God, and to become the place of prayer for all nations. R2297:4
Every selfish, carnal thought must be cast out, that the temple may be clean, the dwelling place of God's holy Spirit. B239 Backed by the authority which belonged to any Jew in any station of life. R3851:4
Them that sold -- The antitypical cleansing now in progress mainly affects those who make merchandise of holy things. R3851:6, 2746:6

Luke 19:46

A den of thieves -- Typifying Evolutionists and other professedly Christian ministers who rob God and receive money of the people under false pretenses. R3852:1

Luke 19:47

The Truth is being proclaimed so often to the offense of the scribes and Pharisees of today. R2746:6, 2947:3, 1035:5, 325:1
Parallel to present-day sectarians assassinating the character of one opposing their theories and traditions. R2434:1

Luke 19:48

Were very attentive -- But the more his fame spread abroad and the people were influenced by his teaching, the more the envy and opposition of the scribes and Pharisees increased and intensified into a settled murderous hatred. R1982:3

Luke 20

Then -- On the last day of his public ministry. R1982:2

Parable -- Which the scribes and Pharisees perceived to be against them, and which the more angered them. R1982:3, 1795:3

So aptly did it represent their state of heart that its only effect was to arouse them to renewed energy to fulfill the final prediction of the parable (verse 15). R1795:6

The foundation of this parable is the very similar language of the prophecy of Isa. 5:1-7. R1795:3

A certain man -- Representing God. R1982:3

A vineyard -- Representing the Jewish nation as described under the same figure in Isa. 5:1-7. R1982:3, 1795:3

See also Psa. 80:14, 15; Jer. 2:21. R1795:3

To husbandmen -- The divinely constituted religious leaders of the nation. R1982:3

Whose duty it was to instruct and lead in the right ways of the Lord, which they were miserably failing to do. R1795:6

Went into a far country -- Left the vineyard thus prepared and equipped with every advantage to insure an abundant harvest, which he had a right to expect at the appointed harvest time, in which those addressed were then living. R1795:6

A long time -- These husbandmen had this stewardship from the time of the exodus down to the time of the coming of Messiah, a period of nearly nineteen centuries. R1982:3

At the season -- At such times as it was proper to expect some fruit. R1796:1

At various seasons during the age, God specially looked for fruits of righteousness. R1982:5

A servant -- His faithful prophets, who were lightly esteemed and illy treated. R1982:5

A prophet or teacher. R1796:1

That they should -- The husbandmen, through their influence; for the rulers in Israel, because of their influence and power, were held specially responsible for the course of the nation, although this did not release the individuals from their responsibilities. R1796:1

The fruit -- Gratitude, love, obedience, meekness and readiness of mind and heart in the end of the age to follow the further leading into the new paths of the greener pastures of the Gospel dispensation. R1795:6

Beat him -- See Jer. 37:13-21; 1 Kings 18:13; 22:24-27; 2 Kings 6:31; 2 Chron. 24:20,21; 36:16; Acts 7:52; Heb. 11:35-38. R1796:1

Luke 20:13

My beloved son -- The Lord Jesus, who thus spake to them. R1796:1

They will reverence him -- Though God knew it would be otherwise, it is so expressed to show the reasonableness of such expectation. R1796:1

The husbandmen -- The chief priests and rulers. R1796:1

Among themselves -- They plotted privately and deceitfully. R1796:1

This is the heir -- This man claims to be the king, the Messiah of the Jews. R1796:1

May be ours -- Their desire to retain their prestige and power was the very object of the leaders in Israel in persecuting and finally crucifying the Lord. R1796:2

Luke 20:15

And killed him -- Crucified the Lord. R1796:2, 4678:5, 1982:6
Jesus foretold his own violent death. R5505:3
Similarly today, some high in nominal spiritual Israel "murder" the Lord's people, beheading them by ostracism and "arrows, even bitter words." (Psa. 64:3) R4678:6

Luke 20:16

Destroy -- Cast those wicked husbandmen out of their offices. R1796:4
Jesus knew that the sin of the Jews would bring a penalty. R5577:5
These husbandmen -- As such. They lost their prestige, power, honor and office; and many of them doubtless perished literally in the destruction of Jerusalem. R1982:6
God's judgments came upon the Jewish nation, and it was entirely overthrown in 70 AD. R5505:4
Unto others -- Superseded by the more worthy apostles and teachers of the gospel of Christ. R1982:3
Give his favor to others than the Jewish nations; viz., the Gentiles. R1796:4

Luke 20:17

And said -- Not wishing to leave them with the idea that their triumph would be lasting. R1796:4
The stone -- The stone (Dan. 2:45) is symbolic of a supernatural power, "not made with hands," heavenly, divine; symbolic of Messiah and his Kingdom. R3359:4*
The builders rejected -- But this would not hinder its exaltation in God's due time. R1982:6
"And he shall be for a stone of stumbling and for a rock of offence to both the houses of Israel." (Isa. 8:14) R1983:1
Is become -- The prophecy of his own final triumph, even though they should kill him. R1982:6
The head of the corner -- The building of God being referred to as a pyramid, of which the topstone is the chief corner stone. (Psa. 118:22; Zech. 4:7) R1982:6

Luke 20:18

Shall be broken -- In stumbling over Christ at his first advent, the Jewish nation was indeed broken to pieces. R1982:6

The result of the stumbling of the nominal gospel church over this stone will be the same as in the case of the Jewish church: they will be broken, the whole institution will be disintegrated. R1983:4

"He shall be for a stone of stumbling and for a rock of offense to both the houses of Israel." (Isa. 8:14) R5817:1, 1983:1

It will grind him -- When the Kingdom is established in glory and power, upon whomsoever this stone falls it will grind him to powder: it will utterly destroy him. R1983:4

Luke 20:19

Sought to lay hands -- Showing the wickedness of their hearts in strong contrast with that beauty of holiness which never more than on this occasion appeared more lovely. R1796:4

They perceived -- That the great Teacher had read their hearts and was aware of their dark designs. R1982:6

Luke 20:20

Hold of his words -- By inducing him to openly endorse the secret teachings of the Pharisees that the Jews, as the people of God, ought not to pay taxes to other rulers. R3852:6, 3853:1

Luke 20:22

Is it lawful -- According to the Law of Moses. R3853:2

Luke 20:23

Why tempt ye me? -- "Why do you try to entrap me?"--It was utter folly for imperfect men to seek to entrap the perfect One. R3853:2, 104:2

Luke 20:25

Which be Caesar's -- "Tribute to who tribute is due." (Rom. 13:7) A266
The affairs of the world may be safely left with the world, under the Lord's supervision. R3853:3

When Caesar's laws conflict with the divine requirements, Christians are left no alternatives. R5929:2

Which be God's -- Which we presented to him in consecration. R855:5
A lesson to the Lord's people to keep religious affairs separate and distinct from worldly politics. R2756:3

Luke 20:26

Hold of his words -- "Grace is poured into thy lips." (Psa. 45:2) "All bare him witness and wondered at the gracious words that proceeded out of his mouth." (Luke 4:22 "The words that I speak unto you, they are spirit and they are life." (John 6:63) "Never man spake like this man." (John 7:46) R1937:2

They marvelled -- So wise, just and true were the Lord's words. R1937:3

The Sadducees -- Utterly lacking in any faith respecting a future life--believing that death ended all existence, forever. R3854:1, 915:3

Any resurrection -- Greek, anastasis, is without the Greek article, and hence shows no emphasis--indicates no special peculiarity. R1512:1

They asked him -- Trying to entrap him with one of their stock questions. Q588:2

Luke 20:33

In the resurrection -- The Scriptures disclose that the world's resurrection (Greek, anastasis, raising up) will be a gradual work covering a period of a thousand years, and not a momentary work as the Sadducees and others supposed. R915:3

Showing that the word anastasis does not always mean raised to spiritual life. R92:6

The resurrection (lifting to perfection) of the Gospel Church will be an instantaneous or momentary work, but the world's resurrection will keep pace with their obedience under their trial. R915:3

They did not ask, To which will she be wife in heaven or purgatory or eternal torture, for neither Jesus nor the Jews held any such teaching. Q588:2

Whose wife -- They were trying to prove that if a resurrection should take place, it would produce an endless tangle by reason of mixed and confused social arrangements. R915:3

Luke 20:34

Jesus answering -- Our Lord avoided giving them a direct reply, perhaps because it would have required a long discourse for which they were unready, perhaps because the time for such information was not yet due. R1509:6

Marry -- Marriage means merely the union of male and female, recognizing each other as one. R4914:2

Shall be -- Showing that these referred to were not yet accounted worthy; that some future trial must be undergone by them which would demonstrate their worthiness to attain the resurrection. R915:6 In death no progress can be made in attaining or being counted worthy. Thus Jesus' words teach a future trial for mankind in which the woman and seven husbands who were already dead, and who were not believers in Christ, may have a part. R915:6

Accounted worthy -- It is an open question as yet whether the woman and the seven husbands will be accounted worthy of that age, worthy of resurrection--of being raised up again to the perfection lost in Adam, and entering the everlasting state. The worthiness or unworthiness of each will be demonstrated by their conduct when awakened from death. R1107:1,2 The trial of the Millennial age will be so complete and the lessons of obedience so well impressed upon men that only the "worthy" will attain to the condition of perfection. R916:1

Extremely few, a "Little Flock," are counted worthy to attain that world and the "better" resurrection in advance of the Millennium. The great mass of mankind will come forth unto a "resurrection by judgment." It will remain for them to prove themselves worthy of perfect life. F712

No doubt, referring to the spiritual resurrection. R1510:1

The resurrection to spiritual conditions is in Scripture designated as special, the first resurrection. It is also frequently designated, as here, by the article the (very noticeable in the Greek text, but less so in our English translations). R277:3, 205:6, 194:6

We at one time held the view that the resurrection here referred to was the First Resurrection. But, if so, the Greek word translated resurrection should be emphatic. On critical examination we find that anastasis, as here used, is not specially emphasized. R915:2

Leaving the question of human conditions during the period of "resurrection by judgment" for amplification under other Scriptures.

R4411:3

In this statement our Lord omits any reference to the masses of the world and their opportunities for restitution to human perfection through a judgment-resurrection, a resurrection depending upon their cooperation.

R1510:1

As we examine the context it is evident that not the resurrected condition of the Church is discussed, but the resurrected condition of the world.

R915:3

We cannot understand our Lord's words to apply to the saints who will share in the first resurrection, for the inquiry and conversations were regarding another class, and by another class. R1107:1

Only those willfully opposed to righteousness when clearly seen, will be condemned as unworthy of life; and such as then die, will die the second death. R1107:4

To obtain -- Attain. R915:2

Gradually. Q588:3

To attain to the resurrection seems to mean progressing until they reach the full resurrection. Q462:3

Those who will walk on the highway of holiness must "go up thereon." (Isa. 35:9) F713

That world -- Age. R915:5

Our Lord's answer steps right over the Millennial age or period of attaining perfection (resurrection). R915:5

He does not explain how it will be during the Millennial age, while the race is being awakened, but points his words to "that age" of perfection which will follow the Millennium of testing. 1107:1

All who attain that age will be worthy, because all not counted worthy, the great Judge will cut off, destroy from amongst the people. R916:2

The resurrection -- Turning the subject away from the suppositionary case suggested by the Sadducees, our Lord took occasion to drop a word of instruction respecting the first or chief resurrection--the resurrection of the blessed and holy. (Rev. 20:6) R1509:6

Here, and in verses 33 and 36, anastasis has the Greek article, showing emphasis and showing the first or special resurrection. The emphasis, when used with anastasis always marks the statement as relating to the chief or spiritual resurrection. R1512:2

From the dead -- Out from dead ones. The emphasis on "resurrection" and "dead" here, intensified by the expression "out from dead ones," leaves no room for doubt that the Lord referred to the first resurrection. R1510:1

Neither marry -- Marriage is an arrangement that God instituted for the very special purpose that a race might be produced, and with the human family only. R4914:2, 916:2; OV383:2

When the Church shall be changed, all the peculiarities of male and female will be obliterated. Mankind will be sexless when perfection shall have been reached. R4914:3

When the great plan of God shall be completed by bringing restitution to the world, this restitution will bring humanity to that condition in which Adam was previous to the separation of the woman from him. R5900:1

When, by the end of the Millennium, the world shall have come to the place where Adam was originally, then all necessity for the male and female condition for the propagation of the race shall cease, and they will be like unto the angels in that respect. Q203:1

As Adam originally possessed all the qualities of character, masculine and feminine, so humanity, when fully restore to the image and likeness of God, will re-attain perfection of individuality. Sex divisions will then be no more. PD9/16

Thus man will receive again that which was taken from him originally, represented by the rib. (Gen. 2:21) R4914:5

God chose to make the man perfect in himself at "first," and then to sex him into twain for an intimation and illustration of what the race shall be when God's plans concerning it are fulfilled. R916:3

In producing a race from one, who in trial would represent all, one also might redeem all. Thus God prevented the creation of a companion and made proper the division of the one into two. R916:3

The figure of husband and wife is used frequently to represent the union between the Lord and the Church, but in no case to represent anything akin to motherhood on the part of the Church. On the contrary, the figure generally used in reference to the period beyond our union represent the twain as one--Head and Body. R916:6

Given in marriage -- Isa. 65:20,23 seems to indicate that child-bearing will continue for some time, at least, into the Millennial age, if not up to within one hundred years or thereabouts of its close. R4411:2

As to what will take place during the Millennium, I could only give you a guess, because there is no Scripture on the subject. My guess would be that this matter [marrying] would gradually be getting less and less. Q462:3

Luke 20:36

Neither can -- The Common Version says, they are like angels, neither can they die any more, and that is the way I think it is intended to be read and understood. Q202:5

We prefer will, or may, rather than can as the translation of the Greek word dunamis, because it gives the thought of the text more clearly. R916:3

Applicable both to the Church and to the world. Applicable to the Church first, because it is dealt with first. Q202:5

Neither will men die any more, for they will be perfect. Q203:1

When we are spirit beings we will not die any more. If we have immortality we cannot die any more. And we would be like angels, for the angels do not marry and the Little Flock, in the resurrection will not be male or female. Q203:T

The resurrection to the immortal condition; "on such" the second death hath no power (Rev. 20:6). All the balance of mankind are to be raised, but "every man in his own order." R194:6, 170:2*, 145:3*

Equal unto the angels -- Sexless. Q588:3

In regard to sex and freedom from death. R916:4

The word "equal" here is a poor translation. The sense is "like." See Diaglott and Young's Translation. R916:1

While men and angels are of different natures, they will be alike in some respects. R916:1

There is no arrangement in God's plan to have any on the spirit plane either male or female. R4914:2

Angels are surely meet companions for each other, yet not male and female. R916:3

Angels are probably without sex, neither male nor female. Man, as originally created in God's image, was probably the same in that regard, like unto the angels. R916:2

Males and females will all lose their distinctive features, and become again as Adam was in the beginning--each complete in himself--when the earth shall be filled with people. God does not design to over-fill the earth, simply to fill it. R5900:1, 5141:1, 916:2

At the close of the Millennial age, all having been gradually perfected, each sex will, in their development, have taken on more of the qualities of the other. R4914:3

The division of Adam into two parts, male and female, left the headship with the male, but deprived him of some of his sympathetic qualities. His wife, predominating in the sympathetic tendencies, had in her perfection less of the masculine and aggressive traits. R5141:2

Man never was an angel and never was intended to be an angel. Man is of the earth, earthy. R4914:2

Children of God -- Only those who bear his image and are in harmony with him does he recognize as his children. Others, impure and disobedient, who bear the image of Satan, are called "children of wrath," "children of the devil," etc. R916:4

Angels are called "sons of God," and Adam in his first estate (sinless) is called a "son of God." R916:4

He will not recognize them as children until the "worthy" ones have been perfected (raised up to perfection) in the end of that age. R916:5

To be recognized as God's child is to be recognized as one entitled to the "liberty of the sons of God"--freedom from pain, death, etc. R916:5

Of -- By. R915:5

The dead are raised -- Are to be raised. E352; R2198:1

God of Abraham -- The God who had made promises to these would surely fulfill them; implying that from the divine standpoint they were not extinct, not annihilated. R2805:4

In saying, "I am the God of Abraham," etc., he speaks not only of things past as still present, but also of things to come as if already come to pass. (Rom. 4:17) R1881:3; PD32/44; Q211:4

Their God in a prophetic sense, in view of what he intended to do for them. R4657:1

Not given as proof that the patriarchs were in heaven or alive somewhere, but a proof that the dead would rise. R5207:2, 3854:4; CR374:2

Our Lord was combatting the theory of the Sadducees that there will be no resurrection. R5108:2, 5207:2, 3854:4; E352; CR374:2

Luke 20:38

Not a God of the dead -- The extinct, for whom no future is designed.

R2198:1

If there were no resurrection, God could not have spoken of them as he did. But this does not prove that the patriarchs were in heaven at the time, for Jesus distinctly tells us that at the time in which he was speaking no man had ever ascended into heaven (John 3:13). R5207:2, 2805:5
If Abraham, Isaac and Jacob were dead in the sense that the beast is dead, God would never have spoken of them in this manner. (Exod. 3:6) R5108:3, 4160:5, 1881:3

Of the living -- Not that Abraham, Isaac and Jacob were not dead, but that there would be a resurrection for them. R2805:5

Because of this, our Lord spoke of death as a sleep, in view of the awakening in the morning of the resurrection. R1631:6

God purposes their awakening, and speaks of the present condition of Adamic death as merely a suspension of life, and not as annihilation, extermination, extinction. R5041:4

Not the Ancient Worthies alone, but the rest of the world live unto God in the same sense, although they were not counted acceptable to him. R5073:2

All live unto him -- In Christ, who ransoms and justifies all. R666:6

In view of the new source of life which will in due time reach and restore all. R875:3*

God's plan for a resurrection is fixed. Those whom men call "dead" "all live unto Him"--from God's standpoint they only "sleep," and are not destroyed. E352; R5611:5; HG333:5; PD32/44

Luke 20:39

Thou hast well said -- As a result of this lesson, the Jews thereafter spoke of their dead as "asleep" and "waiting for the morning" to be "awakened." R2198:1

Luke 20:40

Durst not ask -- Because it did them more harm than good. R5230:3

The Lord -- Jehovah. E129; R1411:1, 379:5

Said unto my Lord -- Greek, adon, master, ruler, the resurrected Christ. E49, 129; R1411:1, 379:5

On my right hand -- In the position of favor and power. A92

Luke 20:46

Beware of the scribes -- He needed not that any man should testify of them, for he knew what was in them. R1696:4

Luke 20:47

Devour widows' houses -- By bidding them in at forced sale. R3316:2
Take advantage of widows to accumulate property for themselves. R5389:3, 5338:6, 4795:2
You do not "love thy neighbor as thyself" (Lev. 19:18), to assist the poor, the widow and the fatherless. R4795:2
Violating God's law of justice, love and mercy. R5338:6
Jesus denounced such religion and mammon-worship as hypocrisy. R3047:4

Luke 21

Luke 21:2

Poor widow -- Giving is a privilege which is within the reach of the very poorest of the Lord's people. R5927:4
No saint has so little that he has nothing to spend for him who did so much for us. The less we have, proportionately greater is the sacrifice when we give. R548:6

Two mites -- If we cannot give much, let us not deliberately conclude that we cannot give anything. R450:1*

The two mites principle applies to influence and time as well as to money. R548:6

The difficulty with some is in trying to do too much, more than their ability to do, and in overlooking the little things that are within their ability. R1334:5

The smallest copper coin in circulation, worth about one-eighth of a cent. R5522:4

It is not the great things that any of us do or attempt, which the Lord highly esteems. R5522:5

The true principle of sacrifice seeks to offer not the poorest, but the choicest to the Lord. R548:6

Luke 21:3

Cast in more -- A giver on the very highest plane--after his own heart. F343

Our Lord esteems gifts not according to the amount given, but chiefly according to the spirit which prompts the gift. R5927:3, 450:1*

The less we have, proportionately greater is the sacrifice when we give.
R548:6

Luke 21:4

All the living -- In her way, she was doing the same that our Lord himself was doing--giving, not merely a living, but laying down life itself. F343

Jesus did not caution the poor widow that she had done more than her duty.
F343, 344

Luke 21:6

Not be left -- When uttered, this seemed most improbable. The city and country were more prosperous than for a long time. The temple, after 46 years of building, had just been completed and was truly magnificent. Yet, within forty years, it was in awful ruin. R1983:5

Luke 21:7

They asked -- In studying this prophecy it is very necessary to keep in memory the questions to which it is the inspired answer. D565

These things -- The destruction of the Temple, etc. D564; R1983:2

Be not deceived -- He wished them to understand that they must not expect immediately the honors and glories of the Kingdom. D563

I am Christ -- Gamaliel mentions two of these false Christs in his speech referred to in Acts 5:36,37; and history tells us of several others who deceived quite a few Jews; notably, Sabbathai Levi of Smyrna, AD 1648. D565

Altogether, there have probably been fifty or more false Christs, male and female; but none of these, nor all of them together, can be said to have deceived many. D566

Whoever claims headship of the Church, as Pope, Czar, Synod, and especially the "Image of the Beast." (Rev. 13:15) D565, 580, 581

Luke 21:9

Ye shall hear -- "A rumor shall come in one year, and after that in another [a second] year shall come a rumor." (Jer. 51:46) Applying to the same time period as Luke 21:8,9. R5969:2*

Wars and commotions -- Thus briefly did our Lord summarize secular history and teach the disciples not to expect very soon his second coming and glorious Kingdom. D566

Not by and by -- These would not be an indication that the end of the age was near. HG397:6

Luke 21:11

Great earthquakes -- The term earthquake is used to symbolically represent revolution, the great shaking of the present institutions which will overthrow everything that is not of the Lord's establishment and approval. HG399:4

Social upheavals are pictured under the symbolism of earthquakes, the mountains being carried into the sea, etc., and similarly uprisings of the social elements in anarchy are pictured as tidal waves engulfing the mountains, the governments. HG401:1

We speak of literal earthquakes because, in the divine order, there seems to be a harmony between the literal and the figurative. The literal earthquakes have their part, too, in the great program. HG399:4

Famines and earthquakes have in all ages given evidence that not only man, but his home, the earth, is under the curse. R879:1

We may be sure that great changes must take place in the climates and soils of the earth before it will be prepared, as was the garden of Eden, to be a fit home for perfect man. R879:4

A New England professor delivered an opinion that a great earthquake would shatter the huge cap of ice which for centuries has covered the south pole. He predicted that this would so adjust and equalize the weight of the waters of the earth that the axis of the earth's rotation would be corrected. HG400:4

In connection with the quakings of society, the overturning of kingdoms (symbolic mountains), we may expect wars, pestilences, earthquakes and famines, not as heretofore, but to an extent never before known. R879:2

It is far from our thought that an earthquake is of itself a sign of the end of the age. We remember that history tells us of various earthquakes in the past, so that these alone would prove little respecting the time in which we are living. HG398:1

Famines -- We cannot pray our Father to grant abundant harvests, send rains, prevent famines, droughts, wars and pestilences. God will permit these things until the reign of Christ is inaugurated. R798:4

Luke 21:12

Before all these -- It certainly was not before a great earthquake that the Church began to suffer persecution. R879:2

Persecute you -- Loyalty to Christ will bring persecution and misunderstanding. R5806:3; D564

"All that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution." (2 Tim. 3:12) D567

Luke 21:14

Not to meditate before -- Does not imply that ministers of Christ should neglect studying their subject. R5391:4

Luke 21:15

Give you -- Choosing, as at the first advent, from among the laity, the common people, his mouthpieces. R2599:1

The Lord's faithful followers. R5391:4

In both advents, his chosen mouthpieces from among "the common people."

(Mark 12:37) R2599:1

The Truth is his, and you are his--his ambassadors. R698:3

A mouth -- Let the spirit of the glorious truths you now see so fill your heart that out of its fullness your mouths may speak to the Lord's praise, and to the enlightenment and profit of your opposers as well as the hearers. R698:2

Wisdom -- They would have wisdom superior to that which was naturally theirs. R5391:4

Able to gainsay -- Do we not find the same principle illustrated today, when humble ones amongst the Lord's people are more than a match for all their adversaries? The truth, being powerful, prevails, though it is not always acknowledged to prevail. R2952:2

You will find that none, even those professing to be teachers and ministers of the gospel, will be able to withstand the Sword of the Spirit with which knowledge of the truth arms you. R825:4

"The wisdom of their wise men shall perish, and the understanding of their prudent men shall be hid." (Isa. 29:9-19) R2599:1

Nor resist -- Of Stephen it is written, "They were not able to resist the wisdom and the spirit by which he spake." (Acts 6:10) R2952:2

We do not advocate public debating of the truth. R2952:2

Luke 21:16

And ye -- The Little Flock. Compare Micah 7:5,6. R2142:5*

Luke 21:17

Be hated -- The Christian's love, zeal and faith in God's Word, and his uncompromising attitude relating to these so greatly contrast with the prevalent spirit that he is thought peculiar, called an extremist and fanatic, if not a hypocrite. R1653:2

The stones that kill the Stephens of our day are labeled hate, revenge, persecution, malice, scandal and ridicule. R2282:4

Wherever the truth goes, it will be like a sword to separate, especially in the home and family. R2852:6

Evil surmisings out of unconsecrated hearts will attribute every good deed to some selfish or evil motive. R1653:2

My name's sake -- Christ's. R1653:2

Luke 21:19

In your patience -- Patient endurance, cheerful, hopeful constancy.

R4910:6, 5651:1, 2791:3

"Wait ye upon me, saith the Lord, until the day that I rise up to the prey." (Zeph. 3:8) R4135:1

If ever the Church needed this counsel, it is now. R5651:5

Only those who are able to patiently endure will stand in this evil day.

R5651:6

Now is the time for remembering that God has a plan that is surely working out. R4135:1

Possess ye -- So long as we live in the present age, when sin abounds and Satan is the prince, we must expect tribulation. Nevertheless, we are fully under divine care and protection, even though persecutions are permitted to reach and affect us. R4910:6, 2791:3

Our faith and trust in the Lord and his promises should be so strong and unwavering that they will far more than counterbalance the opposition of the world, false brethren and of Satan's blinded servants. R5651:1, 2791:3

By enduring our trials. R3584:3

Because the ministrations permitted of his providence are for our ultimate good. R2791:4

Especially when weary in well-doing because of the reproaches of them that are without the pale of discipleship; when temptations, violent or subtle, may press hard upon us, when trials and cares may sorely afflict. R2073:4*

Your souls -- Our lives, as new creatures. R5651:1

Our lives, enjoying them even amongst tribulation, with cheerful endurance. R2791:4

Luke 21:20

And when -- Referring, primarily, to the destruction of Jerusalem and the Jewish polity in the close of the Jewish age, although they have a secondary reference to events in the end of the Gospel age, the antitype of the Jewish age. R1983:2

Ye shall see Jerusalem -- This portion of our Lord's prophecy evidently related to events upon fleshly Israel; and history tells us that it was accurately fulfilled in every particular in the troublous scenes wherewith the Jewish age and polity came to an end. D569

Our Lord's words, quoted by Matthew and Mark, differ from Luke, and evidently apply to the trouble upon spiritual Israel in the end of the Gospel age. D570

Compassed with armies -- The Roman army besieged the city, and then suddenly withdrew (AD 69). Vespasian, the Roman general, learning of the death of the Roman emperor, and that insurrection prevailed at Rome, hastened thither and assumed the emperorship. R1983:2

Luke 21:21

Then let them -- Before Titus had assumed command of the army and renewed the siege of Jerusalem, the Christians of the city acted upon our Lord's instruction, fled from the doomed city, and thus escaped the awful horrors of its siege, in which it is claimed that 1,100,000 Jews perished. R1983:2

To the mountains -- "Who shall ascend into the mountain of the Lord? who shall stand in his holy place? He that hath clean hands, and a pure heart." (Psa. 24:3-6) R1963:4*

Luke 21:22

These be -- As Jesus in his day called the attention of the Jews to the judgment of God about to come, so here it becomes our place to speak the word of God, that the nominal church and world-united system shall be cast down and consumed. R235:5

Days of vengeance -- As a nation, the Jews had experienced great blessings and privileges, and these being misused brought great darkness and ultimately a terrible national judgment. All of these things correspond to the conditions in the harvest or end of this Gospel age. R1983:2

The baptism of fire, of trouble, spoken of by John the Baptist. (Matt. 3:11) NS21:2

Shown by letter f on the Chart of the Ages, the fire through which fleshly Israel went when Jesus was present. R273:6

Corresponding with the days of vengeance at the end of the Gospel age. (Dan. 12:1) B219, 251; NS21:3

There have been other days of vengeance in the past bearing some likeness to the coming day of vengeance: in Noah's day, and more particularly, in the time of trouble which came upon the Jewish nation after their rejection of Messiah. NS218:1

A time of trouble, which they were powerless to avert. R273:6

Wrath upon this people -- It burned fiercely against them in the great time of trouble which led to the collapse of their national polity in AD 69-70, and they have been under that wrath and unable to reestablish themselves as a nation from that day to the present time. R2564:1, 2236:6

Showing clearly that the closing work of that age included the day of wrath, and reached to the destruction of Jerusalem; and that the harvest, instead of being limited to three and a half or seven years, covered the forty years from the Spring after his baptism to AD 70. R115:6*
"Who hath warned you to flee from the wrath to come?" (Luke 3:7) "Wrath is come upon them to the uttermost." (1 Thess. 2:16) R2236:5, 2564:1
Upon this people -- The Jews, at the time Jerusalem was ruined. D569; R235:5

Luke 21:24

Jerusalem -- As the city of Babylon represented the Empire of Babylon, so the city of Jerusalem represented the Jewish nation. CR41:2; NS681:1
God's people, Israel after the flesh, are trodden under foot by the Gentiles. During the same period Israel after the spirit, "the kingdom of Heaven, suffereth violence and the violent take it by force." (Matt. 11:12) R1979:2

Shall be -- Shall continue to be. R1373:1

Trodden down -- When God's time came to turn over the dominion of the earth to Gentile rule, it was appropriate that he should first remove the typical crown from Israel, and that the typical kingdom should no longer be recognized. They had proven themselves unfit for exaltation to universal dominion. B75

For the past eighteen centuries, Jerusalem has had no commerce, no industry, no outward brightness, lustre and splendor. R1297:2*

We have seen Israel scattered among all nations without favor, under the withering, blighting curse of God, a distinct people, but not a nation. R517:5*

In harmony with the Scriptures which tell of Israel's re-establishment as the earthly representatives of God's Kingdom, the Zionist movement is coming forth with good hopes of soon effecting a Jewish sub-kingdom. NS681:6

Zionists are insisting that Palestine be made a Jewish state with a government of its own, but subject to Turkey. We have reason to believe that such a concession will not be granted nor attained before the close of the Times of the Gentiles. R4572:1; NS681:6

Fleshly Israel cannot come into their long promised inheritance until that time, though preparatory steps will previously be taken. B81

Jewish national polity cannot be restored until the elect Church is complete (Rom. 11:25) and the period apportioned to Gentile governments has run its course, AD 1915. R2237:2

The Times of the Gentiles will be fulfilled and they will lose their empire at the same time that Israel's seven times of tribulation and down-treading will terminate, and they shall come into favor and association with Messiah and his Kingdom. OV53:3

We expect that the return of favor would be gradual, a like period of 36 years to that in which it was taken away (33-69 AD). This would bring us to 1914 as the time when God's favor for his people would be gradually manifested, during the closing hours of Gentile supremacy. SM401:1

The fact that there are now great preparations and expectations relative to the return of Israel to their own land is of itself strong circumstantial evidence corroborative of this Scripture teaching. B93

The heirs of the heavenly Kingdom must continue in humiliation, without power or privilege of reigning, until the time appointed for them to reign together with Christ. Their reign of righteousness over the world could not precede AD 1915, when the Times of the Gentiles have expired. B81
At present, the kingdoms of this world belong to the Gentiles, and they do not become "the kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Christ," until the Times of the Gentiles are fulfilled. HG19:6

Until their "seven times" shall end, the Kingdom of God cannot come into universal dominion. However, like the others, it must obtain power adequate to the overthrow of these kingdoms before it shall break them in pieces. B100; HG676:1

Until -- Until the Lord's Anointed, whose right it is, shall come and take the dominion and accomplish all his gracious purposes. B75

So long as these governments would be here they and Messiah's Kingdom could not co-operate. The Gentile governments are based on selfishness and coercion; Christ's Kingdom is based on justice, love and mercy. The two could not rule at the same time. R5526:2

Jerusalem will be free at that time, and thence-forward be a praise in the earth. R109:4*

The blindness that has veiled with night the lost of Israel's fold, will be replaced by Gospel light when "Gentile Times" are told. HG320:3

The Israelites were restored from Babylonian captivity, but they did not receive back the Kingdom; they were thereafter subject to the great dominant kingdoms of the world. HG41:3

Times of the Gentiles -- The term was applied by our Lord to that interval of earth's history between the removal of the typical kingdom of God, the Kingdom of Israel, and the establishment of its antitype, the true Kingdom of God. B73; CR41:3; HG20:1; NS681:4

During this interval, the dominion of earth was to be exercised by Gentile governments; and Israel, both fleshly and spiritual, have been and are to be subject to these powers until their time is expired. B73

The dominion of earth, under certain limitations, would be left in the hands of the Gentiles. OV53:2

That is to say, the years of the Gentiles; the years in which the Gentiles would bear rule over Israel and all the earth; the period in which God would have no representative nation in the world. CR41:3; NS681:5

If there are Gentile times to be fulfilled, they must have been foretold; if foretold, they were foreordained or planned of God, who knew beforehand how long they would be and when they would be fulfilled. R5564:1; CR41:2; NS681:2

Implying that the times of the Gentiles must have a definitely appointed limit; because an unlimited, indefinite period could not be said to be fulfilled. B78

These seven times of the Gentiles are the same seven times of Israel, only to the one they have meant seven times of domination which would close, and to the other they have meant seven times (2520 years) of being dominated until the close of the times. NS684:5

"I will punish you seven times more [further] for your sins." (Lev. 26:17, 18, 24, 28) These seven times refer to the length of time during which the Gentiles should rule over them--"the Times of the Gentiles." B88

God told Israel they would come under his disfavor for seven times (Lev. 26:14-28). These could not be literal years, for they had many tribulations longer than seven years. They must be symbolic, each "equalling" 360 years; seven times being 7 x 360 years, or 2,520 years. R5564:3, 109:4*; B89; CR44:1; OV53:1, 416:2; Q84:1, 93:8; NS30:6, 684:1 In proof that a day for a year is Bible usage in symbolic prophecy, we cite: Num. 14:33, 34; Ezek. 4:1-8; Dan. 9:24-27; 7:25; 12:7; Rev. 12:14; 13:5; 12:6. B91

The method of calculation demonstrated. B90

A period of 2,520 years from the year BC 606 to and including AD 1914. B79; HG675:6

A period of 2,520 years which began with Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, at the time the Lord permitted his own typical kingdom of Israel to be overthrown, to so remain until Messiah's day. R5710:3

It began with Nebuchadnezzar, not when his reign began, but when the typical kingdom of the Lord passed away, and the dominion of the whole world was left in the hands of the Gentiles. B79

From the last king of David's line, King Zedekiah, in 606 BC. We would not say that it was not 605 or 607, but that as nearly as we can tell it was the year 606 BC. R5564:2; HG48:1

The Israelites were restored from the Babylonian captivity, but they did not receive back the kingdom; they were thereafter subject to the great dominant kingdoms of the world. NS681:5

It is for this period, during which the crown or Kingdom of God is overturned in the earth, that God gives a lease of ruling authority to the Gentiles. R1979:2

They were merely given this lease in the interim because God's time had not yet come for the establishment of his Kingdom. Q85:T

Their days of empire are limited to seven times, or 2,520 years, which will end in AD 1915, giving place to the Kingdom of God in the hands of the Messiah, whose right it is to rule the world. R1373:2

Historically, these Gentile kings and peoples have accepted their dominions as favors from the gods whom they worshipped. This same theory, accepted by the masses of the people, is blazoned forth on medals, coins and papers of state in the words, "King by the grace of God." B74

The removal of God's kingdom in the days of Zedekiah left the world without any government of which God could approve, or whose laws or affairs he specially supervised. The Gentile governments God recognized indirectly. A249

So long as God had an organized reigning kingdom on earth, there could be no universal Gentile kingdom. HG48:2

God determined to let the Gentile kingdoms take control and try the experiment of ruling the world, that thus the world might also learn the futility of its own efforts at self-government while in its present sinful condition. B75; HG676:1

When their highest attainment shall be demonstrated to be trouble, confusion and anarchy, the world will become heartsick with its own failure, and the Lord's Kingdom shall be hailed as the "desire of all nations." (Hag. 2:7) NS30:3

During which four great universal empires, world governments, have attempted to bring blessings to mankind. They have all proved weak as far as righteousness is concerned and strong as far as evil is concerned.

While God does not approve nor commend these governments, he recognizes their dominion. B73

Earthly governments, all along, have been held to be divine governments, the kings and emperors of earth claiming that they rule the people by the grace of God--by the sanction, permission, authority of God. NS487:5

The image of Dan. 2 measures the duration of the Times of the Gentiles. R3359:4*; HG676:1; OV417:1, 53:2; Q94:2; NS682:4

The Times of the Gentiles is the period between the time that the image was set up, or came into power, and the time that the stone is to smite the image upon the feet and crush its power. Q82:1

By the end of 1914 the lease of power will expire. The Gentiles will be served with a notice to quit. They are not prepared to quit. The officer who comes to put them out might not be a good man at all, it may be anarchy. Q85:T, 97:3

The time during which the four great beasts of Dan. 7 were to tread down the whole earth. HG20:2; NS682:5

Clearly represented in Dan. 4 by the seven times of Nebuchadnezzar and his bitter experience among the beasts. B90, 93-96; R109:5*; CR44:6; HG49:1; OV53:3; NS30:4, 684:4

Unless it was to foreshadow the degradation and the duration of Gentile Times, we know of no reason for the recording of this scrap of the history of a heathen king. B97

We rejoice to think that at the conclusion of the symbolic seven times, mankind will return to a reasonable and proper view of the Almighty and of their responsibility to him, as did Nebuchadnezzar, their representative.

NS30:5

We have been "taught of God" through his Word to expect no permanent peace from even the best intentioned monarchs and governments during these Times of the Gentiles. R2361:1

God declared to Abraham: "In thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed." This was the earliest suggestion of a universal dominion over earth, implying a peculiar superiority of this ruler above all others. B74
The Greek word here rendered "times" is kairos, which signifies a "fixed time." It is translated "times" in Mark 1:15; 1 Tim. 6:15; Rev. 12:14; Acts 3:19; 17:26 and "seasons" in Acts 1:7. B78

Let no one mistake the Times of the Gentiles, for the fullness of the Gentiles. (Rom. 11:25) They are entirely distinct. HG20:1

The term Gentile included not only barbarians, but also the most civilized people of the world outside of Israel, outside of the special covenants and promise of the Lord which pertain to the present time. NS25:1

A prophetic year (or time) of 360 days, used to symbolize 360 years, is an arbitrary arrangement, peculiar to its intended symbolic use. R1979:6

Be fulfilled -- Or, filled full. CR41:5

Or, completed. R1373:1

And the time of Messiah's theocratic government is at hand. NS849:6

The Lord did not say that the Jews were about to come under Gentile dominion. They had already lost their national independence when Nebuchadnezzar, the world's first conqueror, overthrew their government.

Israel would continue to be subject to the Gentile kingdoms. NS24:4

When we read that certain times will be fulfilled, we are justified in thinking that these times have been foretold. CR41:2

The great war now raging in Europe [1915] seems to be the beginning of the end of Gentile Times. R5794:5

The Gentile Times having closed does not mean the Gospel message was closed. R5602:1

Luke 21:25

And -- The connection with the preceding verses clarifies what is not so clearly manifest in Matthew and Mark, that these signs follow the tribulations of the Gospel age, and not those in the harvest. D584

Leaping over centuries, pointing to events near the close of the Gentile Times. R1983:5

There shall be signs -- To give a general idea as to the time when the Kingdom would be nigh. R1983:5

While literal signs served their designed purpose to draw general attention to the time of the end, we believe that the symbolic fulfillments are no less striking and even more interesting to those whose mental and spiritual perceptives are awakened. D590

In the sun -- Representing the Gospel light, the truth; and thus, Jesus. D590

The true gospel sunlight is already darkened. R1305:2

The sunlight of the ransom becomes obscured. D592

The remarkable darkening of the sun and moon was on May 19, 1780. D585; R1983:5

While we believe also in a symbolic fulfillment of the darkening of the sun and falling of the stars, yet we cannot overlook the literal fulfillment. R1983:5

In the moon -- The light of the Mosaic Law. As the moon is a reflection of the light of the sun, so the Law was the shadow, or reflection beforehand, of the Gospel. D590

The darkening of the Gospel sunlight results in the darkening of the moonlight. D593

As the sunlight of the ransom becomes obscured, so the moonlight of the Mosaic Law, which in its sacrifices foreshadowed the ransom, must of necessity become obscured also. D592

The reflected sunlight of the gospel, shining in the typical sacrifices of the Jewish Law, has become obscured. R1305:2

"The moon shall be turned into blood." (Joel 2:10) When the Gospel light is obscured, the Law comes to be regarded merely as a meaningless and barbaric ceremony of blood. D593

In the stars -- Representing the inspired teachers of the Church, the apostles. D591

The teachings of the God-ordained twelve stars of the Church (the apostles) will also fade from view--cease to be recognized guides or lights. D593

The word star (Greek, aster) is not used respecting any of the faithful (outside the apostles) in referring to them in this present life. D593

Faithful, humble lamplight-shiners of this present time shall by and by with Christ be the glorious and honored seed of Abraham--"as the stars of heaven," but not in the present "heavens" which shall shortly pass away. D594

If God only ordained twelve stars as lights for his Church (Rev. 12:1), is it not a great mistake for popes and bishops to regard themselves as successors of the apostles--stars also? D594

Many stars, bright ones, are falling from heaven. R1305:2

Many false stars have fallen from every pretense of Gospel shining to the level of the comprehension of the masses to whom they shine. D596

The notable falling of stars, or meteoric shower, was on the morning of Nov. 13, 1833. D588; R1983:5

Upon the earth -- A trouble more dreadful than any preceding experience, in the sense that it will be world-wide, and not a local disturbance, as were the previous seasons of destruction. Q848:4

Distress of nations -- The notion that we are to pass, by the peaceful evolutionary processes of a broadening culture, by the achievements of discovery and invention, and by the universal acceptance of the gospel, into the golden age of millennial blessedness is, in the light of prophecy, the baseless fabric of a dream. R1612:1*

This war [1914] will proceed and will eventuate in no glorious victory for any nation, but in the horrible mutilation and impoverishment of all. Next will follow the Armageddon of anarchy. HG674:3

When the war [1914] is ended, the nations, sorrowful and famine-stricken, will be greatly angered at their rulers. They will come the determination for something like Socialism. This the governments will endeavor to put down, and to some extent they will succeed. Then will follow the great explosion--the Armageddon of the Scriptures. HG676:6

With perplexity -- They will face a condition of things never before known in the world. Although there have been revolutions, never before have the people been so intelligent, educated, capable of initiative, trained in military skill and able to assert and fight for their conception of their rights. NS487:5

The kings of Europe know not what to do. All sectarianism is being shaken. Many people of God are in perplexity. OV274:5 The perplexity of financiers examined. R5658:6, 5632:3, 5633:5; A332

Thrones stand unsteady, and throughout the world there is a feeling of distrust among all classes. R353:1*

Some praying for the success of the Allied armies, others praying for just the reverse, still others praying that the war shall not go on. Before praying, it would be well to determine God's purposes in regard to this war [1914], in order to pray in harmony with his arrangements. SM412:3

Feeling their own incompetency to cope with the mighty power of the awakening world, the civil authorities, in sheer desperation, call to mind the former power of Papacy. Though they hate the tyrant, they are willing to make large concessions, if by this means they may succeed in holding in check the discontented peoples. D131

The sea -- Those who have seen the mighty deep thoroughly aroused and have witnessed its terrific power and the destruction sometimes wrought, have a wholesome dread of it. NS483:3

The proportion of sea to land, the origin of the seas, sea-level, and the contrast between sea depths and mountain heights applied symbolically. NS484:3

The sea and the waves of the troubled masses of humanity are already beginning to heave and toss and foam. The increasing winds of strife are driving the great sea of mankind into a frenzied state of revolt against the present social order. Q841:4

The waves -- Nihilism, communism, socialism and anarchism. Q841:4
The restless and lawless elements. D596

The restless and discontented. R4943:6

The peoples of the world, moved by selfishness themselves, will rage against selfishness and power exercised against them, until the entire social structure will succumb to the power of this great flood. NS484:3
Curbed, but not fully restrained, by the laws and regulations of society.
D596

Roaring -- In the time of trouble with which the Millennial age will be introduced. The symbolic mountains, kingdoms of the earth, will go down, overwhelmed by the symbolic sea in an anarchistic storm. (Psa. 46:1-3)
When Messiah's Kingdom shall bring order out of confusion, there will be no more sea, no longer any restless, dissatisfied element. Q842:2
Kingdoms thrown into anarchy and society entirely swallowed up by the sea.
NS484:1

The hand which has stayed the winds while the gathering and sealing of the Elect has been in progress will no longer stay them. The winds of selfishness, strife, passion, anger, covetousness, hatred, will be allowed to blow. NS559:2

The clamoring of restless masses through unions, strikes, etc. R487:2
Every newspaper, not under the control of wealth, voices the roar of the restless "sea" class; and the others, though unwilling, must give the echo of the roaring as matters of news. D596

"The voice of the day of the Lord" (Zeph. 1:14), as it comes from various quarters and swells into a mighty roar of the sea class will not be heard nor heeded, nor will relief be granted, nor the threatened crash and wreck of present institutions be avoided. R2216:6

"Given forth hath the deep its voice." (Hab. 3:10, Young's Literal Translation) R1813:4

The utterance of the faith of Israel's faithful is that, though the sea and the waves roar, there is a river whose streams gladden them. (Psa. 46:2,3) R302:6

Men's hearts -- The great, rich and mighty, ecclesiastically and socially. R1305:2

For fear -- Well-grounded fears. OV339:2; SM691:2

The difficulty with many is, that, seeing these approaching troubles from the outside, they are losing confidence in divine providence. R2462:4

But their fears and their anguish will not be eternal. When the trouble shall have accomplished its work and burned itself out, it will be no more, and instead of trouble, blessings shall come in. R3771:4

Not brotherly love, but fear, is the mainspring of the desire for religious union. R1741:2

Out of this very fear Satan desires to make some capital wherewith to bolster up the tottering walls of his ancient fortress and protect his kingdom from ruin in the midst of the great time of trouble. R1704:2

The fear of impending revolution is driving every nation in Christendom to extravagant preparations for war. D133

The fear of the "Yellow Peril" of China and Japan examined. R3619:3

The fear of capital and labor and union disputes examined. R2868:1

The conservative and wealthy classes recognize religion as the strongest influence for the peaceable control of humanity. They see that, with the growing intelligence of our day and the growing independence of thought and action, the influence of all the different religious teachings over the lower classes of society is on the decrease; and they fear the results. R1705:2

It is a fact, not an assumption, that we are now living in a time when crime and corruption have assumed prodigious proportions, not only in the lower grades of society, but in what are called the upper grades. R353:1*

Noting the rise of Socialism, it is no wonder that we see kings and rulers taking extra precautions to protect their interests from the threatening dangers of revolution and world-wide anarchy. In fear and distress they seek alliance one with another, though so great is their mutual distrust that they have little to hope for in any alliance. D129

"All hands shall be feeble, and all knees shall be weak as water." (Ezek. 7:17) D149

God's people will be preserved from fear and doubt and misunderstanding of the events of that time of trouble and their faith will enable them to triumph at a time when others will be in great distress and perplexity.

NS790:5

Looking after -- Looking forward to. HG316:5

The editorials of some of our greatest newspapers read as if written from the standpoint of present truth, so remarkably do they foretell what they declare to be almost certain to follow this present [1914] terrible war.

R5989:3

Which are coming -- Is it any wonder than the trepidation of the financial and political princes of the earth is great as they look into the future. OV339:2; SM691:2

The fear and trepidation will come in advance of the trouble itself.

NS487:4

When we, a few years ago, called attention to the overthrow of government by Communism, the idea was ridiculed. Communism was then little known or felt. Today [1882], every nation is in dread, and Nihilism, Communism and Socialism are household words. R410:4, 26:6; B99

The earth -- Society. D413, 596; R4943:3, 1379:4

The social order; because of the shaking of the heavens, the ecclesiastical systems. OV339:2; SM692:T

Powers of heaven -- Ecclesiasticism. R4943:6

Religious powers. R1741:2

Governments. R410:4

Government--ecclesiastical and civil. D413, 591

The influence of the religious element, religious doctrines. NS487:4

Sectarian creeds and systems. D597

Shall be shaken -- The public are losing their superstition, theologians are admitting that their doctrines of the past are untenable in the light of the present, and many are leading the public into infidelity, called Higher Criticism. NS487:4

The nominal church, gradually drawn more and more to the side of governments and the wealthy, will lose much of its influence over the people, and will finally fall with the governments. A333

A great and very general storm is even now in progress. The thunders roll and the lightnings flash in every quarter of the ecclesiastical heavens. R1305:2

A shaking up of the creeds and dogmas of Christendom, which, because of their admixture of errors, produce confusion wherever referred to. D595
The creed-smashing already begun will, if it continue, release from the bonds of superstition and ignorance many who know no other restraints. The result of such a liberation of such a class means a shaking of the earth, society, as it has never before been shaken. R1305:2

Luke 21:27

See the Son -- Not the sign or proof of the Lord's presence, but, on the contrary, the clouds of trouble and confusion incident to the shaking of the "heavens," and realize it to be a storm which will shake the "earth" also. D599

Eventually all mankind, at the close of the storm, shall discern, recognize the new King with the eyes of their understanding and shall mourn for sin, and that they ever in blindness rejected him--the Jew first. (Zech. 12:10-12) D600

And great glory -- The glory of power and justice. B153

In the midst of the awful trouble and perplexity, Messiah's Kingdom will take control. R5823:6

Luke 21:28

When -- The times and seasons were wisely hidden in the past, and the saints were thus saved from discouragement, because the time was long; but as the plan nears its glorious consummation, it is the privilege of the saints to know. B25

These things -- If death for anarchists becomes law, no doubt also the law of might will become so powerful as to throttle all liberty. Opposition to civil government being esteemed worthy of death, it may be a further step to declare a state religious doctrine, and proscribe those who cannot assent to it as religious anarchists, also worthy of death. R3890:5

The revealing of the time features now is as profitable and stimulating as their revealing before would have been unprofitable and discouraging. B25

Begin -- The Master does not say, When ye see all these things, but,
When ye see the beginning of them. R5735:2

As soon as we should begin to see the events of the harvest come to pass, we should expect a speedy realization of our glorious hope. C227

Look up -- Our Master, who gives us in his Word the inside information, tells us to note the fulfillments. R2938:4

What a comfort and serenity of soul it gives to have the knowledge which the Bible affords in respect to the present times and the grand outcome of the trouble--Messiah's Kingdom. R5854:5

Daily we are getting ready for that Kingdom by proving and manifesting that we have a thorough-going loyalty of heart to the coming Kingdom and its principles of righteousness. CR493:6

If the worst should happen, we should remember that God is at the helm, and that he will allow the pride and wrath to work out the great trouble and the inauguration of Messiah's Kingdom. R5852:4

God has kindly veiled the eyes of humanity that they do not see the coming storm in all its dread severity; because they have no eyes of faith to see the resulting blessings as we see them. R5799:4

Lift up your heads -- Realizing that the dark clouds are the harbingers of coming Millennial blessings. R1605:3

Christ's judgments encircling all the earth are "the signs and groanings promised to precede a second birth." SM422:1

When this trouble comes, there will be such a blessing from the Lord that those who go through it will be able to rejoice in tribulation. R5255:3

Those who discern in the shaking the outworking of the divine plan rejoice in the assurance that this terrible shaking will be the last that the earth will ever have or need; for, as the Apostle Paul assures us, it signifieth the removing of those things that are shaken. D150

And rejoice, through your tears. SM317:1

We may also rejoice with the world that the blessed morning of the Millennial Kingdom is at hand, even though we must weep with them also in the dark hour of trouble which will precede the sunburst of the Millennial
Kingdom. NS31:4

We rejoice, not in the trouble, which surely saddens every tender heart; but that thus the world will be prepared for the grand change of government. R5805:6

The Lord's consecrated people cannot, in any sense of the word, rejoice at the tribulation coming upon others. Their rejoicing can only be in respect to the glorious things which they hope to experience, and which they know to be near by these outward signs. HG400:2

Nor is this rejoicing selfish in its character; for the deliverance and exaltation of the Church of Christ will be the harbinger of a speedy deliverance to the whole race. C227; HG400:2

This does not mean that we should ever act or feel boastfully, or even carelessly, respecting the welfare of humanity; but that with quiet confidence we may look up to God and rest assured that all things are working together for good--especially for the Church, but indirectly also for the interests of all humanity. R5062:5

For forty years we have been proclaiming this very war [World War I] and its glorious outcome. Now, when the very year has come and the prophecy is being fulfilled, could we consistently ask the Almighty to change his program? R5554:6

In that day, while the trouble draws on, the Lord will feed his people with present truth. R1379:4

Well may the Church arise now and put on her beautiful garments; for very shortly she is to receive beauty for ashes and the oil of joy for the spirit of heaviness. R2036:3

Any who are not rejoicing, but who, on the contrary, are feeling discouraged, despondent, and disappointed and ashamed of the truth, have evidently wrong impressions. R5794:5

And lift up your voices and point the way to those who are bewildered and troubled, who know not which way to go, nor where to seek for comfort. R5633:6

Let us, as we drink of the brook (Psa. 110:7), take a lesson from the little birds, which when drinking, repeatedly lift the head as though giving thanks to God. R2936:5

The time for lifting up our heads in glory is nearing too, and already the Master directs that seeing (with the eye of faith) the evidences of their approach, we may lift up our heads. R2936:5

For -- All who learned of the coming troubles from the Lord's Word before there were outward evidences of them are strengthened in their faith by every fresh development, for they, by the same Word, know the object of the troubles and the grand results they are outworking. R2462:4

Your redemption -- Pointing us forward to the salvation to be brought unto us through the First Resurrection. F159

Greek, apolutrosis, simply signifying deliverance, "a loosing away." There is no reference here to the ransom or the conditions precedent to the Church's deliverance, but merely to the deliverance itself. E434; F159; R4103:1, 3890:6, 2064:2, 2036:4, 1605:3

We are referred, not to the work of redemption accomplished in the sacrifice of our Lord, but to the results of that work as they shall be accomplished in the perfecting of the Church in the First Resurrection. F159

Deliverance. R3890:6

Your deliverance, your exaltation and glory. B190

And their exaltation to power as God's Kingdom, and the blessing of all the families of the earthy through that Kingdom. R1605:3

The morning cometh, although a brief, dark night must intervene. C227

If the deliverance of the Church meant eternal suffering to the non-elect, how could we rejoice in it? But we perceive that the glorification of the Church means the blessing of all. R5799:4

Draweth nigh -- From the standpoint that one year less lies between us and the glorious consummation of our hopes and one year less intervenes before the establishment of God's glorious Empire, we rejoice to see the years fly swiftly by. R4103:1

The Lord did not say how nigh, so we must live day by day just as though this was the last day on this side of the veil. R5569:4

Near at hand, even at the door. R5715:6

The fig tree -- Israel. D604; R384:2*

Note the wonderful adaptation of the fig tree as an illustration of Israel's returning favor. It puts forth its fruit before its leaves appear; and when the leaves appear, the fruit is ripe. It is a staple article of food, and also possesses medicinal qualities. R384:2*

Luke 21:30

Shoot forth -- When the rich foliage of God's favor covers Israel, and is manifest to all, she will be ripe and ready for the work of blessing, feeding, and healing the nations, according to God's plan. R384:2*

Now being signally fulfilled. Not only are thousands of Israelites returning to Palestine, but the Zionist movement has assumed vast proportions to put into a practical shape the proposal for the reorganization of a Jewish state in Palestine. D604

These buds will thrive, but will bear no perfect fruit before October 1914--the full end of Gentile Times. D604

Summer is now nigh -- There are unmistakable signs among the Jews as a people today by which we recognize Christ's words and know that not only the restoration of the Jews is at hand, but also that the Kingdom of God is nigh. R127:4*

Luke 21:31

When ye see -- All about us we can see the foretold signs of our Lord's second presence. OV425:3

Kingdom of God -- The Church is the Kingdom now, in the prospective sense. R397:4

Mentioned in such an unequivocal manner, that none can doubt that the Millennial Reign is referred to. R396:6

This generation -- Not gennema, race or posterity; but genea, which does not mean race, but has the same significance as our English word generation--people living contemporaneously. D603

A "generation" might be reckoned as equivalent to a century (practically the present limit) or one hundred and twenty years, Moses' lifetime and the Scripture limit. (Gen. 6:3) D604

The signs mentioned will occur within a generation-epoch in the close of the age. D603

Some of the generation which saw the falling stars will continue to live until God's Kingdom shall be fully established. D603; R1983:5

Perhaps from 1780, the date of the first sign, to 1880, when every item predicted had begun to be fulfilled; perhaps 1878 to 1914, 36-1/2 years, about the average of human life today. D604

Luke 21:33

Heaven and earth -- The present ecclesiastical and social order. D602

Luke 21:34

Take heed -- The tendency of the world, the flesh and the devil is to absorb our time, thought, interest and affections in worldly affairs, eating, drinking, marrying, building, planting, business, pleasure, sectarianism and cunningly devised fables. R2303:1

The present is the time for God's people to draw very near to the Lord, to come under the shadow of the Almighty, to put their trust more and more in him and to purge themselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the reverence of the Lord. (2 Cor. 7:1) NS627:6

We would encourage all who have the hearing ear to zeal and faithfulness in their consecration, that they may make their calling and their election sure to a share in the Kingdom glories. NS790:4

Take time to commune with the Lord, feast upon his Word, partake of his spirit. R566:2*

Motive for heavenly-mindedness. R298:4

Unto yourselves -- Christ and the apostles almost invariably speak to the Church and of the world; hence the personal pronouns ye and you refer to the Church, and they and them to the world. HG84:3

Your hearts -- It is possible for a man to have a great deal of worldly care requiring his attention, and yet not have his heart much affected or influenced by it, because his heart is not in it as much as his head.

It is the heart that is in danger. R566:2*

Be overcharged -- To overcome, we need the armor which God has provided. We obtain it from the word of God, and it requires time and care to fit it and learn to use it. We cannot, therefore, spare our valuable and needful time to attend to worldly things, plans, and speculations; but only the things needful. R378:1

The crowding upon us of more than we can possibly do is evidently the enemy, and is intended to keep us from the most important of all work, the study of God's Word. R566:4*

Some who could not be induced nor pressed into worldliness, he will keep busy looking after the welfare of others, to the exclusion of their own growth in the knowledge of the truth. R566:4*

Such as make an improper partnership of Christ, the world, and self. R35:3
We cannot spare our valuable time for worldly things, plans and speculations. R378:1

As in the case of the Great Company class. R4078:5

With surfeiting -- These various dispositions: carelessness of life, the overcharged or drunken condition as respects earthly affairs, the lack of self-restraint in connubial relationships, are apt to go hand in hand with a wrong spirit in the Church--a spirit of strife, contention, wilfulness. R3181:6

And drunkenness -- Worldly revelries, time-killing pleasures. R3181:4
Intoxication with the spirit of the world as respects wealth, business, dress, music, art. R3181:4

Cares of this life -- We find many who have been enlightened so busied with a multitude of other things that they cannot attend to preparation for the coming Kingdom. R565:6*

The brethren generally have their hours of labor fixed by the prevailing business customs. If they should find business demanding all their time and all their effort for any length of time, this is not the Lord's will. R572:2*

Habits of close economy prompt many sisters to do things which might be done by others long after the necessity of such economy is past. R572:4*

It is proper to be charged with the cares of life to the extent of our necessities and responsibilities, but not to the extent of crowding out spiritual interests and aspirations. R2129:3

Come upon you -- Greek, ephistemi, to overtake. B158

Unawares -- The people of the Lord, under his instruction, will not be in darkness that that day shall overtake them as a thief. NS789:6

If a child of God, living in the day of the Lord, remain in ignorance as to the fact, he must either be surfeited with the things of this life and intoxicated with the spirit of the world, or else overcharged with the cares of this life; in either case, indifferently neglecting to watch with his lamp trimmed and burning. B23

Declaring that, at the time of our Lord's second coming, the world will be far from converted to God. A90; OV222:4

The second coming of Christ will be as different from human expectation as was his first advent. HG315:4

It will be as it was in Noah's days, the world will know not. (Matt. 24:37; Luke 22:26) R264:4

He leaves the matter in obscurity, because it will be better for us not to know the exact time. R5256:3

As a snare -- And a thief. R2390:4

The present social order of Christendom is to stumble and be wrecked in a time of anarchy, because the time has come for the establishment of God's Kingdom, and because the world is not in the condition of heart to receive it. R2390:1

All not thoroughly rooted and grounded in the truth will be carried away by the false arguments of those whom Satan is now permitted to use as his agents. R5652:1

On all them -- The world in general, especially the Christian world who, having made a covenant with the Lord, are living contrary thereto, and therefore are styled "wicked." R2390:4

Including the tares. R3405:3

The knowledge which the saints will have in the day of the Lord is contrasted with the ignorance, on the part of the world, of the significance and tendency of transpiring events. B22

Who don't take heed. A90; OV222:4

Such as give no heed to the "more sure word of prophecy" are not watching and will not know. (2 Pet. 1:19-21) R2303:1

The Divine Revelation respecting the time of trouble is only to a portion of the world--the Church. OV59:5

It is not intended that the prophetic knock should be heard by the world; it is intended only for the virgin class, wise and foolish. R4185:4

The whole earth -- The world in general, especially the Christian world. R2390:4; CR438:5

"But ye, brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief." (1 Thess. 5:4) R4185:2, 2390:4

Luke 21:36

Watch -- Watch yourselves, and also the word of prophecy. B22

The injunction to watch implies not only some advantage in watching, but also that the manner of the Lord's second advent might be so contrary to the general expectation as to require some discernment on the part of the watchers. R1796:5

We are to watch the signs of the times, so carefully delineated by our Lord in the prophecy which precedes this exhortation to watchfulness.

R2303:1

The day will come as a thief in the night, stealthily. Those who are asleep will not be aware that the day has come, and might therefore not be expected to be in a waiting attitude. R5256:3

Present besetments, being of subtle character, are the more calculated to delude and ensnare, so that if one allows himself to be for a moment off his guard, the agencies of the Adversary will gain an advantage and use it to trap the unwary one. R1319:2

We believe that the Lord leaves the matter in obscurity, because it will be better for us as a whole not to know the exact time. R5256:3

The Lord's people should be keeping watch of the fact of his coming and of the various incidents of the interim; not knowing how rapidly they might culminate, that they might ever live in the attitude of expectancy and of readiness for his presence. R2303:2

Not readiness in a literal ascension robe, but readiness in a figurative ascension robe, namely, such a condition of heart and life as would be in readiness to welcome the Lord and his scrutiny in our hearts and conduct. R2303:2

Nothing is more helpful to wakefulness and energy in the Lord's service than the thought of his coming, and the examination of the prophecies which were given us with the very object of having us know something about the time of his coming. R2303:2

Alas! professed Christians have generally forgotten to watch for his appearing. They seem to have concluded that the watching will never be rewarded. R1796:3

Be always watchful for the evidence of my parousia, because the time will come when it will be very important to know it. B19, 163

So that when the due time comes you may be one of the wise ones. B19; D606

This watching will serve as an antidote for worldly influences. R2303:1; B19

And pray always -- There is not a more practical doctrine than that of the second advent. It is the motive for patient waiting (1 Thess. 1:10); for divine hope (Titus 2:13); for moderation in all things (Phil. 4:5); for prayer to be counted worthy (Luke 21:36); for long-suffering patience (Jas. 5:8); for heavenly-mindedness (Luke 21:34); for perseverance in spite of persecution (1 Pet. 1:7); for godliness and holy conversation (2 Pet. 3:11, 12); for earnest preaching (2 Tim. 4:1-3); for fighting the good fight of faith (2 Tim. 4:7, 8); for reverence and godly fear (Heb. 7:26-28); for sobriety and watching unto prayer (1 Pet. 4:7). R298:2,4*

That ye -- The faithful, sealed ones. C167

Accounted worthy -- By faithful and prompt obedience, getting out before "winter." D578

That, knowing of his presence and the changes then due, you may be found in harmony with the king, working wisely in his vineyard, that you and your labor may be approved of him. R580:6

The wheat class; the truly consecrated children of God, separated from the world. R409:2, 3405:3; C146

The Bride class. R2302:5, 265:1

Those who enter in before the door is shut. (Matt. 25:10) R1952:4

The "overcomers." (Rev. 3:21) R1963:4; D578

Only the faithful "Little Flock" will be worthy. R593:5, 2302:5, 772:2; SM726:1

To escape -- Not necessarily by being taken away from the earth, but possibly by being rendered fire-proof, as in the typical illustration of the three Hebrews, who walked in the midst of the fiery furnace. B162
We may not be too certain which way he meant we should escape. There are two ways: by avoidance of the trouble or by being kept from feeling its poignancy, by grace sufficient to enable us to rejoice in tribulation. R2975:5

Not by being taken from the scene of trouble, but by being supported, strengthened and kept in the very midst of it, all by the Word of the Lord. C228

While admitting that some might remain to the very end of the trouble, and pass through it all, and yet thus escape, it is nevertheless clear, we think, that all will be fully delivered before the severest features of the trouble come. C229

While there are clear indications that some of the living members of the body will witness the gathering of the storm and share in some of the troubles it will bring, there are also indications that none of these will pass entirely through it, nor even far into it. C228

By the resurrection change. HG458:5, 611:6; OV86:T; Q98:3

We understand that the escape is effected by their being "caught up to meet the Lord in the air" (1 Thess. 4:17); yet that their taking will be unseen by the world. R35:3

The faithful ones will be kept from the power of this great trial "because thou didst keep the word of my endurance." (Rev. 3:10, Rotherham) R504:6*

These sons are not to be spared from the polishing processes necessary to make them acceptable as sons. R2405:4

The Church will have a great many trials and persecutions, and perhaps a great deal of suffering in the end of this age; but they will have all passed beyond the veil before the anarchistic trouble will have come on the world. Q217:1

From Babylon. R1648:6

By fleeing to the mountain, the Kingdom of the Lord, and being safe. R1963:4*

While the "wheat" class may expect to escape the world's trouble, it will have its own trouble before: for "judgment must begin with the house of God." (1 Pet. 4:17) R3405:3

The completion of the Church will be while the world is still under the blinding influence of Satan. CR341:3

"He delivered me from the strong enemy [death]." (2 Sam. 22:18) He takes his Bride and delivers her from the strong enemy of the fleshly nature, death, into the perfection of the new divine nature, like unto Christ's glorious body. R265:1

As Aaron escaped the plagues, and assisted Moses in their execution as a means to the salvation of Israel; so some now are to be accounted worthy to escape the things coming, to sit with Christ, the prophet like Moses, and have power over the nations to break them. R155:3*

The angels are holding the winds of violence until the full number of the elect have been sealed and have made their calling and election sure. When this is finished we may expect the trouble to come as a whirlwind, suddenly. R1952:4

Those who have made the Most High their refuge need not fear the approach of the time of trouble. "God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble." (Psa. 46:1) D45

"The eyes of the Lord are upon the righteous, and his ears are open unto their cry." (Psa. 34:15) D68

Which the Great Company class will not escape. R4654:6, 772:2*, 593:5; SM514:1, 726:1

This class, because overcharged, are therefore taken unawares (verse 34), and as in a snare (verse 35); and shall not escape. R35:3

Some in each company may come through the very same experiences. To one it is great tribulation, to the other it is but a light and easy yoke. R772:2*

While lukewarm and merely nominal Christians shall share it with the world. R409:2

The world will go on as usual, and know not until the "harvest is past, the summer ended" (Jer. 8:20), and they are not in the ark, not with the Little Flock. R264:4

"I will spare them as a man that spareth his own son that serveth him." (Mal. 3:17) R5574:2; C146

All these things -- The social upheaval and combustion, political troubles, financial troubles, and also some great physical manifestations of divine power in connection with the time of trouble. R5318:1

The great time of tribulation, and they are to escape the thousand years of judgment or trial coming upon the world. R2405:4

The severity of the time of trouble. C229; R2674:5

The various forms of unbelief now rampant. C167

The destruction of the present order of things. D68, 481, 578

"Strong delusions." (2 Thess. 2:11) R1319:2

The travail upon great Babylon, the nominal church. R1648:6

That shall come -- It is evident that the coming of universal anarchy after the harvest has nothing whatever to do with either the presence of the Reaper or the setting up of his Kingdom. Indeed, the guidance and overruling of that anarchy will be under the control of the glorified Church--The Christ. R3405:6

Stand -- Approved, and received as the Bride of Christ. R4654:6

And not fall before the attacks of the enemy. R425:6; C167
While many on every hand are falling into error and infidelity. C228
We patiently wait for our gathering together unto Christ. R127:5*
Before the Son -- In the presence of the Son of Man. R593:5

Luke 22

Luke 22:1

The feast -- The feast of Passover lasted a week, and was one of the most important celebrated under the Jewish arrangement, beginning on the 15th day of the first month, Jewish reckoning, but preceded on the 14th by the killing of the lamb, and sprinkling of the blood on the doorposts of the houses as a memorial of what took place in Egypt. R3363:3, 1182:6
It was not the intention of our Lord to commemorate the feast of Passover, which began on the 15th of Nisan and lasted for an entire week, but merely to give us a memorial of his death on the 14th of Nisan. R1942:6, 596:4

Drew nigh -- His arrival in Bethany was just a week before his crucifixion. The following day at supper Mary anointed him. The next day he rode on the ass into Jerusalem. The following day he visited the temple, driving out the money-changers. The next day he gave his last public discourse, in the Temple. On Wednesday, the Lord remained in Bethany in retirement, and on Thursday he sent two of his disciples to make ready the Passover. R3363:3

The Passover -- The Passover was the first feature of the Law given Israel as a typical people. R839:1

The Lord provided for two great religious occasions, the one at the beginning of the secular year and the other at the beginning of the religious year. The Passover emphasized more particularly the passing over of the first-born; the Day of Atonement more particularly pictures the atonement for the sins of the whole world. R3749:2

The Passover season has always been one of special danger, special besetment to the Lord's consecrated people. R3760:3

It seems peculiar that there should be greater liability of falling into sin at one season than at another; but nevertheless, we have noticed for several years the peculiar force of temptations at the time of the Passover, every Spring. R3178:3

It was at Passover season that many followers said, "This is a hard saying," and walked no more with him; that Judas bargained for the betrayal of our Lord; that Peter, tempted to forget he was a disciple, undertook to rebuke the Lord; that the twelve got into a dispute as to who would be greatest; that our Lord himself was in an agonizing battle, and with bloody sweat submitting his will to the will of God; that the eleven all forsook the Lord and fled; that Peter was tempted to deny the Lord with cursings; and that our Lord was tempted before Pilate. R3178:3 From our Lord's standpoint the date was settled for the people by the decision of the Scribes. Whether they fixed an earlier or later date would not have particularly mattered; the object was to have a uniform date and to recognize the fourteenth day of the first month at even. So today, we do not understand that any hair-splitting is necessary in the ascertaining of the first day of the first month, Jewish time. R3750:6

Entered Satan -- Satan had been working with Judas previously. R4577:3 No doubt reasoning that since Jesus was about to die he might as well sell the Lord and get what he could out of the transaction. R3878:6 If Judas had maintained an attitude of consecration to the Master, Satan would never have had the opportunity. Q616:1

Into Judas -- When chosen an apostle, evidently a good man, at least so far as outward appearance was concerned. His name, meaning "Praise," would seem to indicate that his parents had been of a religious cast of mind. R2779:2

Representing some who, for earthly advantage for themselves, are willing to deliver other members of the Lord's body up to tribulation, adversity and reproach. R3366:6

Luke 22:4

How he might betray -- Judas did not reach this depth of iniquity suddenly, but rather the disposition had grown upon him during the three years of his intercourse with the Master, when the reverse disposition should have had control. R2779:2

Luke 22:5

To give him money -- From the meager mentionings of the Gospel records, we may reasonably infer that the beginning of his downfall was the harboring of a love for money. R2779:3, 2468:2

Some who have consecrated their lives to be the Lord's followers and have been engaged in the ministry of truth, as Judas was there, are willing to sell the Lord for a mess of pottage--for good things of this present life, for a salary, for social position, for honor amongst men, for popularity and titles. R2779:4

Day of unleavened bread -- The first day of unleavened bread was the 14th of Nisan. The Feast of Passover began on the 15th and lasted for seven days. (Ex. 12:18-20) R1800:2

Pure, unfermented bread, representing our Lord's sinless flesh. R5870:5, 2772:3

Bread of truth. R5870:4

The passover -- The term Passover was frequently applied to the name of a festival week, but we must not confound this with the frequent references when the word feast is not used, which generally referred to the lamb that was killed as the Passover. R3749:1

"Christ our Passover is sacrificed for us." (1 Cor. 5:7) R3749:3

The typical lamb was put to death on the 14th day of the first month, so our Passover Lamb was put to death on the same day. R94:2

Luke 22:8

Prepare us -- In the sense of furnishing and preparing the lamb, the unleavened bread, the bitter herbs and the fruit of the vine. R3363:6

The Memorial Supper was on the 14th day of Nisan after six o'clock on the evening before Jesus was crucified. R3526:2, 2771:5, 1625:3, 1182:6

Luke 22:10

The house -- It has been surmised by some that the house was that of Mark's mother, Mary, and that the upper room thus used was the same one in which the apostles subsequently met and where the Pentecostal blessing was poured out upon them. R3363:6

Luke 22:11

The Master saith -- Probably the man was a believer. R1800:3

Luke 22:12

A large upper room -- During the Passover week hospitality was recognized as a duty in Jerusalem; hence the readiness with which the Lord's request for a room was granted. R1800:3

Perhaps furnished by previous arrangement. R1800:3

Luke 22:14

When the hour was come -- There can be no doubt from the account that our Lord and his disciples ate the Passover supper on the day preceding the one on which the Jews in general ate it. R2771:5, 721:1

Our Lord and his disciples did not sit down to the Passover until even--the beginning of the fourteenth day of Nisan. R3750:5, 3363:6

No man previously laid hands on him because "his hour was not yet come."

The precise time of this great event and had not only been typified for centuries with careful precision as to the very day, but our Lord declares it so with equal exactness. R3526:1

Luke 22:15

With desire -- Probably one reason was that he there designed breaking the truth of its significance to them to the extent that they could receive it. R839:3, 465:6

Eat this passover -- As a Jew, under the Law Covenant, it was the duty of our Lord to eat first of the typical lamb. R1625:3, 839:1

Because the Passover lamb which they were to eat typified our Lord himself. R2449:1, 5870:5, 5641:1

Commemorating the saving of the typical first-born from the typical "prince of this world"--Pharaoh. R5641:4, 5870:2

Luke 22:16

Until it be fulfilled -- Doubtless he longed to have them understand that it would begin to be fulfilled a little later on in that very day, by the slaying of the real Lamb. R465:6

The Passover was fulfilled only so far as the slaying of the lamb; the eating of its flesh has been going on all through the gospel dispensation; and the Passover itself, which followed the eating of the flesh and sprinkling of the blood, is not yet fulfilled; but is to be, in the Kingdom of God. HG55:6

Reminding them of his declaration that he would go away to receive a Kingdom, which they would share. R5871:5, 721:2

Luke 22:17

The cup -- It was Jesus' cup of which he drank. He gave it to his disciples to finish. Thus symbolically we are invited to be partakers of the sufferings of Christ. (2 Cor. 1:5-7) R4475:1 Representing shed blood. R1101:4, 5870:5, 2772:6

All who would sit with him in his throne must drink of Christ's cup of self-denial and self-sacrifice and be immersed into his death. R4591:4

The blood of sprinkling for the Church of the first-born. R5641:5

Divide it -- All who would be members of his body must drink of this blood. R5341:3

Thus symbolically we were invited to be partakers of the sufferings of Christ. R4475:1

Luke 22:18

Fruit of the vine -- The fruit of the vine was as important as the bread in the memorial; but it is never mentioned in connection with the weekly meetings for breaking of bread and for prayers. R1625:6

Raisin juice or grape juice may be used. R1101:5, 3751:5, 3526:6, 2773:4, 1626:4; Q486:4

The grapes must submit to the pressure that will extract all their juices, must lose their identity as grapes, if they would become the life-giving elixir for the world. R5871:3, 5341:3

Symbolizing our Savior's human life given for us; his soul poured out unto death on our behalf (Isa. 53:12) R5871:2

Represents blood or life shed, given, yielded up, sacrificed. R5871:4, 3526:4, 2772:6

"Shed for many for the remission of sins." (Matt. 26:28) R3526:4, 2772:6

Wine, "the blood of grapes," symbolizes death, and also the spirit, the effect being to cheer, refresh, enliven. R226:1

Until the kingdom -- When he will share the new wine--the joys, rights and privileges of the divine nature. R721:2

The wine of our feast is but typical of the joys of the Kingdom. R94:6

As usual, our Lord had something to say about the Kingdom. It seems to have been associated in his every discourse. R2773:1

Shall come -- Just what our Lord meant is difficult to positively determine, but it seems not inconsistent to understand him to mean that as a result of the trials and sufferings symbolized, there will be a jubilation in the Kingdom. R2773:1

He took bread -- The Lord's Supper was instituted as a substitute for the Passover. R3750:4, 466:1

They had their usual Passover supper of roast lamb; and afterwards our Lord introduced what we familiarly term "The Lord's Supper"--a new symbolization of the antitypical Passover. SM563:2

Our Lord instituted the Memorial supper, the observance of the first day of the week and baptism, not by command, but by example. R1942:3

Probably it was near midnight when, after the Passover had been eaten, our Lord instituted the new memorial of his own death, the Lord's Supper, substituting it for the Passover supper of the Law. R2771:3

Instead of the lamb would be the unleavened bread, representing our Lord's flesh. SM563:3

The design of the Master was to call their minds from the typical lamb to himself, the antitype, and to show them that it would be no longer proper to observe a feature of the Law which he was about to fulfil. R839:4, 466:1

The bread is to be eaten by all, the wine may only be partaken of by a few. R1014:5

If we are Christ's, we are part of the same loaf; to be broken as he was; to die as he did, to the flesh, crucifying the flesh. R94:5

It is one loaf, though made from many grains. The grains cannot retain their individuality and their life if they would become bread for the world. R5341:3

Unleavened bread. R1943:2

Leaven is corruption. So, then, this symbol declares that Jesus was free from sin, a lamb without spot or blemish. R840:3, 466:5

The shape, at least, resembled more particularly what we would call crackers. R3364:4

If not available, soda crackers or water crackers are an unleavened bread, and will serve the purpose. R1943:4, 1626:2

"Holy, harmless, undefiled, separate from sinners." (Heb. 7:26) R4591:2, 2772:3, 1101:4

Representing our Lord's perfect humanity. R1101:4, 5870:6, 4591:2, 2772:2, 1800:6; F464

The eating of that unleavened bread represented their appropriating to themselves of the merit of Christ's sacrifice--their justification by faith. SM563:3; R5871:1, 3526:4, 2772:3

"I am the bread of life." (John 6:35) R2772:3, 5870:6

And brake it -- The bread must be broken to be appropriated. So, it was necessary that our Lord be broken in death ere we could appropriate his merit and enjoy everlasting life. R3526:4

He was the only one at that time who could break the loaf. Today, as the unleavened bread of the Memorial season is passed to each of us, and as each takes a portion of it, he breaks it for himself. R5341:5

Not only was the breaking of Jesus' body to provide bread of life, but it also opened the narrow way to life. R840:2, 466:5

Not to be confused with the feasts "to break bread" (Acts 2:42,46; 20:7).

These first-day-of-the-week gatherings were love-feasts, and never intended to take the place of or in any sense represent our Lord's Memorial Supper. R2771:4, 1014:1, 839:6, 466:3

The first day of the week would be most inappropriate. Instead of being set apart to commemorate Jesus' death, it was to them a day of rejoicing, reminding them of the fact that the Lord is risen indeed. R839:6, 466:3

When we break this bread together, we not only symbolize our Lord's broken body, but also our own breaking or dying as members of the Church.

R4622:5, 4591:5

Gave unto them -- God gives you the best nourishment, although not always the sweetest to the taste. R721:5

This is my body -- "This" represented the antitypical Lamb, "the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world." (John 1:29) R2771:6

The bread and the wine represented his body and his blood. R3364:4, 2772:2

It was not his pre-human existence as a spirit being that was sacrificed.

R2772:3

Man is of human or flesh nature; hence if the spiritual Son of God would give to dying men the bread of life, it must be flesh, full of life-giving nutriment. R1014:3

Does not prove that the body is in the bread. The whole matter is quickly settled when we remember that our Lord had not yet died when he said these words. R3526:4

The loaf represents primarily the Lord Jesus' body. In a large sense, it includes all the body of Christ. Thus, the breaking of the loaf, the breaking of the body, has continued for more than eighteen centuries.

R5341:5

The secondary and deeper significance of the loaf and the cup: "The cup of blessing which we bless, is it not the participation of the blood of Christ? The bread which we break, is it not the participation of the body of Christ?" (1 Cor. 10:16,17) R2772:5

The Roman Catholic doctrine of the Mass falsely claims that the bread is changed into the actual flesh of Jesus, which the priest breaks as a fresh sacrifice. R3526:3, 3879:5, 2771:2, 1100:4

Symbolically represents our partaking of the fleshly perfection of the man Jesus, not actually, but by faith. R4591:3

Which is given -- We cannot eat anything that is alive, nor would anything that dieth of itself (by disease) be fit for food. There was no way to give us this bread of life except by the sacrifice of the man Christ Jesus. R1014:6

This do -- Not out of fear, constraint, or law, but in grateful remembrance of our ransom. R1183:1

And do it intelligently. R1016:5

He invites all of his followers to eat of it. We partake of his flesh when we appropriate to ourselves the blessings, mercy and grace secured by the breaking of his body--the benefits of his sacrifice, securing to us the forgiveness of sins and reconciliation with the Father. R3364:5

The eating of that unleavened bread represented their appropriating to themselves of the merit of Christ's sacrifice--their justification. SM563:3

The Lord's Supper and Baptism are the only injunctions of a symbolic character commanded us, and they are new ones. F228; R1527:1

Assemble together, even if there be but two or three of like precious faith. Even the solitary ones may break the bread and partake of the wine, in heart communion with the Lord and with the scattered fellow members of the one body. R1014:1

Commemorate the death of the "Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world." (John 1:29) R1100:3, 5869:6, 1013:3

Annually, on its anniversary. R1100:3, 3961:3, 1625:3, 803:1, 721:4

As reckoned by the Jews, the apostles and the early Church. R1100:5, 2771:1, 1625:3

In remembrance -- Our Lord's Supper was evidently intended to be a reminder of his death and of our covenant as members of his body to have fellowship in his sufferings. R2771:5T

How often the old covenant was to be celebrated is plainly stated in Exod. 13:10, "Thou shalt therefore keep this ordinance in his season, from year to year," and, as he has not altered the time, I dare not. R803:2

Protestants generally observe the celebration, the Memorial, not upon its anniversary but as irrespective of it, as though they had no knowledge of the relationship between the typical Passover and the antitypical day which the Lord enjoined upon us to celebrate. R3750:2, 1014:3

The Lord's Supper was instituted as the antitype of the Jewish Passover, the 14th day of the first month. Subsequently it was celebrated on the nearest Friday and his resurrection on Sunday--Good Friday and Easter Sunday. Younger Christian denominations, seeking differences with Catholicism, skipped the Jewish type and began weekly, monthly or quarterly celebrations. R2771:1, 1943:1, 1625:6

We do not quarrel with any who prefer to commemorate more frequently, neither do we regard it as a binding or compulsory observance. R325:2

Seeing the Memorial celebrates the antitype of the killing of the Passover Lamb, we can see that it is properly celebrated on its anniversary--not monthly, quarterly, weekly nor daily, but yearly. R1943:1, 1625:3, 1014:2, 839:5, 721:2, 596:1, 325:2

The Lord's Supper is a reminder of his death, as the Passover was a type of it. Jesus fulfilled the latter and instituted the former in the same night in which he was betrayed. R596:1

Of me -- And no longer in remembrance of the typical lamb and the typical passing over of the typical first-born of typical Israel. R3525:6

He did not say, This do in remembrance of yourselves--in remembrance of your own share in the sacrifice. R5341:6

Remember him as the slain Lamb. R3879:5 No longer in remembrance of the typical lamb and the typical deliverance from Egypt. R1100:3, 4592:6, 3961:1, 839:4, 721:2

It would be no longer proper to observe a feature of the Law which he was about to fulfill. R466:1

Luke 22:20

The cup -- A new feature added by our Lord. SM563:4

His act of handing the cup to the disciples, and asking them to drink of it, was an invitation to them to become partakers of his sufferings. R840:4

For "fruit of the vine" we prefer unfermented grape juice or raisin juice rather than wine, because if the liquor habit has a hold upon any one we would avoid the temptation to such. R1943:2

Representing the crushing of the grapes, the blood of the grapes--the Master's blood, his life poured out, sacrificed, and their lives with him. R4622:5, 5871:4, 4331:3, 3880:3, SM564:T

Nowhere is this cup described as wine, though it may have been. R2772:6

Like the bread, our partaking of it means our appropriation of the benefits of his sacrifice--our justification. R1800:6

It also memorializes the consecration to death of all the members of the Body of Christ. R4980:5, 4563:4

After supper -- How appropriate that the giving of the wine was after the eating of the bread. Only those who are justified are invited to crucify their justified humanity. R1015:6

Not represented by the type, the Passover supper, but the symbol of joy and life. R94:5

After the Passover supper Jesus instituted the Memorial Supper, a new matter. R3879:4

A new Memorial upon the old foundation. R5870:5

This cup -- All who accept the invitation to drink of his blood thereby pledge their lives in the same service in which he gave his life. This thought is entirely additional to anything in the Jewish Passover type. There is no intimation that any of the household were to partake of the blood of the slain lamb. SM564:1

It is one cup, though it contains the juice of many grapes. The grapes cannot maintain themselves as grapes if they would constitute the life-giving spirit. R5341:3

Of the new testament -- The New Covenant is the one that is mentioned throughout the Old Testament, superseding the Law Covenant. R3364:5 The Keturah Covenant, or New Covenant, which is not yet in existence. R4367:4, 4331:3

As soon as the last member of the Body of Christ shall have died, the New Covenant with Israel will be sealed. R4453:3

We are invited to share his cup, to share the sealing, and to share the dispensing of the New Covenant blessings to Israel and the world. R4429:4

A covenant of mercy. R2859:3

The New Covenant cannot become operative until the cup of the Lord's sufferings which are left behind has been fully drained by the members of his Body. R4310:2,3, 5542:6; NS297:5

Typified by the Law Covenant instituted by Moses, to be instituted by the greater Prophet, Christ. R2859:2

A new and better covenant, by a new and greater Mediator, The Christ. R2859:1

In my blood -- Instituted by reason of his blood. R1728:1

Both the Abrahamic Covenant and the New Covenant were secured, made sure, with his own precious blood. B69

The broken bread taught a part of the lesson; the cup taught the remainder of it. We not only need nourishment to come back to God and his favor, but we need the precious blood as our redemption price. R3526:5

It will continue to represent my blood with you, a reminder of my death and of the covenant which was thus sealed between God and sinners by myself as the great Mediator between God and man. R3364:5

Jesus' blood is the only one that could be meant. The cup represented our Lord's sufferings. He gave it to his disciples. R4475:1

Which seals, makes binding and obligatory, ratifies, the New Covenant. R2859:1, 4331:3; CR59:3

The blood of our Lord and the blood of his body is all one blood. It is one Priest of many members. It is one atonement for all--for the sins of the whole world. The blood represents not only the death of Christ, but also the death of all the members of his body, to whom merit is imputed. R5342:4

The Scriptures say that the life is in the blood. In harmony with that statement, the Jews were bidden to always refrain from eating the blood. The life principle that he gave to man seems to reside in the blood. As long as the blood is passing through the organs of circulation, there is life; but when the blood is shed, the being dies. R5341:6

No Israelite was allowed to eat blood. This was symbolic of how all eat the flesh of the Son of man, but all are not to drink or partake of his death. R1015:6

His right to the earthly life, by his obedience to the Law, is the merit which becomes the blood of the New (Law) Covenant, the basis of reconciliation between God and Israel. CR59:3

Which is shed -- The fruit of the vine symbolized our Lord's life given for us--his human life, his being, his soul, poured out unto death on our behalf. R2772:4

Plainly presenting Christ's death as the means through which he gained ability to benefit many. R1335:6*

The blood, symbolized by the wine, represents death. The blood is the life of anything; and when it is shed, or taken from it, it implies the death of the creature. R1015:6, 840:4, 466:6

Many who trust in the precious blood have never philosophized on the subject sufficiently to see that blood shed always represents death, a life given up. R1337:4

By partaking of it intelligently we pledge our lives even unto death in the service of our Lord and Redeemer. R1015:6

If we, as his disciples, lay down our life for the brethren, we are doing what Jesus did. This cup, then, represents the full renunciation of earthly life and of all claims thereto. R5342:1

Whoever intelligently partakes of the Memorial Supper thereby indicates two things: (1) His faith in Jesus as the Passover Lamb, and (2) his membership in the body of Christ. SM564:2

Only those who both eat his flesh (appropriate his merits--justification) and drink his blood (share with him in his sacrifice) dwell in him as members of the one body. The balance of mankind, by eating (appropriating) the rights of the man Christ Jesus, obtain a dependent life. R1016:1
It was the giving up of Christ's life that paid the ransom. R1335:3*
We all need the blood of sprinkling, not upon our houses, but upon our hearts. R5870:4

Luke 22:21

The hand of him -- John tells us that our Lord was troubled in spirit, manifested emotion, at the time he said this. R2772:1

It was a cause for great sorrow that it should be one who had been a bosom friend and disciple. R3364:3

That betrayeth me -- It really made no difference to the Lord, so far as his intention and consecration were concerned, whether he was apprehended by the rulers without any betrayal or whether the betrayal were by a comparative stranger or by a disciple. R3364:2

An illustration of the hopelessness of a soul willingly submitted to the power of Satan. R1800:6

Judas' coolness manifested his hardness of heart and depth of hypocrisy. R1800:6

With me on the table -- The Memorial is a gathering of professedly consecrated believers in the Redeemer; but if others come in making such profession reject them not; remember that Judas met with the Lord and the other eleven. R1626:2

Despite the custom that to receive another's hospitality is, especially in the East, a pledge of friendship. R3879:3

Luke 22:23

Began to inquire -- They had the spirit of self-examination; a humble, loving spirit. R1800:6

Luke 22:24

A strife -- Only recorded in Luke, though also implied in John 13. We are not to suppose that the apostles were actuated wholly by ambition and selfishness. We may well suppose that the strife was for position of nearness to the Master because of their love for him. R3363:6, 2449:3

The strife probably began when they were taking their places at the table, each desiring to be nearest to the Lord, and so manifesting somewhat of a selfish spirit. R1800:3

Colporteurs and all public representatives of the truth are often subjects of special temptations. R1537:1

Possibly respecting which of them should perform the menial service of feet-washing. R2449:3

The discussion seems to have originated with Peter, because a pointed portion of the answer was addressed specially to him. R1987:2

Which of them -- Should the temptation ever come to show wisdom by magnifying a minor difference between yourself and another, reject the thought as a temptation from the devil, and do the very reverse--minimize differences. R1537:4

The greatest -- To aspire to advancement for self-glory is contrary to the spirit of God's plan, which is a love that places a neighbor on an equality with self, and which only desires advancement for the purpose of increased ability to serve others. R875:4*

Even a very little prominence may become a dangerous snare unless it be coupled with great humility. R1987:3

Not only a warning to the individual seeking preferment in the Church, but also an instruction to the Church to accept as its honored servants only such as he describes. R875:4*

They had willingly left business prospects and endured the scorn of their fellows that they might become joint-heirs with Christ in his Kingdom. The Master had invariably encouraged these hopes and ambitions. His reproof was merely against their strife as to which should be greatest. R1415:3

Exercise lordship -- The disposition of the world is toward tyranny on the one hand, and servility on the other; the one class becoming arrogant and self-assertive, and the other dependent and truckling, both of which are ignoble traits. R1987:3

Luke 22:26

Ye shall not be so -- Ye shall not cultivate in yourselves a spirit of arrogant pride by seeking to lord it over others; nor shall ye cultivate in others a spirit of truckling servility, unworthy of noble manhood. R1987:3

But -- On the other hand, cultivate in yourselves the spirit of humility and loving service. R1987:3

He that is greatest -- He that has superior ability of one kind or another. R1987:5 Let him think soberly of himself, realizing how far short he is of actual perfection. R1987:5

The younger -- Very meek and modest. R1987:5

Is chief -- By qualifications and providential circumstances. R1987:5 Selfish aspirations have been a stumbling stone to very many of God's children. R875:4*

"Whosoever will be chief among you, let him be your servant." (Matt. 20:27) R1987:5

Luke 22:28

In my temptations -- If we endure the temptations that befall us, we shall be able to identify ourselves with the character of the holy brethren. R811:1*

Luke 22:29

I appoint unto you -- The present Gospel age is merely for the selection and education of those whom God purposes to use as his ministers in the next age, the Millennium. R2490:2

A kingdom -- While the words of warning were solemnly given, the Lord did not forget to give them also words of encouragement, pointing them to the glory to follow the present scenes of suffering and humiliation.

R1988:1

Our Lord Jesus, in his talks with his followers, strengthened and encouraged their expectations of a coming Kingdom. A274

Appointed unto me -- The exaltation of our Lord Jesus Christ to glory and honor and power and dominion does not imply that the Heavenly Father abdicates the throne of heaven in his favor; nor that they are one, for both are recognized. E38

For Christ to have a Kingdom appointed to him, as Luke records the conversation; and for him to sit on the throne of his glory, as Matthew records it (Matt. 19:28), appear to indicate one and the same rank.

R1282:6*

Christ did not claim to be "equal in power." E38

Sit -- Be permanently established. R1283:5*

Thrones -- Symbol of sacerdotal or regal authority. R1283:1*

Judging -- Greek, krino, the word is full of the thought of trial, or testing, or criticism; but it does not imply finality of decision. R2430:3

Krino is used in referring to the judgment, trial, of the Millennial age when the Church, Head and Body, will be the judges. R2426:4

Ruling. A274

"The saints shall judge the world." (1 Cor. 6:2) R2430:1

Luke 22:31

Simon, Simon -- Indicating that the discussion above originated with Peter. R1987:2

It was the most trying time for his apostles, and particularly for Judas and Peter. Both were prominent--one as treasurer and purchasing agent; the other as a specially bold champion for the Lord's cause. R3759:3; C189

Three were tempted, varied results. Our Lord's course was the proper one, humility, fear, an appreciation of the trials leading to watchfulness and prayer. Peter, a good man of strong character, realized not his danger, and hence was not prepared for the arts of Satan. A fearful time for Judas, whose heart was not right. He fell quickly into the snare of the adversary. R3759:6

Satan -- One of the frequent references by our Lord, along with a larger number by the apostles, referring to a personal devil. R3165:6

Whose very existence is now being denied by many. R3165:6

Hath desired to have you -- This was no time for considering questions of superiority and self-exaltation; it was a time for sober thought and humble watchfulness and prayer. R1987:6

Sift you as wheat -- Experience has repeatedly proved that at this season every year God permits Satan to specially sift the wheat. R1793:4

We are in the harvest time; the separation of the wheat from the tares is due, and more than this, the separation of the chaff from the wheat is also due--a sifting process. R3760:5

Separate you from your loyalty to Christ and discourage you from discipleship. R4712:4

This sifting took place shortly after the casting off of nominal fleshly Israel, foreshadowing the testing of the Sanctuary class now. C189

In the Spring of 1878, the parallel time, the sifting began which has continued ever since, and must test every one who receives the light of Present Truth. R3823:1

Siftings are permitted because only those who can stand siftings, trials and tests are fit for the Kingdom. R5563:6

Luke 22:32

I have prayed for thee -- For all of the Peter class the Lord is the Head, the Representative, the Advocate before the Father. R3760:4
Because of the difference in the hearts of Peter and Judas, our Lord could properly be the Advocate of the one before the Father, but not the Advocate of the other. R4908:1; 3760:2

Thy faith fail not -- Under the coming trial. R1987:6

Peter's courage was really his weak point. R5563:1, 5202:2

When thou art converted -- From this disposition to a sober humility. R1987:6

Although both Peter and Judas repented, the one was accepted back to divine favor, the other was not. R3760:2

Strengthen -- The more we resist temptation the stronger characters we will become. R5331:6

I am ready -- Full of loving loyalty to the Lord. R1987:6

He did not know how much weakness was in him. When the Lord was watching and praying that momentous night, Peter was one of the first to fall asleep. Afterward he was the very one to deny the Lord, and with cursing. R5202:1

Luke 22:34

Peter -- His zeal and energy made him a leading apostle. R1987:2
A good man of strong character, loyal and true, but bewildered and off-guard. R3759:6, 4907:5

The Peter class, although loyal of heart, do those things they do not wish to do, or leave undone what they really desire to do, because of weakness of their flesh and failure to lay hold on promised help. R3760:1

Luke 22:35

Without purse -- To a covenant people whose duty it was to receive and entertain the messengers of the Lord, and whose receiving or rejecting of them would be a test of their fidelity to God as his covenant people. R1988:2

To show the Lord's full ability to care for them under all circumstances and conditions. R2500:2

Nothing -- For the common people heard them gladly, and were greatly moved by their teachings and their works. R1988:4

Luke 22:36

But now -- A change from the instructions in Matt. 10:10 which was given to the twelve apostles sent forth to announce the Kingdom. That was not a general instruction for all time, but particular to the occasion. That was not applicable to this present time. R2500:2

Let him take it -- And thus, being independent of the people, show them that self-denying zeal for God which would gladly espouse an unpopular cause with no hope of earthly gain. R1988:4

To clearly manifest that when he was betrayed he gave himself up of his own free will, not being without defense. R3367:4, 5922:1, 2778:6, 2468:5

Luke 22:37

Be accomplished -- The prophecies concerning me are about to be fulfilled in my crucifixion. R1988:4

Luke 22:38

Two swords -- Necessary to show that his capture was not made by force, but that he voluntarily permitted himself to be taken and crucified.

R5922:1, 2468:5, 1988:5

It is enough -- They were intended merely for a demonstration, and not for a defence. R5922:4

Our Lord had no thought of having his disciples war a carnal warfare on his behalf. R2468:4

Luke 22:39

He came out -- Probably for two reasons: First, realizing he would be arrested, he did not wish to bring trouble on the friend who had permitted the use of the upper room; Second, he desired the still quiet of midnight, out upon the hillside, where he could be alone with God. R2773:6

As he was wont -- Knowing the plot beforehand, he deliberately went to the place where they would seek him. R1988:5

Mount of Olives -- To an orchard there known as Gethsemane, signifying "oil-press place." R2773:3, 3885:2

Followed him -- Because he loved them, and knew that they loved him, he permitted them to accompany him to the place of prayer, that they might watch and pray with him. R1801:2

Luke 22:40

At the place -- The Garden of Gethsemane, not a wild woods nor a public garden, but an olive orchard under the control of Jesus' friends, about half a mile from the wall of Jerusalem. R3885:2, 2773:6

Enter not into temptation -- The most trying time of our Lord's earthly experience, and also for the apostles, especially Judas and Peter. R3759:3
The only safe way is to be prepared because your Adversary, the devil, is seeking whom he may devour. He knows your weak points, and is ready to take advantage of them. R3179:1

Some will make light of the warning and expose themselves to danger; others will hearken to the warning of the Master's voice, and to them it will be the power of God unto their preservation. R3761:4

Luke 22:41

Withdrawn from them -- Leaving eight of the disciples there, as an outer guard, so to speak. R2773:6, 2467:2, 1801:2

He took with him Peter, James and John--Peter, the bold and impulsive; James and John, the so-called "sons of thunder"--the three most courageous, most zealous, most earnest of his disciples. R2774:1

"He trod the winepress alone, of the people there was none with him."
(Isa. 63:3) In his very saddest hour, when he most needed comfort and consolation, it was not possible for even the closest and dearest of his earthly friends to enter into his feelings or sympathize with him. How different with us! R3886:4, 2467:2

If the Lord needed to seek retirement from the busy scenes of his active life to be alone with God, surely we need to do so. R1802:1

Kneeled down -- Prostrating himself upon his knees, with his face to the earth. R2774:1

And prayed -- We should follow the example of our Lord, and seek the Father's face, anxious to know whether or not everything is all right with him, anxious for some fresh assurance that it will be well with us. R2774:6
Our Lord followed the direction he gave to the disciples: he watched, he prayed, he got a blessing, he was strengthened, and came off victor. They did not watch and did not pray, failing to realize the necessities of the occasion, and as a result we find them scattered and bewildered. R2775:2
He found it needful to go to the Father for help to do his will. R146:6
That he might find grace to help in his hour of need. R1801:1, 2773:6

Luke 22:42

Father -- No one can thoughtfully read this lesson of our Lord's dark hour in Gethsemane without feeling that there is something thoroughly incorrect in the idea that our Lord Jesus was his own heavenly Father, Jehovah. R2773:3

The oneness existing between the Father and the Son is not a oneness of person, but of sentiment and will. R1904:4

If it be possible -- Apparently our Lord did not see any absolute necessity for his suffering more than the sinner suffered in order to pay man's ransom price. R2467:4; SM647:1

The death of the cross was not necessary as our ransom price. The Father required this extreme obedience as a test, and the loyalty of our dear Redeemer was fully attested. R2467:5

Remove this cup -- We are not to assume that he meant to escape dying. The cup was the shame and ignominy of arrest as a law-breaker, a public trial and conviction, and subsequent crucifixion as a malefactor. R2467:4
Our Lord's query was: Could he stand this? or would it be possible for the Father to deviate to that extent without interfering with the divine plan for the great work being accomplished? R3886:2

Our Lord was exceeding fearful of himself, fearful lest he should make a misstep and thus spoil the entire plan of God which he had so obediently undertaken and thus far so loyally performed. R3886:2

His thought apparently: "I shall be esteemed of all my countrymen as forsaken of God, and as accursed of him; I shall die as a blasphemer; whereas my every sentiment is, and has always been, fealty, loyalty to the Father." This, we believe, was the "cup." R2775:2

We are to remember that he does not pour into our cup of sorrow and trial any bitter experiences that are not needful to us and that will not subsequently work out for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory (2 Cor. 4:17). R2469:1

Not my will -- Not my human will. R146:6; T54

I claim no rights; I attempt neither to follow my own ideas nor to exercise my own will. SM647:1

The nearer a person is to perfection, the stronger is his will and the more difficult to crucify. The more confident any one is that his will is good and for good and blessing to others, the more difficult it is to see good reasons for surrendering it. SM647:1

In such a condition prayers are always answered; but in such a condition the prayers would be very modest; more a thanksgiving for our blessings. R798:2

An important principle, especially in those cases where we may, upon request, pray for the recovery of the afflicted or imbecile not of the consecrated little flock. R5204:3, 798:5

An expression of confidence and trust; indicating the necessary submission. R798:2, 3886:2

A valuable lesson for us to learn, of patience and waiting upon the Lord to direct in his own time and way. PD40/50

We are to give up our will in order that his will may be done. R5624:3

But thine -- Father--the divine will. T54

I leave all to thy wisdom. SM647:1

Always this disposition of reverence for the Father, and of full trust and confidence in the divine wisdom, love, justice and power. R5846:6

So long as he thought there was a possibility of the elimination of the shame feature, he was nervously anxious to have it so; but as soon as he realized this was not the Father's will, his heart instantly responded.

R2467:5

Though tempted in all points like as we (his brethren) are, he ignored his own will and all suggestions from others contrary to God's plan, and obeyed God implicitly. Therein lay the secret of his success. R1125:5

"If My Word abide in you" (John 15:7)--we must search the Scriptures to know the will of the Lord; to know what he has promised and what he has not promised; to know what to ask and what not to ask. R4983:3

"I came. . .not to do mine own will, but the will of him that sent me."

(John 6:38) R5846:6

We should not merely submit to his will, but delight to do his will at any cost. R5303:6

Be done -- In and to this earthen vessel consecrated to death. T54

In seasons of heavy trial, if we hold on to the arm of Jehovah, his grace will always be sufficient. R1802:4

Luke 22:43

And there appeared -- While some old manuscripts omit verses 43 and 44, others do not. In the footnotes of the Tischendorf Testament, "S2" omits these verses. The "S" represents the Sinaitic manuscript, but the "2" represents a secondary or altered reading of that manuscript. The Sinaitic manuscript originally contained these verses, but some later hand obliterated them, thus making this manuscript to concur with the Vatican and Alexandrian. We are inclined to think these verses genuine. R3040:2, 146:6

An angel -- We know not what message that angel brought, nor is it necessary that we should. It is sufficient for us to know that the Father answered the prayer. We can surmise that the Father's assurance through the angel was that he had the divine favor. R3886:3, 2774:5
This ministry may have consisted in informing him of the Father's will in respect to what things he should suffer, and how they were to be expected. R2468:4

Although there will not come to us the same kind of heavenly messenger, nevertheless a heavenly messenger of another kind shall surely be sent, it may be in the person of a fellow disciple, or it may be one of the apostles themselves, through the many gracious words of inspiration. R2775:4

The Lord is our angel, who speaks to us the Father's message, telling us that if we abide in his love all will be right in the end, and that he is able and willing to bring us off conquerors, yea, more than conquerors. R3887:1

We cannot doubt that in the hours of deep affliction, comfort and strength are often experienced, coming from the invisible, though not expected, and the source not fully acknowledged. R75:1*

Has not God commissioned his angels also to bear up the "feet" of the Body of Christ, lest some overwhelming trial prove too much for them? (Psa. 91:11,12) R1801:6

Looking back when in glory, we may see how much more fully they served us than we realized. R75:1*

There is to be a restoration of olden-time communication between heaven and earth, of which Spiritism is Satan's counterfeit. R1156:5

Strengthening him -- Probably by refreshing his mind with the precious promises and prophetic pictures of the coming glory. R1801:5

Decision respecting the Father's will immediately brought strength. R2467:5

If the Master himself needed strengthening, surely we also need it; and if he received it in response to supplications, it is an intimation to us of the way in which God is pleased to bestow the full assurance of faith. R2775:3

With reinforced courage, not a courage born of stoical indifference to pain, shame and loss, but a courage born of faith. R1801:5

From that moment onward we find him the coolest and calmest of the notable figures brought to our attention. When approached by Judas and his band, when before Caiaphas and Pilate, when crucified, he was the most calm and self-possessed of all. R2774:5, 1801:6

With the assurance that he had fulfilled his part--rendered full obedience to the Father's will. R5331:4, 5585:6

That he had the Father's approval and that he would be resurrected.

R4804:5, 5585:6

That all the gracious promises of glory, honor and immortality were his.

R4804:6

The Father gives us peace and strength through his assurance in his Word.

R3886:3

Prayers for help in trouble may be answered by removal of the cause, or by strength to overcome the disturbance. R3886:3

Luke 22:44

Being in an agony -- A contest, a struggle. The language used in the Greek implies a struggle of increasing force and severity. R2774:1

While with his disciples he had sought to be cheerful; but now his thoughts turned inward upon himself and his relationship to the Father; and outward upon the public shame, the contemptuous mockery and the public execution. R3885:3

Our Lord, untainted, unblemished by sin, undegraded, undulled by dying processes, was much more susceptible to the pains and sorrows of the hour than others of the fallen race could be. The finer the sentiments and characteristics, the greater the pain. R3885:3

Matthew: "sorrowful even unto death," a sorrow which almost crushed out his very life; Mark: "sore amazed," as though the sorrow had come upon him unexpectedly, as though he were bewildered. R2774:1

Because of the coming shame of trial, conviction and execution as a blasphemer and seditious, and oppressed with the fear that in some manner he might have failed of perfection, and that his death might mean extinction. R3886:1,2, 3885:3

Prayed more earnestly -- "He offered up strong cryings and tears unto him that was able to save him from [out of] death." (Heb. 5:7) R3885:6

As soon as he had the Father's assurance that he had not violated any conditions, and that he would not go into eternal death, he was content to suffer any other experience that might come to him. R5585:6

Drops of blood -- In the agony of Gethsemane the heart and the blood vessels had been affected. The palpitation of the heart had been so intense as to cause a blood sweat--a phenomenon rare, but not unknown, produced by intense mental excitement. SM642:1; R1801:2

This bloody sweat is not unknown to physicians today, although very rare.

It marks an extreme tension of feeling, sorrow nigh unto death. R2774:1

The chief reason why our Lord sorrowed on this occasion, so that his agony, becoming very intense, produced a bloody sweat, was his realization of his own situation in relationship to God and the covenant under which he had made his sacrifice. R3885:5

The very thought of extinction would bring anguish. This thought seems not to have come to our Lord with the same force previously. He now saw himself about to suffer according to the Law as an evil-doer, and the question naturally arose, was he entirely blameless, would the heavenly judge thoroughly acquit him whom so many were disposed to condemn? R2774:5
Infidelity has suggested that this account of our Redeemer's sorrow attests his weakness. Many martyrs faced death with boldness. There is a dullness and numbness connected with fallen manhood that can regard pain and death with indifference. We are glad that Jesus was not one of those cold, stoical icebergs, but that he was full of warm, tender feelings and is thus able to sympathize with the most tender, delicate and refined, more than any other human being. R2774:2, 1801:2

A cold, stoical indifference to the loss of life, based upon knowledge that it could last but a short time longer anyway, is very different from the clear knowledge our Lord had and the realization that the life he was about to lay down was not forfeited through sin, but was a voluntary sacrifice. R2774:3, 2467:2

Our race, already nine-tenths dead, has but a feeble appreciation of the value of life and has come to regard death with equanimity. To our Lord, death must have been much more terrible than to us who are already nine-tenths dead and correspondingly blunted in all our sensibilities. R2467:3

Prof. Tischendorf shows that this account of our Lord's bloody sweat is not found in the Vatican manuscript and that, although it appeared in the original Sinaitic manuscript it was crossed out by a later critic. The passage is therefore doubtful, or at least questionable. R2774:3

The drops, (called thromboiclots), are symptomatic of a disease called diapedesis, and is caused by extreme tension of the nervous system. It once afflicted Charles IX of France. R2767:1*

Luke 22:45

Disciples -- Gracefully he condescended to men of low estate, and esteemed them brethren beloved, of whom he was not ashamed. R1801:2
It was no sign of weakness in the Master that he thus craved human sympathy. R1801:2, 3886:6

Sleeping for sorrow -- Their eyes being heavy from sorrow. R3886:6
The hour was midnight; they were sharing his sorrows, but unable to appreciate them rightly. R3886:6

Luke 22:46

Why sleep ye? -- Are we asleep, or are we heeding the words of the Apostle, They that sleep, sleep in the night, but we who are of the day should be awake, sober, putting on the whole armor of God? R3887:1

Rise and pray -- We are to pray together as the Lord's people; we are to pray in our homes, as families; we are to pray in secret, in private; we are to have the spirit of prayer in all that we say and do. R2775:5
Some make the mistake of praying without watching; others make the mistake of watching without praying; but the only safe and proper method is that which our Lord directed, to combine the two. R2775:5

There seems to be special need of this during the Memorial season.
R3178:3,6, 3179:1

Lest ye enter -- Those who neglect the Master's words will be sure to enter into temptation, and tolerably sure to fall therein. The fall will be severe, even though, like Peter, they should be afterward recovered out of it--but with weeping. R2775:5

In this evil time, an hour of severe trial is upon us all. R2774:5, 2775:4
There is a peculiar force of temptations at the time of the Passover, every Spring. R3178:3, 3760:3

Luke 22:47

While he yet spake -- Arresting him by night, fearing that an arrest in daylight would create a disturbance at a time when the city was full of visitors to the Passover. R3887:2

A multitude -- Not Roman soldiers, but a rabble of the curious, with certain servants of the High Priest, who was also a Judge. These were court officers, an impromptu sheriff's posse. R3887:2, 2779:1, 2467:6

Judas -- At the beginning of his discipleship, probably sincere, the gross defection of heart and character coming on him gradually, beginning with the merest suggestion and ending with the most awful tragedy. The suggestion was probably along the line of selfishness. R3887:4, 2779:2
There will always be a motive, good or bad, back of every deed done to under-members of his body, as well as to the Head. To find strong motives is not to find valid excuses for treacheries. R2468:2

The Judas spirit of selfishness even today might lead to betray of the Lord by the betrayal and injury of one of the least of his followers.
R3887:5, 2468:1

One of the most detestable characters in history. R4909:5
Whose heart was selfish, ambitious, covetous--a money-lover, betraying the Master for thirty pieces of silver. R5552:2, 4908:2, 3759:6, 3366:3
As retribution, Judas died soon by his own hand. R3369:3
When temptation comes, the disloyal and selfish Judas class receive it, entertain it, enter into the spirit of it heartily, and are swallowed up by it. R3760:1, 4908:1

Went before them -- It is presumed, apparently on good grounds, that they first sought Jesus in the upper room, where he had left less than an hour before. Finding them gone, Judas knew he would be most likely to find them at Gethsemane. R2468:1

Judas either knew the garden as a spot frequented by Jesus and the disciples, or had learned at the supper where the company intended to go subsequently. R3887:2

Evidently advancing beyond the band to give the salutation, according to prearrangement, they he should thus indicate the one they sought. R2779:2

To kiss him -- The Greek indicates that he kissed him repeatedly. R3887:2

The representatives of the Judas spirit follow his course even to the extent of betraying with a kiss, oftentimes professing great love and respect for the members of the body of Christ, whom they secretly smite for their personal gain, or in an endeavor to gain place or influence or other selfish aggrandizement. R3887:6

Some are willing to sell even their lips, as Judas did, so that, while professing to honor and serve the Lord, they are willing to join with those who misrepresent his character, his plan and his Word. R2779:4

Luke 22:48

Betrayest thou -- Judas was the chief, the real crucifier, because of his knowledge and willfulness. Upon him alone our Lord placed the full guilt. R1962:5

Luke 22:49

Smite with the sword -- All through the dark ages the sword, military power, was invoked and used on behalf of one party and then another of professed followers of Christ; sometimes against unbelievers, but very frequently against fellow-professors. R2779:4

Luke 22:50

Smote the servant -- Peter probably reasoned that if the Lord had directed the bringing of the swords they were for use and not ornament. R2778:6

Perhaps he remembered the Lord's words of a few hours previous, to the effect that his followers would all forsake him, and his own promise, "Although all shall be offended, yet will not I." (Mark 14:29) R2468:6

Of the high priest -- If Roman soldiers had the matter in charge, the high priest's servant no doubt would have been less officious. R2468:1

Cut off his right ear -- The blow was evidently intended for the head, but perhaps was providentially warded off so as to injure merely the ear. R2779:1

Luke 22:51

Suffer ye -- While the excitement and activities of a battle inspire courage, to be compelled to stand idle and not be permitted to lift a hand in self-defense in the presence of an armed enemy, is most discouraging to anyone. R2779:1

Healed him -- Exemplifying his words, "Love your enemies, do good to them which persecute you." R2469:1

Luke 22:53

This is your hour -- It is probable that Judas was disappointed in the result of his betrayal. Apparently he expected that our Lord would deliver himself by miraculous power from the hands of his enemies. R2468:2

The power of darkness -- The power of Satan is the power of darkness, ignorance and superstition. As the light of truth advances, the power that can only work in darkness is to that extent curtailed. R1233:3

Luke 22:54

Then took they him -- It would appear that the Jewish Sanhedrin exercised a certain amount of authority in respect to religious matters, and were permitted to make arrests, but not to execute criminals without the consent of the Roman governor. R2467:6

Our Lord surrendered voluntarily. R5922:2

Into the high priest's house -- For a preliminary hearing to examine Jesus and formulate and decide upon the charges on which it would convict at the formal meeting at dawn. R2470:4

It is clear that this was an irregular meeting of this assembly of the nation's representatives, drawn together by common consent to participate in the crime of condemning their Messiah, Jehovah's Anointed. R1809:2 Evidently a few such men as Joseph of Arimathea, Nicodemus and probably a few others known to be favorably inclined toward the new teacher were carefully excluded. R1809:2

Peter followed -- John points out that Peter and himself followed at a distance. Their deep interest in the Master would not permit them to go to their homes; they must keep him in sight, and note how things would go with him to the very last. R2469:2

His very courage led him into the trap placed before him by the adversary. This quality showed when he went into the courtyard of the palace and mingled with those who were there, even after cutting off the ear of one of the priest's servants. R5202:2

I know him not -- Far better for poor Peter to have openly declared, "Yes, I am one of his disciples, and since I presume that none such are wanted here I will go out." R2469:2

Peter's failure was along the very line of his strength. He was naturally courageous, had boasted of it, and yet failed for lack of courage. "When I am weak then I am strong," implies that he who feels himself strong is really weak, as in Peter's case. R2469:5

So with some today; when they are by themselves or with others of like precious faith, they are bold and courageous; but when in palaces or amongst officers of nominal Christianity, they are ashamed of their Master and afraid to confess him. R2469:2

But this sin was before the Spirit was given. F224

His devotion succumbed to his fears, so that he openly denied him. R1987:6

Perhaps the Lord allowed that to happen for our sakes, that we might realize our need to put our confidence in the Lord. CR307:5

Luke 22:58

I am not -- One false step leads naturally to another; to have now declared for Jesus would have been a public testimony that he was a liar, in addition to leading to his apprehension. R2469:3

Luke 22:61

Looked upon Peter -- A look of loving sympathy. R4712:5

And Peter remembered -- Had he realized the trials that were near, how vigilant he doubtless would have been! How ready are we for the harvest-time ordeal? R3886:6, 3887:1

Luke 22:62

Wept bitterly -- The weeping showed that the denial was merely the result of the weakness of the flesh. R5202:2

His crushing out of the evil inclination toward self-preservation proved, that in spite of his thrice-repeated denial, he was at heart loyal to his Master. So with us; he who resists the smallest temptation thereby strengthens his character that he may be able to withstand greater ones. R5202:2

Both Peter and Judas were penitent; the one was accepted back to divine favor, the other was not. The one, merely entrapped, at heart was not disloyal, and was restored and blessed. The other, though not without conscience, as shown by his later remorse, was without the genuine loyalty of heart which in the Lord's sight is indispensable. R4908:1

Tradition says that for the rest of his life Peter arose every morning at cock-crowing to remember afresh this denial of the Lord. R3368:1

Luke 22:63

Mocked him -- Low minds delight in the misfortunes of those whom they realize to be their superiors. R2470:5

And smote him -- "I gave my back to the smiters and my cheeks to them that plucked off the hair." (Isa. 50:6) E52

"Consider him who endured such contradiction of sinners against himself." (Heb. 12:3) R2781:6

Luke 22:64

They struck him -- It is not necessary to suppose the officer intentionally unjust; rather, influenced by his desire to appear zealous in support of the high priest, this accentuated his mental unbalance as a fallen man, and led him to imagine evil where there was none. R2469:6

On the face -- Our Lord did not literally turn the other cheek and ask the man to smite that also. This illustrates how the Lord's people are to understand this command, meaning simply that they are not to resist evil with evil, but to resist evil with good. R2469:6

Many other things -- "I hid not my face from shame and spitting." (Isa. 50:6) E52

Between the examination and formal conviction, our Lord was subjected for two hours to mocking and insults. R2470:5

By contrast, the spirit of Christ is that of love, gentleness, sympathy, kindness. R2470:5

Luke 22:66

As soon as it was day -- About five o'clock. The Jewish Law forbade a trial by night. R2470:4

Led him -- The formal trial before the Sanhedrin at dawn was merely a ceremony--a farce--the determination to kill Jesus having been reached long before his arrest. R2470:4

They desired no such King, no such Savior, no such Messiah. R3895:3

Into their council -- It is not sufficient that we go through a form or ceremony of justice. It is all-important that we have more than the forms of justice; we must have the spirit of righteousness, a love for righteousness. R2470:4

Luke 22:69

Hereafter shall the Son -- This prophecy compassed the certainty of his death and resurrection and pointed to his return in the end of the Gospel age in power and great glory. R1809:5

Right hand of power -- "Sit thou on my right hand till I make thine enemies thy footstool." (Psa. 110:1) A92, 93

Luke 22:70

The Son of God -- The Jews would have been afraid to call themselves sons of God, or to call him their Father. If they had spoken of themselves as sons of God, they would have thought that they were doing something reprehensible. R5219:2

Not Jehovah himself. R2781:5

Because he said this, they said he was a blasphemer. R5219:2, 2781:5

Ye say that I am -- Knowing that his reply would be like signing his death warrant. R1809:5

Luke 22:71

Need we any further -- The condemnation was rushed through for two reasons: (1) the great Jews feared that the common people would defend Jesus; and (2) the Passover was at hand and they wanted to kill him before it. R2470:4

How little did they realize that they were being permitted of God to exercise the evil desires of their hearts, and thus to fulfill types and prophecies to the very day. R2470:4

Luke 23

Luke 23:1

The whole multitude -- Escorting him thither to make sure that their purpose should be accomplished. R1809:3

Arose -- Intent on getting him into the hands of the Roman soldiers at the earliest possible moment, so that the multitudes might realize his case as beyond the power of their intervention. R2470:6

Led him -- Early in the morning of the day of crucifixion, about eight o'clock. R3895:2

Unto Pilate -- The Roman Government had taken away from the Jewish Sanhedrin the power of capital punishment, and nothing short of Jesus' death was in their minds. R2785:3

Pilate, the Roman governor of Judea, had in his hands the power of life and death. The Jewish Sanhedrin was permitted to govern the country in a religious way, according to Jewish law and custom, but had no power to order public execution. R2470:3

Pilate seems to have had a reputation for cruelty. Philo speaks of "his corruption, his cruelty, his continual murders of people untried and uncondemned." R2470:6

The Roman governor, who cared nothing for their religious ideas. R1809:6, 3895:6, 3368:1

He saw that it was the religious power of the Jewish rulers that was in danger, and not the civil powers of the Roman government. R3895:3

He shortly afterward lost his commission as governor, and in despondency committed suicide. R3369:3

Luke 23:2

To accuse him -- Realizing the wide influence already attained by his teachings, they desired to make his execution as public and disgraceful as possible, to the intent that his followers might be chagrined and humiliated. R2470:3

Perverting the nation -- The valiant for the truth have ever been considered enemies by the nominal mass. All who endeavor to withstand error in its popular forms must expect to bear the same reproach, and for a time be esteemed the troublers of Israel. R577:5

Sedition, agitation against the existing order; inciting to rebellion.

R2472:2, 3895:3, 3554:5, 2785:3, 1810:1

Treason; a charge likely to arouse the wrath of the Roman rulers. R1809:6, 3368:6

Intimating that the incident would be reported at Rome, reflecting against Pilate's vigilance. R3896:4, 3555:4, 1810:4

Forbidding to give tribute -- Entirely false. (Matt. 22:21) R1810:1

That he interfered with the collection of the Roman taxes. R2785:3, 3895:3, 3554:5, 2472:2, 1810:1

Whereas he himself had paid taxes with the money taken from the fish's mouth, and had said only two days previous, "Render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's." (Mark 12:17) R3368:2

Is Christ a King -- The Jewish Sanhedrin tried the Lord under a different charge altogether. Their charge against him was blasphemy. R5221:3

They did not mention the charge on which they themselves had convicted Jesus falsely, namely, blasphemy; for this would have been no crime whatever in the eyes of the Roman governor. R2472:2, 1809:6

Three counts: (1) sedition, raising a tumult; (2) that he taught the people that they should not give tribute to Caesar; and (3) that he himself claimed to be the king who should receive the tribute. R3895:3, 3554:5, 3368:2, 2785:3, 2472:2, 1810:1

It is possible that in the closing scenes of the Church's experience some may be branded as blasphemers and hailed before governments on the charges of preaching Christ as another King. R3369:5

Luke 23:3

Pilate -- A heathen man, neither Christian nor Jew. R2785:4, 3895:6, 3368:2, 2786:4

Placed in Jerusalem, not to do justice, but to keep order, maintaining the authority of the Roman empire. R3895:6, 3368:3

Art thou the King -- The Jews had not made such a charge against Jesus. Indeed, they were far from wishing to acknowledge the Galilean as King of the Jews. R2471:4

This was a question which our Lord could not properly evade. He was the King of the Jews. He could not deny the fact now before Pilate. At the same time it was due Pilate that he plainly show that he was not seeking to wrest the government from Pilate and the Romans at this time. R3554:6 Remarkably few of those who have heard of Jesus have recognized that he is a king. Many can recognize in our Lord the attitude of a priest, who fail to realize that he is also to be a king. The priest's office speaks mercy and forgiveness; but the kingly office is no less essential--men must be delivered and ruled in order to develop. R2471:5

And he answered -- Serenely. This was the secret of our Lord's composure. He had surrendered to his Father his every interest. In proportion as we have been filled with his spirit and loving submission we will be able to be calm under the most severe and trying ordeals. R3895:4

Thou sayest it -- That is, "Your statement is correct; I am a king." R2471:5

Not quite equivalent to yes, and yet it intimated that he did not wish to dispute the charge. R3368:4

When arraigned before the priests and Pilate, and when crucified, he was the calmest of the calm, by the Lord's strengthening. R3759:3

Similarly, we should not deny dangers nor boast of courage, but lean upon the arm of the Lord. R3759:6

Luke 23:4

To the chief priests -- The most rabid of our Lord's foes were the chief priests and rulers, and the Jewish mob whom they incited, authorized, and in a sense, legalized, by their learning, pretended piety, and official position as those who "sat in Moses' seat." R3895:1

It is nominal Christendom and her Doctors of Divinity whose opposition is chiefly roused and whose tongues are the loudest in crying against all the true members of the Body of Christ. R3895:2

I find no fault -- Pilate had definitely made up his mind that there was no danger whatever to the Roman Empire from the meek and lowly person whom he had interviewed--he was surely not an anarchist, nor an insurrectionist of any kind. R2785:5

There must have been something very striking in our Lord's personal appearance to have caused Pilate to consider for a moment the rejection of the demands of the Jewish Court or Sanhedrin. R2471:3

The Jewish leaders were chagrined with Pilate's decision. R2785:6

This decision is the decision of all fair-minded people, from his day to the present, irrespective of religious prejudices. R2785:5

Luke 23:5

Beginning from Galilee -- Attempting to prove that the teachings of Jesus were calculated to arouse a revolution amongst the people; that already in Galilee it had great influence, and now he was coming to Jerusalem, etc. R2785:6

The Lord's teachings were revolutionary as respected religious matters; but the charge was not true in the sense they wished Pilate to understand, that he was a breeder of a political revolution. R2785:6

We, like our Lord, stand committed to a revolution on the lines of true religious worship, but we, like our Lord, have nothing whatever to do with political revolutions. R2785:6

Luke 23:6

A Galilean -- Although born in Bethlehem, Jesus was reared in Nazareth, "that he might be called a Nazarene"--that he might not have the honor of the "City of David," but the odium of "a mean city." R4556:3

Luke 23:7

To Herod -- This is the same Herod who, about a year and a half before, had beheaded John the Baptist, and who, hearing of Jesus, had suggested that he might be a reincarnation of John. R3368:6, 2786:1, 2472:2

The son of Herod the great who slew the infants at the time of our Lord's birth. R2786:1

Pilate found a loophole, a way of escape from his dilemma, by referring the case to Herod. R3555:4, 2786:1, 2472:2

Luke 23:9

Answered him nothing -- There is a time to speak and a time to hold silence, and our Lord was the master of the situation. Undoubtedly his silence was more forceful than anything he could have said. R3895:5
Our Lord was not there in self-defense, nor to plead his cause, nor to seek to escape the penalty for our sins, but the reverse. R2786:1
Probably the most striking rebuke he could have ministered to Herod. He was determined to do nothing to hinder the accomplishment of that which he knew to be the divine purpose--his death that very day. R3368:6
Herod was evidently provoked by this silence, but dare not belittle himself by showing this. R3895:5

Luke 23:10

The chief priests -- We are not to think of these men as wilfully, knowingly, crucifying the Son of God. On the contrary, the Apostle assures us that it was in ignorance that they did it. (Acts 3:17; 1 Cor. 2:8)
R2786:3

Luke 23:11

Set him at nought -- His verdict was: Not guilty--innocent. R3895:5
Mocked him -- Herod no doubt was piqued, as well as disappointed, by our Lord's conduct and his inability to gain entertainment from him as expected. R2472:2
In a gorgeous robe -- Herod regarded Jesus as a pretender, and no doubt thought it a stroke of wit to parody his claims of royalty. R3895:5
Again to Pilate -- With a desire to return Pilate's compliment and perhaps with some little touch of remorse of conscience in respect to the beheading of John the Baptist. R2472:2
Expressing his appreciation of Pilate's course, but declining to interfere in Pilate's territory. R3369:1

Luke 23:12

Pilate and Herod -- The act of deference on the part of both restored their friendship. R5571:1

Luke 23:13

And Pilate -- Manifesting far greater concern than the Papacy would have done under similar circumstances. B330

Luke 23:14

Perverteth the people -- As Jesus was called a perverter of the people by the "orthodox" of his day, all who withstand error must bear the same reproach. R577:5

Have found no fault -- In these words we have Pilate's verdict--not guilty. According to Roman law this was the proper ending of the case. R3555:4

Some six times in all Pilate declared the innocence of Jesus. R3369:1
Pilate's course was noble and just, though not the noble and just one which we would have preferred for him. R3368:3, 2786:4

We are not of those who condemn Pilate. He was a servant of the empire. Only a clearly enlightened and fully consecrated saint could have been expected to do more than Pilate did for the release of Jesus. R2472:6
The apostles do not implicate either Pilate or the civil authorities, but hold responsible the Jews and their leaders. (Acts 2:23) R2786:4

Luke 23:15

Nor yet Herod -- It is stated, on the authority of the early Christians, that the majority of the Roman magistrates behaved like men of polished manners and liberal education, frequently dismissing charges against Christians with contempt, or suggesting to accused Christians some legal evasion. B330

Luke 23:16

Chastise him -- Pilate wished to placate the mob spirit which he perceived at his court gate; if Jesus were scourged, and thus demeaned, the people would probably be more likely to let the incident drop than if the Lord were turned free without chastisement. R3896:1, 3369:1, 2786:2, 2472:3 23:17

He must release one -- A matter of custom at this season, showing clemency and favor. R3368:5, 3896:1, 2786:2

As a subterfuge, Pilate proposed to consider Jesus guilty, to thus satisfy the Jews, and then release him as the customary prisoner. R2786:2, 3896:2, 3368:5

It occurred to Pilate that one way to appease the Jews, to let them feel that they had not been utterly defeated, would be to allow the supposition that he was justly condemned, and then to let him be the prisoner usually respited at this season every year. R3555:5, 2786:2

Away with this man -- Religious fanaticism is the deepest, wickedest and most conscienceless of hatreds. R2313:2

Barabbas -- They were filled with the spirit of the Adversary--they hated the Light and the Light-Bearer, preferring a murderer. R3896:2

The world's natural choice is for one of murderous spirit rather than for a saint. R3896:2

Accusing Jesus of being a traitor to Rome and asking to have him crucified, and in the same breath urging the release of one about whose rioting there was no question. R3368:5

How untruthful is the proverb, "Vox populi, vox Dei"--The voice of the people is the voice of God. R3555:5

This scene has often been alleged as the self-condemnation of democracy.

Vox populi, vox Dei, its flatterers have said. But the multitude chooses Barabbas. The priests and nobles were no better than the mob. It was by their advice that the mob chose. R3896:4, 3369:5

Luke 23:19

A certain sedition -- There had been a real sedition, a genuine movement against the authority of Rome, at a previous time, and Barabbas and others had been made prisoners on account of it. R3368:5

Luke 23:21

They cried -- Showing that, as a nation, they were unworthy and unready for God's work. R4593:5

At the close of Jesus' ministry only about 500 worthy ones had been found. R4593:5

Crucify him -- To have stoned him to death as a blasphemer they feared would leave him a martyr, while to have him publicly executed as a criminal would, they hoped, brand Jesus, his teachings and his followers, forever with infamy. R2473:1

It was not divinely intended that our Lord should be stoned, but that he should be treated as a cursed one--hanged upon a tree. (Deut. 31:22,23) R5221:3

The vilest sentence or curse against sinners under the law Jesus bore, that he might not only be the Redeemer of the world in general, but also the Redeemer of the Jew. R3901:3

The horrible method of execution for the vilest of criminals, its severity being intended to intimidate and deter evil-doers, rather than as a gratification of cruel sentiments. R2473:1

Their enmity to Jesus was because he and his teachings were discounting them and their teachings before the people. R2786:2

Selfishness lies at the foundation of every sin and every crime. R2786:2
They were to a large degree under the influence of our great Adversary.
R4308:3

Luke 23:22

I have found no cause -- We are to be blameless in the sight of those of mankind who are recognized as having the best judgment amongst the people. Thus it was with our Lord. While the world blamed him, yet in their private councils they recognized the fact that he was harmless. R4797:1

Luke 23:24

Pilate gave sentence -- He was placed as the representative of Rome at Jerusalem, not to do justice, but to keep order; not to favor and forward the divine plans, but to represent and maintain the authority of the Roman empire. R3895:6, 3368:3

The Roman Government expected him to be absolutely just in respect to Roman citizens; dealings with others were to be conciliatory. PD69/83
An unwilling instrument, he was not one hundredth part as guilty as the Jews. R3369:3

As they required -- Under stress of the Jews, and to keep peace, Pilate caused the charge to be made that Jesus was crucified because of claiming to be King of the Jews. R5221:3

Luke 23:25

He delivered Jesus to their will -- Influenced more by considerations of policy than of principle. R1810:4

Is not this as high a level as is ever attained by earthly law and justice? What human law can stand against the will of the people? The blame lies, not with Pilate, but with the Jews and their rulers. R3896:5

Luke 23:26

They -- The centurion and soldiers appointed by Pilate. R5221:3
It was customary to have four soldiers attend each prisoner to execution. R2473:5

Pilate's soldiers who, heartless and brutal, made sport of the Master's adversities. R2786:5

Led him away -- Not willingly, but by reason of the stress laid on Pilate by the Jewish nation. R5221:3

Along the narrow streets of Jerusalem to the Damascus gates. The entire distance from the castle Antonio to the hill-top called Calvary is about three-fourths of a mile. R3900:2

The narrative seems to imply that Jesus bore his own cross on the way to Calvary, and that he fell beneath its weight. R5221:3, 4171:5

His weakness was not the result of inherited blemish or sin, nor of imperfection, but the result of sacrifice. R4138:2, 1359:4

One Simon -- Evidently a strong and rugged countryman, who was passing by. R5222:1

We know nothing respecting Simon, except Mark relates that he was the father of Alexander and Rufus, giving the suggestion that these two sons may subsequently have become followers of Jesus, and well-known amongst the disciples. R2473:2

Tradition declares that he afterwards became one of the Master's disciples. R5222:4

Simon represented in this case all of the Lord's faithful ones who help to bear the cross, following his example, walking in his steps. R5222:4

The disciples of Jesus missed the opportunity. One had said he was ready to die with the Lord, and so said they all. In the moment of testing they did not display this courage. It is much easier to attest great loyalty than it is to manifest it when the test comes. R5222:1, 3370:1, 2473:2

We are to remember that the disciples were common people, despised as Galileans, and had reason to fear the wrath of the chief priests and rulers. R3901:2

If we are disposed to envy Simon his privilege in the bearing of the cross, let us reflect that many of the Lord's brethren are daily bearing symbolic crosses, and that it is our privilege to assist them. R3370:1

The cross -- Perhaps 12 to 14 feet long, with a cross-beam of at least 5 feet. Since there are no light woods in the vicinity of Jerusalem and olive, a very heavy wood, is most common, we estimate its weight at 150 to 200 pounds. R5221:6

The crosses were not so large and heavy as generally illustrated in modern paintings. The evidence is that the feet of the crucified were usually only twelve to eighteen inches from the ground. R2473:2

As the wooden cross was not our Lord's heaviest burden, so, too, his followers have crosses which the world sees not, but which the brethren should understand. R3370:1

The cross has become fashionable, worn as an ornament, with little thought of what the original signified of shame and ignominy. R2787:1

The Lord will send the aid necessary, even though, as in this case, it be impressed, and that because of the sympathy of the worldly. R3370:1

Bear it -- While he, from exhausting labor and daily sacrifice for the good of others, endured weakness and weariness, yet men did not recognize the real cause of his physical weakness, but esteemed him stricken and smitten of God, as though he were a sinner like other men, and therefore, like them, subject to physical decline and death. R1359:4

We have no opportunity of doing anything of this kind for the Master himself. But he is still with us in the brethren. What a precious privilege this affords us of still helping to bear the Master's cross.

Now the cross is with us. There is still room for bearing it and experiencing crucifixion of the flesh as the representatives of him who loved us and bought us with his own precious blood. R3901:3, 2787:1, 2473:3

After Jesus -- Implying that Simon did not carry the cross entirely, but merely assisted Jesus, carrying the hinder part of it, which usually dragged. R3369:6, 2787:1

Whether this means that Jesus walked before and that Simon carried the cross behind him, or whether it means that Simon walked back of Jesus carrying the end which otherwise was dragging, we cannot surely know. If the latter, it furnishes a more striking illustration of how we are to walk in his footsteps and join with him in carrying the symbolic cross.

R3901:1

His weakness was not the result of inherited blemish or sin, nor the weakness of imperfection, but of sacrifice. R4138:2

When we think of our Lord as a perfect man, we would not think of him as being the strongest of men. R5221:6, 2787:2

The coarseness and brute strength which we find in many men is to be esteemed a degeneration, as truly as is weakness and effeminacy of others--only that the degeneracy has manifested itself in another form.

R2787:2

The cross will not be too heavy for us. The Lord will bear the heavy end of it; and our experiences will be only such as will be for our good and will work out for our blessing. R5222:4

Luke 23:27

Of women -- Quite probably these included Mary, our Lord's mother, Martha and Mary of Bethany, and Mary Magdalene. R3370:1, 2473:4, 1816:1

Bewailed -- It is to their credit that some who followed in the procession were weeping, and this credit for tenderness and sympathy falls to the women. R2787:3

Luke 23:28

Weep not for me -- Even in our Lord's last moments his thoughts were not of himself but of others. R2787:3

Our Lord's tears were shed chiefly in sympathy on behalf of others (John 11:35), while forbidding others to weep for him. Let us be like him--strong to bear our own griefs and tender to feel the sorrows and sins of others. R1886:5*

Weep for yourselves -- This he said in reference to the atrocities which would mark the overthrow of their nation and the destruction of Jerusalem. R1816:2, 2787:3

Mountains -- Governments. R621:5

Fall on us -- Cover, protect us. The Lord certainly did not expect wicked men to get faith enough to pray for mountains to fall on them. B139; R5577:3

Applied at the time of the destruction of Jerusalem, and now in the closing time of this age. R5577:3

Hills -- Rocks, societies. R621:5

Luke 23:31

In a green tree -- If their rulers could sanction such injustice and lawlessness while their greenness, freshness and religious vitality remained, what might be expected in the future, after the religious vitality had dried out. R2473:4

What shall be done -- If bigotry and bitter falsification are practised before the Evangelical Alliance has any life, how arrogant might we suppose the same persons to become after the image would receive life? R5349:5

At the time of the destruction of Jerusalem, hundreds of Jews were crucified at once. R1816:4

Luke 23:32

Two other -- Perhaps to distract from the injustice of their own course and to throw a measure of justice into the proceedings as a whole, or perhaps to demean Jesus in making him a companion of outlaws. R3370:4

Luke 23:33

Called Calvary -- A Latin name, signifying skull; Golgotha, the word used by Matthew, also signifies a skull, in Aramaic, the original language of the Jews in Palestine. The name was probably applied because the hill, viewed from a little distance, resembled a skull. R3900:6, 3370:2, 2473:3
Golgotha! There is a legend that it was the very center of the earth's surface, the middle point of the habitable globe. We think nothing of the legend, but very much of the truth which it suggests, for the cross of Christ is the true center of the Church where all believers meet, of all tribes and nations. R4174:1*

They crucified him -- The wooden crosses were laid upon the ground, the victims stretched thereon, and nailed by hands and feet; then the soldiers lifted the crosses and set them into already prepared holes or sockets.

The torture of these experiences can better be imagined than described.

R3901:3, 3370:2, 2787:3

Crucifixion is probably the most cruel form of death. Even by the Romans it was practiced only upon culprits--usually outlaws, brigands and seditionists. Thus our Lord was "numbered with the transgressors." (Isa. 53:12) R2787:3

The crucifixion took place at the third hour, Jewish reckoning, or nine o'clock, our reckoning. R3370:3, 1815:6

His death was a great trial of faith to all his disciples. R3179:1

Luke 23:34

Forgive them -- While doubtless of a forgiving spirit, we doubt that Jesus uttered these words because: (1) they are not found in the Codex Vaticanus (fourth century) or Codex Alexandricus (fifth century); (2) these men were unrepentant, and repentance is essential to forgiveness; (3) they lacked faith, and faith must precede forgiveness; (4) the sacrificial work was not yet finished; and (5) there is no evidence their sins were forgiven. R4172:5, 3901:4, 2474:5

We cannot, however, have any doubt that the words represented our Master's sentiments toward his enemies, for they are in full accord with his instructions to his followers, Love your enemies, do good to them that persecute you, and pray for them. R3901:4

We find no mention in the Scriptures of forgiving on God's part without the requirement of repentance. This passage might be so considered, but these words are not found in the oldest Greek manuscripts--the Sinaitic and Vatican. R1694:5

While Abel's death called for vengeance (Heb. 12:24), Christ's life was sacrificed for us and calls instead for mercy. Not only was he slain by men, but he was slain for men. R1614:6

These words are not to be taken in account; Jesus had foretold in his parable that God would punish them. (Luke 20:14-16) R5577:5, 4172:5

We have no evidence that the sin was forgiven, but that the prayer of the Jews, "His blood be on us and on our children" (Matt. 27:25), was answered. R4172:5

Nevertheless, we feel sure that this was the sentiment of his heart, as it was also that of Stephen (Acts 7:60). R3901:4, 4172:5, 2474:4

For they know not -- The apostles said of the traducers of Jesus, his real crucifiers, "I wot that in ignorance ye did it, as did also your rulers." (Acts 3:17) Much of the opposition to the body of Christ will be able to similarly pass by as done in blindness and ignorance. R3895:2
Sins that are committed in ignorance and blindness will be forgiven through the merit of Christ. HG147:6

The Lord, who will be the judge, himself prayed forgiveness upon the ground of at least a large measure of ignorance. R1655:4

To be sure, they did not know that they were rejecting him, but they did not want to know. R591:3*

Parted his raiment -- Little did they think that they were thus fulfilling prophecy. Just so it is with the whole world; matters are moving on from day to day, prophecies are being fulfilled, many of us have part in them, but few can see and understand, because only a few have the guidance of the holy Spirit. R3901:4, 3370:3, 2474:1

The division of the spoil was customary at every crucifixion, and gave evidence of the indifference and hard-heartedness of the soldiers in the presence of suffering. R2474:1

The masses of mankind since have been doing just what the people did upon the day of our Lord's crucifixion. Some looked, but sympathized little, and appreciated not; others derided and blasphemed; others made sport of it, and still others, with rude jest, gambled over his raiment. R1988:3

And cast lots -- For his seamless tunic, which was the most valuable article. R3901:5

That robe properly and beautifully represents Christ's righteousness. The lot, or privilege, to have this garment has fallen chiefly to us of civilized lands. R2788:3

It is not by lot, accident or choice that this robe comes to the Lord's people. It is obtained only through the exercise of faith, and held only by the obedience of faith. R2474:1

Fulfilling the prophecy of Psa. 22:18, "They parted my garments among them, and cast lots upon my vesture." R2474:1, 3370:3

The rulers also -- Neglecting, doubtless, important matters in their eagerness to make sure that he did not escape them. R3370:6, 2787:4

Derided him -- "As he was, so are we in this world." (1 John 4:17) "We did esteem him stricken, smitten of God." (Isa. 53:4) R2316:5, 3370:5

He saved others -- A singular admission of the truth. R3370:6

Save himself -- He could have saved himself. (Matt. 26:53) R5195:4, 3901:6

Luke 23:36

The soldiers also -- Seeming to feel that this was an exposure of another fraud, the ignominious termination of another one who had asserted himself against the power of Caesar. R2787:4

Spurred on by the influence of the Jewish rulers. R3901:6

Offering him vinegar -- The offering of wine mingled with bitter myrrh, otherwise styled gall, was not an indignity as is usually supposed, but an act of kindness. R3370:2

Luke 23:37

Save thyself -- He could not save others and save himself too; for only by the sacrifice of himself could he hope to save others. R1815:6
Making light of his miracles of healing and of awakening the dead. R3901:5
Had he done as he was dared to do, he would have ruined the hopes not only of those who crucified him, but of all mankind. R2787:6

Luke 23:38

Letters of Greek -- Because it was the language of the visitors and of the educated from all quarters. R2473:5
The language of literature. R3901:6, 3370:3, 2787:4
And Latin -- The language of the Romans, their rulers. R3901:6, 3370:3, 2787:4
Because it was the language of the empire and the soldiers. R2473:5
And Hebrew -- The language of their own nation. R3901:6, 3370:3, 2787:4, 2473:5
KING OF THE JEWS -- A title of shame and contempt, a brand of blasphemy to those who read it. The multitude, going and coming to and from the city, jested him upon his title, and the miserable failure of the fraud he had attempted to perpetrate. R2787:4
Under stress and to keep peace, Pilate caused the charge to be made that Jesus was crucified because of claiming to be King of the Jews. R5221:3
Little did Pilate comprehend this great truth. Few yet realize the truth of this statement. Comparatively few have rendered him allegiance, bowing the knee of their hearts in sincerity and truth. R2473:6
There is a slight difference in the statements of the different Evangelists respecting the words used on this tablet. We suppose the words differed slightly in the different languages, and the Evangelists quoted from different originals. R2473:6

Save thyself and us -- If Jesus had saved his life, He could not have become the King and Savior of the world, because only by his death could the death sentence against Adam and his race be met. PD69/83

Luke 23:40

But the other -- As the multitude of onlookers were divided, some sympathizing and some deriding, it is not surprising, that similar emotions were awakened in the minds of the two robbers crucified with Jesus. R3902:1

Indicating he had a tender and contrite heart, such as will be first to receive Kingdom blessings. R5578:4, 5132:6

Answering -- He alone, so far as we are informed, raised his voice in protest against the slurs, and in defense of the meek and lowly one.

R2787:6

The raillery of his companion only opened his mouth in defense of the Savior. R3902:2

Manifesting a faith which, under the circumstances, was remarkable. R3902:1

Condemnation -- Judicial sentence. R331:3

Luke 23:41

But this man -- We cannot suppose that this thief had any correct or definite idea of Jesus--nothing more than a mere feeling that he was about to die, and a straw of hope was better than nothing. F667; R506:3

This living epistle made a marked impression upon him, just as sometimes the conduct of the Lord's followers, patient in tribulation, is the strongest and best lesson that can be given to some. R2787:6

Hath done nothing amiss -- Paraphrased: "I heard those falsifiers bear false witness against you and I sympathized with you all the time. I knew there was no evil character in you." Q711:3

Aside from the weeping of the disciples, the penitent thief's conduct is the only mark of appreciation of the Lord's righteousness found in this picture. Often the only sympathizers are some apparently deeply degraded. R1988:6

Lord -- Doubtless the thief had heard of Jesus, that he was reputed by some to be the Messiah, and notwithstanding the incongruous condition of things, the thief realized that with our Redeemer there was a kingly demeanor. R3902:2

Remember me -- Paraphrased: "If you are a King, and after you have come into your office of King, and have your Kingdom, then remember this poor thief, and do something for me, will you?" Q711:3; NS576:2

He had nothing to lose and all to gain by speaking a word in defense of the holy dying one. Peradventure this might be the Messiah. He would at least ask his blessing. NS576:2

When thou -- The import of his petition was that whenever Jesus reached his Kingdom power, he desired favor. F668; R506:3

He has not come into his Kingdom yet. It is more than eighteen hundred years and we are still praying, "Thy Kingdom come." Q711:3

Comest into thy kingdom -- "I heard you say before Pilate that you have a Kingdom, but not of this age; some heavenly Kingdom." HG596:3, 645:5

When you receive your Kingdom, wherever it may be and under whatever conditions, if it is in your power, remember me. R3902:2

Our Lord has not come into his Kingdom yet, and hence the time when that thief wished to be remembered has not come. We are still praying, "Thy Kingdom come." Q523:5

This will be fulfilled when our Lord takes unto himself his great power and begins his reign, when he shall say to all the prisoners of the tomb, "Go forth, and to those who sit in darkness, show yourselves." HG130:3

Our Lord Jesus has not yet fully come into his Kingdom; hence the time has not yet come when the thief desired to be remembered. R4172:6

Luke 23:43

Verily -- The word translated "verily," or "indeed," is the Greek word amen, and signifies "so be it," as you have asked. F668; R506:3, 5132:6, 3902:4, 2788:1; HG130:2, 596:4; PD69/83; Q711:3; NS576:3

As the thief was made glad by the assurance that he would then be under the Kingdom rule in Paradise, so all who come to any understanding of the divine program can rejoice, even though their lives hitherto have been misspent. NS576:5

I say unto thee, -- The comma should be after and not before "today" in order to permit harmony with the facts before us and agreement with other Scriptures. The original Scriptures are not punctuated, punctuation being a comparatively modern invention. R2788:3, 506:6; F669; HG646:1; PD69/83; Q523:6; NS576:1

To read it as usually punctuated, it would teach that Jesus and the thief went away somewhere that day, which is contrary to Luke 24:46; John 20:17 and John 3:13. R506:6

To day -- I assure you today, and give you the consolation, that when I do come into the Kingdom in the Father's appointed time, you shall be with me in that Paradise. NS576:1

Instances of a similar use of the word "today" are found in Deut. 15:15; 30:15,16; Acts 26:29. F669; HG130:4

This dark day, in which it would appear I have not a friend in heaven or on earth; this dark day in which I am crucified as a malefactor, a falsifier and a blasphemer. R5132:6; HG596:5; Q711:3

While no repentances are to be scoffed at, nevertheless death-bed repentances are not to be esteemed passports to glory in the Kingdom. NS576:5; HG645:3

When everything seems unfavorable, when I appear as an imposter, subject to the insults and taunts of my enemies--notwithstanding all this, I tell you, Thou shalt be with me in paradise. R3902:4, 2788:3, 506:3; F668

That this does not teach death-bed repentance is proved by the following facts: (1) the thief did not go to Paradise that day; (2) nor did our Lord; (3) Paradise was not then in existence; (4) the whole earth will become Paradise; (5) the thief's blessing would be in the Millennium; (6) the thief is still unconscious; (7) our Lord did not ascend into heaven even when, three days later, he was resurrected; and (8) Christ has not yet come into his Kingdom. NS575:5

Misinterpretation has done a great amount of harm. People have been encouraged to continue a life of sin, trusting that with their dying breath they may say, "God be merciful to me," and be immediately ushered into glory. R5132:5; HG596:2, 645:1

On the day of their dying all three went to hades, to sheol, to the tomb, to the state of the dead. The two thieves still remain there. But Jesus arose from sheol on the third day. He has not been to Paradise, for Paradise is not even yet in existence. R5133:1, 3902:4; HG596:6, 645:4

Shalt thou -- When he should come into his Kingdom at his second advent he would, as the thief requested, remember him. R2788:1

Not merely because of the kindness done to Jesus, but especially because his words indicated a sincerity and honesty of heart such as the Lord is always glad to bless and reward. HG596:5, 646:5

Let none suppose that the two thieves will enter Paradise on the same footing. HG437:4

The penitent thief will have the advantage over the other because, instead of hardening his heart and joining with the rabble in reviling our Lord during his dying moments, his heart was softened. NS577:5

The penitent thief will unquestionably have a two-fold blessing. First he will be blessed because of his penitent attitude of mind; secondly, because of his faithfulness in expressing that penitence and mercy to our Lord in his distress. HG437:6

We doubt not that the kind words spoken in that dark hour to the Lord of glory, will no more lose a suitable reward than the gift of a cup of cold water. R506:6; F669

The stripes and punishments of the Millennial age will not be direct punishments for present misdeeds, yet indirectly they will be such. NS577:2

Be with me -- Be remembered; be in my Kingdom when it is established, because I have paid the ransom price for you and the other thief, and for all men. F668; R506:5; PD69/83

Does not mean that sinners with dying breath saying, "God be merciful to me," will be ushered into glory, honor and immortality, as joint-heirs with the Savior. R5132:5

In paradise -- The word Paradise is of Persian origin, not Greek. It signifies a garden. The Septuagint renders Gen. 2:8: "God planted a paradise in Eden." The garden of Eden was but an illustration of the perfect and beautiful earth when fully released from the curse. F668; R506:5

Paradise is another name for the Garden of Eden, the abode of bliss.

HG435:2

If heaven be understood, we know that there must be some mistake, because our Lord did not go to heaven that day. (Acts 2:31; Psa. 16:10) On the morning of his resurrection, our Lord told Mary to tell his disciples that he had not yet ascended to his Father. Paul declares that "he rose from the dead on the third day." (1 Cor. 15:4) R3902:3; HG645:4; PD69/83

Paradise, or the Garden of the Lord, not only represents the earthly condition, but it also applies in a figurative sense to the glorious and heavenly position. (Rev. 2:7) HG435:6

When Jesus arose on the third day, he had not been to Paradise, for Paradise is not even yet in existence. He had not been to heaven. He had been dead. R5133:1; HG596:5

Paradise has not yet been established, because God's Kingdom has not yet come to earth and it delays until a certain work for the Church shall be accomplished. HG435:5

The word Paradise refers to the Garden of Eden, from which Adam and Eve were cast out, and to the Paradise restored. The Garden of Eden had long been destroyed. Therefore, the Paradise of the Kingdom is the only one to which the Lord could have referred. R3902:3

At our Lord's second advent, when he shall take his great power and re-establish Paradise in the earth, the Paradise which was lost on account of sin. R4172:6

Not only the penitent thief will be there, but also the impenitent one, and those Roman soldiers, and those bloodthirsty scribes and Pharisees and priests--all will be in Paradise--not for any worthiness of their own, but by reason of the merit of Christ's sacrifice. R2788:2; HG646:5

The believing thief was certainly not prepared for heaven. He was not begotten of the Spirit, and hence could not be born of the Spirit in the resurrection. R3902:5

When Christ shall have established his Kingdom at his second coming, this earth will gradually become a paradise. F668; R3902:3; Q845:1

Luke 23:44

About the sixth hour -- The trial before Pilate, the crucifixion, and the body laid in the tomb occupying Friday forenoon and afternoon. R4212:4*

The ninth hour -- Hebrew, erev katon, the lesser evening, is from noon to the ninth hour, or 3 p.m.; from that time until sun setting is called in the Hebrew erev gadol, the greater evening. It was between these two evenings the paschal lamb was to be slain, and so was Jesus, the antitype, the Lamb of God. R2953:5*

A darkness -- Seems to have been a supernatural darkness; for an eclipse of the sun was impossible during the full moon of the Passover time. R1816:4

3:00 p.m., the time of the offering of the evening sacrifice, the time when Christ died. R2316:6, 3371:1

Doubtless sent as an expression of the divine wrath, and as typical of the darkness of alienation from God into which that long favored nation had plunged by this act. R1816:4

If human hearts were unsympathetic and unappreciative of the great transaction, nature was not, for she, as a witness to the wonderful scene, veiled her face in darkness and trembled. R1988:6

Undoubtedly the shade was more comfortable for the crucified ones than the sunlight of that bright land. It was appropriate that nature be draped.

Well did it picture the temporary power of the power of darkness over him who is the Light of the world. R3902:6

One ancient manuscript, the Gospel by Peter, treating of the subject, says that "many went about with lamps, and that darkness lasted until Jesus was taken from the cross." R2788:4, 4173:5

Luke 23:45

The veil of the temple -- Separating the Holy and the Most Holy--sixty feet long and thirty feet wide, its thickness about four inches. R3371:2, 2788:4

Was rent in the midst -- Not from the bottom toward the top, as if the result of wear, but from the top to the bottom, indicating a manifestation of divine power. Representing symbolically the opening of the way between heaven itself and the heavenly condition of those in the world. R3371:2, 2788:4

A loud voice -- His words, elsewhere recorded, were: "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" (Matt. 27:46) R3903:1

Already weakened by the agony of Gethsemane, a repetition of the anguish probably ruptured the heart, causing instant death. SM642:1

A testimony and a witness to all that were near of his hope in God and in a resurrection. R4173:4

Father -- The heavenly Father, whose promises supported him during his eventful life, and now were his strength in his dying hour. R1988:6

Into thy hands -- A quotation from Psa. 31:5. It had already been declared of him that he would commend himself to the Father's grace and truth. R2474:6

He has not yet made any application of his human life to Adam and his race. He has merely put it into the Father's hands. R5621:2 He laid his life down in the Father's hands. He had lost and forfeited none of his earthly rights. These are the basis of all the blessings of God to Adam and his race. R4642:4, 5621:1; Q658:2, 445:2, 374:4

I commend -- Thus Jesus, so to speak, made a deposit of the Ransom-price without directly applying it. Q568:9, 571:6

The Ransom was here laid down at Calvary, and later placed in the hands of Justice, but not paid over in the sense of completing the contract, that being reserved for a future time. Q568:9

In his dying breath he expressed his faith that the Father would raise him up to life. R3371:2, 2788:5

And so must we, in our dying hour, commit all our interests to the keeping of him who loves us. R2475:4

"I commit." No change, no transfer. Not that I commit this in your care for Father Adam or the world. I simply deposit it in your care and keeping. Q223:T

Directly telling us that he not only gave himself a ransom, but "I commit my spirit," I leave it with you. Many scriptures show how this is made applicable. Q224:4

There he committed to the Father's hands a price, sufficient for all; but it was not then appropriated for anybody. R4633:2

In the same sense you place money in the bank and take out a bank book in which you get credit. It is still yours subject to your check. It would not belong to the bank at all. It is merely committed to the bank to take over. So Jesus committed all at his dying moment. Q571:6

In letting go his hold on life he surrendered it to the Father, who had already promised that his life, being thus surrendered, should entitle him to a higher life. This he received when he arose from the dead on the "third day." R3903:4

He knew that the love of God was too great to allow a needless pain to afflict his beloved Son, and therefore he trusted him where he could not at the time trace his inscrutable ways. R1808:4

My spirit -- My life. R3371:2 He still has the life rights of the flesh.

He did not give them up. He permitted men to unlawfully take them from him. He did not apply them for Adam and his race. These earthly life rights are in the hands of the Father yet, and they are to be the life rights to eventually come to Adam and his race. Q574:4

Jesus did not give this to anyone else. It was deposited in his own name. Q223:T

He had life rights which had never been forfeited through sin, and was committing these to the Father as the ransom price for Adam and his forfeited spirit of life. R2788:5

How appropriate that he who had sought to do the Father's will at any cost should have absolute confidence that in his death his spirit of life would be in the Father's care and keeping. R4173:3

The spirit returns to God (Eccl. 12:7) in the sense that it is no longer amenable to human control and can never be recovered except by divine power. Thus we commit our hope for future life by resurrection to the Father and to Christ, his now exalted representative. E344; R1880:5; HG331:5

Stephen, the earliest martyr among the disciples, appears to have imitated his Master in the closing scene, appealing thus: "Lord Jesus, receive my spirit." (Acts 7:59) R700:4*

He had not forfeited his right to life as had Adam; it was still his own--merely surrendered. R5578:5, 5972:4, 5621:2, 4642:4

When this ransom-price shall have been formally delivered over to Justice in the end of this age, it will no longer be a deposit at the command of the Savior, but will have been exchanged for Adam and his race. Eiv Gave up the ghost -- An old English term. R2788:5

The word ghost was at one time used as a synonym for spirit, and the meaning of this statement is that our Lord gave up his spirit, his breath of life. R3903:4

Literally, out-breathed; that is, died. R700:4*

Since the great sacrifice has been finished acceptably, "there is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus." (Rom. 8:1) R2474:5

Instead of lingering long, he died suddenly, probably of a ruptured heart. SM642:1; R4173:4

Luke 23:50

Joseph -- With Nicodemus; too careful of their reputations to avow their interest in Jesus previously. R2877:6

The dilatory acknowledgment of Jesus on the part of these wealthy and influential men reminds us of the peculiar difficulties which hinder all persons of wealth and influence. R2788:6

Luke 23:52

And begged -- According to Mark, Joseph of Arimathea went boldly to Pilate and asked for the body of Jesus. R4173:5

Luke 23:53

He took it down -- It was no light matter Joseph had undertaken; for to take part in a burial at any time would defile him for seven days and make everything unclean which he touched (Num. 19:11); and to do so now involved a seclusion through the whole Passover week with all its holy observations and rejoicings. R4173:6

When our Lord died, he went to the tomb, not to paradise. Q523:6

Luke 23:54

That day -- Reckoned as the first day and night which Christ spent in the tomb. R4212:4*

Luke 23:55

Galilee -- The vast majority of our Lord's miracles and teachings were to the Galileans. R4556:3

Luke 24

Luke 24:1

The first day of the week -- Sunday morning. This day is reckoned as the third day and night which Christ spent in the tomb. R4212:5*

Our Lord was crucified on Friday, the sixth day, too late to complete the embalming, which would be hindered by the seventh day. If our Lord had been crucified on Thursday afternoon, there would have been all day Friday to complete the embalming. R2796:2, 2477:5

The Church, very early in its history, decided that the first day of the week would be very appropriate to observe, since on it Jesus arose from the dead, met with them and caused their hearts to burn as he expounded unto them the Scriptures. R543:4; F383

Apparently fully one-half of his post-resurrection appearances were on the day of the Lord's resurrection. NS322:6

Very early -- "God shall help her, and that right early." (Psa. 46:5) R3375:3

In the morning -- Typifying the beginning of the seventh thousand-year day, when the Church shall be raised. "Destroy this Temple, and in three days I will raise it up." (John 2:19) R3375:1,3, 2795:2

They came -- Illustrating woman's love and tenderness, specially endearing charms of the sex. R2477:5 The women lived in various parts of the city and did not all arrive at the same hour. Mary Magdalene arrived first. R2797:5, 2477:5

Joining the various accounts of the resurrection morning, a suggested order of events is given. R4176:3

Bringing the spices -- For a more thorough embalming of the Lord's body than was possible on the night of our Lord's burial, on account of the lateness of the hour and the approach of the Passover. R3905:1

How great was the reward of these devoted women, last at the cross and first at the sepulcher, anxious to bestow upon the lifeless remains of their beloved Lord the last tokens of their esteem and love. R1816:6

Which they had prepared -- The seventh day closed at sundown, and we may presume that immediately the preparation of spices began, and that all arrangements were completed. R2795:6

Luke 24:2

The stone rolled away -- By the earthquake. R3905:1; B111

Luke 24:3

They entered in -- The other women, not including Mary Magdalene, who had run with haste to make the matter known to Peter and John. R2477:3; B112

The sentries had fled in terror from the manifestation of the angel's presence. R3905:1, 2477:5

Luke 24:4

As they were much perplexed -- This is when Mary hastened to the home of John, with whom Peter was lodging, and related the facts. R4176:3
Returning, she looked again into the sepulchre, and saw the two angels. R4176:4

In shining garments -- So that they might not be understood to be men, but might at once be recognized as heavenly messengers. R2797:6

Luke 24:6

He is not here -- The removal of the crucified body from the tomb was necessary to establish in the minds of the disciples the fact of the resurrection. Had he remained there it would have been an insurmountable barrier to their faith. R1817:4

We incline to the opinion that the flesh, which was man's ransom-price, will never see corruption, but that it will be preserved by divine power as an everlasting testimony. R2478:6

He is no longer dead, but alive; no longer a man, but a spirit. R5579:1, 2081:2

Remember how he spake -- No doubt it was in order to better prepare them for seeing Jesus that the angels appeared and drew attention to the fact that Jesus had foretold his crucifixion, and also his resurrection on the third day. R2795:6

Forgetting entirely the Master's words, they evidently had no expectation of a resurrection. NS322:4; R2476:3

Luke 24:7

Third day rise again -- Having been dead portions of three 24-hour periods, and not three full days and nights. R5191:6, 2796:2, 2271:3, 1289:6
He rose from the dead; he did not come back from paradise. Q523:6; F670

Luke 24:10

Mary Magdalene -- Not an unchaste woman, but a miracle of grace (Luke 8:2), from Magdala, on the sea of Galilee. Not only had she come from Galilee to Judea, but she was near the cross at the time of his death and the first at the tomb on the morning of the resurrection. R2797:5

Joanna -- The wife of Chuza, Herod's steward. R4176:3

Luke 24:11

Idle tales -- The majority of the disciples evidently regarded their story as superstitious excitement, but Peter and John said, We will go and see for ourselves. B112

Believed them not -- Even after hearing of his resurrection, they were seemingly slow to connect it with what he had previously told them. R5415:6
Forgetting entirely the Master's words, they evidently had no expectation of a resurrection. NS322:4

Luke 24:12

Ran unto -- Peter and John, the two most energetic apostles, vied with each other to get to the sepulcher with speed. But they saw merely the empty tomb. R5415:3

John, the younger, outran Peter and arrived there first. Awestricken, he stooped down and looked in, but Peter, on arrival, still more courageous, went in, followed by John. R4176:3, 2477:6

Luke 24:13

Two of them -- One of them apparently was Simon Peter (verse 34). R2800:3, 2478:3

Not apostles (see verses 18, 33). R1823:2

That same day -- Our Lord instituted the observance of the first day of the week, in the same manner that he instituted the Memorial Supper and Baptism: by example, not command. R1942:3; Q608:T

Emmaus -- The home of Cleopas who would entertain Peter, whose home was in Galilee. R2800:3

A suburban village. R2478:3

Threescore furlongs -- About eight miles distant. R2800:3

Luke 24:14

Talked together -- Discussing in animated conversation the likelihood and unlikelihood of the reports they had heard, and in general the Messianic hopes of themselves and their nation. R2800:6

Those who have opportunities for meeting together and speaking together, and who fail to use the opportunities, are manifesting a lack of interest in our great salvation. R2802:1

The solitary should look about them to see what provision the Lord has made whereby at least two can meet and discuss his Word together, perhaps through the regular visits of the Watch Tower. The written word is not different from the spoken one. R2802:1

Jesus himself drew near -- His fourth appearance--on Sunday afternoon, the day of the resurrection. R3905:3

The appearances were infrequent. In all the forty days the records would not indicate that he appeared to them, at the very outside, more than ten times, and his interviews with them would appear to have been very brief. R2081:3, 1995:6; NS6:5, 32:5

The entire time that he was manifest to them would probably have been less than twelve hours, or one eightieth of the entire time. B125

Being a spiritual body, it was simply a question of expediency which way he could best appear to them--i.e., in which way his object in appearing be best accomplished. B124; R262:2, 122:4

It is not possible for us to comprehend the power which can create and dissolve human bodies, but we have abundant evidence along this line.

Did not the angels of old appear and then vanish? NS323:1

Went with them -- Illustrating our Lord's promise that where two or three are together in his name, he will be in the midst. "Forget not the assembling of yourselves." R2801:6, 1823:2

These forty days were very necessary for teaching the Jewish disciples, and all of the Lord's followers since, two lessons: (1) that he was no longer dead, but alive; and (2) that he was no longer a man, but a spirit. R5579:1, 5417:4, 1996:1

Their eyes were holden -- Because in his resurrection Jesus was so different, we are prepared to understand why he conducted himself so differently after his resurrection from what he had done before. R5578:6 Not shocking them by a vision of his glorious presence as he smote down Saul of Tarsus, but assuming a body of flesh and traveler's clothing and talking sympathetically with the two sorrowing ones. NS795:4

Appearing in so many different forms to guard against the idea that he was a fleshly body. R122:6

It was necessary that our Lord, a spirit being, should manifest himself as a man. He must lead their minds step by step, and their thoughts link by link, from the cross and the tomb to the appreciation of his present exaltation as a spirit being. R2797:4

Although alive and the same person with the same individuality, yet now his conditions were entirely altered. R2081:2; B111

If Jesus had revealed himself to his disciples after his resurrection as the angel did to Daniel, the glory of the spiritual body would undoubtedly have been more than they, as earthly beings, could bear. B124; R262:1

The body of flesh he had assumed as a garment for the occasion appeared as a stranger to them. It was not the same body that was crucified; our redemption price was not taken back; for Jesus said, "My flesh I will give for the life of the world." (John 6:51) B123, 125, 127, 129, 131

In our Lord's appearances after his resurrection, it is not once intimated that they knew him by the familiar features of his face. B125

Should not know him -- Even his clothing was different, for his previous clothing had been parted amongst the soldiers. R5579:1, 5222:6, 2800:6

He did not appear in shining garments, but in ordinary apparel, assumed for the purpose, in order that he might have the better opportunity for giving the instructions which his followers needed. R2797:6

Had he borne the prints of the nails in his hands and his feet, they surely would have noticed them during their long walk. R2801:5, 2478:4; NS177:2

Luke 24:17

What manner of communication -- It is sometimes the part of wisdom not to tell all that we know, if we can the better help others by inquiring of them. R2801:1

And are sad -- Their sad and perplexed faces were indexes of their minds. R1823:2

How favorable is a time of adversity and perplexity in which to approach those whom we desire to assist, but how necessary, as the Master, to approach with such sympathy in word and act as to gain the hearts of those whom we would serve and bless. R2800:6

Luke 24:18

Name was Cleopas -- The other probably being Peter. R2800:3, 2478:3

Luke 24:19

Concerning Jesus -- This general review furnished the best foundation for our Lord's exposition of the meaning of, and the reason for, the things which perplexed them. R2801:1

Mighty in deed -- However much their confidence might have been shaken respecting our Lord's Messiahship, they still believed in him as a great Teacher. This good confession was all that could have been asked and quite sufficient for our Lord to use in rebuilding their confidence in his Messiahship on a surer and more positive foundation. R2801:1

Crucified him -- To the surprise of the typical people, Israel, instead of assuming the office of Priest and King in conjunction, he merely died. R5391:3

Luke 24:21

We trusted -- Notwithstanding the fact that Jesus had told them repeatedly of his death, nevertheless his disciples seem to have been unable to receive his words in their true meaning. R2745:5
Apparently their confidence in him had been misplaced. They failed to see that the death of their leader was a surety for the New Covenant under which the blessings were to come. However, when they found that he had risen from the tomb, their withered hopes again began to revive. A80
They expected earthly glory, instead they saw suffering and death. It was not merely this disappointment, but there must have been coupled with it a terrible fear that he had deceived them, that they had loved and trusted an imposter. R102:2*

Their hope that he was the Messiah had been crushed. R5416:3

Redeemed -- Greek, lutroo, to set free by payment of a price. They had expected that the Lord would have set Israel at liberty from the Roman yoke by the payment of a price. E431

Delivering them from the Roman yoke, and making of Israel the Kingdom of God in power and glory. A274

That Israel should be exalted in the earth in name and fame and power and authority to bless and to instruct "all the families of the earth." NS795:1

Not yet endued with the holy Spirit, they did not understand that not only Israel, but the whole world, was redeemed, not only from the Roman yoke, but from Satan's yoke, by the ransom price which our Lord gave. E431

Recovered, delivered. R2085:1

Israel -- They recognized no "lost" tribes, but a reunited Israel. C293; R2085:2

The third day -- Here they were probably calling to mind John 2:19,21,22. B114

He had told them he would be crucified, "and the third day rise again." (Matt. 20:19) R5415:6, 2745:5

Luke 24:25

Then he said -- While expedient to start the matter by questioning them, it would not have been wisdom to have continued thus to any great length; for he had the message and they needed the instruction. R2801:1

This gave Jesus the opportunity to explain that their experiences were part of the divine plan. R5416:3

O fools -- O thoughtless, foolish men. R1393:2, 5416:3

Slow of heart -- These great lessons required time, and evidently the forty-day period was none too long. NS655:5

To believe all -- They had been willing to believe something of what the Prophets had spoken, the glorious things. NS795:5

We have no right to throw away any book of the Bible; even more, no right to throw away any one word that he has commanded us to believe. R4230:5*

Luke 24:26

Ought not -- What else should be expected? Did he not foretell his own death? And did he not foretell his own resurrection? NS795:5

"Was it not necessary?" R1393:4

Necessary because it was a feature of Jehovah's plan for human redemption, and was so expressed by the prophets. R1393:3

If not "necessary" it would have proved: (1) that God is a changeable God; (2) that either in the first or the second case he was unjust; and (3)

such a variable course would unsettle all confidence in God. R1393:5

Showing them that the very things which had so disheartened them were the things which the prophets had foretold concerning the true Messiah. B114

According to the Scriptures. R1829:3

To have suffered -- Showing them from the Scriptures that his sacrifice was needful first of all before the Kingdom could be established. A274

To be fitted for the priestly office to which he was called, Our Lord must be proved beyond all peradventure. Through suffering he learned obedience to the perfect will of God to the lowest depth of self-abnegation. And so also we must suffer. R4767:3

The prophets have foretold the sufferings of The Christ, which has now lasted for nearly nineteen hundred years. NS697:6

So St. Paul has declared in respect to all who will be Jesus' associates in the Kingdom--they must suffer with him if they would reign with him, they must be dead with him if they would live with him. (2 Tim. 2:12)

R5495:5

To develop and manifest that perfection of character worthy of his high exaltation. R4767:3

These things -- Death. R5495:5

And -- We feel the necessity of a mighty deliverer as well as of a loving redeemer. R1393:6

Both the humiliation and the exaltation meet our necessities. R1394:1

Enter into his glory -- There could have been no Kingdom glory without the redemptive work. R2289:1

The full exaltation could not have been experienced until the sacrifice had been not only made, but presented as well. R1829:3

He did suffer death, "the just for the unjust," and thus made atonement for our sins. He did enter into his glory and is fully prepared to give forth the vivifying blessing so much needed by the whole groaning creation. R3234:3

The reward is two-fold: (1) personal exaltation to heavenly glory; (2) the Kingdom glory, the joy of being divine agents for human restoration. R5495:5

The Millennial glory--on the heavenly plane--the Head, and then his foreknown Members. NS697:6

After giving the ransom, he was made alive again on the spiritual plane, which he had previously left. R2081:2

"Became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross; wherefore God also hath highly exalted him." (Phil. 2:8,9) R1829:3

Luke 24:27

Beginning at Moses -- Moses spoke of the sufferings of Christ in all the arrangements of the Law and its sacrifices. R2659:3

Higher Critics and evolutionists, denying any special inspiration of Moses and the prophets, ignore them and offer instead, as of superior value, their own conjectures. R2801:2

Who gave the Law (John 7:19), not a fraud and deceiver who had palmed off Hammurabi's law for a new divine code. R3177:4

We claim no infallibility but, after the manner of the great Teacher, we seek to present to the minds of those interested the teachings of Moses and the prophets, and to voice the testimony of Jesus and the apostles, and to show the harmony of the Scriptures. R2802:2

All the prophets -- Who declared not only the coming glories, but also the sufferings which must precede them. R2659:3

He expounded -- Showing their true meaning and fulfillment. R2801:2

We are not told what these expositions were which opened their eyes of understanding, but we can surmise that he probably explained the significance of the Passover lamb and of the antitypical Atonement Day. R5587:2, 5416:4, 2801:3, 1394:2

Probably reminding them of how Isaac had been offered up by Abraham, explaining that Abraham typified the heavenly Father and Isaac typified himself. R5416:4, 2801:3, 1394:4

He doubtless told them about the smitten rock from which gushed the waters, that that rock represented himself, who must be smitten in order to give the water of life to the dying world. R5416:4

He doubtless told them how Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, and explained that the serpent represented sin; and that he, in being crucified, was made to take the place of the sinner. R5416:4

Calling attention to the various Psalms, which prophetically spoke, not only of his glorious reign, but also of his sufferings and death. R2801:3

Speaking of the utterances of Daniel, respecting Messiah being cut off in death, but not for himself; and of Isaiah, that Messiah should be led as a lamb to the slaughter. R2801:3, 1394:5

A wonderful sermon! It started new ideas and opened new expectations and hopes. B114

The special light in both the Jewish and Gospel age harvests is for the Israelites indeed. B27

In all the scriptures -- So we should not be content with offering our views and opinions, but should search the Scriptures and should be able from that source to give every man a reason for the hopes that are within us. R2801:2

Luke 24:28

Would have gone further -- He then proceeded to the other prophets, explaining the passages relating to the sufferings of Christ and the glory that would follow. R5416:5, 2801:3

Luke 24:28

Unto the village -- In this long walk of eight miles they would certainly have seen the prints of the nails in his hands and feet had he appeared in the crucified body. R2801:5

Have gone further -- Unless especially invited to share their hospitality, he would have gone on; this was no deception. F571; R5416:6, 2801:4

So it is still; he does not intrude upon his disciples. Rather, he encourages us to recognize our need of him and to ask, that we may receive, that our joy may be full. R5416:6

If our hearts fail to burn with responsive love and zeal and appreciation, the blessing will pass from us and we will fail to reach the climax of joy in a full recognition of who our Teacher has been. R2801:4

Luke 24:29

They constrained him -- We have every reason to suppose that if they had not urged, he would not have stopped with them. R5416:6, 2801:4

He had ministered to them so much spiritual joy, they delighted to show him every courtesy. R5416:6

When the Lord teaches us, if we do not constrain him to abide with us we lose the chief blessing. R2801:4

Luke 24:30

Sat at meat -- He had materialized in the same way that he appeared to Abraham. (Gen. 18:1,2) R5222:3, 3910:2, 2082:1, 1995:5

And blessed it -- Recognizing their new acquaintance as a great teacher or prophet they requested that he should return thanks for their evening meal. R2801:4

Certainly no one will claim they were then eating the Lord's Supper. R839:6, 466:3

Luke 24:31

They knew him -- By the simple act of blessing and breaking bread in the old familiar way. B115

Perhaps the language used in the blessing was such as they had heard him use before or perhaps in some other way their understanding was opened. R2801:5

If our candid, thoughtful endeavor is always to find the purest principles and the exact truth to the end that we may conform our lives thereto, then the Lord will be pleased to dwell with us and to manifest himself to us, as he does not unto the world. R1823:6

This was on the first day of the week, and was one of the reasons for the Early Church's observance of that day. F384

He vanished -- Greek, ginomai aphantos, became non-manifest, i.e., invisible. Strong's Exhaustive Concordance. R5222:6

He gave them an evidence of his resurrection and at the same time an evidence of his change. NS322:5

He showed them by this vanishing that he was no longer the man Christ Jesus, that he was changed, that the resurrected Jesus was a spirit being, who could come and go like the wind, as he had explained to Nicodemus. (John 3:8) R2801:5, 2455:3, 2081:3

Dissolved the flesh and bones and clothing in which he had manifested himself to them. B127; R5579:1, 5417:1, 2478:5, 2455:3

Out of their sight -- Though doubtless he was still with them--invisibly present. R5222:6

Luke 24:32

Heart burn within us -- In proportion as the heart burns within, as one realizes the fulfillment of God's promises in the past, does one develop faith in the fulfillment of those promises which relate to the future. R5416:5

He talked with us -- Our hearts burn while he talks and we listen, more than when we talk even with him. R2800:3

His expounding of the Scriptures had driven away their fears and enkindled hope. R1787:1

Opened to us -- Our Lord, while dismissing the self-satisfied, fault-finding quibbles of the Pharisees with dark or evasive answers, took time and care in making truth clear and plain to the humble, earnest seekers. B27

Luke 24:33

The same hour -- The news was too good to be kept, even until the next morning. R2802:4

Their joy was too great to permit them to sleep. R5417:1

And returned -- How different their feelings as they set out in return from those when they had left the brethren in Jerusalem, their hearts sad and their mind full of questionings. Now they were full of joy. R2802:4

The eleven -- Except Thomas. The term "eleven" is used in a general sense, and not in a particular sense, as referring to the apostles in general and not the exact number. R2802:5

Gathered together -- In the upper room, the doors being shut for fear of the Jews--barred, we may be sure. NS795:6

Luke 24:34

Appeared to Simon -- His third appearance after his resurrection. R3905:3
Alone near Jerusalem, or perhaps on the way to Emmaus. R2800:3

In breaking of bread -- No wonder they desired to meet together on the first day of every week after that, to talk the matter over and to call to mind the circumstances connected with this wonderful event of the Lord's resurrection, and to have their hearts "burn" again and again. B115

Doubtless it was this experience that led subsequently to the custom of the disciples having a meal in common on every first day of the week at which they again in imagination recognized the Lord present in their midst. R2802:5, 2771:4, 2265:6, 1942:3, 1787:1, 1421:2, 1382:4, 1014:2, 840:1, 466:3

The Church met every first-day of the week to celebrate the Lord's resurrection, and united in a common meal in remembrance of the Lord's first meeting with them, manifesting himself in the blessing and breaking of bread. This has no reference to the Memorial supper. F384; R2932:1, 2771:4, 2265:6, 1942:3, 1382:4, 1014:2

They neither used wine, no less important than bread in the celebration of the Lord's Supper, nor did they call it the Lord's Supper, nor observe it with special solemnity, but rather with thankfulness and joy. R1014:2, 839:6, 466:3; F384

Stood in the midst -- Verses 36 to 53 present the fifth and eleventh manifestations of the risen Messiah to his faithful apostles. R3910:1 Still further preparing the apostles, his chosen witnesses, to bear reliable testimony to the whole Church. While he appeared to many other disciples, he was specially careful to clearly establish the fact of his resurrection to the apostles. R1522:4; F214

The manner chosen by our Lord for revealing himself was the most favorable for the disciples. He wished to gain their attention, and to avoid anything that would unnecessarily excite them, and hinder them from learning the lessons which he wished to impart. R1995:3

As when the Lord and the angels appeared to Abraham, "He lifted up his eyes and looked, and, lo, three men stood by him." He did not see them coming, but, apparently, it was just there, at his side, they took on visible form. HG29:4

When the doors were shut, "Where the disciples were assembled for fear of the Jews." (John 20:19) B115

Peace be unto you -- Calming their fears and assuring them of his resurrection. NS322:5

One of the Lord's last messages to his disciples before his crucifixion was, "My peace I give unto you." (John 14:27) R2804:1

The spirit of peace is contagious amongst the Lord's people, even as the spirit of anger is contagious in the flesh. R2804:1 24:37

Affrighted -- They were nervous, not only fearing apprehension by the rulers, but perplexed by the day's incidents. R3910:2, 2478:3

Although the disciples had been informed concerning our Lord's resurrection, they seem to have but imperfectly comprehended his words. Our Lord foreknew this and chose the most favorable manner for manifesting himself, and communicating to them the wonderful fact of his resurrection. R1995:2

They had not yet learned the lesson that our Lord, in his resurrection, was a spirit being and no longer a human being, and that like the angels he now had power to appear and disappear. R2478:3

Seen a spirit -- What else could they think? How could any other come in while the doors were shut? R3910:2

Although the Lord was put to death in the flesh, he was made alive in the Spirit. (1 Pet. 3:18) R3910:2, 1995:6, 1416:2, 578:5

Luke 24:38

Why are ye troubled? -- The disciples did not know whether the object before them had tangible flesh and bones like their own. They thought they saw a phantom, and Jesus said this to inspire their confidence. Q595:6

Luke 24:39

Behold my hands -- Wishing to emphasize the identity of his risen self with the crucified one. R2478:5, 2081:3

Nothing in this implies of necessity that the flesh which they saw was the identical flesh which had hung on the cross. R2478:5

He was ready to give any demonstration that was necessary, because, unless his disciples really believed in the resurrection, they could not do the work that was before them, nor could they even receive the holy Spirit at Pentecost. R5579:5

Only twice did he appear in a form similar to that which they had seen, bearing the marks of his crucifixion. On both of these occasions he appeared while the doors were shut, and later vanished while the doors were still shut. R5417:4

I myself -- He was appearing in the flesh. To have appeared as a spirit being would not have served his purpose as well. Paul fell down as dead when he glimpsed our Lord's spiritual body. Suppose all the disciples had fallen down as dead? What proof would that have been that it was Jesus? Q669:1

A spirit hath not -- Impressing upon them that they were not seeing a spirit body. They saw a materialized body. The Lord was a spirit all the time, however, and the flesh and bones were merely agents of appearance. R5222:5

But spirit beings had assumed flesh and bones as Jesus did, and had thus appeared to men to deliver divine messages. R3910:2, 2082:4

But as to what a spiritual body is made of, we know not. "It doth not yet appear what we shall be; but we shall be like him." (1 John 3:2) R578:5; B128

"Flesh and blood cannot inherit the Kingdom of God." (1 Cor. 15:50) B128; R5222:5

Flesh and bones -- He avoided the expression "flesh and blood," for that would have meant, A spirit hath not human nature, as ye see me have; and this would have been untrue, for he was changed and was no longer human but highly exalted. R1856:6

As ye see me have -- Have, or to possess. R1856:6

What they saw was not spirit, but matter. This does not mean that our Lord was not a spirit being at the time. It merely means what it says, that what they saw was not spirit, and hence that they had no cause for affright. R2478:4, 1995:5, 1952:3, 1856:6, 554:6*; PD70/85; NS177:3

The next instant he showed that he was now highly exalted and different from flesh and blood, by dissolving the flesh and bones and clothes before their eyes and vanishing out of their sight. R1416:4

The resurrected bodies of the Church are described in 1 Cor. 15:42-44, as spiritual. So if our Redeemer has a scarred and fleshly body, while we have glorious spirit bodies, the Body of Christ would eclipse the Head in glory. R1952:5

Broiled fish -- And not a vegetable diet. R1855:6

Luke 24:43

And did eat -- Evidencing the fact that they were not being addressed by an illusion, but by a corporeal being. NS795:6

The manifestations in the flesh during the forty days correspond exactly to those manifestations which Jesus had made long previously, one of which was to Abraham, who knew not the Lord but knew him only as a man. R5579:4, 2082:1, 1995:5; NS6:6, 32:6, 177:3

Spiritual beings will, when appearing under a veil of flesh, eat and drink the food of men. HG29:3

Luke 24:44

Was yet with you -- While I was yet the man Christ Jesus, before my resurrection change. R5587:2

Which was written -- Jesus does not refer to any pre-arranged plan beyond that mentioned in the Holy Writings. All that is said upon the subject of the foreknowledge of God seems to refer to that which was written. R486:4*

In the law of Moses -- Doubtless showing them that the sacrifice of the Law typified his own sacrifice, that natural Israel was not the Kingdom class, and the work expected of them, but evidently not that the Gentiles were to be fellow-heirs. R3910:6

In the prophets -- The signs of our Lord's second presence will be found in harmony with, and corroborated by, the testimony of the prophets, as was the case at the first advent. D598

Luke 24:45

Then -- These things could not properly have been given previously. These truths would not have been meat in due season to the household of faith earlier. R3910:5

The secret is that they were not previously prepared. Other lessons must be learned before the deeper truths could be appreciated. R3910:5

Bible prophecies are rarely understood much in advance of their fulfillment. This was so at the Lord's First Advent. Prophecies were fulfilling on every hand, yet the disciples did not perceive them until later. R5824:3

Opened he their understanding -- Their mental eyes. B116
Carrying with it the thought that these Scriptures had been closed previously. R3130:3

Not that our Lord worked some miracle upon the minds of his followers to open their understanding; rather he operated upon them as he still operates in giving instruction, using natural means and reasoning with them. R3910:5

The special theme of the Master in the instruction of the forty days was "the things pertaining to the kingdom of God." (Acts 1:3) R1415:3

Moses rehearsed all the words of the Law unto the people; the Prophet like unto Moses not only rehearses the Law, but opens the minds and hearts of the people to receive it. Moses carried the Law to the people in his hands; Christ carries the Law to the people in his heart. R1322:4*

The word "opened" carries with it the thought that these Scriptures had been closed previously. R3130:3

Today, as one by one the Lord's people are ready for it, he is pleased to give them more light of "Present Truth." (2 Pet. 1:12) R3910:5

Understand the scriptures -- While removing the natural obstacles to faith by assuming human form, our Lord convinced the disciples, and made them witnesses to others, not by their natural sight and touch, but by reasoning with them out of the Scriptures. B123

His words served as a Bible Key, bringing order out of their previous confusion. The fact that the Scriptures are so written that they cannot be understood without divine assistance is incomprehensible to the world. R3910:3

Luke 24:46

Thus it is written -- The signs of our Lord's second presence are in accordance with the testimony of the prophets, as was the case at the first advent. D598

It behoved Christ to suffer -- There could be no resurrection without the ransom sacrifice first being given. R3706:6

As Aaron's priesthood did not typify the glory of the Kingdom, so Christ must suffer to enter into his glory as the Melchizedek Priest. SM143:3

The third day -- Not three days later, but on the third day, in fulfillment of the antitype of the barley sheaf of first-fruits. (Lev. 23) R5191:3,2

The phrase used by Jesus in Matt. 12:40, "three days and three nights," is purely idiomatic and implied that he would be in the heart of the earth "till the third day." (See Esth. 4:16; 5:1; Gen. 42:17,18; 2 Chron. 10:5,12) R3574:5*, 2796:2, 2271:3, 1289:6

Repentance -- As the Gospel was not intended to convert all the Jews, but only to take from them a remnant, so likewise it was intended to take from the Gentiles only a remnant, that the entire company is properly termed a "little flock." R3005:1

Sowing, rather than harvesting. R885:2*

Remission of sins -- This was never preached before, because, until then, our ransom price had not been paid. R387:3

Should be preached -- The commission is not to make the nations disciples, but to gather out of all nations those willing to be disciples of Christ. R5588:2

In his name -- God never gave power to bishops, priests or ministers of any denomination to forgive sins. Nor did Jesus give authority to his apostles to forgive sins. They might preach forgiveness, but only in his name. SM466:1; HG737:5

Among all nations -- The commission meant merely that they were no longer restricted to the Jews in preaching the Gospel of the Kingdom. R3004:6

The apostles evidently did not at first comprehend the scope of this commission. They were ready enough to begin at Jerusalem, extend the work throughout Judea and preach to the Samaritans, but it required very special instructions for Peter to preach to the Gentiles also. R3005:1

At the present time at least a cursory knowledge of the facts upon which the Lord's message is based obtains throughout the habitable world, implying that the witnessing time has about expired. R2925:1

Since America, for instance, could not be reached during the life-time of the apostles, it is manifest that the major part of this witnessing was to be done through their writings and after their death. R1522:3

Where none but Israelites indeed would care to follow the defamed and executed Jesus. R2925:1

Continuing among the Jews until the full end of the 70 weeks of favor. (Dan. 9:24) C170

To the Jew first, and afterward to the Gentiles. (Acts 13:46, Rom. 2:9,10) C170; R1846:2

Beginning at Jerusalem -- To fulfill the promise of God to their fathers, that his special favor should be to them first--"to the Jew first, and afterward to the Gentile." R1846:2*

The witnessing properly began at Jerusalem, the center of Judaism, which God himself had chosen, represented in the Temple. R2924:6

The gospel was not preached to any Gentile for some time after Pentecost, Cornelius being the first convert. This was because Dan. 9:24 predicted seventy weeks (490 years) set apart by God in which special favor would be extended to fleshly Israel as a people. R189:5

The only pre-eminence given to Hebrews under the Gospel call is that it commenced with them. The previous call was confined to them. R1457:5
But not ending there. R3911:1

He knew well that their Jewish ideas would hinder them from going beyond the Jews until he should in due time open the way, as he did at the end of their favor, by sending Peter to Cornelius. C170

Luke 24:48

Ye are witnesses -- Witnesses upon whom the people could rely as having been with him from the beginning of his ministry, and therefore manifestly acquainted with his doctrine and purpose. R1521:6

His representatives, representatives of his character, his teachings and his work. R2818:4

To call and make ready a people to receive me, when I shall come to be glorified in my saints, and to reign as King of kings. B120

The selection of the twelve at the time it took place, instead of waiting until Pentecost, was, in large measure, for the purpose of permitting them to behold his works and hear his message that they might in due time be witnesses to declare the wonderful works of God and the wonderful words of life manifested through Jesus. F211

To the fact of his resurrection. Their testimony would be a sure foundation for the faith of coming generations. B123

They were to be his witnesses to bear testimony of him after his death. R1521:6

Through their writings. R1522:6

Of these things -- Not merely the virgin birth, the holy and devoted life, Calvary's cross, our Lord's resurrection and ascension, but that he was a properly qualified Redeemer, meeting the conditions of the Law, and now ever living to succor those coming to the Father through him. R3911:3

Luke 24:49

The promise of my Father -- The holy Spirit had been promised and must be waited for as the realization and beginning of the new work, the development of the Christian Church. R4305:3

Our Lord Jesus, in all matters, acts as the representative of the Father, Jehovah, in the work of salvation. E35

The Father had promised in various types that the Church would receive the holy Spirit from Jesus, their Head. For instance, the holy oil, poured upon the head of Aaron, representing Jesus, flowed down upon his body, the Church. R5587:3

A measure of the holy Spirit had been on the apostles during our Lord's ministry, but the power under which they then operated was not from the Father direct, but was imparted to them by our Lord Jesus. NS201:3

But tarry ye -- They probably knew not how long the tarrying would be. NS201:2

Necessary for the development of the apostles in faith and trust. R2926:4

The record is that the apostles did tarry at Jerusalem until they received the Pentecostal blessing. R3911:2

A general trouble amongst those teaching in the name of the Lord has been that they did not tarry until endued with the holy Spirit, but recklessly pressed into their ministry without this credential of divine authorization. R3911:2

No one is desired as God's witness until he has made full consecration to the Lord and been begotten of the Spirit, no matter how great his natural abilities may be. R2925:4

Until ye be endued -- Assuring them of divine acceptance, and qualifying them for divine service. NS348:1

The sending of the holy Spirit at Pentecost became a witness of God's acceptance of our Lord Jesus' sacrifice, and thus a sign of the acceptance of the Church and household of faith. R3911:1

Implying their unfitness for the work as natural men. R2925:3

None except those thus endued with power from on high are qualified to be ambassadors for God and his representatives before men. R3911:2, 2925:5

The Lord's sheep should be careful to select as leaders only such as give evidence of having come under the influence of the holy anointing of the Spirit of God, no matter how much natural ability the would-be leader may possess. R2925:4

Work not done under the guidance of the holy Spirit is sure to be defective and in some respects evil, and to result in evil fruitage.

R3911:2

The Father's purposing of this soon giving of the spirit made it possible for the disciples and Judas to be new creatures, passing from death to life, in a tentative form. R5684:1

While that hope has reached fruition, other hopes have taken its place. In our case, we are waiting for our adoption, to wit, the deliverance of our body--the body of Christ. R2926:5

With power -- This promised power to know and to understand times and seasons, and all things pertaining to a proper witnessing, applies to the whole Church. B120

Luke 24:50

He led them out -- The eleven were the chosen witnesses of the Lord's ascension, and there is no evidence of the presence of any others on that occasion. R1522:5

Talking the while, explaining the things that would be to their advantage to know. R5589:2

On the occasion of his eleventh appearance after his resurrection. R3905:5

To Bethany -- This was at the Mount of Olives. R3905:5, 3911:3

And blessed them -- And he shall so come (with a blessing) as they saw him go. B154

Luke 24:51

Parted from them -- Quietly and secretly, consistent with his purpose of having thoroughly convinced witnesses of the fact. None saw him, or knew of the fact, except his faithful followers. B154

"I go to prepare a place for you, and if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again and receive you unto myself, that where I am, there ye may be also." (John 14:2,3) R1828:3; B120

His going was expedient for himself, and for us, too, indirectly, as illustrated in the parable of the young nobleman going into a far country to receive for himself a Kingdom and to return. (Luke 19:12) R1829:3

Carried up into heaven -- Corresponding to the act of the high priest Aaron, in entering the most holy with the blood of the atonement sacrifice and presenting it before the mercy seat together with the sweet incense, which represented the human perfection of Christ. R1828:3

The ascension of our Lord to the right hand of power signifies his ability now to "give gifts unto men." (Eph. 4:8) R1829:5

Our Lord's ascension was a spectacular one, so far as his Church was concerned, but not in respect to the world. R5589:5

"What and if ye shall see the Son of Man ascend up where he was before?" (John 6:62) R5589:5, 5588:3

The eleven appearances of Jesus after his resurrection were: (1) Sunday morning to Mary Magdalene (John 20:11-18); (2) Sunday morning to the women returning from the sepulchre (Matt. 28:9-10); (3) Sunday to Simon Peter alone (Luke 24:34); (4) Sunday afternoon to the two disciples going to Emmaus (Luke 24:13-31); (5) Sunday evening to the apostles, excepting Thomas (John 20:19-25); (6) Sunday evening, a week later, to the apostles, Thomas being present (John 20:26-29); (7) probably three weeks later to the apostles on the shores of Galilee (John 21:1-13); (8) shortly afterward to the eleven on a mountain in Galilee (Matt. 28:16-20); (9) shortly afterward to "above 500 brethren" in Galilee (1 Cor. 15:6); (10) at the close of the 40 days to James (1 Cor. 15:7); (11) at his ascension to all the apostles (Luke 24:50,51; Acts 1:6-9). R3905:3-5

Our Lord's ascension was simply another way of disappearing. R2818:5

The body in which he had just appeared was dissolved or dematerialized. R5589:5

So that they might have before their minds the thought that he was gone, that they were not to expect him to appear and disappear in the future, as he had done during these forty days. R3911:4, 2818:6

Luke 24:52

Worshipped him -- They recognized his greatness, dignity and honor as Messiah, the Son of God, Redeemer of the world. R3911:6

Returned to Jerusalem -- Comforted and blessed, not only by the hope of his return, but also by the promise of the Comforter, as a token of his love and of the Father's favor, not many days after. R1829:6

Luke 24:53

Continually -- Regularly. R3912:1

In the temple -- All the members of Christ's Body are represented as abiding in the Temple, the Tabernacle, the Holy. R3912:4

John

General

John's Gospel was written after the other three, and quite evidently with a view to setting forth matters not set forth in the other Gospels. Thus we find that it does not attempt to give a full history of the Lord's ministry in all particulars, but chiefly deals with matters omitted or with details not given by the others. R3481:3, 4122:3; OM329:3

John evidently recollected matters which, in whole or in part, had been overlooked by the others, and his Gospel sets forth some very interesting incidents and prayers and discourses, whose omission would have been a serious loss to us. Thus we see how God operates in various ways to accomplish his purpose. He could have miraculously used any one of the Evangelists to give the full and detailed account, but he chose rather to allow each to state himself in his own manner, and to supply the details in four narratives, in preference to one. R2435:2

St. John was naturally loving, gentle and meek; and that very disposition would make it difficult for him to sever the many ties of human friendship which such dispositions always draw about them. Yet he was faithful to his Master, regardless of human ties. He was a patient, faithful teacher of the doctrines of Christ, and willingly suffered banishment to the lonely isles of Patmos for his faithful witnessing to the truth. Similar was the course of all the apostles. They were bold, faithful advocates of the truth, and examples of its power to sanctify them wholly, as they gradually grew in grace submitting themselves to its transforming influence. They were men of similar and varied dispositions like ourselves. R1041:4

John 1:1

In the beginning -- The beginning of God's creation, when Christ as a spirit being became "the first born of every creature." R4098:1

The Lord's beginning, when Jehovah created him. Q41:1

He was not with the Father before the beginning of creation, for he himself was "the beginning of the creation of God." SM483:3

Genesis goes back to the beginning of things earthly; but this goes back to the beginning of all beginnings, when God was alone--"the beginning of the creation of God." (Rev. 3:14) R5351:3, 3474:2; F18

Before anything was created, and when none existed but Jehovah. R338:1

Long before man was created, or our earth was brought from its chaotic condition, long before angels and cherubim were created, divine power brought forth a Son on the spirit plane. SM491:2

Not Jehovah's beginning, for he had no beginning; but the world's beginning, or man's beginning. E86; F18; R5748:1, 3474:2, 1060:5; NS257:2

While Jesus was born of a woman, this was not the beginning of his existence. NS751:2

The word "beginning" is rather an indefinite word. It is difficult to imagine Jehovah without a beginning because we have finite minds. Q40:6, 360:4

Was -- The Logos, the Word, existed with God in the beginning of earth's creation, as mentioned in Genesis. R2408:1

He was both the first created and the first or highest in rank. R1063:6*

The Word -- The Logos. R5748:1, 5768:1, 5352:1, 4964:3, 2408:5; CR290:1, 195:6

The Greek word logos would be properly translated by the words intention, plan, purpose, or expression. R338:1, 2408:1

Greek, Logos, signifies mouthpiece or special messenger. R5351:3; Q377:6

The name of Jesus before he became flesh. CR290:1

As the mouthpiece of Jehovah, he was commissioned not only to redeem the world, but to uplift it out of sin and to restore the willing and obedient to all that was lost in Adam. SM51:1

His name, the Logos, signifies the Divine Message or Messenger, the One through whom Jehovah's utterances and decrees went forth. HG661:6

Dr. Adam Clark says, "This term (Logos) should be left untranslated, for the very same reasons why the names Jesus and Christ are left untranslated." E85; R1514:3

It is said that in olden times kings, when addressing multitudes, sat behind a screen, while in front of this stood the king's interpreter or representative, who spoke the king's words in a loud tone to be heard by all who were there. E85; R4964:2, 4107:3, 3474:3, 338:3; PD54/67; CR195:5, 247:2

Our Lord, before he came into the world, before the world was made by him as the Father's agent, was the Logos. R4165:2

More literally, "the Expression," a full and complete expression of the divine will, mind, purpose, character. R2408:1; SM491:3

Jehovah's Prime Minister. R1125:3; HG292:4

The "messenger" at the burning bush (Ex. 3:2). But the highest and most honored messenger should not be confounded with the One whom he represents and in whose name he speaks and whose power he exercises. E43

One of our Lord's titles. (Rev. 19:13) R1060:5

The same evangelist, in his epistle, uses the same title in respect to our Lord again, denominating him the Word of life, or the Logos of life. (1 John 1:1) E85

Plan, intention or purpose of God. God had a well defined and matured plan in his mind before it found expression in the slightest development. R338:1

Primarily the word refers to the plan of God, and it is afterwards applied to the messenger of that plan, the Son of God. R338:3

The Old Testament writings are God's written Word, and could not be fully understood until God's living Word, Jesus Christ, came and stood beside them, showing their signification. R444:4*

Christ, in every stage, is called the Word. Here, in his pre-human existent state; in verse 14 of the first advent; and in Rev. 19:13 in his future glory. R21:2*

We are confident that it was he who was the special messenger of Jehovah to Abraham in Genesis 18. R3946:3

A position aspired to by Satan. R1686:2

Was with God -- Was with the God. CR195:6; R5768:1, 5748:1, 5352:1, 4964:3

The God; the Greek emphasizes the word here rendered God. R1060:5, 2408:5

The Greek prepositive article is sometimes used so as to give the effect of the God in contrast with a God. E70

Here we see most clearly and beautifully the close relationship existing in the very remote past between the heavenly Father and the heavenly Son. R3474:5

Introducing us to our Redeemer in his pre-human condition, a spirit condition, higher than the angels. R2408:3, 5768:1; Q363:1

Scholars are well aware that the word that is translated God in the Old Testament is not equivalent to the word Jehovah. Although its significance is mighty one, it is frequently used for others beside the All-mighty, Jehovah. It is used for angels, great men and false gods. In the New Testament, the word theos is equivalent to elohim, and signifies mighty one. R2408:4

This makes two--the Word, and the God whom he was with, or represented. R4107:1

And the Word -- Jesus is here called the Word because Jehovah reveals his word, plan or purpose, through him. R338:3

Was God -- Not contradicting the previous statement, but the distinction is considerably lost in the translation. The Greek article does not appear before the word translated God, and hence the thought in the statement is a god, as in contrast with the previous statement, the God. R3474:5
Accurately translated, it reads, the Logos was a god. R5352:1, 5768:1, 5748:1, 5352:1, 4964:3; CR195:6

Although the KJV is not a bad translation, it fails to give to the English reading the force and significance of the Greek--"In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with the God, and the Word was a god; the same was in the beginning with the God." E86; R4107:1 3474:6, 1514:3; HG661:6; OV114:3; PD54/67; SM497:3, 491:1; NS255:6

We do not claim originality as to the proper translation of this verse.

Our attention was called to it by the Diaglott, an interlinery word-for-word Greek and English New Testament in general use and of high repute. R3076:2

In the Diaglott, "the" represents the article in the Greek text, while "a" shows that the article is lacking. R1514:3

The Greek article ho precedes the first word "God" in this verse, and does not precede the second word "God," thus intentionally indicating God the Father and God the Son in a case where, without the article, the reader would be left in confusion. E86

A God, a mighty one, superior to the angels. R4165:3

This translation can be verified by consulting any Greek Testament or any Greek scholar. R1514:3, 2408:5

Professor W. G. Moorehead (whose article on R3075 contradicts the Diaglott) acknowledges that the article "the" must be omitted in order to show that Christ is not the God but a God. R3076:4

"To us there is but one God" (1 Cor. 8:6) is not out of accord with the record that Jesus was a god with the God, because the name Jehovah was never permitted to any but the Father supreme, while the title "God" (Hebrew, elohim) might be applied to any mighty one in authority and power, Jehovah himself being superior to all elohim. NS255:6

The word god signifies mighty one, and is used not only respecting the Father, but also the Son, and also in reference to angels, and in one instance to men, influential men, the 70 elders of Israel whom Moses appointed. R3474:6

"God" is a translation of each of four Hebrew words--el, elah, elohim and adonai, all signifying the mighty, or great. It is a general name. R338:2; SM497:1

With the proper conception of the meaning of the word God, as used in the Scriptures, namely, a mighty, a powerful being, we see the propriety of applying the name to the Logos. R1060:4

He is distinctly shown to be the Son and not the Father--to be a God and not the God. R5352:1

While the Father was the God above all others, the Son, the Logos, was a God above all others, next to the Father but subservient to the Father.

R3861:5

This subservience and dependence upon the Father was true of our Lord not only while he was in the flesh and before he was made flesh, but is distinctly asserted of him since his resurrection. (1 Cor. 15:28) R3861:5

The word god signifies mighty one; but there is only one God whose name is the Almighty. R5352:1

As the pendulum swinging from one extreme to the other, so are the conceptions of Christians respecting our Lord--one extreme declares him simply a good man, while the opposite assumes that he was the Father.

R4106:2

The Almighty did not inquire of the angels whether or not they would accept the glorified Jesus as their Lord; he autocratically elevated our Lord Jesus. In his prehuman condition, our Lord Jesus was from the beginning the head, the chief of all the Father's creatures, works and arrangements. R2985:1

"All men should honor the Son, even as they honor the Father." (John 5:23)

They should not honor the Son instead of the Father, however. SM498:2

Our Lord Jesus is a mighty one, a great one amongst the mighty ones, and as our Lord himself declares, all should "honor the Son even as they honor the Father." (John 5:22) R2726:1

John 1:2

In the beginning -- Of creation, himself the first creation. R1060:5,

338:3

"The beginning of the creation of God." (Rev. 3:14) E87

Before the creation of others. R3474:6

Not only was the Logos the beginning, or Alpha; he was also the last, the Omega, of divine creation. (Rev. 1:11; 21:6) R5351:3, 5064:1

When we consider the length of time that must have elapsed during the creation, we may have some idea of our Lord's intimate and long acquaintance with Jehovah and his plans. No marvel, then, that Jesus said, "No man knoweth the Son but the Father; neither knoweth any man the Father save the Son." R1060:1; HG292:3

The one who had known God's character longer, more fully and more intimately than any other being. R1125:3

With God -- With the God. R5768:1, 5352:1; CR195:6

Therefore they were two, and not one in person. R3474:6

John 1:3

All things -- Angels, worlds, mankind--all things. R3475:1

Angels, principalities and powers, cherubim and seraphim, as well as man, were all the direct creation of the Logos, though not by his own power.

R5372:1, 5351:6

Not one of whom was like himself--the direct creation of Jehovah. SM492:T

Made by him -- He it is who in all things has the pre-eminence in Jehovah's plan and work. E86; R1278:3 Not only showing his intimate acquaintance with Jehovah and knowledge of his plans, but exhibiting him as his honored agent in their accomplishment. R1059:6

Not that the Son was superior to the Father, that the Father had created nothing because of lack of ability to create, but that the Father was pleased to use this particular channel in his great work. R3475:1

The Father is the Creator, although all things were made by the Son, as the Father's agent. R4085:3, 5135:3, 4964:2, 4085:3, 2199:5, 1904:5, 338:3

Our Father is the first cause of all things. R369:3

All things are of the Father, all things are by the Son. (1 Cor. 8:6) The power was of the Father, but it was exercised through the Son, the beginning of his creation, and hence "without him was not anything made that was made." R4107:3

By the Father's energy or spirit; yet that energy was exercised through his Son. R370:4

The same point is emphasized by the plural form of the pronoun in Gen. 1:26--"We will make man in our image, after our likeness." R1609:3 SM497:1

God not only began the work, but he also completed it, through his Son, his agent in all things. R1266:1

Jesus was the direct creator of all things. He was the divine power, agent, work, messenger, the Logos of Jehovah. R4964:3; CR247:2, 195:6

As it pleased the Father to create all things through the Son, so in all things it has pleased him to exalt our Lord Jesus as his honored instrument. F397

We find him also the agent in the development and perfection of all things. It was Jehovah's powers delegated to the Son, and it was Jehovah's glorious plan which he delighted to accomplish. R919:3 F65

Already he had been used of the Father as his special agent in the creation of angels and men when the Father proposed to him that he should become man's Redeemer. NS83:4

Whether we contemplate the vastness and grandeur of the physical universe, or the innumerable host of intelligent creatures he brought into existence, we are overwhelmed with a sense of the glory that he had with the Father. R1247:2

The Only Begotten of the Father, the beginning of the creation of God, was the superintendent of the various affairs connected with the creation of the earth and its inhabitants. R3921:4

Jehovah's chief and honored, intelligent and active agent in creation, the Almighty entrusted with the work of redeeming and restoring mankind. R1125:3

While he joyfully worked out the grand plan of creation, he probably knew nothing of God's purpose for the subsequent permission of evil and the necessity for the great work of redemption. R3160:3

Without him -- No suggestion that the Father is the Son, and that the Son is his own Father, but that there are two persons, both Gods, both Creators, but the one the superior, the other his honored representative. R3475:1

Jehovah is the Creator of all things; yet he does this by proxy through him who was "the beginning of the creation of God." R2426:6

The key is in the oneness of purpose and of work between the Father and the Son--"I and my Father are one." (John 10:30) R2431:4

Not anything made -- Other Scriptures defeat the argument that if he made all things, therefore he was not made, and that if not made then he must be an uncreated or self-existent God. R1063:5*

John 1:4

In him was life -- Absolute life, perfect life, because his life had not come from Adam through an earthly father, but was directly transferred from his pre-human state or condition to the womb of Mary. R3475:2

Jesus was the only one who had life. PT381:T*

Perfection of life. R3885:6

Implying that he did not receive his life, as did other men, from an earthly father. It was because Jesus had life in this special sense that he could be the Redeemer of men. R4154:3, 4107:4, 3475:2

Our Lord's separateness from the human family is thus pointed out; in no other man than "the man Christ Jesus" was there life. R2408:6

Is there not life in every man? No! From the divine standpoint, a death sentence passed upon Adam and was inherited by all his descendants. R4154:3

Not a deathless life, which could not die, but life everlasting, so that he would not die, had he not laid down his life. R677:1*

Father Adam once had life, but he lost it through disobedience in Eden. R3475:2

This text has a special application to the new creature--"In him was life," the new life, life as a new creature, partaker of the divine nature. R4155:1

When he was immersed in the symbolism of death, he received of the Father a begetting of the holy Spirit--he was begotten to a newness of life, to a spirit life. R4155:1

In the Son of God--the Word--Jesus, from 30 years of age, was the divine life which he never before possessed. R338:4

"As the Father hath life in himself, so he has given unto the Son to have life in himself." (John 5:26) R4155:1

Even Jesus did not possess this wonderful kind of life, immortality, this essentially divine quality, until after his resurrection from the dead.

R1642:1

The life was -- Christ is the judgment of the world because he is its love, and he is its love because he is its light, and he is its light because he is its life. R1329:2*

Light of men -- Light is here used in a figurative sense, signifying hope, intelligence, instruction. R3475:6

Everywhere throughout the Scripture light is used to represent God, his truth, his righteousness, his servants and their messages. SM240:2

This life constituted the light amongst men. They perceived that he was a remarkable character--"Never man spake like this man." "They marveled at the gracious words that proceeded out of his mouth." (John 7:46; Luke 4:22) R4107:4

The life that was in him, the perfection of manhood that was in him, was the light of men in his day. R4155:3

The power of the holy Spirit in our Lord Jesus, shining in perfect accord with his perfect flesh, was indeed the light of men, not only reflecting the divine character in his doings and words, but enabling him to speak to his followers the wonderful words of life. R4155:4 To know God we must gain knowledge of him, and knowledge is assured belief, enlightenment, acquaintance with or understanding of God, his plans and purposes as revealed in Christ. R493:1*

Not only through his recorded discourses and instructions, but also through the lives of his disciples, and that in proportion as they were and are truly his. R3475:3

Having bought us with his blood, he became the light-giver, hope-giver. R2408:6

John 1:5

In darkness -- Darkness is the synonym for Satan, the Prince of Darkness, and all the deluded followers, the children of darkness, and the wickedness with which he is identified, the works of darkness. SM240:2

It is the nature of light to scatter darkness. SM241:T

The darkness -- Darkness was not confined to the ignorant then, nor is it today. Indeed, the powers of darkness are greatest in the more influential and the better educated. SM241:1

Comprehended it not -- They did not arise and shine (Isa. 60:1), and therefore darkness came upon them; and as a nation, blinded to their highest interests, they stumbled into the complete wreck of their national polity. R2036:1

It is still true that the darkened class comprehend not. "The god of this world hath blinded the minds of them that believe not." (2 Cor. 4:4)

R4107:4 3475:3

Some of the world are asleep, others are awake to worldly aims, ambitions, schemes, but thoroughly blind to the divine purposes. R4444:3

Notwithstanding the faithfulness of Jesus and the few light-bearers enlightened with the holy Spirit of which they are begotten, still "darkness covers the earth and gross darkness the heathen." (Isa. 60:2)

R4987:6

Even Christians, the Apostle intimates, see only in part, but may see increasingly in proportion as they come into line and accord with the divine plan respecting them. R3475:4

As they would consider his perfection and how, as represented in him, the light shined in darkness and was not appreciated, so they would expect that the light shining from them would not be appreciated either. R3313:5

John 1:7

For a witness -- Six months prior to the Jewish harvest there was a message to make manifest to Israel the coming of Messiah; six months before the Gospel harvest the jubilee arguments came out to make manifest to "the Israel" the coming of Messiah the second time. HG71:6

That all men -- Only a minority have yet seen this light. R2409:1

John 1:8

Not that Light -- Greek, phos. Also used with respect to the Church, which is the body of Christ, and with her Lord, partaker of the holy Spirit. R2409:2

The Apostle carefully distinguishes between the messenger of the light and the Light itself. Subsequently (John 5:35), when speaking of John (the Baptist) as a burning and shining lamp, a totally different Greek word is used. R2409:2

John was particular not to take any honor in respect to these matters to himself, but declared plainly that his mission was to introduce the Messiah. R3475:5

Was sent -- Neither John nor Jesus could begin a public service until thirty years of age, since this was one feature of the law, but John, being six months the elder, was thus privileged to begin his ministry six months in advance of our Lord. R2417:1

The true Light -- Anti-typical, real, genuine; not counterfeit or typical. R2409:1

Whose mission it was to reveal, to make known, the Father's love. R3475:5
Implying that there are false, or imitation lights. Of these we know that there are many--lights of heathendom and lights of Christendom. R4988:3, 3197:4

In the end of the age. R2319:5

He has not yet been the Light of the world, but merely a light to his people. R5352:5

Jesus was the great light which came into the world, and his followers were to be lights or candles also. R4558:5

The Savior and his Church in glory will be the great Sun of Righteousness which will arise over the earth, and shine forth for the healing of the people. R4988:4, 4967:6, 4677:2, 4107:6, 3686:4, 2573:6, 2550:3, 1645:4, 1311:5, 244:1*; HG353:4; SM244:1, 560:3; NS860:1

Which will shine forth for the blessing of mankind, to bring order out of present confusion, to scatter present darkness, ignorance and superstition, to cause the knowledge of the glory of God to fill the whole earth. R3770:6, 5008:1

Shining in its strength from the exalted divine Christ, head and body. R338:5

"The light that shines in the face of Jesus Christ." (2 Cor. 4:6) D238

The Morning Star. (Rev. 22:16) R1063:3* 390:4*

When he who was lifted up at Calvary, and afterward lifted up in resurrection power, will be manifested in power and great glory. R5316:4

The light was not prior to Jesus Christ, for we read that he is the light.

This wisdom was first promulgated by our Lord. Q66:1; R5105:5, 5544:3, 4967:6; SM249:2

We may walk in the light for we are in the presence of the "true light." R159:4*

Bartholdi's Statue of Liberty Enlightening the World is true to the facts, but whatever blessing there is in the light which shines from Liberty's torch is the light of the Gospel. NS666:1

Which lighteth -- Ultimately. R3686:4, 1711:2

When the clouds and darkness of error shall pass away, and the clear light of truth shall shine forth, and the glory of the Lord be revealed, and all flesh see it together. (Isa. 40:2; 11:9; 60:5) HG272:6

Not only to redeem man's life, but also to enlighten him and to restore as many as may be willing to accept sonship. This work has not yet been accomplished. R2409:3

He engaged not only to save man from death by a Ransom, but to bring man to the knowledge of that truth. (1 Tim. 2:4) R77:3*

The same wisdom which instructed his disciples guides men back to the Father, instructs them as to what discipleship means, makes them wise in order that they may take the steps by which discipleship is to be gained.

R5105:5

"What think ye of Christ?" With the question and with the light that makes possible an answer to the question comes a responsibility which none may shirk. R3788:5

None will dispute that this light is the truth, the knowledge of God's plan; yet it must be evident to all that thus far only few have seen it.

R1311:4

As the vast majority of our race, heathen and imbecile, have not yet been enlightened, they cannot have committed mortal sin, and hence are not under sentence of the second death. R1984:6

Every man -- Every man ever born into the world. R331:5

A prophetic statement, for our Lord at his first advent did not even enlighten all of his own nation, and made no attempt whatever to enlighten the world of mankind. R4107:5, 2550:3; SM240:2

Our dear Redeemer is not only the Redeemer of the Church and the light of the Church, but the Redeemer of the world, and the light of the world.

R3475:6

This includes all the heathen and all those of imbecile mind, who could not in this life grasp the truth, as well as all infants who have died before reaching the age where they could know of God and his truth in Christ. R5575:5, 5352:5

Including the nation of Canaan. R5336:4

All were included in unbelief and blindness, that God might have mercy upon all and recover every one of them from that blindness and bring every one of them to that full, clear knowledge which will render every man without excuse and fully responsible for his choice of life or second death. R4781:3

He cannot be light to any man until he has heard of him; therefore every man is to hear of him. R691:1* 659:1*

All who have died without the true light will be enlightened in the future, and the words of the angel will be verified, "Behold I bring you glad tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people." (Luke 2:10) R9:6* If only a few have yet heard the good tidings in any sense, must there not be a restitution to life as well as a future proclamation of the only name given? R412:6

Some things are universal. God's sunshine is universal; it shines from pole to pole, upon both the just and the unjust. So is his love. Light and truth are yet to be universal, and so is the testimony of the ransom.

R2632:6*

How many will so make use of the blessing--the light, the drawing and the knowledge--so as to conform to the requirements of the New Covenant is another question entirely. R2127:6

None will be destroyed in the second death without having this enlightenment. R3725:2; SM250:T

In the coming Millennial age, all the blind eyes shall be opened and all the deaf ears shall be unstopped. R5279:1, 2550:3

As there was a fullness of time in which our Savior should be born, so also there is a due time in which the knowledge and blessing flowing from his redemptive sacrifice shall be made effective to all. R2490:1

Jesus is not only to be the glory of Israel, but the light of the world.

R2125:6; PD55/67

As the vast majority of mankind have never been thus enlightened, and thousands more have been only partially so, it follows logically that the full enlightenment of the world tarries until the Millennium. R1674:2
Before the world will be enlightened, a saintly class, the Church, the bride of Christ, must be enlightened, and must be completed and glorified together with her Lord. R4988:4

Thus far Jesus has not been dealing with the world, but merely with the blessed ones who have the eye of faith and the ear of faith. R4967:6, 4677:2; CR126:4; SM249:1

Our Lord's mission is not merely for an elect class, but in conjunction with that election he is to give an opportunity for life everlasting to every man. NS352:5; OV36:T

As a consequence of misdirection of efforts into mission work, slum work and work for the heathen, some are doing works now which God intends shall be done in the future age, and which can and will be done then to very much better advantage every way. R2690:2

The resurrection of the just will be necessary to bring the Church to glory and joint-heirship with her Lord, but the resurrection of the unjustified will be for the very purpose of permitting them to see the true Light. R5352:5

Sodom and Tyre, who did not have as good an opportunity as Capernaum and Bethsaida, will, in the regeneration, find their condition even better than theirs. R351:2*

Even in this comparatively enlightened day, millions of heathen give no evidence of such enlightenment. A104 HG343:6

The world -- Including every individual of the human race, from the first man to the very last of his posterity. R1328:1*

Made by him -- The Lord was ushered into the world, which as a Logos he had made, in a most humble manner in his birth at Bethlehem. R3702:5

And the world -- Of mankind. R338:4

Knew him not -- Still more surprising, his own nation, the Jews, knew him not! although they had been instructed from the beginning of their nationality to look for the Messiah, and although a description had been given to them. R4107:6

Jesus was the great King of Glory in disguise. (Illustrated in referenced articles by the story of a British prince in disguise.) R4687:6; Q365:6

The Jews did not know whom they were crucifying, and they were not a bit more to be blamed than was Paul for assisting in the killing of Stephen. Q368:T

John 1:11

Unto his own -- The Lord came (AD 29) not to the true Israelites only, but to the entire mass. C150

This was a crisis in the affairs of the seed of Abraham according to the flesh--a testing time--a judgment as to whether or not they were fit to be God's holy nation. NS442:2

And his own -- The house of servants, under the bondage of the Law Covenant. R1725:6

The Jewish nation. R338:4, 5768:6, 5172:4; CR23:5

As a nation. R4013:4, 3476:1, 2633:3; F433

Received him not -- Excepting the few. R189:3

After our Lord's three and a half years ministry only a little more than five hundred had become Jesus' disciples and had remained true. R5768:6

And thus identified themselves, for a time, with the Adversary. NS74:5

Fulfilled, not by the rejection of our Lord at Nazareth, but by his rejection by the whole nation of Israel. R3302:4

The promised Messiah came, not in glory as they had expected, but in a lowly condition, to die for sin. PD35/46

They could not receive spiritual things, for spiritual things were not for natural men. CR23:5

Their rejection of Jesus and his testimony showed that they were not as a nation fit for his purpose. NS442:2

Seeing that they put away the favor of God from them and proved themselves unworthy of it, he turned to the Gentiles to take out of them a people for his name. R1696:1

They were rejected--not cast into eternal torment, but rejected from the special favor which they had previously enjoyed as inheritors of the Abrahamic blessing. NS370:2

The Lord said to them, "The kingdom that was for you shall be taken from you and given to another people" (Matt. 21:43), those whom he has been taking out of the Gentiles for it. HG153:5

So far as the spiritual part of God's great promise to Abraham is concerned it has passed from the Jewish nation; but there still remains for them a glorious earthly portion, to which they will be introduced at our Lord's second coming. NS780:4

"A man's foes shall be those of his own household." The Master was a Jew.

The Jews were his brethren according to the flesh, and it was they that hated him without a cause and persecuted him. SM218:1

As Moses came to his own people and they rejected him, and he fled for his life to the land of Midian, from whence he came to them a second time. So Christ, also, has come a second time. R4058:2

It makes us sad when we see what they might have had, but lost; yet on the other hand, we are glad, for because of their casting off we have been permitted to come in. CR48:2

A parallel: At our Lord's second advent he comes to Christendom as his professed people; and, in harmony with the prophets, he is again rejected, yet not by all. R3302:4

The majority of persecutions have been by those who professed to be the people of God, many of whom really thought they were. R5172:5

John 1:12

But -- He burned the chaff, but the wheat he gathered into his garner.

R628:2*

A still greater and more glorious hope, one in which all others center and are bound up, the hope of being made perfect in Christ, of being made partakers of the divine nature, of completing our adoption as sons of God.

R351:4*

As many as received him -- As many of the house of servants. R1416:6

Who would leave the house of Moses, the house of servants, and attach themselves to Jesus, the Son of God, that they might be members of the house of sons. NS201:4

While the nation, as a nation, was rejected by the Lord, the faithful individuals who became his disciples were received of him. R3302:4

Every faithful "Israelite indeed" at the first advent had the primary consecration typified in the Levites. To such God gave the Gospel call to consecrate to death. Such as obeyed this invitation were accepted as sons of God. F124

All the wheat of that nation, all who were ready for the Kingdom. NS626:3
Believed his message. R342:6

God's favor toward that people was manifested by the fact that he rejected none of those who were fit for his purpose, "Israelites indeed, in whom there was no guile." NS442:2

Every Jew who would get free from that Law obligation could have done so only by confessing his shortcomings and inability and by accepting a share in the sacrifice of Christ. R4559:2

A considerable number; nevertheless but a "remnant" of that nation, after it had been sifted. Fortunately for us Gentiles, these were not enough to complete the elect number. R2401:5

Only a remnant at the first advent were found possessed of the faith of Abraham, and accepted by our Lord as members of the new house of sons. R2442:3

A small remnant, as compared with the whole nation. R3476:1, 2401:5, 2371:6; SM366:1

Of these were the twelve apostles, the seventy (Luke 10:1), also the "five hundred brethren" (1Cor. 15:6), and those Jews subsequently reached on the Day of Pentecost and afterward during the entire harvest of their age. R4108:1; CR48:3

It was necessary and expedient that the message should go unto all nations, though they did not receive it. The few who did receive it thereby received "power to become sons of God," while it also served as a witness to the nations. R517:5*

Comparatively few, even of those who do recognize him as the Redeemer and granted this liberty, have availed themselves of the great privilege and become sons of God. R1008:1

Liberty to become sons of God will not be given to all men. This liberty is connected with the special high calling of this Gospel age, and ceases with it. R1006:3

Those of the spiritual house now accepting the Lord are in due time to receive a great blessing--the antitype of the Pentecostal blessing--glorification. R3302:4

To them -- The elect, the worthy. F177

Publicans, harlots, etc. R342:6

Gave he -- Blessed them with the power and privilege of becoming sons of God, whereas previously their highest possibility had been to be God's servants and friends. Here we note the change of dispensation from the Jewish to the Christian. R2409:3

Power -- By a begetting of the holy Spirit. R5068:6

By regeneration. R2129:2

Ability. R1416:6

Privilege, opportunity. E177

Liberty, privilege. R5510:3, 5775:1, 5370:3, 5352:6, 5295:5, 4939:6, 4013:4, 3841:5, 1005:5; PD58/70; SM9:T

Liberty, freedom from condemnation, otherwise known as justification through his blood. R1007:1

In the merit of the sacrifice of our Redeemer, even as fleshly Israel gained a standing before God through the typical broken body and shed blood of bullocks and lambs. R1336:3

"Tarry ye at Jerusalem until ye be endured with power from on high." (Luke 24:49) NS201:2

Not granted immediately, but merely in a reckoned way, up to the time when Jesus finished his course, ascended up into heaven and poured out the holy Spirit upon his followers. R5310:3

No such privilege was given to the Jews, nor to any of the fallen race, until Pentecost--after Jesus had appeared in the presence of God to make atonement for our sins. R5352:6, 5775:2, 5370:3, 5207:3, 2788:2, 2225:5, 1509:6

In the midst of the house of servants, not yet begotten of the Spirit, not yet granted the privilege of sonship, our Lord could do and teach on no higher plane than the earthly. R2455:1

Those Jews who were not faithful were not even servants. But when Christ came, he made it possible for some to come out and pass from the house of servants into the house of sons. R5310:3, 4108:1, 4013:4, 3476:2, 3433:6, 2796:6, 2283:4, 1416:6

Signifying the purchasing of the Jewish people from under the dominion of the Law, and the liberation of believers from it, that they might become sons of God. E430

He did not make us sons, but simply gave us the liberty or privilege to become sons. The patriarchs and prophets of the preceding four thousand years could not become sons, because they were not given that privilege or liberty. R1005:6

Only those who have "escaped the condemnation that is in the world," and who have gotten back into harmony with God, through Christ, are Scripturally authorized to consider themselves the sons of God. E108

To become -- Until the ransom had been paid to divine justice, the condemned ones could not be received back to the condition of sonship enjoyed by father Adam, but forfeited for himself and posterity when he became a sinner. R2409:3; NS662:6

Sons of God -- To join the Order of Spiritual Sons, the Melchizedek Order of Priesthood. SM9:T

The first opportunity for any of the house of servants to become sons of God was at the first advent, after our Lord had made a consecration of his life as man's redemption price. R3277:1

To step from the House of Servants over into the House of Sons, from fleshly Israel over into spiritual Israel. CR23:5; R3433:6; PD58/70; NS662:3

The real Israel of God is spiritual Israel. The promises and opportunities, however, went first to natural Israel; and as many out of all the tribes who were of right condition of heart and received the Master were granted the liberty to become members of the House of Sons. SM727:2

With all that this implies of divine favor and eternal life, and all the proper privileges and liberties as sons. E28; R1725:6, 1007:5

To become associated with himself, to become identified with himself, as members of his Body. R5119:4

The first invitation to fallen men to become sons of God dates from the time of Jesus, particularly after he died, rose, ascended and, as a result, shed the holy Spirit on his waiting disciples, begetting them to a new nature. R5760:4

The place and time for the adoption of these believers was in the upper room at Pentecost, when the spirit of adoption was granted unto them. R3476:2; E209

Sons of God in an especial sense, in a sense different from Adam, even in his state of innocence. These are invited to be sons of God on a plane of sonship higher than the angelic sons; viz., as heirs of God of the divine nature. R2409:4

These sons are all begotten of the holy Spirit. Theirs is not a fleshly sonship. Their birth of the Spirit will be the resurrection change, when they shall be made like their Master, see him as he is and share his glory. R5352:6

Attaining the divine nature. (2 Pet. 1:4) R5859:5

The Scriptures clearly point out the Heavenly Father as the begetter in the regeneration of the Church, the Bride of Christ. E143

The Lord who redeems or purchases all is not the life-giver to the Little Flock, but under the mantle of his merit he introduces us directly to the Father to be begotten by him as new creatures. R1006:6

This power to become sons of God is not granted to sinners, but to the justified. R2409:4

Before that time none could become "heirs of God, and joint-heirs with Christ"--heirs of the Abrahamic promise. (Rom. 8:17) R5207:4, 2279:3

Previously, the very highest claim that they could make was that which the Jews made--that of being servants of God. E28; R5623:2, 4958:2; HG131:5

The Jews never claimed the title sons of God for themselves, nor would it have been proper for them to have done so. NS256:4

The very highest expression of God's favor toward any of them was shown in Abraham, and he was called only a friend. R5310:3, 5206:3; CR93:4

The heart-loyalty of the "Israelites indeed" God appreciated, and they were granted the privilege at Pentecost of stepping from the house of Moses, as faithful servants, into the house of Christ, as faithful sons.

(Heb. 2:5,6) R4939:6

Adam was originally a son of God (Luke 3:38), but none were so called subsequently until the Gospel age. The term "sons of God" is a general term applied to angels. (Job 1:6; 2:1; 38:7) R2843:5

Our Lord Jesus was the first human son of God after Adam. OV427:4

The chief cause for joy lies in the fact of being accepted as sons into God's family. R2675:5

The Church will always be in covenant relationship with the Father. Every father is in covenant relationship with his children, and they with him.

Every child has a responsibility to its father, and the father to the child. R5163:5

These, coming into the relationship of spiritual Israelites, were enabled by this begetting of the holy Spirit to appreciate the spiritual things given to these Israelites. All the truths that we have are drawn from those things God gave to the natural Israelites, and we can understand them, though the natural Israelite could not. R5295:6

A relationship implied when Jesus taught them to pray, "Our Father, which art in heaven," assuring them that God recognized them not as servants, but as sons, a term of special endearment. R3352:1

Although tests are applied and qualifications imposed on these, nevertheless it is a step of grace, because there were no obligations resting upon God to confer upon us such a "high calling." R2284:3

As sons of God, with the new life begun, these are to realize that everything of the present life is quite unworthy to be compared with the future and eternal interests. R2686:5

The highest manifestation of the holy Spirit is the spirit of adoption, which in due time, the Millennial age, shall be poured upon all reconciled to God. R2070:4

It is by reason of the spirit of adoption that the Church during the Gospel age is enabled to worship God still more pleasingly than could the Ancient Worthies. R2071:1

This new name brings new and exalted privileges, even fellowship or unity with God and his Son Jesus Christ. This gives a new basis for action--love instead of fear--and leads to certain success. R91:1*

Accepted as sons, they become his tabernacles, his dwelling-places. (Psa. 84:1) R1401:6

The Great Company, who do not fully and freely fulfill their covenant, will be sons of God. R1008:5

To them that believe -- Not belief that such a person lived, or that he was a fine man and taught excellent precepts, or that he set an example; but a belief in his name Savior, the recognition and acceptance of him as one who saves his people from their sins. R1006:1

Only those who after believing in the only name, Savior, followed on and consecrated themselves, took up the cross and sufferings of Christ and shared them, are presented before the Father as sons. R1008:3

Who accepted him as the Savior, the Sent of God. NS442:2

Believers in the Messiah are thus brought within reach of the great privilege of sonship and joint-heirship. R2425:2

To as many of the Jews as would come into harmony with him, as many as would walk in his steps of self-sacrifice and thus have God's favor. In substance he said, "This is the way. Trust in me and walk in my steps. Thus you shall be my disciples." R5083:2

On his name -- On his greatness as Messiah. NS832:1

John 1:13

Which were born -- We render the Greek gennao begotten, and not born, for although the same Greek word is used interchangeably, the construction of the Greek sentence here fixes it as signifying begetting. R4108:2, 3476:3

Westcott bears out this thought, saying, "Literally, begotten, as in 1 John 2:29, 3:9." R3476:3

God being associated with the action, the word should be rendered begotten. R837:1

Begotten. This spirit begetting was not possible in its full, proper sense, until Jesus had made reconciliation for the sins of the world, or, at least, had prepared the way for reconciliation by his own death. R5623:2
Begotten again. R3140:2

Begotten again as a new race, a race separate and distinct from all others; therefore new creatures in Christ Jesus. (Gal. 6:15) R2129:1

There is a likeness between an earthly birth and the new birth necessary to a share in the Kingdom. R3486:1

There must also be a period of gestation for this spiritual new creature that will precede its resurrection birth. All who share the spiritual Kingdom as spiritual beings must first be begotten of the spirit and subsequently be developed of the spirit. R3486:1

All who are spirit begotten by the holy Spirit during this age, are promised a spirit birth, to spirit-being in the resurrection. NS803:3

Not of blood -- Not along family lines of blood relationship. R4108:2
Not of heredity. R3476:3

Nor of the will of the flesh -- Either directly or indirectly, not of the will of man in any sense of the word. R3476:3

To be begotten of an earthly father and later to be born of an earthly mother would insure that the progeny would be earthly also. "That which is born of the flesh is flesh." (John 3:6) R3486:1

Not along fleshly lines of worldly sympathy and judgment, not according to man's wealth or wisdom. R4108:2

But of God -- God alone does this begetting. God alone accepts to membership in this new creation. God alone imparts the seal of adoption. R3476:3

No man can sanctify himself in the sense of causing himself to be accepted and adopted into God's family of the new creation, begotten by his Spirit. F120

"No man taketh this honor unto himself, but he that is called of God, as was Aaron." (Heb. 5:4) F77

Ishmael was born in the ordinary course of nature, but Isaac, who typified the true heirs, was not so born, but on the contrary came by the exercise of divine power, not of the will of flesh, but of God, for Sarah was not only barren, but aged. R1140:5

And the Word -- The fourteenth verse goes back to take up the subject at the same point as verse five, and to repeat the narrative from another standpoint. R2409:5

Made flesh -- The Revised Version renders it, "The Word became flesh." Both are correct, and both contradict the two extremes of view held by Christendom. R4108:3

He became human. R1015:2, 611:3

The Logos was made Jesus. The work of Jesus in the flesh, however, is not the completion of the divine plan, but merely the beginning of it. R5352:5

Without dying, our Master underwent a change of nature. R4098:2, 2410:1

Nature is simply organism, and varies according to the form or quality of the organism. The element of life is always the same. Q808:T

The spiritual nature is one thing and the fleshly nature is another. The blending of the two natures would produce a hybrid nature or being. Q807:4

Jesus had not two natures, but one nature, having changed the higher, the spiritual nature, for the human nature. R5748:1

He exchanged his spiritual being or existence for the human, which he made "a sin offering," and which was typified by the Atonement Day bullock. T52 This meant the complete laying aside of the spirit nature before enjoyed, a change or transmutation to another nature, the human. R3946:5

Why should it be any more incredible that Jesus' nature was transformed from the spiritual to the human without retaining his former nature under cover than that the Church "shall put on immortality" and yet not retain the flesh and blood nature. R677:4*

The thought contained in the word ransom did not call for a God to redeem a man, nor could a spirit being of any rank do so; for there could be no correspondency between them. SM659:T

He was transformed from the spiritual to the human nature, so that in giving his life for the world's redemption he might give the exact equivalent or corresponding price for that which was lost. R1673:3

Nothing less than this great stoop or humiliation enabled him to be our Redeemer, and qualified him to give to God the ransom price for man's transgression. R2409:6, 1603:6, 1583:1; A178

While there was a sacrifice of power, of honor, of glory, yet no sacrifice of life was involved. The life principle was the same that he had before, therefore the personality was the same. It was important to have identity of mind, and this he had by divine arrangement. R5064:2

Necessary, because it was a man who had sinned, and because the divine law required a man's life for a man's life as the ransom price. R3946:5, 2476:6 Man is of human or flesh nature; hence if the spiritual Son of God would give to dying men the bread of life, it must be flesh, full of life-giving nutriment. R1014:6

In being "made flesh," and then sacrificing that flesh, he gave his all on our behalf. NS478:4

Proof that the perfect man is not a spiritual being. A177

It was not an angel that had sinned and hence an angel could not be the Redeemer. Nothing but the sacrificial death of a perfect man could redeem the race from their death sentence. Any perfect man could have been thus substituted, but there was none. Hence the necessity that Jesus be "made flesh." R4587:6

To be the Redeemer of man it was necessary for him to become a man, not to pretend to be one, for the divine law required like for like--"life for life." (Deut. 19:21) R5622:6

The primary step in man's recovery was necessarily that the Logos should be made flesh and taste death for every man. It is for this first step that we celebrate the birth of Jesus. R5135:3

His human body was the body of his humiliation, the "body prepared" for sacrifice (Heb. 10:4, 5), which was sacrificed; and which, being sacrificed, was never taken back; it was given as the price of our redemption. R1806:2

"Verily, he took not hold upon the nature of angels [as though referring to the angels which sinned], but he took hold on the seed of Abraham...he also himself took part in the same [flesh and blood, human nature] that through death he might destroy him that hath the power of death, that is, the devil." (Heb. 2:14, 16) E425

Jesus was born a descendant of Abraham, through the virgin Mary. He kept the Jewish Law inviolate, and thus proved himself worthy to be that Seed who would bless the world. OV429:T

The Word, made flesh, did not rise again; but it was the Lord of glory, newly begotten as the son of God at Jordan, the new creature, that rose again. R4108:4

If merely a spirit being veiled in flesh--"incarnate"--he could not have been the Redeemer at all. E94, 296; R5622:5, 5352:2, 5064:3, 4106:3, 4108:3, 3476:3, 2409:5

A totally different thing from merely appearing in a body of flesh, like a man. R1952:3, 1856:3

Denied by those who claim that the spirit being came into the flesh, but was always separate and distinct, and no flesh; also by Universalists and Unitarians who claim that our Lord had no existence before and was born after the ordinary manner of men; also by Swedenborgians and Spiritists. R980:6

Not, however, fallen human nature, not sinful flesh, but the human nature unfallen, the likeness of humanity free from its blemishes through sin and death. R2409:6

The Greek word sarx does not mean sinful at all, nor sinful flesh; it means flesh, simply and only, and is used in reference to Adam and Eve before they sinned (1 Cor. 6:16), as well as after. Twenty-five times it is used referring to our Lord's flesh. R1223:2

Lest we should get the wrong thought, that he had become a sinful man, we are guarded by the assurance that he was "holy, harmless, undefiled, separate from sinners." (Heb. 7:26) R5352:2

The idea of this change is not so much that from one locality to another, as it is from one nature to another. R1328:2*

His body was especially prepared, separate and different from others of our race, all of whom were of Adamic stock and all tainted with sin and the seeds of death. (Heb. 10:5-9) R5352:2

What was needed was not merely a sacrifice for sins, but a sinless sacrifice, which would thus pay the sinner's penalty. E96

Only for a limited time. He was not humbled to a lower nature forever. The object of the humiliation is clearly stated to have been "for the suffering of death." (Heb. 2:9) R1952:3

He did not deceive the people by getting into a body. CR290:5 247:4; R5157:1, 2409:5

If his being called the Word, in his pre-human existent state, proves that he was not a person, then he is not now and never has been a person, for he was the Word when in the flesh. R106:2*

After his human existence had served its purpose and he had been raised from the dead a quickening spirit, no more to become a man, we may be sure that he had no less power to appear as a man than he had in the days of Abraham. NS177:4

We beheld -- We may not surely know the thought. He may have meant that they beheld his glory when he manifested himself to them subsequent to the Lord's resurrection; or he may have referred to the dignity and honor of his human perfection--God manifest in the flesh. R4108:6

His glory -- Pilate exclaimed "Behold the Man!"--not only "the" Jew above all other Jews, but "the" Man above all other men. E154

There is a glory and honor which belong to perfect manhood. "Thou hast made him [man] a little lower than the angels, and hast crowned him with glory. Thou madest him to have dominion over the works of thy hands." (Psa. 8:5,6) R4155:2, 3476:4, 1060:4, 338:6

The grandeur, nobility and perfection of the "man Christ Jesus," a perfection and glory seen in no other, because all others were sinners. R3476:4, 2410:4, 1005:4

Attesting fully that he was not of the sinner race of Adam, but that he was indeed an exception to all mankind. R2410:4

The only begotten -- The thought conveyed by this expression is that the Logos was himself the only direct creation or begetting of the Heavenly Father, while all others of God's sons (angels as well as men) were his indirect creation through the Logos. E88

The Alpha and Omega, the Beginning and the Ending, the First and the Last of Jehovah's direct creation. (Rev. 1:8,10; Col. 1:13) HG297:1; PD54/67; Q377:6

He was not only the first of God's creation, but the last. R1514:6; SM492:T

In no other sense or way than as the "only" direct creation of God, through whom all else was created, could our Lord be the first and last of God's creation. E93; Q377:6

Christ was God's Son in the sense of being begotten by him. Christ called God his Father, and God acknowledged him as his Son. (Matt. 3:17; 17:5) R944:4*

Our Redeemer, prior to becoming a man, was a spirit being. OV353:7

He never acknowledged Joseph to be his father; nor did he ever acknowledge his earthly life to be the beginning of his existence. E89

Full of grace and truth -- In whom dwelt all the Father's fullness, thus designed in all things to have pre-eminence above all others. R1904:5

Jesus had the glory of the Only Begotten of the Father. This was the way above all others in which God was manifest in the flesh. R5291:1

John 1:15

John bare witness -- John the Baptist had the great honor and distinction of being the first of God's witnesses amongst men respecting God's only begotten Son. R3477:1

In proportion as the people believed John's message and acted thereon, in that same proportion they were ready for Jesus' ministry and the further truth of the Gospel. R4115:5

The fact that John was given the honorable position of identifying and declaring Jesus as the Messiah was of itself an assurance that the great One thus introduced was very great in the estimation of Jehovah God. R4107:5

This was he -- The one appointed of the Father to carry out the great plan. CR453:5; R1059:6

Cometh after me -- The manifestation of Jesus to Israel is also called a coming. R114:6*

John 1:16

Of his fulness -- In him all the fullness of perfection dwelt, and of his fullness have all we received. They who get none of his fullness, have none of his righteousness imputed to them, reap no benefit from his sacrifice for our sins. R440:1

Of that same fullness of favor with God which Jesus enjoyed because of his sinless perfection. R339:1

The spirit given to Jesus without measure was given by measure to all his disciples and members, and is the spirit of adoption. R182:2

We received -- Because of our justification through faith in his blood. R339:1

Grace for grace -- More literally, favor upon favor. The blessing coming first in relationship to the Lord is by no means all of his favor. One may grow in grace, grow in knowledge, grow in the fruits of the Spirit, and possess favor upon favor additionally, continuously to the end of the course. R3476:6

Grace upon grace, favor upon favor. (Diaglott) The high calling is not a salvation at all, but a gracious favor of God beyond the favor of salvation. R1442:2, 1262:3

Or, favor on account of favor. Being lifted from the condition of rebels to that of justification by faith was one act of favor. That favor opened the way for another favor--the call to become partakers of the divine nature. R339:1

The law -- The shadow of good things to come in and after the Gospel age. R339:1

Here a contrast is drawn between the Jewish and Gospel ages. R339:1

We may still use the old rules to guide us as to the Master's wishes, but to refer to those rules to seek the mind of the Master, and to esteem them as a covenant over us, are different matters. R976:6

Given -- Of God. R3177:5

By Moses -- God dealt with only one man in connection with the making of the Law Covenant, Moses, who stood at the position of a father to the whole nation, the nation being regarded and treated as children under age.

R1725:3

It was as God's representative on the one hand, and as Israel's representative on the other, that Moses could be and was the Mediator of the Law Covenant between God and that nation. R5046:6

The typical mediator, the head of the typical house of Israel. R3476:6

To suppose this to mean that there was no divine law previous to the giving of the Law at Mt. Sinai would be as unreasonable as to suppose that neither grace nor truth was known until our Lord's first advent. R1723:2

Since the government of God is universal and eternal, it follows that there never was a time or place without law, nor a being not subject to his law or under its control. R1723:2

God's Law was made known at Mt. Sinai, through Moses, in a different manner than it had previously been made known. R1723:3

But grace -- The payment of our ransom price. R339:1

So then ye are not under law but under grace, favor. (Rom. 6:14) You are not acceptable with God because there is no fault in you, but because favor covers your unwilling imperfections of thought, word and deed. R971:4

Those in Christ, whether they were Jews or Gentiles, are in no sense under the Law given at Sinai. Love to God and men, laid down by Jesus and the apostles, is the only rule under which the new creature of Christ is placed. R971:1

And truth -- The additional favor of the knowledge of God's plan and our high calling as revealed through it. R339:4

Even Israelites indeed, whose hearts were sincere toward God, in ancient times were still in the dark respecting the divine plan. No revelation of God's great salvation had yet been made. R3447:4

By Jesus Christ -- A condition of knowledge and opportunity for eternal life did not obtain in the world until our Lord came. R4598:2

By full obedience to the Law Covenant he had the right to life everlasting, and superseded Moses as the Lawgiver. R1725:4

John 1:18

No man hath seen God -- If the Father would show himself to humanity it could only be either by miraculously opening man's eyes to discern the spiritual glory (thus exposing man to death), or else by God's manifesting himself in "a body of flesh" in such a manner that men could discern something of his character by contact and intercourse. E77

Seeing with the natural eye and hearing with the natural ear are not all there is of seeing and hearing. All God's children have seen him, known him and held communion with him. B122

Jesus revealed or caused his disciples to see the Father by making known his character, revealing him by words and deeds as the God of Love. T86

Yet so undeniable is nature's testimony, and so logical the reasoning from cause to effect, that the conclusion that there is an intelligent, wise and powerful Creator is so irresistible that the Scriptures declare the man a fool who does not accept it. (Psa. 14:1) R1158:2*

Those who share the Kingdom with Jesus will be "changed" from human nature to spirit nature in the resurrection, and see God. R4558:2

The spiritual phase of the Kingdom of God will always be invisible to men, as those composing it will be of the divine, spiritual nature, which no man hath seen nor can see (1 Tim. 6:16); yet its presence and power will be mightily manifested, chiefly through its human representatives. A288

Only begotten Son -- A son can never be his own father, nor can it be claimed that a son never had a beginning, for the term, son, implies a life existence, being, which had a beginning, and which was derived from a father. R2408:5

God's bosom friend and confidential companion, ever in fullest harmony, sympathy and cooperation with him. R247:2

In the bosom -- Previous to his human existence--the Father's only begotten Son. R1247:2

Hath declared him -- Interpreted him (Rotherham). E77

Revealed him. R2454:5, 2781:4; CR472:4

As it was impossible for the Lord's followers to actually see God, the only way in which they could see God was in the representative sense, through our Lord Jesus, who was "God manifest in the flesh." (1 Tim. 3:16) Q781:T

"The man Christ Jesus" was the perfect representation of the Heavenly Father, so that he who saw the Son, who was the express image of the Father's person, saw the Father also. R2781:4; Q781:T

In seeing Jesus they saw the most that was possible to be seen of the divine character--its likeness, its perfect image in flesh. "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father." (John 14:9) R2454:6

He was the first expression or manifestation of the divine attributes. SM483:3

The Ancient Worthies when perfected in the flesh will be absolutely perfect representatives of God, Jesus and the Church. CR472:4; E77

John 1:19

The record of John -- Doubtless he notes this fact because many of the Jews evidently had great confidence in John the Baptist, though rejecting Jesus. R3476:6

The Jews sent priests -- It was while Jesus was away in the wilderness that the Pharisees and scribes asked John whether or not he was the Messiah. R4115:2 "All men were in expectation of him," thus it was not surprising that the Jews urged the leaders of the nation, priests and Levites, to go to John and interview him and advise them respecting his message. R3477:3

To ask him -- It was in harmony with the general expectation of Messiah that John's preaching drew such large crowds when he announced that the Kingdom of Messiah was nigh. R4115:5

Who art thou? -- What a temptation to claim to be some great one and to exalt himself in the estimation of his fellow-men. R1694:6

John 1:21

Art thou Elias? -- The Greek form of the word Elijah. R3477:3

John came with the same disposition, zeal, energy, power of eloquent persuasion, that characterized Elias. Even his dress and abstemious mode of life were marks of similarity. R1687:3

The fact that John the Baptist simulated Elijah in apparel, general demeanor and forceful teaching, attracted the people much more than otherwise would have been the case. R3477:2

John in the flesh introduced Jesus in the flesh and thus fulfilled the work of forerunner, so the Church in the flesh during this Gospel age has been the antitypical Elijah, whose business it is to announce the second coming of Christ. R4113:4

I am not -- Jesus said, "This is the Elijah if ye will receive it" (Matt. 11:14). As Jesus in the flesh was the forerunner of the Messiah in power and glory, so John was a forerunner to a greater one than himself, a more important witness, composed of many members, introducing the greater, glorious Christ of many members. R3477:4, 3293:1

Jesus' statement was conditional: If ye receive it, this is Elias; if not, he is not the Elias. They did not receive it, hence John could truly say, "I am not" HG68:5

Though John came in the spirit and power of Elias, and would have fully answered as the antitype of Elias had he been received by the Jewish people (Matt. 11:14), yet he was not the Elias referred to by the prophet Malachi. (Mal. 4:5,6) R1687:6; Q772:4, 817:2

John the Baptist did not fulfill by any means all that was predicted respecting the antitypical Elijah and his ministries which would be introductory to the Christ of glory. NS143:1, 273:3

John was not the Elijah mentioned by the Prophet, and yet he did a work of Elijah to those amongst the Jews who received his message. B253; R3477:5, 3293:1

He boasted nothing of himself; his main mission was to prepare the people for the Messiah and point them to him. Our success, as members of the antitypical Elijah, will be in proportion as self is ignored and Christ is made the theme of our discourses, the center of our teachings. R3477:6

We, too, are not to honor ourselves, but to honor him whom the Father has honored, our Lord and our Head. R4115:3

John 1:23

I am the voice -- Merely a forerunner, a herald. R2570:6, 3477:3, 4113:3
Merely a nameless voice. R3477:3

John himself claimed to be the fulfillment of Mal. 3:1 and Isa. 40:3--not the Messiah, but the forerunner of the Messiah. R1736:3

In the East in olden times, and still, great personages in their travels are preceded by heralds or forerunners who clear the way. R4113:3

The voice of the Church's message is again heard in the world, though they are still separate--in spirit at least--to Christianity, Babylon, and the world, Egypt. NS143:3, 273:6

In the wilderness -- John the Baptist did literally enough dwell in the wilderness and preached there, thus typifying the experiences of the Church, which, during a large portion of this Gospel age, has been in the wilderness or hidden condition as respects the world and worldly history. NS143:2, 273:3

Revelation tells us in symbolical language of how the Church fled into the wilderness condition for 1,260 symbolical days--1,260 years--which period ended with the year 1799. NS143:3, 273:5

This, along with his unusual clothing and diet, evidencing complete separation from the world and complete devotion to his special ministry. R3477:2

Make straight -- The Church of Christ in the flesh has been witness to the world that they are in a wilderness condition, and need the presence of the great King to bring order out of confusion, and that those who hear should walk circumspectly. R4113:5

Way of the Lord -- The world is probably less prepared for the Kingdom than at any other time of their history so far as governments are concerned, so far as the preparation for the Kingdom by any highway of righteousness and holiness, the straightening of crooked things and the smoothing of rough conditions are concerned. NS274:3

Mankind has not responded to this appeal to cast up a highway of holiness, but the Lord is about to set up his Kingdom and set up the highway of holiness. That which mankind will not naturally respond to in the present time will be forcibly established in the future time. NS144:3, 275:1

Why baptizest thou -- "If you are a person of no special authority, neither the Messiah himself, nor his forerunner, nor a special prophet, why do you start in to do a special reformatory work, and introduce as a symbol of cleansing this baptism, which is wholly without precedent among the Jews?" R3341:3

The same thought prevails today. Unless some boastful title or authority is claimed, the right to preach, the right to witness for the Lord in public, is called in question by many. R3478:1

The baptism of John was to the Jews only, and was wholly different from the baptism appointed for those called from amongst the Gentiles. R2417:3

John 1:26

I baptize -- We have no record that John the Baptist was ever immersed himself, nor would he need to have been, since he evidently was a godly man, to the best of his ability living up to the standard of the Law Covenant. R2417:5

With water -- The spirit of God had directed him to baptize with water. R1695:1

One among you -- Present. B260

A kingdom is always represented by its king. Jesus as King was present in their midst. R5455:3

So it must be in the end of this age; the work of the John class or Elijah class closes with the announcement that the Kingdom of Heaven is at hand, and the King is present. B260; R968:5

Our Lord's baptism was the beginning of the Christian's baptism. It symbolized the consecration which he had just made to do the Father's will, even unto death. R2417:5

Whom ye know not -- Whom you do not recognize. R3478:1, 5455:3
Similarly, all through the Gospel age, his "body" has been undiscerned by the world. R5455:3

At the second advent it will be as it was at the first advent. We are not to expect the second coming of Christ in the flesh, but as a spirit being. R4692:6

We believe that there has been One with us, the Present One, the King God has appointed, and the world knows him not. He is not revealed unto them. He has come as a thief in the night. (2 Pet. 3:10) Q92:3

Now none can see him present but those who have spiritual eye-sight and are looking. Such walk by faith and not by sight, and may well endure "as seeing him that is invisible" (Heb. 11:27) to humanity. R242:5

Though you cannot see the "reaper" you can see his work going on around you in the nominal church, the wheat and tares being separated. R242:6

The epiphania of our Lord is already affecting the world, though not through the eyes of the understanding, for they have no eyes for such spiritual things. R2983:4

John 1:27

He it is -- Calling the attention of the Jewish people to the fact that the King's Son was in their midst. R5510:5

The mission of those who see the present one is to declare him to the nominal church, the ripe wheat of which will hear and recognize, while others will in this respect be blind. R242:5

Not worthy to unloose -- Not even worthy to be the menial servant of the great Messiah. R4115:2, 3475:5

It was this meekness, this complete self-abnegation and singleness of purpose to accomplish the righteous will of God, that constituted the moral greatness of God. R1916:2 The chief priests, scribes and Pharisees were not in heart-readiness for the Messiah, not having this humble, unselfish spirit of John the Baptist. R1735:6

Let our boasts be that we are merely servants, not lords; merely witnesses, not great, honorable or reverend, not priests. R3478:1

We, who are the antitype of John, may feel very humble in respect to all of our privileges in connection with the announcement of the glorious kingdom. R4113:6

John 1:28

In Bethabara -- Called Bethany by the revisers, thus giving the suggestion that our Lord was acquainted with the family of Lazarus and Martha and Mary before he began his ministry. R4117:1

John 1:29

Jesus coming -- Having passed through his temptations in the wilderness as a victor, Jesus went back to where John had been baptizing and preaching. R4115:2

He returned to John, seeking companionship with those who were nearest to the Lord and waiting for divine providence to guide him in his affairs.

R3482:1

His return from the wilderness was to the vicinity of John's mission work, where not unreasonably he might expect to find some of the Israelites indeed. R2570:3

Behold -- Speaking as a prophet, producing surprise amongst his hearers: Look! See! Behold! R4750:5

Let us behold him, not as the Pharisees and scribes did, with eyes of malice, envy and hatred. Let us look at him in the light of divine revelation, and perceive that he was without spot or blemish. NS477:4

Observe the humility and self-abnegation of John in pointing out his cousin according to the flesh as "the Lamb of God," whose rising popularity must soon eclipse his own. R1694:3

As part of Elijah's work was to point out the true and acceptable sacrifice of Jehovah, so it was a part of John's work to point out the antitype of those sacrifices. R556:6

The Lamb of God -- Even John did not know in what sense Jesus was the Lamb of God. The Jews offered the typical sacrifice every year; but no Jew had the least idea what it meant. R4750:6

The completeness of the ransom is the very strongest possible argument for the restitution of all mankind. The very character of God for justice and honor stands pledged to it; every promise which he has made implies it; and every typical sacrifice pointed to the great and sufficient sacrifice.

A157 All the sacrifices of the Law, all the blood shed upon Jewish altars, pointed forward to the great sacrifice for sin slain on our behalf. E446
Look at all the emblems of heraldry and note how various ferocious beasts and birds are used as symbols of the earthly great. But look at our Lord's emblem--a meek, innocent, gentle lamb. NS477:1

The gentle, patient, un murmuring one, who would die on our behalf. NS477:2
While our Lord is styled the "Lion of the tribe of Judah" (Rev. 5:5), picturing his mighty power as the Millennial King, the picture of a lamb is certainly very appropriate in connection with his earthly ministry and sacrifice for our sins. R4114:1, 1063:2*

He was God's Lamb in the sense that his offering for our sins was the divine arrangement, the Father's plan. R4114:1

Which God himself provided. R1052:6*

The sacrifices for sin, under the Law, were sin-offerings unto Jehovah. R685:4

The priest carefully inspected the victim that had been selected, to be sure that there was no blemish in it, and then sealed it with the Temple seal, in token that it was fit for sacrifice and for food. R967:2*

We may regard the morning and evening sacrifice of the lamb as the same sermon daily repeated for 1500 years. We need not do exactly that, for there is abundant variety in the Bible, but the subject of our preaching is one that never changes--the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world. R573:1*

The Lamb led to the slaughter. (Isa. 53:7) R77:6*

"Christ our Passover" (1 Cor. 5:7), a substitute for the Jewish Passover. R325:2

Each house of Israel represented the household of faith, each lamb represented the Lamb of God, and the first-born of each family represented the Christ, Head and Body. NS74:3

There could be no "Church of the first-born" (Heb. 12:23) saved, except through the slain Lamb. R5180:5, 4703:5, 4555:6

There are pictures of the Church which represent her as participating with the Lord in his sacrifice; but this Passover type is not one of these. SM559:2; NS476:6

As they rejected him as King, so likewise as their Passover Lamb he was not accepted nor received; thus, as a nation, they were not passed over or saved, but, contrariwise, their national destruction followed. NS631:1

We announce him now to spiritual Israel as the Lord of Life and King of Glory. R242:5

Taketh away -- The only way by which any and all of the condemned race may come to God, is not by meritorious works, neither by ignorance, but by faith in the precious blood of Christ. A103

By laying down his life, giving his life a corresponding price for Adam's.
R5356:4

The Scriptural proposition is that God did require and did accept the death of Christ as man's ransom sacrifice. E450

The taking away of the sin of the world is divided into two parts: (1) the taking away of the sins of believers reckonedly; and (2) with his body members, as the second offering of the great Day of Atonement sacrifice, for all the people. R4114:3

The members of his body are Scripturally shown as having something to do with the cancellation of "the sin of the world" because of their association with the Head. The Great Company has nothing whatever to do with this cancellation. R5463:3

Not, "which took away the sin of the world." His work is not yet finished. It begins with the appropriation which clears believers, it will reach its full accomplishment when the sins of the whole world will be cancelled.
R3478:4

John spoke of the Lamb as being present, but of the cancellation of the sin of the world as being a future work. This work is still incomplete.
R4114:3

The thought of a future awakening for the purpose of punishment for past sins is entirely incongruous with the Scriptural conception of divine justice. NS247:6

The sin of the world -- A general sin which involved the whole race.
NS246:5

The sin of Adam. But there are other sins aside from Adamic sin, which was brought upon the race by the fall. R5463:3, 77:6*; Q681:4

The original sin was disobedience, including not only the act by which sin got possession of the world, but everything incidental to the penalty.
R5356:3

The cancellation of the world's sin is effected by the payment of Adam's penalty. R5640:6; E449

The Jews were specially expecting Messiah to take away the sins of the Jews, but John's declaration goes further and includes all the Gentiles as well. R4114:2

Our Lord is declared to come to take away the sin of the world, not merely the sin of the Church. These are different sins. HG177:6; OV230:5

The sin of the world has not yet been taken away. Our Lord has not yet applied his merit for the world, but only and expressly for the household of faith. SM559:2; R4493:5, 4398:3

The propitiation, satisfaction, for our sins, the Church's, and not for ours only, but also for the sins of the whole world. (1 John 2:2) R3013:6

The salvation here taught does not depend on acceptance of him now. R108:5*
He who is the Savior of the Church by the grace of God "tasted death for every man." NS249:2

With the end of this age Christ will offer to justice full satisfaction for the sin of the world. R4494:2, 4555:6, 4493:6

The Lamb of God and the Lamb's wife will prosecute the work of actually taking away the sin of the world during the Millennium. R4556:1, 4493:5

John 1:31

Be made manifest -- By being anointed with water and that which it represented--the holy Spirit. R60:4*

The birth of Christ was the beginning of the Gospel in fulfillment, but he was not "made manifest to Israel" until the baptism of John, when Jesus, at age 30, entered on his public ministry and the harvest work. R114:3*

To Israel -- Not Judah, but Israel. C293; R2085:2, 1341:1

Baptizing with water -- What he did in the way of water baptism was insignificant, unimportant in comparison with the work of Messiah and his baptism of the holy Spirit. R3478:2

I saw -- God gave the outward sign of the dove, not for all, but for John. E212; R5264:5, 2565:5, 2417:6, 2237:4; Q35:4, 36:8; CR401:2

We must see for ourselves that Jesus is the Son of God, the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world, before we can be God's witnesses respecting him. R3478:6

The Spirit descending -- John saw and bore record that our High Priest was thus anointed. T37; R72:6

Jesus was baptized into death before he went into the water, in the sense that he had given up his own will. But God's manifestation of his acceptance of Jesus' sacrifice of himself apparently waited until after Jesus had performed the symbol. R5264:2

Like a dove -- A previously appointed sign which God had given him. R2570:6

Not that the holy Spirit is a dove, nor that it has bodily shape like a dove, but that it is a divine power or influence. R2565:5

The dove represented fittingly the meek and quiet spirit which is one of the striking ornaments of all those who possess the spirit of holiness unto the Lord. R2565:5

A most fitting emblem of the spirit of meekness, patience, long-suffering, brother kindness, love, and faithfulness, which is the spirit of the Father--the holy Spirit. R2237:4

A dove was a favorite figure with the Jews as an emblem of peace and salvation. R2565:5

Abode upon him -- From that time onward the spirit of Jehovah rested upon him, and was in him a spirit of wisdom, understanding, counsel, strength. (Isa.11:2) R2373:3

Jesus began to be the antitype of Isaac at this time. R5967:1

John 1:33

Knew him not -- Not that he was not acquainted with Jesus, but that he knew not that Jesus was the Messiah. R4114:5, 3478:5

Thou shalt see -- Our Lord was already dead to his own will; otherwise he could not have gone to John at Jordan. But God's manifestation of his acceptance of Jesus' sacrifice of himself apparently waited until after Jesus had performed the symbol. Q36:8

With the Holy Ghost -- Jesus baptized none with the holy Spirit during his ministry; at Pentecost believers received the baptism of the holy Spirit. R3478:2

The baptism of the Church at Pentecost was to be done by Christ. Peter confirms this, declaring that Christ did shed forth his holy Spirit. (Acts 2:33) E212; CR254:3

We can witness to the Lord and perform the symbol of baptism into his death, but further than this we cannot go. Our glorified Head must give the great blessing by bringing the consecrated under the favor of the holy Spirit. R3478:2

I saw -- It was because John had been a witness of the anointing of Jesus that he bore record. R240:1

Bare record -- If the multitude had seen and heard, John would not have needed to bear record that Jesus was the Anointed of God. R5157:4

The Son of God -- John did not announce that Jesus was the Father, but that he was the Son of God. R4114:6

The next day -- At least forty-two days after our Lord's baptism. R3478:3
Shortly after, our Lord departed from the vicinity, so that a simultaneous work by John and by Jesus was for a time in progress in different localities. R3478:3

The gathering of the first apostles to the Lord illustrates the diversity of the Lord's dealings and providences as these are still exercised in the world in the drawing of others to himself, some in one way and some in another. R3481:3

Two -- The name of the one is given as Andrew; the name of the other is omitted, but it is presumed that it was John, the writer of this Gospel. R4115:6, 3482:2, 2571:3, 2418:1

Through modesty John refrained from bringing himself into special prominence in his own records. R2418:1

A less modest man, in writing of the matter, would probably have told of how he first thought of following Jesus and invited Andrew to accompany him. R4115:6

Others did not appreciate these things so much and remained with John the Baptist, perhaps becoming the disciples of Jesus after John was dead.

R4750:6, 3482:2

Of his disciples -- They had been with John because he was a reformer.

R4750:6

Doubtless we will find today that some who are engaged in works of reform from proper motives are specially prepared for deeper truths and grander privileges in connection with the present harvest work. R2572:1

John 1:36

Looking upon Jesus -- No doubt wondering how our Lord's Messiahship would be made known. R2570:6

Behold -- This must be our witness, too. The world must be pointed to the great sacrifice for sins, and not to Christ as the great Teacher.

After they have received him as the Lamb, they will be ready to be taught of him. R3478:4

The Lamb of God -- Meek, gentle, patient, unassuming, the passover sacrifice for Israel and the whole world. R3478:3

We might consider this an allusion to the Passover lamb, if this had been at the Passover season, at the time of the killing of the lamb; but it was at the opposite end of the year, at the time of our Lord's birthday.

R4750:6

God's Lamb, provided by him as the sacrifice for our sins, as the price of our redemption from the curse or sentence of death. R3478:4

The same testimony, only abbreviated, which he had given to the priests and Levites. In their case it fell upon dull ears. Note the difference here--the two disciples, "Israelites indeed," immediately followed Jesus.

R2570:6

John 1:37

They followed Jesus -- It was not sufficient that a testimony should be given or that curiosity be aroused; it was necessary additionally that the interest awakened should be so powerful as to lead to action on the part of those who were drawn. R2570:6

John's testimony became to them the drawing power of God, because they were in a condition of heart to be susceptible to that influence. Some are drawn and others are not drawn by the same message. R2570:6

To seek his fellowship, and if possible identify themselves with his ministry. R4115:6, 4116:1

This is their first introduction to Jesus; their calling came some six months later and is recorded in Matt. 4:17-25. R2245:2

To ascertain what further blessings the Lord had, and what further service than that in which they had engaged with John the Baptist. R3482:2

They had not the partisan spirit to say, "We belong to John the Baptist and must stand up for him," as some of the Lord's dear people are inclined to do in respect to the various denominations. R3482:2

John doubtless knew and expected that some of his disciples would cease cooperation with him, to follow Messiah. R2417:6

Our Lord did not begin to teach until after he was anointed, when he invited his disciples to join him. They were to proclaim the message without understanding the matter at all. R5157:4

John 1:38

Jesus turned -- The Lord was the first to speak, thus illustrating his own words respecting those drawn of the Father to him, "He that cometh unto me I will in no wise cast out." R2571:1

What seek ye? -- A good question for each to put to himself, and to suggest at the proper time to all others who are manifesting any interest in present truth. R4116:2

It is appropriate that we should give heed to the Master's words as though they were addressed to each of us individually, What are you seeking? Or we might translate it into the form of today, Is there anything I can do for you? R4116:3, 1

Are you seeking loaves and fishes of earthly advantage? Are you seeking earthly honor and social and political influence and preferment? R2571:1

We know what the world is seeking--wealth, honor, fame, ease, etc. R4116:2

To seek the Lord truly is to seek after righteousness, fellowship with the Father and with the Son. This means the forsaking of sin so far as the heart is concerned, and so far as possible, the purifying of the flesh. R2571:2

We should "seek for glory, honor and immortality." (Rom. 2:7) In conjunction with this seeking for the Kingdom we should remember our Master's words that we should seek chiefly the Kingdom of God and his righteousness. (Matt. 6:33) R4116:3

Where dwellest thou? -- They seem to have understood that like themselves he was a Galilean, and that like themselves and others he was merely visiting in that vicinity on account of John's mission work. R2571:2, 4117:1

They wanted to have a personal interview with him, and therefore sought the retirement of his dwelling. R540:6*

John 1:39

Come and see -- The very fact that the Lord has granted us the privilege of his fellowship is an assurance that there is something in us that he does not despise and is willing to take over. R4116:5

Note our Lord's generous reception of them and hospitable invitation to his home. R4116:2

Where he dwelt -- When the interests of the work required it, he chose a regular dwelling place. R540:3*

Abode with him -- This may refer to the temporary stay of one day, but it may with equal propriety be understood to mean that they remained with the Lord as his disciples thereafter--to the very end of life. R3482:3

So it should be with all of us who have become the Lord's followers. We are not his disciples for a day, but for all eternity. We abide with him in loyalty of heart whether we go to seek others or whether we listen to words at his feet, and he abides with us. R3482:3

Our Lord, while dismissing the self-satisfied, fault-finding quibbles of the Pharisees with dark or evasive answers, took time and care in making truth clear and plain to the humble, earnest seekers. B27

The tenth hour -- As it was about four o'clock in the afternoon, they remained with him the remainder of the day. R4116:1

John 1:40

Andrew -- Had these men not had the spirit of consecration, they never would have left their affairs to join with John in his ministry, and then they might not have been so well prepared to be the honored apostles of Jesus. R4117:2

John 1:41

He first findeth -- The Revised Version may be understood to imply that both disciples sought their brothers, but that Andrew found his brother first. John's brother, James, was also later brought to the Lord. R4116:4, 3482:3, 2571:3

Not content to have the great blessing of fellowship with the Lord alone, they desired to make known their great find. R3482:3

His own brother -- These disciples, in beginning the service of the truth, went first to their own brethren. This implies that they had brotherly love in their hearts. R4116:4, 3482:4

Our first duties lie toward those who are near to us, as neighbors, friends, and especially as members of our own family circles. R3482:4, 2571:3, 2418:5

If a wife should receive the truth, her first joy should be, if possible, to bring the matter to the attention of her husband; and vice versa. R4116:5

There is frequently a diffidence about mentioning the Lord and the truth to those who are of the family and home circle which is certainly much out of place. True love for our kin should lead us to make an extra and special effort on their behalf. R2418:5

Let the husband arrange home matters so that the wife may have time for studying the truth and attending meetings; and the wife arrange matters for her husband to enjoy the blessings and privilege of study. R4116:4,5

They went first to their brethren, among whom they were esteemed as men of character and principle. If any of the Lord's people feel impelled to first go to strangers with the good tidings, it would be a less favorable sign as to the esteem in which they were held. R4116:4

We have found -- They did not attempt to influence others until they were fully satisfied themselves and could give a definite positive message. R3482:3

Note the importance of finding the Lord, and not merely of gaining information about him. R2572:5

The Messiah -- Messiah is the Greek spelling of the Hebrew word Messiah, and is equivalent to the Greek word Christ, which means the Anointed One. R3482:4, 4116:6

The long-promised seed of Abraham. R5300:5

The word Messiah, Anointed, signifies the great Prophet, Priest and King, for prophets, priests and kings were anointed to their offices, signifying that in due time Christ would combine all three of these qualities in himself. R3482:6

Many have seen or heard of Jesus, as those who were with John the Baptist heard of him, but have not learned to know him as the Messiah--the Christ. R3482:5

John 1:42

He brought him -- Like Andrew, we should seek not only to acquaint our friends with the facts, but to bring them to the Lord for personal contact with him--spiritual contact that they may see him with the eye of faith. R2571:4

It is proper and important to seek out the "brethren" and to bring them not merely to a knowledge of abstract truth, but to bring them especially to the Lord, and to intimate communion and fellowship with him. R2572:5

Jesus beheld him -- Or, as we might express it, "read him through and through." R2571:4

Thou art Simon -- Signifying a listener. R2571:5

Thou shalt be called -- Although Peter was the only one of the twelve whose name was changed, we may readily suppose that the characters of all were considerably changed. So it is with us all, we will be "transformed by the renewing of our minds" (Rom. 12:2), and the Lord promises all such that they shall have a "new name" which none can appreciate except those who receive it. (Rev. 2:17) R2571:5

Cephas -- Hebrew for Peter (Greek, petros, a stone). This may be understood as a kind of prophecy on our Lord's part respecting a great change in Peter's character. Peter was naturally very impulsive, not sufficiently solid, too easily carried about; and yet our Lord foretold a change which would make of Peter one of the staunchest and most substantial of his corps of disciples. R2571:5

A stone -- Thus early did Jesus indicate his knowledge of the man, recognizing him as one of the living stones for the glorious Temple of the future, as Peter himself afterward explained. (1 Pet. 2:4, 5) R4116:6

John 1:43

Findeth Philip -- Note the varying methods: John the Baptist announced Jesus. Andrew and John heard him and sought the Lord. In turn they sought Peter and James--and now, a third method, the Lord himself found Philip. Nathanael's case was still different: Philip found him. R3483:1, 2571:5

John 1:44

Bethsaida -- The disciples here mentioned all came from Galilee (Judas alone being a Judean). Why were they so far from home? We suppose that they were among the masses who heard of John and left their business to hear what he had to say, and to join with him in helping to prepare the way for Messiah. R4117:1

The city of Andrew -- Although Simon Peter and Andrew were natives of Bethsaida, a few miles north of Capernaum, they evidently settled in the latter city, perhaps because larger and more favorable to their business. R3309:1

Philip was doubtless acquainted with Andrew and Peter, since they were of the same city. R2571:6

John 1:45

Philip findeth -- In line with this principle, sometimes one tract in the right place has a very far-reaching influence, as was indicated in one city where one tract under a door reached four persons. R2743:2*

Nathanael -- Commonly understood to be another name for Bartholomew. He probably, like the others, had been in attendance at John's mission. R2572:1, 2418:2

Of whom Moses -- It was in types that Moses wrote of Christ and the blessings to come through him. B177

John had specially drawn attention to the prophecies concerning him, and by his correspondencies with those prophecies they recognized him. R1695:1

In the law -- In the Pentateuch, the first five books of the Old Testament. R2571:6

Did write -- He was not a mere enthusiast, but he had been making a study of the fact that Messiah had been described by Moses and the prophets and had evidently been endeavoring to test our Lord's title by those predictions, and had found satisfactory evidence that Jesus was indeed the Christ, the Sent of God. R2571:6

The son of Joseph -- The reputed son of Joseph. They had not yet learned that Joseph was not the father of Jesus. R2418:2

John 1:46

Can there any good thing -- Naturally sceptical, fearful that his friend was being led astray by a false hope to follow a false Messiah. R3483:1, 2572:2 His question and the reasoning which it implies were evidently very proper. R2572:2

Out of Nazareth -- Nazareth did not have a very savory reputation for wisdom and piety. On the contrary, the Nazarenes were looked upon as rather a fanatical people. R3483:2 2572:2

As though to say, "That is a mean city of itself; no great people of any reputation would ever come from thence; no prophecies, as far as we know, make any reference to that city." R4117:3, 4556:3

He was of course ignorant of the fact that our Lord was born in Bethlehem, and taken as an infant to the home of Joseph in Nazareth. R2572:2

Jewish expectation was greatly disappointed. R629:1

Applied to all Galilee. R4556:6

For instance, some of our English friends tells us that when the present truth was first brought to their attention, they were inclined to disregard it simply because it came from America. R2418:2

Others will inquire, What denomination backs these religious teachings? R2418:4

The Lord hides his truth in the sense of permitting it to come through unpopular channels. Sometimes the unpopularity is deserved and sometimes undeserved, but it always serves to keep away those who are not in the right attitude of heart. R3483:2

So it is today, when we say we have found the truth on a subject, they ask, From whence comes this message? When they are told it is not from the great and mighty, they ask, "What could you expect from such a source?" R4117:3

As the wrong impression that our Lord was born in Nazareth reflected upon him, some today scoff: Can any good come out of the prophecies relating to the second coming? R5374:2

Come and see -- Investigate, test the matter for yourself by the Word of God, if you are not satisfied. R4117:3, 3483:2, 2418:4

Come and see for yourselves that the power and wisdom of Jehovah rested upon his Anointed. R1695:4

Philip did not attempt to explain matters which are difficult to be understood, and which had not yet been explained to him; nor did he waver in his faith because of this suggestion of doubt. R2572:2

Matters often look different on the outside from what they appear on the inside. Philip suggested, Come on the inside and see how it looks; take the standpoint of faith in the divine revelation, and from that standpoint note the grandeur of the divine plan. (Illustrated by an anecdote of Spurgeon's.) R2572:4

Nathanael coming -- How glad we would be if all our dear friends were to take the course that Nathanael took to seek the Lord and his protection and his guidance, and then to investigate, proving all things by the Word of God! R4117:4

An Israelite indeed -- Giving the suggestion that it is entirely right for us to express at proper times our confidence in the religious character of those with whom we are conversing, in no sense manifesting a doubt of the sincerity of any who are not fully with us in every point of faith and doctrine. R3483:4

Pure in heart, pure in motive. R5809:6

Not only of the circumcision of the flesh, but also of the heart. SM403:1

The Lord first gathered out the faithful remnant from amongst the Jews, and not finding enough, he proceeded to gather them from all nations.

R4964:5, 5809:6, 5470:3

In whom is no guile -- Without hypocrisy. R3483:4

His honesty of heart made him worthy of the blessings of which the mass of his nation were not worthy. R4117:5

John 1:48

Whence knowest thou me? -- Evidently taking it that the Lord was flattering him, he rather repelled at first this forwardness on the Lord's part to speak of him in such praiseworthy terms without a knowledge of him. R3483:4

Under the fig tree -- We are not told what took place under the fig tree, but we imagine that he there prayed to the heavenly Father for wisdom, guidance, instruction and protection from deception. R3483:5
Doubtless he went to the fig tree as a closet for prayer, for the fig tree has foliage which hangs low and would constitute quite an arbor or shelter and a very suitable place for privacy and prayer. R3483:5

I saw thee -- The power of discerning of spirits (of reading the thoughts and intents of the hearts) and of working miracles was granted to him. Later the same gifts were granted to the apostles, and for the same purposes. R1695:4

Rabbi -- Master. R4117:6

Thou art the Son of God -- To hear this one refer to his very prayer, of which not a soul in the world had knowledge, meant to Nathanael that the Lord had supervised in the matter and had full knowledge of all his affairs. R3483:5

The one who could know about his prayer and could thus answer it and reveal himself must indeed be superhuman--all that he claimed; the Messiah. R4117:6

King of Israel -- Not the ten tribes only; the term Jew had come to be synonymous with the term Israel, and the terms are used interchangeable in the New Testament. The people never thought about a King of Judah. The twelve tribes as one nation is meant. R2085:1, 1341:1

Ye -- All of his disciples, all who follow in the narrow way. R3483:6

The angels of God -- The messengers of God, the "princes" of the new dispensation, Jacob himself being one of the communicating messengers. D629
Communication between the two phases of the Kingdom will be easy and direct, the "princes" being the channels of divine communication. D629

Ascending and descending -- Calling attention to Jacob and the vision which he had at Bethel of a ladder (Gen. 28:10-12), illustrating the methods of divine grace. Our Lord himself was the ladder upon which communication between heaven and earth would be re-established. R3483:6
Jacob's dream of the ladder between heaven and earth, and the passing to and fro of the messengers was a prophecy as well as a dream, foreshadowing the coming close communication between the Heavenly Kingdom and the world. D629

Upon the Son of man -- Our Lord Jesus and the Church associated with him constitute the ladder of communication between God and the world of mankind during the Millennial age. R4118:4

John 2

John 2:1

The third day -- The third day from the calling of Nathanael to discipleship. R2418:3

The marriage of the Lamb will be in the third thousand-year day of her existence as the Body of Christ, and in the seventh of the world's history. R1695:5

A marriage -- The Lord's consecrated people are symbolized not only by the water-pots and by the servants who fill them, but also by the bride at the marriage. R3164:5

The joy and blessings of Christ's Kingdom, both to the Church, his Bride, and also to the world, will follow the marriage of the Lamb. R1695:3

In Cana -- Cana was near to Nazareth, for many years the home of Jesus, and quite probably those who invited him, his mother and his disciples, were either relatives or close acquaintances. R2418:3

The home city of Nathanael, one of the latest additions to the number of our Lord's disciples. Apparently it was Nathanael who had invited our Lord and the other disciples to be his guests at Cana. R3484:1

John 2:2

To the marriage -- The fact that our Lord was willing to attend the wedding implies a sympathy with the marriage institution. R2418:3
The asceticism illustrated by monks and nuns was not a part of his teaching, either in word or in example. His consecrated life was lived in the midst of ordinary social conditions. R3484:2
There is no suggestion of revelry or foolishness in our Lord's conduct, but it is reasonable to assume that he participated in the proper joys and fellowships and social amenities of such an occasion. R3484:2

John 2:3

Saith unto him -- Mary's long acquaintance with and dependance on her son had made her aware of his superior judgment and resourcefulness in all events and on all occasions. R3484:1
They have no wine -- The customary hospitality of the Jews indicated an abundance of wine would have been supplied for the large number of guests anticipated because of the Lord's presence at the marriage feast. R3484:2
Not only running low, but exhausted, so that the miracle would not be minimized by the admixture of the new with the old. R3484:6
Implying that Mary knew the hosts intimately, for such scarcity of provision would be carefully kept from the knowledge of outsiders who might be guests. R2418:3
From this it has been assumed that she anticipated the miracle. We cannot agree because it is particularly stated that this was the beginning of Jesus' miracles. R3484:1, 2418:6

John 2:4

Woman -- While a proper translation, it does not give the elegant shading of the Greek original, which would much more nearly signify lady. The word is the same that the Emperor of Rome used in complimentary address to the Queen of Egypt. R3484:5
The "woman," the Church, need not yet inquire for the new wine of joy. The hour for exaltation and glory has not yet come, and as yet we have to do only with the dregs of the cup of humiliation and sacrifice. R1695:5
What have I to do -- More properly, "Do not attempt to dictate to me. I will know what to do when the appropriate time comes." R3484:5

Calling his mother's attention to the fact that while he had, in every sense of the word, been a dutiful son for thirty years, he had now reached the period of manhood, according to the Law, and was now consecrated to the Lord. R2418:6

"What [is that] to me and to thee, O woman?" (Diaglott) R1695:5

Not yet -- Mary was intent on hiding the fact of the shortage of wine; Jesus performed the miracle, less for the assistance of the bridegroom than for the lesson which, through the servants, would become known to the entire company. R3484:5

Come -- Greek, heko, signifying to arrive, or have come, or came, as when the action of coming is completed. B158

The first six months of the Jewish harvest was almost a blank. The time for Christ to really begin was at the spring Passover. And next to nothing was known of the Gospel harvest until the spring of 1875, after the first six months were passed. HG73:2

Do it -- The Christian cannot do better than adopt these words as one of the mottos of his life--Whatsoever my Lord saith unto me, I will do it. R3163:3

How important the lesson that it is not merely the hearing of the Gospel which brings blessings to the heart, but obedience to the glad tidings. R3163:2

In due time faithful obedience to all his directions will be amply rewarded by the privilege of participating with him in the joys of the Kingdom, the "new wine." R1695:5

A further evidence that she was on terms of very close intimacy in that home, for otherwise servants would not be prepared to take orders from one of the guests. R3484:6, 2418:3

John 2:6

Six -- Might indicate that it refers to the Lord's people in the present time of evil, because the number six is a symbol for imperfection and evil conditions, as seven is the symbol for completeness and perfection.

R3164:1 Waterpots -- The water-pots symbolize the Lord's people. R3164:1 Probably intended for the use of the guests for washing their hands, which had become an important part of Jewish observance. We nowhere find these washings and water-pots referred to in the Law. R4919:1

Ordinary water-jars, to prevent any suspicion of their containing any powders or mixtures that might constitute a basis for the miracle. R3485:2, 2419:1

Purifying of the Jews -- Divine truth, having accomplished its cleansing, purifying work by its blessed inspiration to godliness and holiness, will be gloriously realized in the blessings and joys of the Kingdom. R1695:5

Two or three -- Our vessels may not be all of the same size; capacities and opportunities may vary, but each must be filled full--no more, no less. R3164:3

Firkins -- Containing nine gallons each. R3485:1

The six held about one hundred and twenty gallons of water for the supply of the many guests. R2419:1

John 2:7

Jesus saith -- As one of the guests whose entertainment had helped to exhaust the wine, he would be pleased to take some steps to assist in replenishing the supply. R3484:6

Fill -- "Be ye filled with the spirit." (Eph. 5:18) Draw abundantly from the fountains of grace and truth, nor cease until we are filled with the spirit to the brim--completely. R3164:1

Those who neglect to use their opportunities zealously, neglecting to be filled with the spirit of truth, are correspondingly partially filled with the spirit of the world. R3164:5

So with us, as members of the human family, our life forces are well exhausted through the fall. The filling foreshadows full and complete justification to life. R3485:4

Thus during the Millennial age the servants of the truth will fill up all of mankind who are suitable vessels and all thus filled with the truth, under our Lord's direction, shall find the truth in them transformed into the wine of joy. R2419:4, 1695:5

With water -- Water is used in the Scriptures as a symbol of life, the "water of life." (Rev. 22:17) R3485:4

The symbol for the truth. R3164:1, 2419:1, 1695:5

To the brim -- To hinder anyone from thinking that something was added to the water by our Lord. R3485:2

Draw out now -- The change from water to wine being evidently instantaneous. R3485:2

John 2:9

The ruler -- The governor of the symbolic feast who pronounced the new wine to be of the very finest quality, aptly symbolizes the Heavenly Father. R3164:5

Made wine -- Illustrating the impartation of a new nature by miraculous change. We are "transformed by the renewing of our minds." (Rom. 12:2) R3485:4

Likewise the Lord has promised a still greater change to his faithful followers who receive the treasure of divine truth into "earthen vessels." They shall be "changed" in a moment from the human nature to the divine nature. R3164:2

The water will ultimately be changed into wine--the symbol for unalloyed pleasure, heavenly joys. R3164:2

We recognize in the exhilarating wine an apt symbol of joy and gladness. R1695:2

It cannot be claimed for our Lord Jesus that he was a total abstainer from alcoholic liquors; and the claim made by some that the word "wine" here mentioned signifies a non-intoxicating wine, is not true. R2419:4, 509:5 Everything seems to teach that it was slightly alcoholic, the alcohol being produced in the wine through the processes of fermentation, resulting in what is known as light wine. R3484:6

It can be said that many of the wines of that vicinity and time contained much less alcohol than do many of the wines of today. R2419:1

We believe in total abstinence because of the present distress, because of the increased expenditure of nervous energy and consequent increased danger of inebriety, and not because the Scriptures specially enjoin total abstinence. R3485:1

Under the rule which Paul gives (1 Cor. 8:13), the disuse of wine as a beverage is certainly commendable under present conditions, while its limited use as a medicine is warranted by 1Tim. 5:23. R1695:6

It is our opinion that if the Lord were living where we do, and now, he would be a total abstainer from alcoholic liquors, not only on his own account, but also as an example for others. R2419:1, 1101:5

This occurrence has no more bearing on the temperance question than had the taking of a colt to fulfil the prophecy of Zech. 9:9 (Matt. 21:5) a bearing on the question of the rights of private property. R1695:6

John 2:10

Well drunk -- Not implying that the people were drunk, intoxicated, and that they had thus lost their taste or judgment. R3484:6

The good wine -- We cannot think that at an ordinary feast simple grape juice would be regarded as superior wine, nor on the other hand need we suppose that the wine which Jesus made contained such a proportion of alcohol as would make it injurious to the users. R3485:2

Until now -- Already we partake of the "wine on the lees" (Isa. 25:6); but present joys are but foretastes of coming realities. The best of the wine comes at the end of the feast, when our heavenly Bridegroom shall have changed us to his own image and likeness. R3164:3

Beginning of miracles -- Giving emphatic contradiction to the apocryphal legends which accredit to our Lord various miracles previous to this time. R3163:2

Manifested forth -- Showed beforehand. R2000:5

Foreshadowing things to be done by and by. R5065:3, 5780:4; OV214:4
Or, typifying. R1695:2

Manifesting beforehand the glorious blessings which the Kingdom, when established, will exercise amongst men. R4557:5, 4137:3, 526:5; PD64/74; SM569:1

Justifying the thought of a spiritual significance to the wine. R3485:5

Many of our Lord's works were of an outward, visible kind, intended for the enlightenment of his followers, for the establishment of his Messiahship, and for the manifestation of his future work for the world. R5920:6

Our Lord's miracles were not foolish deeds for the benefit of the curious. It was by these that the Israelites were to recognize him as Messiah, in fulfillment of the predictions of the prophets. R1314:6

Thus did Jesus preach by word and illustration the coming emancipation of mankind from the thralldom of disease and death. R241:1; SM569:1

His glory -- The coming glory of the Millennial age. R2000:5, 5920:3, 5485:1, 1695:2; OV214:4; SM569:1

John 2:12

After this -- Residing in Nazareth with his mother and brethren until the time of John's imprisonment and the consequent stoppage of his mission work. R2245:2

His mother, and his brethren -- At that time our Lord, his mother and brethren moved as a family to Capernaum. R2245:3

John 2:13

The Jews' passover -- It was a requirement of the Jewish Law that the devout of the nation should assemble at the Passover season. Josephus tells us that sometimes the population of Jerusalem on such occasions was swelled to the number of two millions. R4122:6

John 2:14

In the temple -- Not in the Temple proper, but in its outer courts, the whole of which was designated the Temple or the house of God. This trading was probably carried on in what was known as the Court of the Gentiles. R4123:1

That sold oxen -- The multitude of strangers from afar rarely brought with them the doves, pigeons or lambs which they presented in sacrifice. The supply of these animals for sacrifice became quite a business on such occasions. R4122:6

Changers of money -- There was a certain Temple tax levied, which must be paid in a particular kind of money called the shekel of the sanctuary. The last coinage of these was in BC 140, hence they were quite scarce in our Lord's day, and sold at a premium. R4122:6
Roman coinage was circulated throughout Palestine in general merchandizing, hence not only visitors from foreign lands needed to purchase shekels of the sanctuary, but also the home folk. R4122:6

John 2:15

Scourge of small cords -- A fit emblem of the harmonious doctrines of Christ, which are accomplishing the cleansing work here. R1696:1
These could not have done serious damage to anyone, but we do not even know that our Lord used it upon humanity. He may have driven out the animals, whose owners would follow them. R4123:2

Drove them all out -- The antitypical cleansing of the Lord's Temple has been in progress since the spring of 1878. R4123:3, 1696:1

In this time of cleansing, sifting and purifying of the Temple of God, none will be permitted to remain in it whose purpose is in any way to make merchandise of God's holy things. R1696:4

It is claimed that any Jew under the Law had the right to do as Jesus did in the matter of driving out the traders, but very evidently no Jew had previously attempted it. R4123:1

Because the incident is grouped with others which occurred in the beginning of the Lord's ministry it is assumed, we believe without sufficient authority, that there were two cleansings, the one at the beginning, the other at the close of our Lord's ministry. R4122:3, 1695:4
Perhaps the apostles, unlearned men, not regularly educated historians, recorded the wonderful works of their teacher and saw little necessity for order or sequence; or perhaps our Lord designed the confusion of the record that only the faithful might rightly divide the word of truth. R2332:1

Poured out -- Not only stopping their usurious exchange business, but keeping them busy looking after their coin. R4123:2

And said unto them -- The cleansing of the Temple has a peculiar significance when we remember that it followed our Lord's assumption of the office of King. R4122:3, 4123:2, 2332:1, 1695:6

Take these things hence -- He did not set at liberty the doves, which could not so easily have been recovered. R4123:2

House of merchandise -- Within the hallowed precincts of the nominal temple of today are many who have long been making merchandise of their privileges, opportunities, and knowledge. R4123:3

Roman Catholics are expected to pay the priesthood for every birth and the baptism of a child; at every service, that they may be participants in the blessings of the common mass; for every blessed scapular sprinkled with holy water; for every funeral service and for every prayer; as well as for the privilege of being buried in holy ground. R4123:3

As Protestants represent a more intelligent class, the exactions upon them by the clergy are the more refined. Nevertheless strong impression is sought to be made upon all that membership is necessary to salvation, and that liberality to the church of one's choice is a necessity. R4123:4

As the necessities of the people were taken advantage of, and high prices charged, our Lord called the place "a den of thieves." (Matt. 21:13)
R4123:1

John 2:17

The zeal -- Our Lord's zeal in cleansing the Temple of all merchandise would be considered by some as very appropriate, and by others as very extreme. R5250:1

Zeal is that which is warm, aglow, hot. R5250:2

Of thine house -- The Lord's house, in that case, was the Temple; but a still deeper meaning is indicated by the declaration that the Church is his house, the house of God. The real house of God for which Jesus had zeal was the house of sons. R5250:1, 1453:6

Hath eaten me up -- We use the word burn, consume, in much the same way as we use the word rust in iron. The zeal for the Lord's house, for the Lord's people, consumed his time and strength in helping them. R5250:2

The Lord invites the Church to be similarly consumed with him, consumed as the Master was consumed, in the service of the Church, which is his body.
R5250:2

Our Lord's zeal has not cost him his heavenly home, his heavenly estate; but, on the contrary, God has highly exalted him to a higher position, preparing him for the high reward of the divine nature R5250:4
Fulfilled just before the crucifixion. R4123:2

John 2:18

What sign -- What sign of authority by which he cleansed the Temple. Jesus pointed forward to his future power, after his death and resurrection. He had no authority to begin the actual work then; that which he did was only typical. R1696:1

John 2:19

Destroy -- The Sanhedrin decided that Jesus was a blasphemer in saying this, and also in claiming that he was the Son of God. R5421:2, 4711:5, 3888:4

In three days -- Our Lord died in the year of the world 4161. Four days had passed, the fifth day had begun. We are now in the beginning of the seventh day--"very early in the morning" (Psa. 46:5), when the Lord promised the resurrection should be completed. R3375:2

Rearing them up on the third day, the third thousand-year day from the time of his death, the dawning of the great Sabbath. R5714:4, 4124:1, 2874:2, 2795:2, 198:3*

"I do cures today and tomorrow, and the third day I shall be perfected."
(Luke 13:32) R2294:4

The same three days mentioned in Hos. 6:2, "After two days he will revive us; in the third day he will raise us up, and we shall live in his sight."
R2294:5

What was true of him personally on the third day, of twenty-four hours, is true of his Body, the Church, in the third day, of a thousand years each.
R92:4*

Called to mind by the two on the way to Emmaus. (Luke 24:13-35) B114
Harmonizing this with the fact that our Lord knew not the time of his second advent, he either here spoke prophetically (by the spirit of prophecy) or, knowing it as the third thousand-year period, did not know what day and hour in that period he would be present and his work begin.
Q635:1

I will -- He himself was raised from the dead "on the third day," literally, but it was not by his own power--God highly exalted him.
R2874:3, 2795:2

Raise it up -- Raise the Church, his Body, from ruin to the perfection and glory of the Millennial Kingdom. R3081:1, 2294:4

John 2:21

Of the temple -- The Scriptures repeatedly tell us that the Church is "the body of Christ." The Apostle Peter declares that each of the Lord's saints is a living stone prepared for and being placed in the glorious Temple. R2294:2

Of his body -- The Temple of God being the body of believers, individually and corporately, "the habitation of God through the Spirit." This is the primary and literal use of the phrase in the New Testament.
R638:3

His body is the Church. The Jews destroyed the Head, and all down through the Gospel age the various members of the Body of Christ have been called upon to "suffer with him." R3375:2, 3375:2, 2294:4

As Solomon dedicated the Temple, so the Church of Christ will be dedicated, formally presented to the Father. R5714:4

The disciples evidently got the thought that he referred to his fleshly body as the Temple of God, and supposed that the Lord's prediction was fulfilled three days after his crucifixion. We cannot so view the matter, it was the new creature, and not the flesh, that was born on the third day. R4123:5

His fleshly body was not his Temple, but merely his tabernacle. R3375:2

John 2:24

Because he knew -- Jesus did not trust them; for he knew the fickleness of their hearts, and having the gift also of discerning of spirits, he needed not that any man should testify of them, for he knew what was in them. R1696:4

John 3

John 3:1

Nicodemus -- An influential man amongst the Jews, a member of the Sanhedrin, and widely known as a professor of holiness--of full consecration to God--a Pharisee. R4124:3, 2572:3

Above average in piety and considerably impressed with what he had heard respecting the Lord's teachings. NS98:3

His wealth and learning gave him advantages over many of the poor and unlearned, and yet they also brought disadvantages: "How hardly shall they that have riches enter into the kingdom of God." (Luke 18:24) R2572:3

On various occasions he manifested sincerity and considerable faith in our Lord and sympathy with his cause. His sympathy continued, as evidenced by the fact that he requested the privilege of burying our Lord's body. R3485:3

We know not what may have been the end of his course, but we fear that while he was too good to be an opponent of the truth, he had not enough stamina in character to be one of the Lord's disciples. R3485:3

John 3:2

The same came -- Evidently early in our Lord's ministry. R3485:3

Nicodemus discerned the wide difference between the Jewish hopes of an earthly kingdom and the kind proclaimed by Jesus and his disciples. We may reasonably infer that his queries were along this line. R2572:3; NS100:5

To Jesus -- It was his desire for the truth which led him to seek it from the lips of one of no reputation amongst the worldly wise. R2421:2

By night -- Semi-secretly. R2572:3

Not necessarily from fear; possibly wisdom guided him, a prudent recognition of the interests of others as well as of his own. Possibly because he might have a better opportunity for private conversation with the Master. R4124:3

No fault for this: during the day our Lord was busy teaching and a visit would have been an interruption; besides, Nicodemus had no right to cast the influence of his presence and office on the side of our Lord until he had in some degree satisfied himself on the subject. R3485:3

Probably because of adverse public sentiment, especially among the Pharisees. He was anxious to solve the mystery, yet apparently ashamed to acknowledge publicly that such claims had any weight upon his mind. A277

Being prominent, so that the common people might not be encouraged thereby, and that the ecclesiastical leaders might not be offended. NS98:3

To protect influence and social standing, as well as possibly with a hope to have a more quiet conversation. R2572:3

He displayed the ignoble element of his disposition by coming privately, secretly, at night, whereas he should have acted up to his convictions fairly, and have come forward to inquire of the Lord, if not in public, at least in daylight and openly. R2421:3

Many Christians of the Nicodemus type have a standing in the nominal church and great respect for the "honor of one another." (John 5:44)

R2421:3

Similarly, there are people today hindered, as was Nicodemus, by their station, education, reputation, etc., from taking a stand for the truth.

Their riches and reputation are hindrances to them. NS98:3

And said -- Evidently but a small portion of this conference is furnished us, the questions being asked relating to the Kingdom of God, which John the Baptist had declared was at hand, and our Lord declared to be at the door. R2421:6

Rabbi -- Or, Teacher. R4124:4

He was very reverential and courteous. R4124:4

Our Lord's strict observance of the Law no doubt made him at first a favorite with the Pharisees. R1459:6

Thou art a teacher -- You and your disciples proclaim "The kingdom of heaven is at hand." But you have neither an army, wealth or influence, and to all appearances your claim is a fraud. A277; R837:2

Nicodemus had nobility of mind to discern that Jesus was not an imposter. R2421:2

Come from God -- A servant of God, in whom God evidently delighted, as manifested by his miracles. R4124:4

Except God -- I am convinced that you are a teacher sent of God, for your miracles attest this. R837:2

My fellow Pharisees regard you as an imposter, but as I said before, I am sure there must be some truth in your teachings, for no man can do these miracles except God be with him. R837:3

Evidently he had been impressed by the teachings and miracles, although not ready to confess him the Messiah. R2572:3

With that much evidence in hand he would have been fully justified in going to our Lord in a public way, acknowledging as much as he saw and asking for further proofs. R3485:6

Evidencing that the Pharisees were blinded by their own willful prejudice beyond that prejudice engendered by the fall. R724:1

John 3:3

Except a man -- If only those regenerated by the holy Spirit are to be saved, then the entire heathen world and almost the entire bulk of Christendom will be lost. Therefore many prefer not to believe this doctrine. NS99:2

Be born again -- Born anew. R4124:5, 2572:6

Therefore a new creature in Christ Jesus, to whom "all things have become new." (2 Cor. 5:17) NS102:1

Regeneration by the holy Spirit is the same thought. NS98:6

The same Greek word gennao is used in referring to both the begetting and the birth. A278; R4125:4, 2573:1, 1445:5; HG366:4; NS100:3

It is our opinion that the translation "born" is correct, except in verses 3 and 7, where we think the significance is begotten. R837:2

Sometimes the translation is dependent upon the nature of the act, whether masculine or feminine. Thus used in connection with ek, signifying from or out of, it should be translated born. A278

In our common translation it is rendered beget, conceive, begotten, as well as born, delivered, bear. R836:6

When God is associated with the matter he is always regarded as of the masculine gender; hence gennao, when used in connection with God, as in this instance, should be always rendered beget or begotten. R837:1

Begetting of the Spirit should be understood wherever the word is used in connection with the present life, while birth of the Spirit should be understood as relating to the future life entered upon by a resurrection. HG366:4

Whenever the word "gennao" is used figuratively respecting the beginning of the word of grace in the heart it should be translated begotten or begetting; and whenever it refers to the completion of this work of grace, in the resurrection, it should be rendered birth or born. NS100:4

Should be rendered begotten, because to introduce the subject of the second birth (resurrection) so abruptly would be unreasonable, while to introduce the new begetting would be highly proper. R837:2

There are two thoughts behind this one word--the thought of begetting, and, after gestation, ultimately birth. R3486:2, 1445:4

Except a man be both begotten and born again he cannot see the Kingdom of God. R1445:5

Not merely the begetting of the Spirit, as at consecration, but also the birth of the Spirit, in resurrection. R2980:4, 3175:1, 1510:5 HG129:3, 145:3

Only one who is begotten of the Spirit can be born of the Spirit, just as birth in the natural life follows only upon begetting. HG132:4, 366:4; NS101:3

Just as there is a begetting of the fleshly being, then the quickening and finally the birth, so also with the spiritual ones. The Christian is first begotten of the Spirit (begotten again--1 Pet. 5:3), then quickened by the Spirit (Rom. 8:11) and then having attained to full development as an embryotic new creature, he will be "born of the Spirit" in the resurrection. Q749:2; NS101:4

To participate in the resurrection to spirit nature we must now be begotten of the holy Spirit, and must then be chastened, developed and fitted for the spirit conditions. NS101:6

As Jesus was begotten of the Spirit at his baptism, so he was born of the Spirit at his resurrection. R1278:4

Beyond all contradiction, the resurrection is a birth. Hence, if conversion is also a birth, a man must be born three times in order to inherit the Kingdom of God. HG63:3

The begetting of this new nature comes only to believers, already justified by faith in the Redeemer. R1510:5

The Master used the natural order or arrangement to represent the spiritual. Q749:2

The word "born" is properly enough used here and in verse 5, and thus we learn that the Lord had reference to the future--to the resurrection birth. R3485:6

A Scriptural use of the word, for we read that our Lord Jesus in his resurrection was the "first-born from the dead." (Col. 1:18) R2573:1, 2422:2, 189:1

Our Lord's resurrection is referred to three other times as a birth from the dead, but our Common Version has beclouded the thought by giving the word begotten instead of born. (Acts 13:33; Heb. 1:5; 5:5) NS101:3

When we present ourselves to God in consecration, and our sacrifice is accepted of him, we die as men; but we are likewise begotten to the new nature. This new life, begotten from above, continues to grow by the assimilation of spiritual nourishment, until it will, in due time, be born a fully developed spirit being, like unto our Lord. R5580:1

For God to interfere with human pro-creation and insert a Platonic "spark of deity" into every babe would make this text meaningless, by implying that man's begetting and God's begetting are simultaneous. R3774:2

Throughout the New Testament, the regeneration of the Church is the topic, because this Gospel age is chiefly intended for the development of the Little Flock. Nevertheless, those of the world who would attain eternal life in the next age must pass through like experiences. The world must be born again, or regenerated--not, however, to spirit nature, but to human nature. NS102:2

Jesus calls the great Millennial age and work regeneration--Greek, palingenesia. This is not the same word rendered "born again," but signifies more nearly restitution, restoration or renovation. R2574:4
Children are not begotten of the spirit unless they accept the privilege at maturity. HG129:4

Cannot see -- For flesh and blood cannot inherit the Kingdom of God. (1 Cor. 15:50) T23

Greek, eidon, to know or be acquainted with the Kingdom of God. Translated "consider" in Acts 15:6 and "behold" in Rom. 11:22 and 1John 3:1, substantiating that Jesus meant that except a man be begotten of the Spirit he cannot know, understand, or be acquainted with the doctrines and facts relative to the spiritual kingdom. R837:3; A278

Your request to have a full understanding regarding the Kingdom of heaven cannot be answered to your satisfaction; not that I do not know about it fully, but, in your present condition, you could not understand it. A278; R837:3

The intimation was that the kingdom would be an invisible kingdom, that none could even see it, except he would be born again. R2421:6

The Kingdom of Heaven would be so different from what he was expecting. The Kingdom of God will be a spiritual one, and all who will be members of it will be spirit beings, as invisible to mankind as are the angels at the present time. NS100:6

As a man cannot see trees, houses and flowers, nor enjoy these, until after being born of the flesh, so likewise no one can either see or enter into the heavenly Kingdom, except he be born of the Spirit. R2572:6
Earthly beings can see earthly beings, but as "no man hath seen God at any time" (John 1:18), none will be able with the natural eye to see the glorified Church. R3175:1

These born-again ones out of the resurrection alone enter into the Kingdom, alone see the Kingdom. Mankind in general will not see the Kingdom members, the Bridegroom and the Bride, because these will all "be changed." (1Cor. 15:51) HG366:5

Since flesh cannot see, cannot enter into, cannot inherit the Kingdom of God (1 Cor. 15:50), we should not imagine the King himself to be flesh; and the members of his Body, the Church, must be "changed" and be made like him. (1 John 3:2) R1952:6

The Jews restored will be natural men, bearing the image of the earthly, and such can neither see nor inherit the real Kingdom of God. R56:5*

We, the Church of translation, must go up into the great Kingdom--enter into the joys of our Lord and be in his likeness--before we can see as we are seen and know as we are known. The Bride can only be seen from the standpoint of the Kingdom. R113:1

"The glory of the Lord shall be revealed, and all flesh shall see it together." (Isa. 40:5) Yet none but the holy see the King, and none but those born of the spirit--spiritual bodies--can see the Kingdom of God. R153:5

Our Lord would not put a patch upon the Jewish system and call it Christianity, but he established a totally new thing; those who would enter his Kingdom must first be begotten again, and ultimately born again, before they would share it. R2134:2

The kingdom of God -- As a student of the Scriptures, he knew to expect the Kingdom. Having confidence in Jesus, he wished to learn particulars respecting the Kingdom. R4124:5

John 3:4

How can a man -- Such a question was desired by our Lord and gave opportunity for the explanation that the first birth to human nature with a flesh body is a type of a higher spiritual birth to a spiritual nature with a spirit body. R2572:6

Nicodemus had never heard of a spiritual kingdom, and failed totally to realize our Lord's meaning. NS101:1

Be born -- Correctly rendered born, as the association is feminine. R837:2

Into his mother's womb -- You cannot mean that he must be born again from his mother? R837:4

John 3:5

Be born -- In verses 5, 6 and 8, "born" is undoubtedly the correct translation, because water, flesh, and spirit, are treated as feminine, the literal meaning of the Greek being "born out of water, flesh and spirit." R837:2

Of water -- The reform of heart and life. R837:4

No Jew could become a follower of the Lord Jesus and enter into the Kingdom, until first of all he had experienced reformation and been baptized, "born of water"; in addition to this there must be the begetting of the spirit, and then, in the resurrection, the birth to the spirit nature. Q796:4

The reference to water would probably, in the mind of Nicodemus, recall the water baptism for the remission of sins, and as a sign of repentance which John the Baptist and his disciples had been preaching. R4124:6

Associating John's baptism of water unto repentance with the spirit begetting which began at Pentecost. Repentance from sin was essential to the right condition of heart which would prepare a Jew for transfer from the earthly kingdom to the heavenly. R2572:6

The baptism of John the Immerser represented in symbol a change of mind, a beginning of life anew. R837:4

Israel was a consecrated nation, a covenanted people, baptized into Moses in the sea and in the cloud. The baptism of John signified a repentance, and not the new birth. A279; Q796:4

Water may have a fuller significance. We see that symbolical water represents truth, and that our begetting of the holy Spirit is said to be also a begetting "through the Word of truth." (Jas. 1:18) R4124:6, 3600:6, 2422:1

Our regeneration or begetting again of the holy Spirit, and our renewing by it, comes to us in conjunction with the washing or cleansing which is effected to us by the operation of the Truth--the divine message. R4125:1
Symbolized in Israel's Tabernacle service, in which the priests, before entering the Holy and thus typically becoming new creatures, washed at the laver. R4125:1

The Apostle refers to the bath of a new birth, the making new by the holy Spirit. (Titus 3:5) R2422:6

At the laver the new life of the Christian begins. Here the begetting of the Spirit and the Word takes place. It is reckoned as a full birth and symbolized by the rising from the watery grave--the grave of the old carnal nature. R117:5*

The Word does teach water immersion, and all of the Lord's people who discern this teaching would and should be glad to obey it, but we fail to see that the Lord has laid such a stress upon water immersion. R3600:6, 2422:5

The Lord refers here to the true baptism, which is merely symbolized by immersion in water, and the rising out of it. R2422:5

And of the Spirit -- Such a change of heart and life, as shown by John's baptism, was necessary, but more is necessary: the still higher begetting and birth of which I am now telling you. R837:4; A279

Repentance will bring you back to a justified condition; in that condition you will be able readily to recognize me as Messiah; and thus consecrating to me, you will be begotten of the Father to a new life and the divine nature. A279

Born from the dead, by the power of God, as a spirit being. R2422:5
From the Spirit. R1189:3

Enter into -- In the sense of share, or partake of, as in other cases where the same Greek word is used. The Lord spoke of those who would share in, or be members of the Kingdom or ruling power as royal officers, and not of those millions who should be blessed by the Kingdom, and be under it as subjects, blessed and ruled by it. R837:6

John 3:6

Born of the flesh -- All recognize that this expression does not mean merely begotten of the flesh, but a birth into independent flesh-life as a result of the begetting and gestation. R2422:1; NS100:3

As there cannot be any birth of the flesh without first a begetting of the flesh, so there can be no birth of the spirit without first a begetting of the spirit. R4125:3, 2573:1

Is flesh -- Human nature. R4793:6

The term flesh as used in the New Testament evidently refers to humanity as a whole, and not to what covers our bones, in common parlance called flesh. R89:2

To be begotten of an earthly father and later to be born of an earthly mother would insure that the progeny would be earthly also. R3486:1

The natural birth of the flesh is a figure or symbol illustrative of a new birth, a spirit birth. R4124:6, 3486:1, 3250:3

The claim is made that Adam died a spiritual death; but nothing in the Scriptures informs us that he was a spirit being. On the contrary, the Scriptures tell us that he was of the earth, earthy. R2841:1

Fleshly beings cannot see spirit beings. HG366:3

"Flesh and blood cannot enter the kingdom of heaven." (1 Cor. 15:50)
NS100:1

Jesus as a man was born of a woman and was flesh, thus taking human nature. R122:3*

Born -- Whoever is not begotten of the Spirit can never hope to be born of the Spirit. R2422:4

There must also be a period of gestation for the spiritual new creature that will precede its resurrection birth. All who will share in the spiritual Kingdom as spirit beings must first be begotten of the Spirit and subsequently be developed of the Spirit. R3486:1, 2422:2; Q822:3

Of the Spirit -- The article "the" does not appear in the Greek text. R4124:6

The holy Spirit, in this sense of the word, is guaranteed only to the house of sons. E177

The Spirit of God, the spirit of holiness, the spirit of the truth. R2422:1

Is spirit -- Since there are two distinct kinds of bodies, we know that the spiritual, whatever it may be, is not composed of flesh, blood and bones: it is heavenly, celestial, spiritual. A182

The spirit-begotten and spirit-born class, the Little Flock, which will inherit the Kingdom, will not be flesh-beings in any sense of the word, but spirit beings. R2422:1

The human body would no longer be suitable. He must have again a spirit body. R2318:2

The Spirit's work for us will not be finished until we are born of the Spirit, and then we will be spirit, and being like him, we shall see him as he is. R103:4*

The Church is spoken of as being spiritual, inasmuch as she is in harmony with the Lord and is declared to be begotten again by the Spirit to a new nature, a spirit nature. E175

From this statement he would understand that the Kingdom would not be a fleshly or earthly one, but a spirit Kingdom, a heavenly Kingdom. R4124:6, 3082:3, 2422:1

Therefore our Lord's resurrection body was not the same body that hung upon the cross and was laid in Joseph's tomb, merely caused to shine and therefore called a glorious body, a spiritual body. R1856:3, 274:2

That which is produced by the divine spirit is divine. R89:3

Jesus at his resurrection was not flesh but spirit. R122:3*

When Jesus was raised it was by the Spirit, and therefore not in the flesh; and when the saints are raised "it is raised a spiritual body" (1 Cor. 15:44) for the same reason. R27:6*

If Jesus is, and has been since his resurrection, a spiritual body, why should we look for him to be a fleshly body at his second coming? R242:4
There are two kinds of bodies--earthly and spiritual. Adam was the head of the earthly, human family, and a pattern of the perfect human being. Christ Jesus was the firstborn of the dead to the perfect new nature, the spiritual, and he is spirit, an illustration of a perfect spiritual body. R277:2, 205:6

There is a great lesson here for many pre-millennialists, who vainly think, as Nicodemus, that the Kingdom of God will be a fleshly kingdom. R2422:1

Modern spiritualism, like modern theology, teaches that all men become spiritual beings at death. The Bible teaches that one must be born of the Spirit in order to become a spiritual being. HG29:6

John 3:7

Marvel not -- Nicodemus must not be too surprised at the great mistake he had and others had made in regard to the terms and conditions which would qualify them for a place in the Kingdom. R3486:3

That I said -- Wonder not at my first statement, that you must be begotten from above ere you can understand, know and appreciate the things of which you inquire. A280

Be born again -- A reiteration of our Lord's first statement in verse 3, and should be rendered begotten. R837:2

The wind bloweth -- While Jesus was talking, quite probably the wind whistled through the apartment in which they were sitting, rattling the doors, and Jesus seized upon this as a good illustration. R2573:1
Greek, pneuma, translated ghost, spirit, life, spiritual and wind. E174

Canst not tell -- We must repel the suggestion that he meant that the Spirit of which we would be begotten is invisible, for although that is true enough, it is not what our Lord is saying. R4125:2

Not that the Lord means that the holy Spirit passes hither and thither throughout the world, begetting some and passing others by, and that we know not who may be begotten of the Spirit. R4125:2

So is -- Like the wind which can go and come, can be heard and to some extent felt, but which cannot be seen. R3486:3

Men in the flesh will be unable to see them, as they are unable to see the wind, though they will be everywhere present and influential, as is the wind. R2573:2

Intangible, invisible, while present and powerful. R4125:1; NS101:2

His Kingdom will be invisible to mortals, but it shall act through visible agencies and produce visible results. R210:6

This is as good an illustration as I can give you of those born of the spirit in the resurrection. Those who will constitute the Kingdom will all be invisible as the wind, and men not thus born of the spirit will neither know whence they come, nor whither they go. A280; R837:5

Like Jesus after his resurrection, appearing and disappearing as he had never done previously, but as angels had frequently done. A231; R2801:5, 2478:1, 2455:3, 2422:3, 2081:6, 1856:6, 1817:1, 1416:2, 579:2, 274:2, 262:4, 189:1; HG63:4

Every one -- Everyone who experiences a resurrection to the spirit nature. R3904:2

Only these born-again ones of the spirit-resurrection can go and come like the wind. HG366:4

Even as are the angels and all spirit beings. Q749:2, 838:4

Born of the Spirit -- "Changed" in the first resurrection. D618

It will be within their province to appear as men, as the angels have done, if there be necessity for so appearing, although we are inclined to think that there will be no such necessity, as God has already provided an earthly class as the representatives of the Kingdom amongst men. (Heb. 11:39, 40) R2422:3

John 3:9

How -- Could it be possible that himself and all the great teachers of the Jewish nation had such a misconception of the Kingdom? R3486:2, 4125:2

Can these things be -- Your claims seem more unreasonable to me the more I hear them. I cannot conceive it possible for beings to be present yet invisible. R837:5

To him it seemed as though an invisible spirit being would be nothing. NS101:1

John 3:10

A master -- You are of the Pharisees, who professedly believe in angels as spirit beings. A281

Of Israel -- Evidence that the house of Israel was no longer regarded by our Lord and the apostles as the "ten tribes" merely. C293; R1341:1

Knowest not -- Evidently, therefore, a proper study of the matter from the Scriptural standpoint might have led true Israelites indeed to more or less of an appreciation of the character of the Kingdom. R3486:4

This should not have been so strange--the powers which our Lord described were the very powers which in the past from time to time had been manifested through holy angels. R2573:2

As a thoughtful student of the Law and the prophets, Nicodemus should have seen that there were insurmountable difficulties connected with the prevailing thought that God's Kingdom would be an earthly one. R4125:2

Our Master's words were not chiding, but rather a declaration of facts, because, as the Apostle declares, it is impossible for the natural man not begotten of the holy Spirit to understand spiritual things. R4125:4

We may, with much greater point, say to the Christians who cavil today, Are you begotten of the Spirit and taught of God, and yet ignorant of these things? R2422:4

Undoubtedly this is the trouble with the great majority of the people today also--they have not been begotten of the holy Spirit, and hence are unable to understand spiritual things. R4125:5

These things -- That spirit beings can be present, yet invisible. Have you, who attempt to teach others, never read about Elisha and his servant, or about Balaam's ass? A280; R837:5

John 3:11

We do know -- I have been telling you such things as are known and to a considerable extent have been demonstrated amongst men through the ministry of angels. R2573:3

The intimation is that our Lord could tell heavenly things, but that he was not disposed to do so, because Nicodemus and others found it difficult to receive even the earthly things. R5065:6

Ye -- Pharisees. A281

Receive not -- Nicodemus was unable or, because of prejudice, perhaps unwilling to believe. R2422:5, 3486:4

The trouble with Nicodemus was that he was not ready to be taught. He had called our Lord Teacher, and yet was unready to receive the testimony of the only one who was capable of giving him the instruction. R4125:4

We are to tell heavenly things, but not to the natural man. R5065:6

Our witness -- Our message. R3486:4

John 3:12

Earthly things -- Our Lord does not even class this teaching of begetting and birth as being especially spiritual, but rather earthly, such as natural man should be able to understand and appreciate. R2422:5
Many of our day look at the matter similarly, and refuse to believe the things beyond the range of their natural senses--they lack the sixth sense of faith, or spiritual apprehension. R3486:5

Believe not -- Are unable to receive them. R4166:4

How shall ye believe -- It would be useless for me to attempt to tell you of heavenly things, for you would not be convinced, and my preaching would seem the more foolish to you. A281

Nicodemus would not have been to blame for not understanding spiritual things, for only the spirit begotten can clearly grasp and appreciate these things. R2573:3

Obedience to the natural things, which they can see, is a prerequisite to advancement in knowledge; as during the entire Gospel age it has been a prerequisite to begetting to the new nature. R838:1

Those whose minds are on so gross an earthly plane that they cannot appreciate so simple a matter as this are not in the condition to be inducted into the deeper things of God. They are babes who need milk instead of strong meat. (Heb. 5:12) R2422:5

The person who cannot grasp with clearness and distinctness the features of God's plan which relate to the world in general, certainly need not expect that he would be in any condition to understand or appreciate the things which pertain to the spiritual conditions. R3486:4

This is the explanation of why our Lord Jesus did not present teachings as deep along spiritual lines as did some of the apostles. It was not inability on his part to present them, but those truths would have been meat out of season to his disciples. R4166:4

The Lord's works were on a fleshly plane as a matter of necessity because the holy Spirit had not yet come. After Pentecost the Lord's people, as his representatives, began to do greater works than those which he himself had performed. R2455:1,4

Seeing that his hearers were not prepared to understand the heavenly things, our Lord gave his attention chiefly to discourses on earthly things, and to parables and dark sayings which the Spirit would subsequently make known. R3307:3

If what I have taught or illustrated by earthly things, which you could and do understand, has not brought conviction, it would be no more convincing to you if I were to tell you of heavenly things of which you know nothing. A281; R837:6

If you would be led of God into all truth, and find a position in the Kingdom which I am announcing, you must follow the light, step by step. As you do so, more light will come; and this as rapidly as you will be prepared for it. R837:5; A279

When any are found who have not the hearing ear for the Truth, we should not seek to pound it into them, but rather should take a different tack, and seek their consecration. R4125:5

An ability to appreciate the deeper things comes only to, and is only for, those who have come into the spiritual covenant relationship of the sons of God as new creatures. R4125:5

Hence it was necessary to give the proofs of a spiritual matter (namely, that Christ has been raised from the dead a spirit being) along lines which the unilluminated could appreciate. R2081:3

If I tell you -- A natural man, not begotten, cannot know or be acquainted with spiritual truths, even though the great Master were the instructor. R838:1

Of heavenly things -- Not until Jesus finished his sacrifice and ascended on high could any receive the holy Spirit, and not until then could any understand spiritual things. R4314:3

The fact is that the revelation of heavenly or spiritual things dates from Pentecost, after he was gone. R507:1; F632

A knowledge of the heavenly things can be received only after the begetting of the Spirit. How much more will the realities mean when, born of the spirit, we shall be like our Lord and share his glory! A282; F729

It is impossible to describe heaven with its beauties and charms. In line with this, the Bible makes no attempt to describe heaven itself, nor its inhabitants. R4966:3, 4675:3; CR117:1

To talk of heaven with its pianos, harps, organs, etc., is to merely think of the blessings God has provided for the faithful and obedient of the world on earth, and not of the "heaven of heavens" promised to the Church. R4966:3, 4675:3

As to how and when our Lord came to an appreciation of his pre-human condition, we have no direct revelation. Of one thing we are assured, that during our Lord's ministry he had a clear knowledge of the heavenly things. R5156:6

No man -- The words in this verse were intended to remind Nicodemus that he need not look to fellow human creatures for information respecting heavenly things, as they could not know them any more than himself.

R2423:1 The Kingdom of Heaven class was not started until our dear Redeemer's first advent, when he gave himself a ransom for all, and began the selection of the Little Flock. R2342:1

There is no suggestion that when his servants would die they would go to that "far country" to be with their King, and there receive their reward for well-doing or ill-doing. HG664:2

Including Enoch, Elijah, Moses and David, or any of the patriarchs. R5772:3, 5333:5, 5207:2, 5188:5, 5179:5, 4757:1, 3417:4, 3378:4, 2342:1, 838:5, 619:6; F676; HG347:5; Q713:4

Therefore Moses and Elijah, on the Mount of Transfiguration, only appeared to be present, but they were not actually present, because it was merely a vision. R2659:5, 2288:3, 1761:2

Therefore Adam did not go to heaven. Q742:4

Therefore when the Prophet David declared, "Thou wilt not leave my soul in sheol; neither wilt thou suffer thine Holy One to see corruption" (Psa. 16:10), he was speaking of Jesus and not of himself. NS663:4

Elijah is said to have ascended to heaven; but, from this statement, that must be understood to refer to the air, not to the heavenly condition. R2153:3, 558:5

Everything in the Scriptures agrees that the prophets of old as well as the apostles, and all the faithful as well as the unfaithful, fell asleep in death, and "know not anything" (Eccl. 9:5) until awakening in the resurrection morning. NS429:4

God does not perfect separate individuals, but works by dispensations.

Under the Jewish dispensation, not a Gentile could be saved; even the Jew could not be made perfect, without us. (Heb. 11:40) No man could ascend into heaven. HG15:5

Therefore Lazarus, when dead, had not been to heaven. R4161:4, 3531:4; PD61/72; SM100:1

Dorcas, whom all the creeds of "Christendom" would send to heaven, when she was awakened to life, had no wonderful experiences or mysterious visions to relate, nor any disappointment to express at being recalled to this mundane sphere. R1450:6 St. Peter's words (Acts 2:34,29) imply that if King David had ascended to heaven he would have no sepulchre on earth, for the very thought connected with the word sepulchre is that of a personality awaiting a resurrection. R5132:4

Entirely incompatible with the teaching of modern theology, that the righteous dead are not really dead, but more alive than ever in heaven. R1378:2; CR21:2

There could be no resurrection of the dead if there were no dead--if the dead were really more alive than they ever were. NS519:6

John Wesley said no human being had gone to heaven. He said they went to hades. Nobody has gone to heaven; nobody will go to heaven until after the resurrection and judgment. HG124:3*, 145:4

Those who, at the point of death, see visions of angels or hear celestial strains of music see merely a phantasmagoria induced by an excited condition of the imaginative powers of the mind, with a correspondingly dormant state of the reasoning facilities. Q762:1

There is no indication that his disciples would die and go to the Lord, and be reckoned with and rewarded then; but that our Lord will come a second time, to receive his people unto himself, and to then reward them. R2765:2

What a peculiar place some people must fancy heaven to be: full of infants, idiots and heathens, with an occasional "saint" from civilized lands. R3398:6; HG644:1

Hath ascended -- This statement by our Lord would cause no particular surprise to Nicodemus, for nothing in the Law or the prophets or teachings of orthodox Judaism ever held to the idea prevalent amongst the heathen that the dead were alive. R4125:6

To heaven -- Hence none could corroborate my testimony. A281
None had ever been there, or seen heavenly things. R2573:3

But he that came down -- The Son of man, who alone had come down from heaven, was alone able to speak with knowledge and authority respecting heavenly matters. R3486:6, 1059:5; A281

He had recollection of his previous existence as a spirit being with the Father. Our Lord's success against temptation was as a result of being rightly exercised by this knowledge of God. (Isa. 53:11) R1125:5; HG293:1
He alone left the glory which he had with the Father before the world was; he alone exercised that wonderful faith in the Father which permitted him to sacrifice everything with joy. R3912:2

If our Lord Jesus, when on earth, was nothing but flesh--a mere man--then he could not be truly said to have come down from heaven. R106:5*

Unitarians and others take away from the dignity and honor of our Lord, beside contradicting much Scripture, by denying that he had an existence before his conception in Mary. R505:2*

The Son of man -- The Scriptures identify "The Son of Man" with the Lord of glory, and with the man Christ Jesus who gave himself, and with the pre-human Logos, which came down from heaven and was made flesh. E150

Which is in heaven -- The oldest Greek MSS (the Sinaitic and the Vatican) omit the last four words of verse 13 with evident propriety, for although our Lord is now in heaven, he was not in heaven at the time he addressed Nicodemus. A282; E92, 150; R3487:1, 2573:3, 2422:6, 506:6, 445:6*

And as Moses -- The verses from here on were not spoken to Nicodemus, but combined various of our Lord's teachings which the writer here brought together conveniently. R4125:6

Our Lord did not stop with a mere answer to his visitor's questions about the Kingdom being heavenly, but proceeded to give him in brief form an outline of the entire plan of salvation. R3487:2

Our Lord turned the subject by way of showing the grand basis for this spiritual Kingdom, and that he himself could not enter into that Kingdom while still in the flesh. R2573:4

Lifted up -- The remedy for the bites of the serpents was to look at a brazen (copper) serpent fastened to the top of a pole, said pole probably being carried throughout the camp of Israel, that all the sick, suffering ones might have the opportunity of looking upon it and thus being healed. R3101:6

"And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me."
(John 12:32) Not lifted up by glorifying, but clearly the lifting up of the cross. Moses did not glorify the serpent. R1054:2, 669:3

The serpent -- Of brass (literally, copper), which is a type of the human nature. R1849:2

Apparently of immense size and capable of being seen by the Israelites from quite a distance. R4048:3

To which the Israelites, who would exercise faith, might look and receive healing. R3487:2

The serpent on the pole represented Christ on the cross, and represented the atonement transaction better than any other emblem could. R3101:6, 3102:1

The serpent represented sin in every sense of the word; and as the whole world was serpented or inoculated, our Lord must take the place of the sinner in order that the sinner might get free from the sentence. R3102:1

We can think of only one way that our Lord was viewed as a serpent--in the sense that he underwent all the experiences which a sinner could have been required to undergo. R5253:4, 5577:5, 5239:1, 4704:2, 2423:4, 1696:2

A symbol of the punishment for their sin. R837:6

A synonym for sin, because it was the tool for sin. R5238:6

The fiery serpent of sin has bitten our race. We are all dying. Only by the exercise of faith in the Crucified One can any be healed. R5316:4, 4126:1, 3102:1, 2573:4

Even so must -- There is an object in my coming, and before you or others could be begotten of the Spirit, I must perform my mission. R837:6

The drawing of the world could not take place except he were lifted up as the sin-offering. R2467:4

Be lifted up -- Be crucified. R5577:5, 5065:1

Christ, who knew no sin, was made a sin-offering on our behalf, that we might be made the righteousness of God in him. He is the antitype of the brazen serpent. R1696:2, 5577:5, 5054:3

On the cross, and thus made to appear as the sinner--to take the place of the sinner--so that the whole world of mankind, bitten by sin and dying as a result, might look unto him by faith and be healed. R3487:2

It was not divinely intended that our Lord should be stoned, but that he should be treated as a cursed one--hanged upon a tree. (Deut. 21:22,23)
R5221:3

Comparatively early in his ministry Jesus stated this. As he came down nearer to the time of his humiliation, his degradation, he realized all that it meant. R5421:3

The result of the lifting up of Christ will eventually be the drawing of all men unto him. "And I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me.

This he said, signifying what death he should die." (John 12:32,33) R1849:3

The only ground for hope that any of the fallen race of Adam will ever know anything about the heavenly condition is then stated by our Lord to depend upon his own justifying work on man's behalf. R2423:1

Whosoever -- The Israelites bitten by those serpents represented or typified sinners bitten by sin and suffering from the consequences thereof--the fall. R4048:4

Believeth in him -- Bitten by sin, they must by faith recognize in him their sin bearer, the one upon whom their penalty was placed, and by whose sin-offering they were redeemed; that believing on him thus, they might have life. R837:6

The serpent-bitten had to look with their physical eyes, and the sin-bitten have to look with their mental eyes. R1328:6*

Not only was it necessary that Christ should die for our sins, but that none could be saved through his death except by looking unto him, exercising faith in the merit of his great atonement-sacrifice. R4048:5

It is not sufficient for us to believe in Jesus as the great Teacher, but also that there was a redemption accomplished by our Lord in his crucifixion. R4048:5

Many may get some blessing morally, mentally and physically from looking at Jesus as a great Jew or a great teacher, but only those who view him as the antitype of the serpent in the wilderness have his promise of forgiveness and acceptance with God unto eternal life. R3102:4

Should not perish -- Lose life altogether. R5608:2

As unfit to live and enjoy God's blessing. R5275:4

In the second death. R883:1

Let no one be deceived regarding the duration of the punishment of the wicked as it is repeatedly put forth in the Scriptures that it is for eternity and not merely for a season. However, it is not a question as to the duration of the punishment, but it is a question as to the nature of the punishment. Q768:2

Not a word respecting any danger of the world going into eternal torment, nor did he utter a word respecting the salvation of any in ignorance.

R2573:4, 2423:4; HG707:2*; NS646:2

In sending Israel relief, God foreshadowed the greater relief he would afterward send to mankind in general--Christ, the sinner's ransom-price. R1849:2

John 3:16

For -- A brief statement of why the Heavenly Father has provided the blessing which he had been describing--God's sympathetic love for humanity. R2573:5

Luther called this verse the "little Bible." We would express it, "the Gospel in a nut shell." The whole message of God is contained in condensed form: (1) man's need, his perishing condition, is shown; (2) God's love is declared, proven in the gift of his Son; (3) our Lord's willing cooperation is evidenced; (4) the lengths and breadths of this love and redemption are declared to embrace the whole world; and (5) the limitations of divine grace are plainly stated, that the blessing can be obtained only through a true acceptance of Christ. R3487:4, 2573:5, 2423:4

God so loved -- The love prompting man's redemption was not phileo or duty-love, for God had not wronged his creatures in the sentence of death. It was agapee, or disinterested charity, benevolence, love. R2807:4

Divine sympathy exercised toward the race of sinners. NS740:5

The love of pity and sympathy toward all those who have fallen below the standard of moral excellence, or who suffer in any way. R1670:2

A love for the world which will not only be glad to see them lifted up out of degradation and sin to holiness, but will be glad to cooperate to these ends as opportunities may offer. R2755:2

God loves the world with a broad, sympathetic love; but he has a special love for his true Church, those who have consecrated themselves fully to him during this Gospel age. OV423:3; CR473:2

Before Jesus came into the world. NS524:4

While we were yet sinners. R4133:4, 1833:4, 1693:6, 1266:6; NS384:3

Including those who lived before Jesus came, as much as those who had not yet been born. NS384:3

This perfect love extends even to enemies and those who injure us and speak evil of us falsely for Christ's righteousness sake. R2755:2

The difficulty with the world and with the church in the past has been that we have not emphasized the love of God. R5353:3

God is not bound by justice to give any future life to anybody, but he has arranged so to do. R5314:4

God was a God of love prior to the sending forth of his Son, but his love was hidden--not revealed, not manifest to men. It was manifest for the first time when he sent his Son to be man's Redeemer. NS406:3

Some deny God's love in the matter and claim that all the love was Christ's, but it was God that devised the plan as it is being carried forward. R1572:3, 77:1*, 9:2*

Orthodoxy says that it was Jesus that so loved the world. The Father did not love them, but Jesus loved them and threw himself between them and his angry Father. R405:3*

God from the beginning foreknew his intention to send his Son into the world for human redemption. HG595:3

Christ likewise so loved the world as to freely become the instrument of Jehovah for its salvation. R2099:3

Would it not seem that if God loved the world so much, he might have made provision, not only that believers might be saved, but also that all might hear in order to believe? HG343:6; OV225:T

We are to love the world only in the sense of having sympathy with it, as our Heavenly Father has, while we are unsympathetic with its arrangements. R4766:5, 3804:6; SM390:2

The love which is worthy of our emulation is that which benevolently ignores personal antagonisms and animosities, and, overleaping all selfish considerations and vengeful feelings, considers only the possibilities and the ways and means for peace and reformation and salvation. R4766:4
God's love for mankind, as well as divine justice and wisdom, prepared man's penalty. Had they continued to have access to the trees of life, and thus to continue existence, it would have meant everlasting life for sinners. NS645:5

God's love for sinners was so great that he would not allow them to have everlasting life, because that would mean to them everlasting imperfection and sorrow. NS646:1

There was nothing in the fallen man that God could really love, in the sense of fellowshiping him. R5724:3

Not only passive love for sinners which would not arrange for their eternal suffering through a perpetuation of life out of harmony with himself, but the active love which arranged for their recovery. NS646:1

Does love plan torture? Does loving provision not imply wisdom in the use of power, that the creature may not be injured, if he shall not be benefited by the program. NS645:3

God's mercy is his love in active operation for the relief of the condemned. Although God is love, and hence must have always been loving, kind, and merciful of disposition, yet this quality of his character was held in restraint as respects condemned men for more than 40 centuries. NS863:4

God does not love the world with a love of fellowship, nor are we to do so. R3804:6

The world -- As well as the Church. R5597:2; HG132:3, 178:1

Not only the Church, but also the world; not only redeeming the Church, but also redeeming the world. R5354:4

Greek, kosmos, the people, or world of mankind. R206:3

The human family; though not in the sense in which he loves the Church of Christ. R5138:2

Note the different kinds, or degrees of love: first, we have love for the world; second, in a much higher and special sense, "The Father himself loveth you"--you who have accepted Jesus Christ as your Redeemer. (John 16:27) R3033:6

The whole world, including the Canaanites, as well as the Israelites. R5314:4

The whole world was loved of God. The whole world has been provided for in the glorious sacrifice of Jesus, and the whole world is to have the benefit resulting from that sacrifice. Christ's death is not merely for the Church, the elect few. OV380:4

It would surprise none of us to read that God so loved the holy angels--they have always been loyal and true; nor that he so loved the saints, who have turned to righteousness. NS645:2

"The earth" is not "the world," nor is "the age." The primary idea of it appears to be "an arrangement," the human race under an arrangement, including every individual of the human race, from the first man to the very last of his posterity. R1328:1*

Giving the thought of the wideness of God's mercy and of his provision for our race. R2423:4

The whole world. R405:3*

Some things are universal. God's sunshine is universal; it shines from pole to pole, upon both the just and the unjust. So is his love. Light and truth are yet to be universal, and so is the testimony of the ransom.

R2632:6*

That he gave -- To humiliation and sacrifice in death. R2573:5, 884:3*

The birth of Jesus, to be rightly understood and esteemed, must be considered from the standpoint of a gift of love divine. R5135:2

Suggesting the cost of the world's salvation to our Heavenly Father.

R1696:5

It is plain therefore that the salvation which God has provided is purely an act of his free grace--an act to which he was in no sense obligated, and to which he was impelled only by his abounding love. R1266:6, 1265:4

This is a gift--not called for by divine justice, but prompted by divine love. HG595:4

Salvation is thus a free gift to all men, the conditions being accept, believe, obey. R1965:2*

Not that God compelled his only begotten Son to die for us, but rather he set before him a great prize, so that Jesus counted it all joy to lay down his life. NS646:3

Only begotten Son -- Only begotten from the very beginning of his existence. At age 30 he made his consecration. Then he was begotten of the Spirit to a spirit nature; but he was the only begotten Son of God the whole time. Q372:1

More than a begotten son by the word of truth. Jesus claimed to be the Son of God, and consequently the Messiah. If Christ was the son of God only as we are sons of God, then he was not the Son of God, but a son. R944:4*

A Son on the higher plane before he was sent. R1059:5, 445:6*

It is impossible for us to tell the riches of divine grace toward us--the numberless blessings and mercies which are ours through our Lord. He represents to us the very fullness of every divine provision for our eternal welfare. R5927:6

Our sins were laid upon Christ, our Redeemer, and his righteousness is transferred correspondingly to our account. R1262:1

This phraseology brings us into conflict with an old theory--trinitarianism. R405:6*

By God sending his Son, he manifests his sympathetic love which otherwise neither angels nor men might ever have known. R5430:4

Whosoever -- Of mankind. R5430:4

All the willing and obedient may thus come into relationship with the Life-giver and obtain the everlasting life. R5354:5

Believeth -- Obediently. R2120:5

He limits his favor by two conditions: (1) the blessing through his Son shall only go to those who intelligently know of it and by faith accept it; and (2) it shall be available only to those who desire to come into harmony with divine laws as obedient children. NS646:5

None can obtain everlasting life except through a personal relationship to Christ, the Redeemer, and the exercise of faith in his redeeming blood and obedience to his counsels. R5354:2

Those who claim that all infants and the mass of the heathen will be saved without believing do violence to these texts. R936:1

Knowledge will be forced upon all, and obedience will be forced to a certain limit, but in the end the sinner himself must determine whether or not he will accept the grace of God for the remission of his sins. NS648:1

As the effects or results of Adam's failure were inherited by those in him, so the results of Christ's obedience will be shared by all who believe into him. R1601:6

Here is the truth that sanctifies. Q638:3

The Scriptures make specific mention of the necessary faith, but always imply a character consistent with the faith. R3114:2

"How then shall they call on him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard? and how shall they hear without a preacher?" (Rom. 10:14) R405:6*

Should not perish -- Our pardon, sealed with the precious blood of Christ and signed by the great Sovereign of the Universe. R1494:3

The penalty that is upon the world is not an eternal torment penalty, but a penalty of destruction. R5597:3, 5353:6, 2423:4; HG120:4, 163:2

Webster gives the primary meaning of "perish" as "to die, to lose life, in any manner." Liddel and Scott define the original word "to destroy utterly, kill, slay, murder." The text really defines its own meaning by placing "perish" as the opposite of "life." R406:1*

We know what perishing signifies. The brute beasts, when they die, perish, because God has made no provision for their resurrection. R5353:6; NS647:5

Let us get rid of the thought that "perish" means to preserve in eternal torment. NS647:4

The sentence of perishing was eternal, were it not for the fact that God provided a redemption through Jesus Christ. HG120:4

All will perish who will not accept of Jesus' finished work, the ransom sacrifice which he gave; but their perishing will be as a "second death," because all must at some time be brought to a knowledge of this truth (the ransom) and must reject it and the life (or escape from perishing) which it offers. R884:4

Nevertheless, all who will refuse this grace of God in Christ and fail to come into vital union with him will perish. R5354:5

But have -- Obtain. R2573:5

He who believes in me and becomes my true, faithful follower, may reckon that he has already begotten in him the new life, and that I will assist him and carry him through to a share in the first resurrection. R3730:6

Everlasting life -- In due time, recovering from the death penalty through faith in Christ and obedience to him. R5597:3

After God applies the various temptations or tests so as to demonstrate whether or not they are worthy of eternal life. R4760:6

The word here translated "everlasting" does not necessarily mean endless. Competent authorities render it "age-lasting"; and the age may be long or short, according to the nature and circumstances of the case. R1328:4*

The awakening from death is only the beginning of the salvation or restitution which will be completed within the limits of that age. R936:4

That in him all families of the earth might be blessed. R5180:3

They shall, by resurrection processes, return to full harmony with the Lord and to repossess the blessings and favors lost by Father Adam when he sinned. NS647:3

To attain to all that was lost in Adam, all that was redeemed by Jesus--eternal life, fellowship with God and the Son and communion with the holy Spirit, and fellowship in all the rights on both the heavenly and earthly planes. NS647:6

The Scriptures set forth two salvations, entirely separate and distinct--that of mankind, shown here; and that of the Church, shown in such texts as Eph. 5:25-27. HG252:5,3; NS768:1

John 3:17

For God -- This is perhaps in answer to another question, or perhaps merely a part of the further discourse to Nicodemus. R2573:5

Sent not -- He does not intimate that the world had yet been saved, or that anything had yet been done for the world's salvation, except the sending of the one who would redeem the world by the sacrifice of himself. E425

Our Lord's first advent was not with a view to increasing the Adamic condemnation but the reverse of this, to effect the sacrifice by which it might ultimately be canceled. R4126:4

Our Lord Jesus in all matters acts as a representative of the Father, Jehovah, in the work of salvation. E35

His pre-human existence is implied in this sending and mission. E88

His Son -- This feature of the Master's teachings especially angered the Jews, for they declared that in claiming to be the Son of God, he was establishing himself upon a pedestal of honor, dignity, glory, in competition with Jehovah. R5768:1; OV329:2

Into the world -- Here signifying the world as a place. R97:3*

To condemn -- Greek, krino, sentence. R699:6

The governments are to be destroyed that the people may be delivered. A255
The world has already been condemned, for it had shared in Father Adam's condemnation as his race. It needed no more condemnation, but it did need salvation. R4126:2, 4702:1, 857:6; HG617:1

Our word damned, from misuse and the bad theology of the Dark Ages, has a sulphurous odor, whereas its plain, simple meaning, is the same as the word condemn. NS860:3

"To judge" (Revised Ver.). The world had been judged previously. God did not send his Son into the world to do that over again. R1328:3*

Be saved -- From the damnation or condemnation under which they already were through Adam's death. R857:6

God merely overlooked or "winked" at the ignorance and superstition of the period from Adam to the death of our Redeemer. But as soon as Jesus had died, God offered forgiveness and reconciliation to those who would believe in Jesus and accept the divine terms. Such have their sins forgiven, come back to fellowship with God. And, in the next age, such shall eventually attain full human perfection. SM150:1

One of Jesus' titles is The Savior which, in the Syrian language spoken in Palestine in Jesus' day, signifies "The Life-Giver." All human life was forfeited through Adam. All mankind are dying as a result. A Life-Giver, a Savior from death, was what was needed. R4702:1

He that believeth -- These believers are such as not only believe that such a person as Jesus lived and died, but that his death was accepted of God as a ransom price. R1229:5

Is not condemned -- Believers in Christ are reckoned as justified by their faith--as passing out from the remainder of the world, freeing themselves of the original Adamic condemnation. NS402:5

Believeth not -- There is no suggestion anywhere in the Scriptures that God has made provision for salvation in blindness, ignorance and superstition. There must be faith, and there must be knowledge preceding faith. HG114:6

Condemned already -- Condemned six thousand years ago, and, if a Jew, additionally bound by the Law Covenant, and has not escaped the condemnation that is on the world. R1726:1, 970:6, 688:6

The whole human family originally came under divine sentence or condemnation through father Adam's disobedience. Children were born sharers in his blemishes by heredity, and sharers likewise in his condemnation. NS402:5

Before they believe in Christ, men are in the attitude of condemned beings, condemned on account of father Adam's sin. R2059:2

All men are lost until found, or recovered. R857:5

The wrath of God (death, inherited from Adam) abides on him (verse 36). No man is on trial individually until brought to a knowledge of Christ.

R2059:4

The question is not, What shall we do to escape coming under condemnation, but, How shall we, who are already condemned of God as unworthy of everlasting life, get free from that condition in which we were born, and back into the condition of perfection which God will approve? HG651:1
Hath not believed -- These will be brought to a knowledge of the great foundation truth of the ransom in the times of restitution, and when they accept it, their sins will be blotted out. R1229:5

John 3:19

This is the condemnation -- Quite separate and distinct from the Adamic condemnation, which was inherited; this condemnation, resulting from an intelligent rejection of light, bears an individual penalty. R4126:4

A measure of increased condemnation in proportion as the light is seen by any one and rejected. R4126:4, 1655:5

Those who violate their consciences and ignore the light which they enjoy and sin against it, will find themselves proportionately degraded when they shall come under the Kingdom influences and tests. R5037:5

At the first advent of our Lord an increased measure of light came to men, and to that extent increased their responsibility. R2612:6

The light which then shone and which has since shone through his followers, has carried with it a measure of responsibility--a measure of condemnation to all who have resisted the light. R4126:4, 722:1

The condemnation already upon men, justified by their course. R2573:6
Judgment; this is the testimony of God, that Christ is the judgment of the world. R1329:2*

Although there will be rewards and "stripes" according to the deeds of the present life, the verdict in the end will be in harmony with the choice expressed by the conduct of each during that (Millennial age) of trial.

R2611:5

Condemnation is no more the equivalent of judgment than damnation is. The process of judgment will result either in justification or in condemnation, according to the merits or demerits of each case. R1330:1*

Christ is the judgment of the world because he is its love, and he is its love because he is its light, and he is its light because he is its life.

R1329:2*

Light is come -- Jesus is the true light which ultimately, in the Kingdom, shall be a great Sun of Righteousness with healing in his beams.

R2573:6

An increased measure of light, which increased to that extent their responsibility. R722:1

There is a measure of light in the world, emanating from our dear Redeemer, his words and his works, and still shines forth from all those who are truly his, but this is not that light of the world which is to scatter all of earth's darkness and cause all to appreciate the glory of God. R3686:2

Since the death of Jesus a measurable blessing of knowledge of God has come into the world. NS559:1

His Church is invited to become associated with him as lamp-bearers; and if faithful in permitting their light to shine now, they will by and by be parts of that great Sun of Righteousness which shall heal the world with its beams. SM560:3

Whether of conscience or of revelation. R2612:6, 722:1

And men -- Strange to say, darkness was not confined to the ignorant then, nor is it today. It is no respecter of stations. Indeed, the powers of darkness are greatest in the more influential and better educated. SM241:1

The Scriptures plainly declare that blindness in part is upon all the children of Adam through the fall, yet from Jesus' words we must conclude that these Pharisees were not totally blind. R723:6

Loved darkness -- Mankind has become so depraved, so in sympathy with sin, so out of accord with absolute truth, justice and righteousness, that it was not attractive to them--or rather, less attractive to them than the error. SM240:3

It will be less tolerable for those who reject the light of divinely revealed truth, and thus prefer the darkness to the light, because their deeds are evil. R1618:4

He who loves the darkness remains in the darkness, and he who loves the light comes to the light. R1329:5*

Rather than light -- In proportion as any who have seen even a glimmer of the true light have hated and refused it, in that proportion they have added to their responsibility. Such is the condition of Churchianity today--so-called Christendom. NS559:1

Throughout the Scriptures light is used to represent God, his truth, his righteousness, his servants and their messages. Contrariwise, darkness is the synonym for Satan, the Prince of Darkness, and all his deluded followers, the children of darkness. SM240:2

Evil -- Here "evil" is the opposition of "truth." He that doeth evil is the opposite of him that doeth truth. R1329:4*

The world is in an evil condition; it has not the spirit of the Lord, the spirit of love. R4445:3

John 3:20

Hateth the light -- For it is the nature of light to scatter the darkness. SM241:T

The darkness of sin and error is in direct antagonism to the light of truth. The effect of light upon the darkened world is to awaken opposition, antagonism, and thus to disturb and make uncomfortable those in sympathy with darkness. R4813:3, 4761:2, 2415:1 It is altogether a mistake, therefore, to suppose that you or I or any other person, or all of the Lord's consecrated people, letting their light shine faithfully before men, could convert the world. CR126:2

The reason for every willful act. Error abides in darkness. The brilliancy of a light attracts blinded bugs--big bugs as well as lesser ones--which vainly try to destroy the light. HG712:4*

All who do evil intentionally, in the light, thereby manifest their hatred of the light. R4126:5

Even where there are no selfish motives to impel the persecution, there is ever present the distinction between "light" and "darkness." R2501:2

Even those who have gotten out of the extreme darkness of moral pollution into a kind of twilight of civilized reformation and moral reform, cannot endure the clear, searching light of the true Gospel. R4813:5, 2415:2

Jesus' persecutors were those who had some light, but who hated the brilliancy of the great light which shone upon them. Similarly, the Lord's consecrated ones have been hated almost exclusively by those who had some light, but whose light was as darkness in comparison with the great light of the holy Spirit shining through these. R2415:2

The faithful servants of the Lord will be ostracised by the world. Their attitude of full consecration to do the Father's will is not appreciated, for to the world it seems foolish--it is a reproof. R5173:6

There are many dark places now into which they can get away from the light, but the light-bearer is at hand, and though they shall call for the rocks and the mountains to cover them that they may remain in the dark, yet the light will shine. (Isa. 40:5) R192:6

Where such is the case in marriage, separation may follow, whether accompanied by a decree of divorce from earthly courts or not, but the new creature is not at liberty to remarry, except for the ground of unfaithfulness. F505

Spiritualism hates the light, and their works are done under cover of their favorite principle--darkness. Their work of proselyting, too, is dark, covered--secret. R266:3

The condemnation of Jesus was a triumph of darkness over light only in appearance; for God's plan was thus being carried out. R5561:2

The theory of erroneous religious teachings is that ignorance and superstition are necessary for the preservation of sacerdotal power. R5561:2

Be reproved -- Made manifest, lest they should thus be obliged to confess that for years they had been teaching errors which His Word does not authorize, in the name of the Lord. R1035:5

The effect of the light is to make manifest the evils of darkness which would not otherwise appear; and thus to disturb and make uncomfortable those in sympathy with darkness. R2415:1

To the sinful, envious, hateful heart of the fallen nature everything akin to beauty, goodness, truth and love is distasteful, there is no beauty in it, nothing desired--it is a reproof. E161

The world wants a man good enough to be honest, temperate, trustworthy and faithful, but despises the higher forms of goodness because their own heart is not in sympathy with such ideals and does not desire to be in the presence of so high a standard. R2460:5

It makes manifest the error, the sin, with which they are identified and which, to some extent at least, they love. R4126:5

John 3:21

He that doeth truth -- If something contrary to God's will may be exposed in their own conduct or theories, they are glad of this also, that they may have an opportunity for correcting the same. R4126:5

If we are doing the best we know how to do day by day, year by year, we may rest in the Lord's unchanging grace toward us in Christ, however weak, however imperfect our results. NS245:2

Thus all the doers of "many wonderful works in Christ's name" (Matt. 7:22) lack the proper credentials, in that they do not have the truth which they surely would have if they were in the Lord's favor and confidence. R3120:4

Cometh to the light -- Our perception of the love of God must lead to appreciation, our appreciation to reciprocation, and our reciprocation must never come to an end. R1329:4*

If our hearts condemn us, let us remember that God is still a higher and more strict Judge than we are apt to be of ourselves. R1194:5

We are to prove the things which we receive, by their harmony with the Scriptures and their ability to unlock them and make clear their meaning. Whatever assists us in this direction is from God. R2532:5

Be made manifest -- They desire that their course in life shall become manifest, that all shall know that, to the extent of their ability, they are seeking to do the Lord's will. R4126:5

In Aenon -- Probably at a pool in the Jordan river. R1541:2

It matters not where one is baptized--in a regularly prepared baptistry, which might be hired for the occasion, or the river, or any place where there is plenty of water. R396:5

There was much water -- No one can for a moment suppose that if John sprinkled his converts, the largeness of the water supply could be a consideration. R1541:2

John 3:29

Hath the bride -- Here the Jewish marriage is set forth as the example of the union between Christ and the Church--a very different figure from our marriage custom of the present time. When a betrothal took place, legal and binding documents were signed, but no actual marriage or union took place for about a year. HG409:2

The bridegroom -- To the Jewish house Jesus presented himself in three characters--as Bridegroom, Reaper (John 4:35,38), and King (Matt. 21:5,9,4). To the Christian house he presents himself in the same three characters. (2 Cor. 11:2; Rev. 14:14,15; 17:14) B238

Jesus, personally, is the Bridegroom; not Jesus and the overcomers. R398:4
There is as much evidence of Christ being the Bridegroom in that typical church, as that he was Reaper in the harvest of that typical age. For example, the Jewish church is spoken of as the Lord's wife; John introduced Jesus as the Bridegroom. R109:2

Christ came in the character of Bridegroom at the beginning of the Jewish harvest as a part of the pattern, and at the beginning of the Gospel harvest as a parallel. R51:3

It was just three and a half years after John had announced Jesus as the Bridegroom to the typical house of Israel, that he came to them as their King (paralleling AD 1874-1878). R88:5, 39:6*; B239

The friend -- Not the Bride, not a member of the Bride class, the Church. HG132:2

The old custom was for the father or some friend of the man to make a contract and arrange terms for him with the one to be invited to become his wife and joint-heir. Such a one was called "the friend of the bridegroom." R1388:4

John the Baptist occupied this position toward the Jewish nation--seeking to have them accept of Christ the Bridegroom and become his Bride. R1388:5, 5510:5

John the Baptist, the greatest prophet, did not claim the honor of being a part of the Bride, but to be a friend of the Bridegroom, and to introduce him. R219:1; SM251:2

Showing that John himself seemed to understand that he could not be of the Kingdom class. His grand work terminated before the Redeemer's sacrifice was finished. R4940:2, 5030:6, 4543:1, 1737:4

Rejoiceth greatly -- In the privilege of announcing the Bridegroom. R4543:1

This my joy -- John declared that in introducing his cousin according to the flesh, and thus accomplishing his part in the divine purpose and prophecy, his joy was fulfilled. R1916:2, 219:1

He -- As the light. R1694:6

Must increase -- And so it was. After John was put into prison Jesus' ministry became more and more public, especially by the numerous works performed by him. R5037:1, 4644:6

Jesus (at the hands of his disciples) baptized more than did John and his co-laborers. (John 4:1) R4130:2

I must decrease -- In influence. R703:4*

Observe the humility and self-abnegation of John in pointing out his cousin according to the flesh as the "Lamb of God" (John 1:29), whose rising popularity must soon eclipse his own. R1694:3

It was this meekness, this complete self-abnegation and singleness of purpose to accomplish the righteous will of God, that constituted the moral greatness of John. R1916:2

John's attitude here contrasted with that of the chief priests, scribes and Pharisees. R1735:3

John 3:32

What he hath seen -- It was his knowledge of heavenly things, his intimate and long acquaintance with the Father, begetting faith in the Father's promises, which enabled him, as a perfect man, to overcome the world and present an acceptable sacrifice for our sins. E91; R1060:1, 446:2*

John 3:33

Set to his seal -- Illustrated by endorsing a bank check. Each one must personally accept, adopt, and endorse the promise of God by his own individual faith, or he will derive no benefit from it. R1074:6*

That God is true -- That our Lord changeth not, but "is the same yesterday, today and forever." (Heb. 13:8) E230

John 3:34

God giveth -- This anointing with the holy Spirit corresponded to the anointing of Israel's high priests and kings with the holy anointing oil. The oil was poured upon the head and ran down over the body. F443

Spirit -- The spirit of adoption. R182:2

Elsewhere called the Spirit of Christ, because in Christ the Spirit of God dwelt richly and without measure. R2064:2

This is the secret of all power in the work of the Lord. No preaching, no teaching is of value, except it be in the power of the holy Spirit. R1917:1

By measure -- Jesus, being perfect, received the Spirit "without measure." Those who received the holy Spirit at Pentecost received it by measure, that is, in limited degree. R2820:1, 1416:6; CR401:3

Without measure, unlimitedly; while his followers receive it by measure, or limitedly--a measure of the Spirit is given to every man in the Church. (Rom. 12:3) E185

We have only a certain capacity, and we can receive only according to our capacity; only as we get free from the spirit of the world can we be filled with the holy Spirit. In the case of our Redeemer, he was the perfect one and had full capacity, and there was nothing to hinder him from receiving the spirit without measure. Q183:T

When he was thirty years of age, on the banks of Jordan at the time of his consecration, he was "anointed with the oil of gladness above his fellows." (Psa. 45:7) T37

Unlimited or complete power, as in Col. 1:19, "For it was the good pleasure of the Father that in him should all fullness dwell." R1063:6*

Loveth the Son -- There are two kinds of love: the intense, particular affectionate love shown here; and the general love, or kindness. R1254:2

Given all things -- He bought all, and none can obtain life (complete, perfect, everlasting) except through him. E143

John 3:36

He that believeth -- The believer referred to in this text is the one who believes with the heart--not merely one with an intellectual appreciation of the fact that Christ is the Son of God. R4840:2

Coming into full harmony with the Heavenly Father and with the Lord Jesus, by the merit of Christ's sacrifice. It will mean a full turning away from sin and a full devotion to God and to righteousness. SM153:2

None can obtain everlasting life except through a personal relationship to Christ, the Redeemer, the exercise of faith in his redeeming blood, and obedience to his counsels. R5354:2

The good tidings of a Savior shall be to all people (Luke 2:10,11), but the special salvation from sin and death will come only to his people (Matt. 1:21)--those who believe into him--for we read that the wrath of God continues to abide on the unbeliever (verse 36). A107

All of Adam's posterity will have an opportunity to accept Jesus, either as his brethren at the present time, or as his children in the next age. R4819:2

The willing and obedient. R2122:1

On the Son -- God's good desires and plan are all centered in Christ. He has appointed no other name by which we must be saved, and no other conditions than faith in his blood and obedience to his precepts of righteousness. R1273:4

Hath everlasting life -- Full perfection of life, everlasting life. NS340:5

A right, privilege, or grant of life as God's gift. E386

Believers already possess eternal life. NS336:1 From the standpoint of God's reckoning, from the legal standpoint, the everlasting life provided for such is already considered as theirs, while they abide under the robe of Christ's righteousness. R5931:2

It is proper to say that we have a thing either when we are in actual possession of it, or when we have a clear deed or title to it. A believer has a clear title to life, signed by Jehovah himself and sealed with the precious blood of Christ. R606:2

Our Lord has still a human life ungiven away. He does not give to the Church human life. R5622:2

This is only a beginning of the resurrection, or raising up process, which will not be perfected until the thousand years are finished. R2051:3

And he -- This verse expresses the results of the new trial for life everlasting made possible by his ransom-sacrifice. R1598:4

Believeth not -- Man will be obliged to accept the great Mediator, but upon those who do not accept God's arrangements, the wrath of God will still abide. R4840:6

No man can be made alive in Christ or through Christ except by coming into him and through him. All who would have life in that age must become children of Christ, begotten of truth. R1219:2

It is because the death of Christ will save none but believers, specially and everlastingly, that God wills that all shall come to a knowledge of the facts. R1253:4, 1077:4

Not see life -- Perfect life. E386

Everlasting life. R4881:6

Eternal life. HG424:1

That is, get fully free from death. R1077:4

Has no right to, nor promise of, life. R1219:2

Although the Lord's provision is abundant for all, it is not applicable to any except on certain conditions, namely (1) that they accept Christ as their Redeemer, and (2) that they strive to avoid sin and live in harmony with God and righteousness. E385

A recovery of what was lost (Adam's perfections and opportunities) comes to all, but God's gift of everlasting life through Jesus Christ is only to those who obey him. R1265:4, 1106:6

None out of Christ will be made alive, fully resurrected, though all experience the awakening from death--the first step of the process of resurrection and their trial to prove their worthiness or unworthiness. R1592:4

There surely will be some lost, as well as some saved. R3083:2

The Apostles Peter, Paul, James and John--aside from the founder of Christianity, certainly the greatest theologians of the Christian Church, and the only ones whose teachings can be recognized as of plenary inspiration--have not one word to say relative to the punishment for sin being eternal grief or eternal torment. HG305:5

The wrath of God -- The sentence of God. SM315:T

The sentence of death everlasting. R4881:6

The pronounced penalty for sin, the curse, the sentence, death. E404;

R4881:6, 2841:3, 2320:1; Q328:T; NS230:4, 405:4; NS707:2

The remainder of mankind are still under the death sentence, the wrath of God. They are not under the sentence of eternal torment, but under the curse, the condemnation of death. R4840:3

A good God, perfect in justice, wisdom, love and power, would exercise his wrath, his anger, along reasonable, just and merciful lines and not devilishly. NS707:2

Abideth on him -- Will continue to abide on him because of his refusal to accept and obey the message of mercy. NS230:4

Leaving the unworthy subject to the just penalty always enunciated by the great judge of all, death. E404

If not removed, either in this age or the next. R606:3

Speaking of the dying race from the judicial standpoint, our Savior called them all dead. None has even a reckoned life, except such as by faith have accepted him as their Life giver--Savior. CR131:2

The "wrath," the "curse," will be lifted from all who come into harmony with God through Jesus the Mediator, and all who do not avail themselves of this grace will be swallowed up of the second death. E439, 468; Q328-329

While all are to come under the control of the great Messiah, they are not to be turned over perfect, but as they are found--in a dying condition, the wrath of God, because of imperfection, still being upon them, still subject to the weaknesses resulting from the sentence of death. R4819:1

Those who at the end of the hundred years of trial remain obstinate in heart, and only obedient outwardly, under compulsion, shall be judged hopeless "sinners" and will be cut off from all further trial for life.

R1772:3

Such as shall accept of Christ as their ransom, we are expressly told, "shall be saved from wrath through him." (Rom. 5:9) R787:3

John 4

John 4:1

Jesus made -- At the hands of his disciples. R4130:2 Jesus and his disciples practised John's baptism among the Jews. R5964:4

Baptized -- A similar work to John, using immersion as a token or sign of the putting away of sin by the repentant one. R444:6, 5964:4; F428; NS48:4; HG264:3

John 4:2

Baptized not -- Even as Paul baptized few, being an abler preacher than others, while many could baptize as well as he. R1540:6

But his disciples -- James and John, as Jesus' representatives, had been baptizing multitudes in water, "unto repentance and remission of sins"--John's baptism. F442; NS53:2

John 4:3

He left Judea -- "He would not walk in Jewry, because the Jews sought to kill him." (John 7:1) Thereafter we hear little of Jesus being in Jerusalem except on festival occasions. R4130:2

In this he illustrated his instruction to his disciples, "When they shall persecute you in one city, flee ye to another." Matt. 10:23 R3494:2

John 4:4

He must needs go through -- It was a difficult matter to avoid the Samaritans, for the district called Samaria lay between Judea proper and Galilee. R2423:2, 2574:1

Samaria -- A stretch of country lying between Judea and Galilee. We might call it a county, and say that its chief city, of the same name, was its county seat. R2574:1

John 4:6

Jacob's well -- 75 feet deep. It's mouth was so walled up as to form a circular seat at its top. R4130:5

Jacob's well had a great reputation throughout that region because of the purity of its waters. Most water was brackish, but Jacob's well struck a crevice in the rock, which yielded a large supply of desirable water. R2574:3

Dug 14 centuries before our Lord's time. A remarkably good well, deep and abundantly supplied with water, well curbed at the top, with a small mouth about 14 inches in diameter. R3495:6

Being wearied -- His weakness was not the result of inherited blemish or sin, nor the weakness of imperfection, but of sacrifice. The gift which costs nothing cannot be so highly esteemed as that which costs much. R4138:2

Sat thus -- When Christ was weary, he rested; when he was hungry, he partook of food, and never, in any case, worked a miracle for his own present benefit, nor for his disciples. R1754:6, 379:1; F650

John 4:7

A woman of Samaria -- The Lord's principal communications all through the Gospel age have been with the humble. R3496:1, 2574:4, 2424:2
It is remarkable that on so many occasions our Lord said remarkable things to not very remarkable people under not very remarkable circumstances.
R3495:6

Unto her -- Our Lord was quite willing to mingle with any class. He shunned no opportunity for doing good to any, either publicans or sinners. He reproved and rebuked the scribes and Pharisees for their aloofness.
R4130:5

The opportunity of speaking to one earnest listener should be esteemed far greater than that of addressing a thousand inattentive ones. R4132:1
Had there been a company of Jews to whom the Lord could have talked at this time, we are bound to suppose he would have, to the neglect of this disreputable Samaritan. But their being none of the "children" to be "fed," he let some of the crumbs of knowledge and blessing fall to the Samaritans. R2574:5, 2423:5

"Do good unto all men as we have opportunity, especially to the household of faith." (Gal. 6:10) R2574:5

We should serve the household of faith wherever possible, but when this is impossible, and an opportunity offers, we should seek to do some good to others--to speak words which may help them by and by. R2423:5

Give me to drink -- A gift of water or of food, extended or received at that time, signified fellowship, a covenant of good will. R4130:5
It was evidently with less of a desire for the water for his own comfort, than from a desire to teach the woman, that our Lord asked her for a drink. R2423:3

Thus putting himself in a measure under obligation to her. In one sentence he broke down the icy barrier which had always existed between the Jews and the Samaritans. R3496:1

This is one of the best methods of approaching all--condescension and an expression of confidence in their generosity, with the implication which it gives of willingness to return the favor in some manner. R2574:5

John 4:8

To buy meat -- He would not command stones to become bread to satisfy his hunger, but rather sent his disciples to a village to buy meat. R379:1

John 4:9

How is it -- Her question has in it the element of boldness, which is explained later on by her acknowledgment that she was not a virtuous woman. R2574:3

This woman was a sinful woman, and a type of thousands of others, men and women, who would act very differently if they only knew. R1712:1

Being a Jew -- At once recognizing each other's nationality, not merely by facial lineaments, but also by distinctive features of dress--the Jews having a white fringe in their garments, while the Samaritans used blue. R2574:3

Askest drink of me -- She probably thought of him as one willing to receive a favor in his extremity, but at other times regarding her and her people as too far beneath him to have any dealings with her. R1711:6
Had she known and been able to appreciate her privilege of giving a cup of cold water to the only begotten and well-beloved Son of God, how gladly would she have rendered the service requested. R1711:6

Have no dealings -- Not that the Samaritans were averse to having fellowship with the Jews, but that the Jews, imbued with the thought that the promises of God were to the seed of Abraham exclusively, would "have no dealings with the Samaritans." R2423:4

While dealing with them commercially, the Jews would have no intercourse with them socially and religiously. R2574:1

Never eat with them, nor marry, nor have any dealings with them. R2604:2, 1000:3, 284:1; HG385:6

The Jews were right in not acknowledging the Samaritans. This was not a matter of bigotry, but of divine regulation and prohibition. (Deut. 7:1-6) R2574:2

Our Lord distinctly set the seal of approval to this course, saying, "Go not into the way of the Gentiles, and into any city of the Samaritans enter ye not; for I am not sent save to the lost sheep of the house of Israel." (Matt. 10:5) R2574:2, 2069:3

There was a greater religious antipathy existing between Samaria and the Jews than between the Jews and other heathen people because the Samaritan faith came closer to the Jewish faith and was therefore more competitive than the heathen faiths. R3495:3

The Samaritans -- A mixed people whom the Jews despised, and with whom they would have no dealings. R3804:3

Being of mixed blood, Jewish and Gentile, they were counted by the Jews as though they were Gentiles. R2960:3, 2069:3

Descendants of those heathen people planted in Palestine by the Babylonian government when the Israelites were deported to the countries of Babylon. R4130:2, 3495:3, 2574:1, 2423:2

Galilee had been settled by Gentile emigrants. Subsequently these Gentiles gathered more particularly in the vicinity of the city of Samaria and became known as Samaritans. Noting the hopes of the Israelites, they were inclined to claim a certain share in the blessings belonging to the people into whose lands they had been introduced. R3468:3

Some of the careless, ignorant and vicious amongst the Jews, disregarding the divine law, intermarried with the Samaritans. Thus an element of Jewish blood was intermingled amongst them. R4130:3, 2423:6

Jesus answered -- While probably thirsty, Jesus was more anxious to give the word of truth than to receive the natural water. R3496:1

Although weary, he was ready to sacrifice his own convenience that he might be helpful to another, even to a social outcast. R2574:5

If thou knewest -- Displaying great tact by not answering her query but directing her attention to a deeper truth. Some mistakenly believe they must use no tact, that to do so would be dishonest. Such should note, here and elsewhere, our Lord's tactfulness. R4130:6

Similarly, let us in all the affairs of life try to turn the attention of those with whom we have contact towards the heavenly, the spiritual things. R4130:6

Observe the simple condescension of the Lord in thus endeavoring to make plain the way of life to one who had strayed far from the path of rectitude. R1702:6

The gift of God -- The very words customarily used by the water-carriers, who, with water-skins filled with water from such wells, went about the cities crying out in their own language, The gift of God! The gift of God! R3496:2

Thou wouldst have asked -- While physically he was weary, and needed the natural water, yet in a higher sense the woman was the weary one, heavy-laden with sin, who needed the invigorating water of life of which our Lord himself is the fountain. R2423:5

Let us offer the water of life to all as opportunities may present themselves. R1712:4

He would have given -- Hungry and thirsty, yet dispensing living bread. R1063:2*

Living water -- Flowing water, not stagnant, always fresh. R2574:6, 2423:6

Not the holy Spirit, for this is distinctly termed the gift of the Father, and is symbolized by the anointing oil. The water of life is the truth, which both cleanses and refreshes. R2423:6

Water is a symbol of truth. The invitation is to accept or partake of the favor of everlasting life through obedience to the truth. R1363:3, 1878:3

The truth which brings to us the privilege of manifesting faith and obedience, and thus "laying hold on eternal life," is called the "water of life" and the "bread of life." E386

The river of water of life does not flow at the present time; it cannot flow out to the "nations" until all the Little Flock as well-springs shall be brought together in the Kingdom. R2424:4; HG410:5

John 4:11

Thou hast nothing -- The woman's slowness of comprehension is striking. Our Lord's patience as a teacher, with a congregation of only one, and that one a woman of a low caste, should be a lesson to all of his followers who seek to distribute to others a taste of the water of life.

R2424:1

She perceived that our Lord was not provided with the necessary bucket and cord. R4103:6

The well is deep -- The well from which our Lord gives us to drink is deep, nor have we anything to draw with. Under the new dispensation of the holy Spirit we are abundantly supplied--"The spirit searcheth all things, yea the deep things of God." (1 Cor. 2:10) R2575:2

John 4:12

Our father Jacob -- Notwithstanding their rejection by the Jews from heritage in the Abrahamic Covenant, they nevertheless trusted in some blessing. R2423:6

These Gentiles, through contact with the Jews, and through intermarriage with certain renegade Jews, obtained a smattering of knowledge of the Jewish hopes and worship, combining these to some extent with false ideas of their own. R2574:1

Their belief in God, and the fact that they worshipped the true God, did not constitute them proper subjects for the Gospel call. R2423:2

Israelites, mixed and mingled with the Gentiles, abandoning the sign of circumcision in the flesh, ceased to be Israelites, being as much strangers to the Covenant as any other Gentiles. R2423:6

Thus, from our Lord's treatment of the Samaritans, we can readily see the baselessness of the expectation of some who style themselves "Anglo-Israelites" and claim to be descendants of deported Israelites who abandoned circumcision. R2424:1

Jesus answered -- Again our Lord tactfully ignored the question in the woman's interest--not to deceive her or take advantage of her, but for her benefit, leading her mind from the natural water to the spiritual.

R4131:1, 2474:6

Shall thirst again -- Errors, falsities, may satisfy temporarily the craving of those who have never yet tasted of the truth, the water of life. R2424:2

Thirst is desire, craving, longing. Physical thirst is said to be much more painful than physical hunger. There is also a soul-thirst and a water of life which alone can satisfy it. R2574:6

As our physical systems call for water continually and cannot do without it, so we have longings and ambitions and thirsts of a higher intellectual order. These the world is endeavoring to satisfy, but the thirst for wealth, influence and power is insatiable. R3496:3

A man's greatness is measured (1) by the number of his thirsts; (2) by the character or quality of those thirsts; (3) by the capacity and intensity of those thirsts. R2574:6

Alexander the Great wept that there were no more worlds that he might conquer. Solomon, after having tasted of all the streams of pleasure and novelty, cried out, Vanity of vanities, all is vanity! (Eccl. 1:2) R3496:3

John 4:14

Shall never thirst -- Nothing can give permanent, lasting satisfaction, except the truth. R2424:2 Those who drink of it have no cravings for the vain philosophies of men which make void the Word of God. We are still drinking, but we shall soon be satisfied--when we awake in his likeness in the first resurrection. R1703:4

The lesson of life is not that we should be without desires and plenty of them, but that these desires should be transformed from sinful desires to righteous desires. R2575:1

Improper longings are to be resisted, controlled, rooted out, while proper longings are to be built up, cultivated, to be supplied and to be enjoyed forever. R2575:1

What the whole world is seeking for and failing to get, our Lord Jesus gives to his people--water of life, satisfaction. R3496:4

In him -- Each believer. R2507:6

A well of water -- Immortality. R5865:5

Fountains of truth for others. R2424:2

Water in its purity is a fit symbol of Christ our Life. Here at the laver, the new life of the Christian begins. R117:4,5*

The laver of the Jewish age was but the brazen laver of the Tabernacle, and later Solomon's brazen sea; now in the Gospel age it is a well of water in each believer's heart, overflowing many times; then, in the Millennial age, this pure water of life will flow wide and deep from out of the city and over the world. R118:1*

The Bride is to become a "partaker of the divine nature." She is to have within her "a well of living water [life] springing up," while the rest of mankind may come to the fountain to drink. (Rev. 7:17) R252:4

God's grace, at the present time, is not comparable to a river, but a well of water springing up, and those Christians in whom God's grace is a fountain of life and refreshment are comparatively few. R2507:6

Each true follower of Jesus is a "well of water springing up unto everlasting life." By and by when these well-springs are all brought together and united with our Lord, then the Bride and Bridegroom will constitute the great river of life or water of life. (Rev. 22:1) Q750:2,

823:2; R3410:5, 1703:1; CR216:3

Springing up -- A perennial well-spring continually rising up in her heart. R1703:1

The "water of life" is now in his followers a "spring" of truth, grace and everlasting life. The Father hath life in himself, and has granted unto the Son life in himself, that he might share this life with his disciples.

R5088:6, 1642:4

You have a well-spring in your heart if you have the begetting of the holy Spirit. CR216:3

John 4:15

Give me this water -- Evidencing by the quickness with which she grasped the presentation and her eagerness to get the living water that she was no ordinary woman. R4131:1

John 4:16

Jesus saith -- Again he turned the subject. It was necessary that the woman should appreciate the fact that she was a sinner and under the death sentence. R4131:1

Not answering her request for the true water of life (1) because the time had not yet come; (2) she was a Samaritan and could not receive divine favor until the appointed time; and (3) she was not yet in the condition of heart to receive the water of life. It was only necessary to explain the latter which she could the more readily understand. R2575:2

While he could not invite her, a Samaritan, to a place in the Kingdom, he could nevertheless appropriately give her some food for thought which later on might do her good and prepare her to have a hearing ear. R2423:3

Our Lord was willing to confer with her, though she was unprepared to receive the blessings (1) because he was making the fullest use of an opportunity; (2) despite her sinful course, he saw traits of honesty in her character; and (3) he might reasonably hope that six years later, when there was no restriction to Gentiles, she might inquire further. R2575:3

Not thy husband -- Many Christian people would utterly disdain to speak to such a woman because they have imbibed the spirit of their religious teachings, that God delivers such over to the devil. They need a clearer knowledge respecting God's attitude toward sinners. R2574:5

John 4:19

The woman saith -- Shrewdly she led the conversation from matters too personal to herself, and our Lord did not follow up the subject, but left it. Many need to learn this lesson of first awakening a consciousness of sin, and then leaving it to work at greater leisure. It is not for us to break hearts, but to find those who are broken-hearted. R4131:2

Anxious to avoid any discussion of her own character and life, she skillfully turned the question to a theological one. Men and women today would rather discuss theological and denominational problems, than turn their glance inward and note the inconsistencies of their own lives.

R2575:5

Yet she feared him not. She fled not from him. His kindness, his gentleness, his willingness to talk to a Samaritan woman, indicated that she had found a friend. R4131:2

John 4:20

Our fathers worshipped -- They realized that the Jews had been God's favored people, but thought of them as rejected from divine favor and of themselves as having become their successors, not only in possessing the land of Samaria, but also in some degree successors in the blessing of Abraham, Isaac and Moses. R3495:3

In this mountain -- Holding that the simplicity of worship observed by Abraham, Isaac and Jacob without tabernacle or temple, but in the mountain, was the proper method of approach to God. They apparently thought that Israel had drifted into a mere formalism of worship. R2069:5
The Samaritans, being excluded by the Jews, claimed that they had something better--the very mountain in which Jacob worshipped God. R4130:3
The Samaritans today [1887] think that they are now living in the age of "apostasy," which will only end with the appearance of Taheb, the Messiah, who will re-establish worship on Gerizim in its pristine purity. R906:5*

In Jerusalem -- Pious Jews sought to come at least once every year to the Temple in Jerusalem to present themselves before the Lord for his blessing. R2069:3

John 4:21

Jesus saith -- Our Lord did not closely press the moral question. It is sufficient that attention be called to a wrong. This is more efficacious than if they be teased and angered and put on the defensive. R2575:5

The hour cometh -- That hour began after the Jewish house had been left desolate, after the new dispensation had been inaugurated; and it still continues. R4131:3

Nor yet at Jerusalem -- During past times he did indeed prescribe forms of worship and times and places, but now all that come unto the Father "in spirit and in truth" through Christ are accepted. R4131:4

Our Lord was not bent on making of her a Jewish proselyte. The time for that was past. The harvest time had come. R4131:3, 2070:2

While it is true that forms and ceremonies are not commanded, on the other hand some of the Lord's people fall through ignoring all regularity in prayer, with too little formality in approaching the throne of grace, without a sufficiency of humility and reverence. R4131:4, 2071:6

Ye worship -- While the Samaritans were not typical, we find in spiritual Israel some like the Samaritans--strangers from the covenants and promises because not of the same family, not begotten again of the holy Spirit. R4131:5

Ye know not what -- Our Lord makes it clear that up to that time the Jews were right in their place and manner of worship. It was according to divine law; while the Samaritans were guided not by the divine Word, but by their own impressions. R2069:6

Not being of the stock of Israel they were in no sense of the word heirs of the Abrahamic Covenant. Not discerning this cardinal truth in its true light, they were confused as to every feature of the divine plan. R4131:5
Not one in ten of the members of the nominal church know what they believe or why they believe it. HG371:5

Undoubtedly, this is true of the majority of worshipers of all various sects and creeds. They exercise the organ of veneration, partly under the impulse of fear, but without particular desire to become acquainted with Jehovah. SM79:2

In our conversation on religious subjects with those corresponding to the Samaritans, it may not be using wisdom to say, "Ye worship ye know not what," even though this be strictly true. R4131:6

Rejection of the doctrine of eternal torment as the punishment for sin, and the supposition that that doctrine is taught in the Scriptures, is the foundation for the skepticism which has spread so far as to undermine their entire faith. R3905:3

We know -- Making clear that up to that time the Jews were right in their place and manner of worship. R2069:6, 5321:5

The Temple at Jerusalem was called the house of God, and the people went up to the Temple to pray. Apparently it was generally understood that they might not pray anywhere and everywhere. Jesus here intimates that the Jews were right in this claim. R5200:3

The Jews. R3468:3, 2684:2

The Jews understood that they were the natural seed of Abraham, and that from them must come the great Messiah. R4131:5

"We Jews may worship God because, under the divine covenant made with our nation, we have the privilege of coming to God in prayer, and of having God hear and answer prayer. We are worshipping according to God's directions." R5321:5

Salvation -- The blessing of mankind through an opportunity of a deliverance from the curse by the promised seed of Abraham. R2069:6

Of the Jews -- He did not say, For the Jews, nor, To the Jews exclusively. It was of them in the sense that the Master was of that nation according to the flesh, the Messiah could not have been born of any other nation. R4131:5

Christ, his apostles, and all the remnant were Jews. They received the holy Spirit and became the light beams to the Gentiles. R66:1*

The Jewish "remnant" were the nucleus around which the gospel Church was afterward gathered. R25:1*

In order that his special typical dealings with them as a people should work them no injury, for the Jew was under a special law and its special condemnation. R970:4

John 4:23

The hour cometh -- The hour came with Pentecost, and the time has continued for the past eighteen centuries, in which these sons of God have been permitted to worship God in spirit and in truth. R2071:1

A great dispensational change was imminent, in which all distinctions and barriers of place and manner would pass away. R2575:5

Worship the Father -- Worship is that outward manifestation of reverence for holy things which is pleasing to God, if done in a proper manner and from the right motive. But it is possible to assume the attitude of worship, and yet not offer worship that would be acceptable to God. R5321:1
Not simply prayer, praise, supplication and thanksgiving, but rather a life of worship--a life in which, through the begetting of the spirit and knowledge of the divine plan, the individual becomes so at-one with God that it is his meat and drink to do the Father's will. R2071:6, 5480:1

When praying, we must come only in the name of Christ; and we must come thoughtfully and earnestly. R5835:3, 5480:1

In spirit -- The new dispensation will be a spirit dispensation, and those who in that dispensation will draw near to God and be accepted of him must worship him in spirit and in truth. R2070:2

Those who delight to do God's will, to serve his cause, even at the cost of sacrifice to earthly interests. R4715:6

We might have the truth, but if we did not go to him in spirit--in the right attitude of heart--our worship would not be acceptable, no matter how much we might know. R5321:2

Those who are appreciative of God's character should desire to have this character-likeness. R5082:4

Those to whom God wishes to grant eternal life are those who will gladly obey his laws. R4991:5

He would not compel our loyalty; he seeketh not the worship of slaves, or any compulsory work or service. R2287:2, 4400:3, 770:2

The Christian learns to love his God and to wish to do the Father's will only. Nothing is acceptable in the nature of a sacrifice that is not prompted by that love. R4841:5

It would be contrary to this principle to define prayer as a duty, and to stipulate a set time or place or a formal manner. R4984:4, 799:3

Church buildings of today are more for pride and show than to glorify God.

Let us not be deceived with vain pretensions of earthly glory; but, shunning these things, let us remember that wherever two or three are met together in the Lord's name, that is the house of the Lord. (Matt. 18:20)

R2010:5

Whatever is given to the Lord's service should be given with a free hand and a ready heart. It is a privilege to give to the Lord and his cause; for the Almighty is not poor, that he should need our gifts. R5781:3, 2511:2

Take for instance, Nathanael. Notice how the Lord addressed him as an Israelite indeed in whom was no guile. (John 1:47) R2071:1

And in truth -- Intelligently. R5082:4

A knowledge of the truth is essential before we can worship in spirit and in truth. As a spirit of worship without the truth is not sufficient or accepted, much more a knowledge of truth is not sufficient or acceptable without a spirit of worship. R2191:5

A man might be a heathen and yet have a great deal of the spirit of worship, but he could not render acceptable worship unless he had the truth. R5321:2

Cornelius had the right heart intention to come near to God, but God did not accept him at that time because he did not have the truth. R5321:2

He had neither the truth nor the spirit of the truth which would have permitted him to offer any higher worship than that of fear and obedience.

R2071:4

The truth which was sent to Cornelius is the essential thing we must all have to come near to God and be acceptable--that, though he was a sinner, God had provided in Jesus a Redeemer, a sanctification for sin. R5321:2

"In vain do they worship me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men." (Matt. 15:9) R2079:1

God's creatures need to know him well and truly in order to appreciate him and in order to have confidence in his gracious promises. Such a knowledge is necessary to a true worship such as the Lord appreciates. NS503:5

Seeketh such -- For joint-heirship with their Redeemer in the Kingdom.

HG447:6

The whole mission of the Gospel may be properly understood to be for the purpose of seeking out from amongst mankind in general these true worshipers. R2071:5

Any who will not worship from this motive shall eventually be destroyed.
R5429:5

The call is not to an outward gloss of morality, nor to an earthly church membership, but a call to saintship, to a full consecration of heart and life to the Lord. R3899:4

Not such as are moved by fear or dread; on the contrary, such as worship from a heart appreciation of his glorious character and wonderful plan of salvation through Jesus. NS344:4

Those who delight to do his will, those who delight to serve his cause, even at the cost of sacrifice to earthly interests. Q553:5

In the end, even with the world, only such will be finally approved and be granted life eternal beyond the Millennial age. R4410:6; CR431:2

Such as both love and trust him. F147

To worship him -- There is undoubtedly danger that some might render too much honor to human instruments whom God is pleased to use in connection with the service of the truth--a danger of man-worship. (Rev. 22:9) R2079:5

We want no homage or reverence for ourselves or our writings, nor do we wish that any should be called by our name, nor would we have our writings revered or regarded as infallible, or on a par with the holy Scriptures. R2080:4

Let us resolve that we will worship only the Lord our God--that we will neither worship nor serve sectarianism in any of its many forms, nor mammon with its many enticements and rewards, nor fame, nor friends, nor self. R2497:4

Thus the Apostle Paul's ministry was summed up by his accusers: "This fellow persuadeth men to worship God contrary to the Law." (Acts 18:13) R2071:5

John 4:24

God is a Spirit -- A spirit being of unlimited power, who can read the very thoughts and intents of our heart. R4410:6

A spirit being; invisible to men, mighty, powerful, and influential. He is an intelligent power. CR398:2 The Scriptures distinctly tell us that a spirit has not flesh and blood, as we have; but they as distinctly inform us of the divine personality, and use the members and qualities of the human body to bring the Creator within range of our apprehension. SM623:1; OV2:4

Intellectuals are accepting the thought of an impersonal God. From our standpoint this is tantamount to saying, "There is no living and true God." SM621:3; OV1:2

To have no personal God must eventually signify to the reasoning mind no law-giver, no judge, no justice, no love, no mercy, no personal relationship as between father and child. Thus would be lost the very basis of Christian faith and doctrine. SM624:1; OV2:6

The Bible makes no attempt to describe heaven itself, or its inhabitants, merely saying that "God is a Spirit." Men must discern God in his works, the noblest of which is perfect man, made in his moral likeness, on the earthly plane. R4966:4

God has not implanted a spark of this spirit, or immortal divinity, in man through their first parents, but man was created a fleshly likeness of his Creator, who is a spirit being. E310

In spirit -- Honest-hearted. R4410:6 Any who do not desire at heart to have communion with God would not be welcome at the throne of grace. Any who merely pray in a formalistic manner are not heard at all, and might better not pray at all. NS675:1; R3805:2

With the heart, sincerely. R2575:5

While men might be deceived with outward pretensions, God looks upon the heart, and accepts only the soul's desires. NS673:1

It is only with your mind that you can worship God in a way he will be pleased with. Many people worship God in an outward form, and their hearts are far from him. CR398:3

And in truth -- In harmony with the divine arrangement, in the true way--through Christ. R2575:5

No one can possess the spirit of the truth without having considerable of the letter of the truth upon fundamental principles. R2079:4

Every error hides some truth; every misunderstanding of the character of God or of the fundamental features of his plan is so much to hinder men from becoming to the fullest extent possible worshippers of God. R2079:3

Not such as could not do otherwise, and not such as would do so under constraint, but such who do so voluntarily, from love and appreciation of his principles of righteousness, and of himself, which these represent. E468; R5758:1

Not those who need to be forced; we are to work to the best of our ability. R5119:1

And not such as are frightened into his service. B30; SM65:2

Can we "worship in spirit and truth" the God who the creeds tell us arranged for all to be born damned, either to purgatory or to eternal torment? Could we respect his honesty if he labeled this "good tidings of great joy to all people"? (Luke 2:10) NS862:4; R2079:2

Although they might bow the knee in fear and submission, they would find it impossible to bow down their hearts in full acquiescence. R2079:3

John 4:25

Messias cometh -- Her people accepted the five books of Moses, and from them drew their hope of a coming Messiah. R906:2*

John 4:26

Am he -- Showing clearly that our Lord was the Messiah, the long-promised seed of Abraham. R5300:5

Our Lord expressed to her more plainly, perhaps, than to any other person during his ministry, the great fact that he was the Messiah. R4132:1
4:28

Saith to the men -- The selfish spirit which would have bidden her to keep the information to herself, or the slothful spirit which would not bestir itself to inform others--either one would have marked the woman as unworthy of the Lord's favor. R4132:2

I have meat -- "The hidden manna." (Rev. 2:17) R1820:6, 1957:6

The same kind of spiritual food which Mary appreciated more than Martha, when Jesus said "Mary hath chosen that good part." NS86:4

John 4:34

My meat -- As the burnt-offering represents the value of Christ's work in the Father's estimation, so the meat offering sets forth his perfect human character and conduct. R84:1*

"Man shall not live by bread alone." Our meat is to do the will of God. To ask to be relieved from the legitimate effects of that course would be out of harmony with the very spirit of sacrifice. R1689:6

To do the will -- Though tempted in all points like as we are, he ignored his own will and all suggestions from others contrary to God's plan and obeyed God implicitly. Therein lay the secret of his success. R1125:5; HG292:6

The supreme principle upon which we have to run our lives is to adhere, through good report and ill, through temptation, prosperity and adversity, to the will of God, wherever that may lead us. R2694:3*

That was his life, and if we partake of his life on earth, we shall be partakers of his resurrection life. R327:6*

Him that sent me -- The title of the Son of God officially applied to the man Christ Jesus before his birth, and this title he continually approved. NS256:6

The Son claims no higher honor than to be the Father's agent and messenger. HG297:2 The Son never attempted to diminish the Father's glory, but always to add to it. R920:4

To finish his work -- The finishing work was the harvest, and, so far as related to the Jews, in favor, it ended when Jesus had left their house desolate and said, "It is finished." (John 19:30) R27:1*

He was superintending a finishing work, which he calls reaping or harvest. R114:6*

Later he says, "I have finished the work which thou gavest me to do."
(John 17:4) R116:4*

God is the great master workman and Jesus is the great chief agent in doing all the work God intended should be done. CR346:3

John 4:35

Say not ye -- Jesus is again due to be present; say not now that there are yet many years and then cometh harvest. R600:2

Then cometh harvest -- Greek, therismos, reaping harvest. R223:1*
A time of reaping rather than of sowing, a time of testing, of reckoning, of settlement and of rewarding. C135

Each dispensation ends, not only with an advent of Christ, but with a harvest. HG52:2

The harvest of the Jewish age being a type of the harvest of this age, observation and comparison of the various features of that harvest afford very clear ideas concerning the work to be accomplished in the present harvest. C135

I say unto you -- He directs through the Word by opening the understanding to discern the times and seasons there indicated, and the work to be accomplished therein. R600:3

The fields -- The seed of which had been sown by Moses and the prophets. B233

They are white -- Truths, as harvest sunshine, are warm and strong, and tend to ripen the wheat. They also lead, through a clearer knowledge of the truth, to a separation between the wheat and the tares. R1073:6

If the sowing has been a general one with a view to the gathering of the Lord's Little Flock from every nation, people, kindred and tongue, we must expect the harvest work to be similarly broad, widely extended. R4000:2

Already to harvest -- To the Jewish house Jesus presented himself as Reaper; to the Christian house he does the same. B238

John 4:36

He that reapeth -- Our Lord's special teachings were such as to gather the wheat, who were such already, and to separate the chaff of the Jewish nation from the wheat. C135

All of the Lord's people filled with his spirit must be engaged in harvest work in some manner--using their abilities and opportunities. R2490:5

Being already in the "harvest" time, harvest work should engage the time, service and thoughts of the Lord's servants, who now, like the disciples at the first advent, are to do the reaping work. B365

Let us fear lest having an opportunity of laboring in the harvest field any of us should miss that opportunity through any disinterestedness. CR309:5

Each one desiring to reap should first see what lies nearest to his hand and in which department of the service he could most effectively and most economically enlist his talents. R3985:5

The separation of the true wheat from the mere professors, the tares, goes on as quietly but as surely as a similar separation did in the end of the Jewish age. R1073:6

Receiveth wages -- Every day. Everyone who is doing any service ought to look for his wages every day and see that he gets them before he goes to bed--the blessing and joy of the Lord in his heart, the wages of his favor and an appreciation of the fact that they are near to him. CR63:6 Even our smallest services are sure to be blessed and owned by our loving Lord.

R2457:5

Whoever would serve the Lord would be intent on serving the brethren; and the more their need, the better the opportunity; and the greater our zeal the greater our results for others, and the greater the blessing for ourselves. R5824:1

Let us fear that if we don't reap enough, we cannot get as much wages as we hope to get. CR309:5

Unto life eternal -- To the glory, honor and immortality to which we have been called. NS713:6

John 4:37

Another reapeth -- Many laborers, though anxious to be at work, seem not to know whether to sow or reap. Perhaps they want to sow and reap at the same time. Failing to comprehend God's plan, they work haphazardly, as they suppose God is doing. R628:4*

John 4:38

I sent you -- The work done by Jesus and his apostles amongst the Jews eighteen centuries ago was a harvesting work. R4968:3

The Lord at the present time is the great reaper and supervisor of this harvest. NS713:5

To reap -- The harvest of the fruitage of the Jewish age. R4968:3

To reap the fruits of those centuries of effort, and to test the people by the message, "The Kingdom of heaven is at hand" (Matt. 10:7), and the King is present. C136

Our chief work is where the Gospel has already been proclaimed, this being the harvest of the Gospel age. R4360:2

Ye bestowed no labor -- The plowing and sowing connected with the Jewish dispensation was in the far past: the Egyptian bondage served to do a plowing work; the giving of the Law and the exhortation of their prophets, all constituted a seed-sowing, harrowing and cultivating experience.

SM185:2

Other men -- The patriarchs, prophets and other holy men of old. C136; R4891:3, 628:4*, 580:2, 263:5, 19:6

Other saints have labored faithfully in the past, sowing the precious seed which we are now privileged to help in harvesting. R877:1

After his resurrection, Christ sent his disciples into all the world to preach the gospel of the Kingdom--a sowing work. R628:4*

Into their labors -- Whether it was at the beginning, or now at the close of the age--the time of the reaping--it is all one work, and there is one purpose being served, the gathering of the elect. R5302:2

While the Lord's work was that of reaping, he blended it with a sowing. R5018:3, 4891:3; C135

As reapers of the fruitage of others' toil. NS626:3; R4360:2

John 4:39

The saying of the woman -- Women, as well as men, are accountable to God for the use of the talents in the Church, be they many or be they few.

R1549:2

John 4:40

He abode there -- In Acts 8 and 9:31 we have clear indication that the work of grace flourished amongst the Samaritans after the door of opportunity was open to them. No doubt this later fruitage developed from the words of grace and truth which our Lord dropped on the occasion of the visit here referred to. R4132:3

John 4:43

Into Galilee -- In one sense a better field for labor than Judea because the people, while outwardly less religious, were more ready to receive the Lord, being less shackled with sectarianism and the burdens of the law imposed by the teachings of the Pharisees. R4132:3

John 4:44

Hath no honor -- It may have been in recognition of this proverb that our Lord commenced his ministry at Jerusalem rather than in Galilee.

R3494:2

It is a trait of human nature to lightly esteem things with which we are intimately acquainted. "Distance lends enchantment to the view." R2424:3, 3494:2

When a hero or saint is seen to be like an ordinary man--weak where others are strong or ignorant of some things that others know--it is almost impossible to recognize him as a hero or saint. The Lord's people must look over these things and recognize the relationship to the Lord before we can "love as brethren." R3494:3

Our Lord did not begin his ministry in Nazareth where almost 28 years of his life had been spent and where consequently, he was well-known to the people. R2579:1

Received him -- He had honor amongst his own countrymen because of his fame in Judea, and hence they received him more respectfully than they otherwise might have done. R3494:2

Things that he did -- It seems probable that after his first miracle at Cana he was in Judea for the feast of the Passover, and at that time performed many notable miracles, on account of which his fame went abroad. R2424:3, 3494:1

For instance, Julius Caesar, who by all the world is acknowledged to have been a great man, was lightly esteemed by Cassius, his intimate friend and servant. His closeness hindered him from seeing the greatness which others, less close, could readily discern. R2424:6

At Jerusalem -- Jerusalem was the representative city of that nation, and properly enough our Lord's principle miracles and teachings would thence reach the whole people better than from any other location. R3494:2

John 4:46

A certain nobleman -- The word rendered "nobleman" in this text might more literally be rendered "king's officer," and the supposition of some is that this was Chuza, Herod's steward, whose wife, Joanna, was one of the women who subsequently ministered to Jesus. R4132:6

Jairus, an influential man and a ruler in the synagogue, was no doubt acquainted with this nobleman. His knowledge of this case no doubt helped to increase his own faith in the Lord's power manifested in the healing of his daughter. (Mark 5:22-24, 35-43) R2617:1

At Capernaum -- About twenty miles distant from Cana. R2425:1

John 4:47

He went unto him -- Faith must grow, and before it can grow it must lead to some kind of works. Chuza's primary faith led to his journey to our Lord, by which he attested his faith. But generally there must be a necessity, as in Chuza's case--his son's illness. R4133:3

John 4:48

Except ye see -- Testing his faith. Evidently this was a refusal of the nobleman's request, and had his faith been slight, he probably would have accepted it thus. R3494:4, 4132:6, 2425:1

Often the Lord does not answer our prayers immediately, but, delaying the answer, tests our faith. He is pleased to have us hold on to him by faith.

R3494:5

Will not believe -- Implying that the highest order of faith would be that which would not require such ocular demonstrations of divine power, that could trust the Lord without the proofs of miracles. R3495:5

John 4:49

Ere my child die -- "Don't, please don't, wait to discuss a matter of faith. Realize my position as a father and my interest in the subject--do come now." R4133:1

John 4:50

Thy son liveth -- Having tested his faith and made it stronger, our Lord answered the request and healed the son, but in a manner calculated to still further strengthen his faith. R3494:5

When the Lord does grant our requests, the blessings frequently come to us through a different channel or in a different manner from what we had in mind. R3494:5

Our Lord did not heal all the sick nor awaken all the dead. That great work belongs to the future, to the Millennial Kingdom. What he did do in these directions was merely to illustrate his power. R3494:6

It is part and parcel of the laws of nature that the will should control and direct the human system. Likewise the divine mind or will has control, not only of the divine being, but also of all things in the universe.

R3495:2

The man believed -- His faith brought him a still greater blessing than the physical recovery of his son's health, for it made him and his family "believers" in the Messiah, and thus brought them within reach of the great privilege of sonship and joint-heirship. R2425:2

And he went -- The nobleman received the blessing through faith, and his faith was attested by his conduct. So must it be with all who would be acceptable to God. R2425:4, 3494:5

John 4:52

Yesterday -- It may be assumed that Chuza came the 25 miles on horseback that very morning in great haste. He might have returned the same evening at the same speed, but he does not arrive at home until the next day, evidently taking the journey leisurely. R4133:2

The seventh hour -- 1:00 p.m. R4133:2

The fever -- Quite probably there were many others in Capernaum similarly afflicted, as the city was built near low, marshy ground, and is noted in history as a malarial locality, unhealthful. R2425:2

John 4:53

Himself believed -- Did he not believe before, when he started to see the Master, when he was speaking with him, when he accepted his reply and started home? Yes, but it led to a belief in the Lord of a still higher and still deeper kind--not only that Jesus was able to work miracles, but that he was the Messiah. R4133:2

And his whole house -- No doubt it was as a result of this that his wife, Joanna, in harmony with his wishes, became one of the active supporters of our Lord's ministry. R4133:2

John 5

John 5:1

There was a feast -- Probably the Feast of the Passover. R2433:3
These annual gatherings constituted the very best opportunity for reaching the devout Jews from all parts of the Holy Land, and from surrounding countries. R2433:3

When, by reason of the multitudes gathered from every part, the Jewish leaders who sought his life would think it unwise to make any demonstration against him for fear of a riotous disturbance. R4137:3

Jesus went up -- Drawn thither, according to the Jewish usage, to celebrate one of the great annual feasts. R3501:1

John 5:2

A pool -- Today known as the "Pool of the Virgin." R2433:3

Bethesda -- The word Bethesda signifies "House of Mercy." R3500:3
God's tabernacle in the Millennial age will be a house of mercy, not merely for the elect few, but God, through his elect Church--the Christ, head and body--shall "bless all the families of the earth." (Gen. 12:3)
R3502:1

Having five porches -- Built for a public sanitarium for the benefit and convenience of those who desired to use the agitated pool. R3500:6
This scene is compared to historical accounts of the bath of Ibrahim, near Tiberias, on the sea of Galilee, and to the crowds at the grotto of Lourdes. R3501:1

John 5:3

Impotent folk -- Their infirmities are indicated to have been something akin to rheumatism, paralysis and other muscular or nervous ailments, causing lack of vital power, withering or wasting of the muscles. R4137:5
Waiting for -- Old Greek MSS (the Sinaitic and the Vatican) omit these last seven words of verse 3 and all of verse 4, quite probably added as a marginal note explanatory of the views held by the people, or possibly the thought of the copyist who made the marginal note. R3500:6, 2433:3

An angel -- The phenomenon not being understood, many considered that the agitation of the pool was miraculous, attributing it to an angel from heaven. R3500:3

This portion is not accurate and is not found in the oldest manuscripts, and is appropriately omitted from the Revised Version. R4137:5

Troubled the water -- It is presumed that the spring which supplied the pool was connected with a reservoir of gas, which really imparted to the water some curative property. Or possibly it was connected with a siphoning spring which overflowed at times. R4137:5, 3500:3, 2433:3

Travelers whose word is reliable declare that they have seen this spring rise twelve inches in five minutes, and then subside about as quickly. R2433:3

First -- Suggesting that the benefit was from the gases, since only those who entered immediately were profited by it. The impregnating gases, upon entering the pool, would speedily be combined with the atmosphere. The first to enter would also benefit by inhaling some of the escaping gases--ozone. R3500:3

Made whole -- Partly by the energizing influence of faith and partly by some medicinal quality imparted to the waters by the gases. The cures effected by it would cause the pool to have considerable fame. R3500:3

John 5:5

A certain man -- The miracles performed by Jesus and the apostles were not attempts to heal all sickness, to banish pain and sorrow. There was a great multitude of impotent folk at the pool of Siloam needing healing; Jesus merely observed one of that multitude. R4980:2, 4137:6, 3501:2; NS730:3

There was no record that he had more faith in the Lord than had the other ones about him. On the contrary, the context shows that he had no faith--that he did not even know the Lord, and did not learn until afterward who had healed him. R3501:5

We may not at first see why the Lord favors some more than others with the knowledge of his grace and truth, but we may assume that it lies in the direction of honesty of heart, repentance of sin and a "feeling after God." R3501:4

Since our Lord did not perform miracles for all the sick, neither are we to expect all the sick of today to be cured, either by natural means or by miraculous power. R3501:3

While there were many widows in Israel in the time of the famine, Elijah was only sent to the widow of Zarephath; while there were many lepers in Israel, Elisha healed of leprosy only Naaman, the Syrian. R3501:2

He was more helpless than the majority, and his case was apparently hopeless in that it was chronic, of 38 years' standing. R2433:6

John 5:6

Jesus saw him -- If such scenes of sorrow, pain and trouble touch our fallen hearts sensibly and deeply, how much more intense must have been the sympathy which our Lord experienced in the presence of such conditions. R3501:1

Wilt thou -- He thus let the matter depend upon his own will. So it is now with those who are now being healed of moral ailments, now being spiritually enlightened--the assistance is with themselves. R3501:5

Only those who will can be benefitted in this age. Our Lord testified again, "Ye will not come to me, that ye might have life" (verse 40). To come unto the Lord means to accept his arrangements, to answer his query, saying, Yes, Lord, I would be made whole. R3501:6

So, during the antitypical Sabbath, the Millennium, it will be declared to all the world that "whosoever will" may have life and health eternal if he will take the steps of faith and obedience. B40

Rise -- Our Lord did not even wait for him to manifest a previous faith in his power, but allowed the man's faith to be testified by his obedience. R2433:6

By these words the Lord awakened in the mind of the poor man desires and aspirations which had almost died out. He was almost heartsick from deferred hope. (Prov. 13:12) R4137:6

Take up thy bed -- Probably a very light mattress or comforter, after the custom of that time. There was no real labor connected with this injunction. R3502:2

His object in instructing the man to carry his bed was twofold: (1) the act of itself would be a witness to the miracle; not only directly, but (2) indirectly it would attract the attention of the doctors and scribes of the Law, because they had formulated certain restrictions respecting the Sabbath which were not Mosaic requirements. R3502:2

And walk -- One of 36 miracles, separately described, besides many others not individually reported, but in groups. Yet this was not our Lord's chief work, but incidental to his preaching. R4137:2, 3728:2, 3501:2

John 5:9

The sabbath -- So that the difference between his teaching and good works, and the teaching and no works of the Pharisees, would be more manifest. R3502:4

The Lord performed so many miracles on the Sabbath, not to signify any disrespect to the day, nor to provoke the Pharisees; rather, to point out the great seventh-day Sabbath, the Millennial day. R2434:1

John 5:13

Wist not -- He was too dazed and astounded to think of inquiring the name of his benefactor, or to offer him his thanks. R4137:6, 3502:4
Evidence that he was not a believer. HG404:1; SM570:T

Conveyed himself away -- Our Lord, not wishing to refuse the great multitude of sick ones there gathered, quietly withdrew, so that by the time the miracle was known the healer was not to be found. R3502:4

John 5:14

Afterward -- He did not first discuss the man's sins and inquire respecting his repentance and his turning over of a new leaf. He did not give him the blessing of healing on condition that he would become a servant of God. R4138:1

In the temple -- Corroborating the view that his healing was not accidental, merely because Jesus passed by, or an arbitrary election; but that this man, in his affliction, had been led to a repentance of sin, and as a consequence was specially favored of God. R4137:6, 3501:4

Sin no more -- Without chiding for the past, Jesus counseled him for the future. R4138:1

Prayer should be for the forgiveness of sins when sickness is a punishment, rather than for release from the punishment. If the sickness was a judgment, we should expect that when the sin has been confessed and fully repented of, the Lord would remove the chastisement, either partially or wholly. R2008:4

Those who now experience healing, doubtless will require healing for other ailments, and to some extent their freedom from sicknesses will depend upon their purity of life. R759:6

Healings were not performed upon those who were converts to the Lord; on the contrary they were performed on those who were pronounced sinners. HG403:6; SM569:2

Lest a worse thing -- Amongst the Jews serious sickness implied serious sins. R4980:3

The penalty for original sin has been a severe one, yet for this original sin God has provided a great atonement. But when thus liberated, a fresh responsibility is upon us. As the apostle declares, if we sin willfully after we have received a knowledge of the truth, there remaineth no more a sacrifice for sins. (Heb. 10:26) R3502:5

If, after being released and justified, we sin willfully and deliberately, we may expect nothing further in the way of divine mercy and forgiveness, the penalty is death without hope of recovery. R3502:6

John 5:16

Sought to slay him -- A parallel to the opposition manifested by present-day Christians, sectarians of the strictest sort; not that they would literally kill, but many would assassinate character, if thereby they could defend the falsities of their systems. R2434:1

John 5:17

My Father worketh -- God rested from his work of creation, although he did not abandon the work in his purpose--that of raising a Seed which would eventually deliver the race. R2434:5

Hitherto -- Before I came. R51:6*

I work -- Now, I work. R1685:2, 975:4, 27:2*

Now that I have come. R51:6*

Christ worketh now, as the Father worked hitherto. E395

The coming of Jesus in the flesh we regard as the dividing line between the two works referred to here by the Savior. R51:6*

The closing work of the Jewish age was the turning point between the work of the Father and of the Son. R27:2* God has been resting from creative work and will continue to do so until the close of the Millennium--leaving all the restitution work for Christ to do. R1685:2, 2434:5, 1609:6, 975:4 Separating the works of the Father and the Son, the life-privileges which come to the world come directly from the Son--he bought them with his own precious blood. R1006:5

The work of the Son will not be complete until all evil has been thoroughly subjugated, which will be at the close of the Millennial age. R2434:6

Not that he does a work distinct from the Father--"The Son can do nothing of himself" (verse 19); "As I hear I judge" (verse 30); "I am not alone." (John 8:16) R52:1*

John 5:18

God was his Father -- The Jews would have been afraid to call themselves sons of God, or to call him their Father. If they had spoken of themselves as sons of God, they would have thought that they were doing something reprehensible. R5219:2

The Jews never claimed to be sons of God, neither are they referred to in the Scriptures as such. No greater dignity than that of being servants of the Most High God could possibly have been dreamed of up to the time when our Lord himself announced the privilege of adoption to the new nature. R3476:2

Making himself equal -- Their anger was because, in claiming to be the Son of God, he was claiming an honor and place so much higher than themselves--implying a closeness of relationship and nature to Jehovah which they considered blasphemous. R2434:2

Nothing of himself -- A contradiction of the common thought of trinitarians, that the Son is the Father. R2434:3, 2408:4

Would any say of the Father, "the Father can do nothing of himself?" R803:1

What he seeth -- These words were used in connection with the healing of the sick. They do not, of course, mean that the Lord had seen the Father healing the sick, but that he had seen the Father's will, the Father's plan. R5065:3

The Son likewise -- This is a oneness that results from having the same mind or spirit; it is the same oneness that should exist between a heart union of man and wife; they twain are one. R369:5

"There is no other God but one. To us there is but one God, the Father, of whom are all things, and we in him; and one Lord, Jesus Christ, by whom are all things, and we by him." (1 Cor. 8:4,6) E54

John 5:20

The Father loveth -- Greek, filio, has affection for. R2434:3

Filio, a love that is more or less respect, not for everybody; it represents more of an individual or family love. R3949:5

All things -- Including "judgment" (v. 22) and "raising up the dead" (verses 21, 29). R51:6*

John 5:21

And quickeneth -- A word not in general use today, but signifying to make alive. NS336:2

To quicken is to make alive, and the double statement gives emphasis to the idea of life by resurrection. R27:2*

The Son quickeneth -- Not referring to the awakening of Lazarus, the son of the widow of Nain or the daughter of Jairus; rather, our Lord was looking down to the future--to the resurrection of the Church in glory and the subsequent resurrection of the world during the Millennial age. R2434:3 By giving to justice the price of their liberty from divine condemnation, he secured the legal right to cancel the sentence of condemnation to death against them, and hence the right to resurrect or restore to life. HG292:5

Whom he will -- He wills to restore all who shall prove worthy; and to prove who are worthy of everlasting life is the object of the Millennial reign. HG292:5

The Son has been given the privilege of giving immortality to whomsoever he will--to the worthy ones constituting his elect Bride. HG752:2

John 5:22

The Father judgeth -- Greek, krino. This word is full of the thought of trial, or testing, or criticism; but it does not imply finality of decision. R2430:2

The judgment, criticism, or inspection represented by the word krino does not wait for the harvest. It is practically the only kind of judgment that has been in operation. The krino, trial or probationary judgment, as well as the krisis, or decision, is committed of the Father to the Son. R2430:4 The Church is the Body of Christ, and as such is collectively at the judgment seat of the Heavenly Father. Our Lord Jesus is not presented to us as our Judge, but rather as our Advocate before the Judge. R2426:2

In 2 Thess. 2:8-12 the statements respecting the Father's part and the Son's part are so intertwined as to prove that they are united in the one work of judgment--of the Father, by the Son. R2426:5

He does not judge distinct from the Son, for we read, "God hath appointed a day, in the which he will judge the world by that man whom he hath ordained" (Acts 17:31); and again of "God the Judge of all." (Heb. 12:13) R52:1*

No man -- It is because the Father has already judged all in Adam and condemned all to death, that he could not treat with sinners except through a Redeemer, who became a Mediator. R387:4

Up to the present time God has not been judging the world; that is, rewarding and punishing each act of mankind. HG234:3

Because we are in a fallen condition we are incapable of a trial at God's bar of absolute justice; by our best deeds none could be justified before him. E408

God, whose "work is perfect" (Deut. 32:4), could not recreate or awaken men in an imperfect condition. God does not judge imperfect man in any manner. He has provided Christ as the Judge of fallen men--to judge them in their imperfection and to bring them up to perfection. R1853:6

So far as the Father is concerned, the Adamic sin is forgiven and all claims under it are set over to the Redeemer, the Purchaser, our Lord Jesus. R1058:3

Implying that there is no judgment of any kind in progress by the Father directly during this Gospel age. R2430:3

But hath committed -- Or, transferred. R1058:3

He first proved him, and found him worthy of confidence, and then, having made known his plans to him, he committed to him their execution. R1550:2

Our Lord uttered these words before he had finished the work which the Father had given him to do at Calvary, but he spoke from the standpoint of that completed work. F397

It was from the moment of our Lord's resurrection that the Father committed all judgment unto the Son. It was then he declared, "All power [authority] in heaven and in earth is given unto me." (Matt. 28:18) F397

All judgment -- Greek, krisis. This word includes the thought of trial culminating in a decision that is final, irrevocable. R2430:2

As the legitimate father of the race, the race is fully in the hands of the Lord Jesus, to deal with absolutely and to judge of their worthiness or unworthiness of eternal life. This he already does for his Bride now. As the Father is the head of Christ, so Christ is the head of the Church, as the husband he is the head of the wife and the family. E457

In that judgment of the world he has promised to associate with himself the Bride class, whose judgment day is now in progress. R2434:4

The saints will be associated with the Lord in the work of judging those in process of purgation during the Millennium. That will be the only really Holy Inquisition (i.e., court of judicial inquiry on matters moral and spiritual). R1469:4

Christ and the Church will regulate the world's affairs, and see to it that every evil deed is punished and every good endeavor rewarded. The result will be: "When thy judgments are in the earth, the inhabitants of the world will learn righteousness." (Isa. 26:9) HG234:4

That this judgment of the world did not begin at our Lord's first advent, we have his own testimony: "I came not to judge the world," and again, "My Word shall judge you in the last day." (John 12:47,48). R2434:4

Though our Lord's mission at the first advent was not to judge, but to redeem the world, the testimony is unmistakable that, at his second advent he will judge the world, and his saints will be associate judges. R1383:6, 409:4

He will take mankind as he finds them and deal with each individual according to his own particular condition, adapting himself and the laws of his Kingdom to all the various peculiarities, blemishes and weaknesses as he finds them. F114

Unto the Son -- Though the Father had tried and sentenced Adam, and had now provided for the redemption in Christ, all future trial of the imperfect fallen race shall be conducted by the Son, who bought all with his own precious blood. (1 Pet. 1:19) R1287:1, 2269:5, 1068:2, 587:1
God purposed a redemption for Adam and his race through Christ. Thus the race of Adam was bought by Jesus, divine law was vindicated, and the race, by God's will, was in new hands for trial. R1983:6, 1853:6, 387:4
While the legal right to judge was secured through Christ's death, the process of its accomplishment will require considerable time. "God hath appointed a day [the thousand-year reign of Christ], in the which he will judge the world in righteousness by that man whom he hath ordained." (Acts 17:31) R1247:6

God will have no direct dealings with the world until the close of the Millennial Reign of Christ; the Son will deal with mankind throughout the Judgment Day of a thousand years. The great Mediator will be the "go-between," representing God to the world, and the world to God. CR486:1
When sin and Adamic death are wiped out, the dominion will be delivered up to God, even the Father, by the accountability of men being made thereafter directly to Jehovah, instead of to Jesus as during the Millennial age. R470:5; A142

But the Son does not exercise that crisis authority until the harvest, the end of this age. He then exercises crisis power in respect to the Church and the world. R2430:3

That the judgment will be fair and impartial is vouchsafed by the character of the Judge, by his perfect knowledge, by his unwavering justice and goodness, by his divine power, and by his great love. R722:2
Hence the Father, aside from his Son, did not judge the Ancient Worthies. R5073:3

There will never be another chance provided for any who have enjoyed a full chance in the present life and have despised it. But no man is competent to decide which of mankind have had, and which have not had, a full opportunity. Only the appointed Judge is authorized or capable of deciding this question. R2048:4

The new creatures are not competent to be judges one of another for two reasons: (1) few of them fully comprehend and appreciate the divine Law of Love governing all; and (2) few can read even their own hearts unerringly. F403

Honour the Son -- As the Father's agent and representative. HG297:2; R5922:6; OV351:4; Q770:2

The exalted Christ is to be honored, yea, worshipped, because the Father has highly exalted him. SM498:2

In proportion as we value the work of the Atonement, our reconciliation to God, in the same proportion will we esteem him whom the Heavenly Father set forth to be the propitiation for our sins. E83

In the work of creation God set forth the Son in great prominence and glory, saying, "Without him was not anything made that was made." (John 1:3) In the work of redemption and restitution, God has set him forth so prominently that his name is the theme on every tongue, almost to the eclipse of the Father's own glory. R3161:2

The honor to the Son is as the Father's appointed representative and agent in the great work. R2435:4

In acknowledging Christ and the Church and in bowing to them (Rom. 14:11; Phil. 2:9), the world will be bowing to Jehovah; for the Logos, Jesus, the Redeemer, forever will be the representative of the Father and his power. OV351:4; Q770:2

Nothing should be done except at his command. All power in heaven and earth was committed unto him. (Matt. 28:18) R2888:3 Although all things are of the Father in the sense that the original power and life proceeded from him, nevertheless all things are by the Son, in the sense that he, from the very beginning, has been the Father's active agent in every feature of the divine plan. R2199:5

Although Jehovah is the head of Christ, we see him delighting to honor his Son, for he is the Father's representative and the express image of his person. R1550:1

The Church is referred to as the daughter of the Father, and as the Bride, the Lamb's wife, and she is exhorted to reverence the King's Son as her Lord--"So shall the King greatly desire thy beauty; for he is thy Lord [Adon--not Jehovah] and worship thou him." (Psa. 45:11) E48

Although our Lord occupied the chief position next to the Father before he came into the world to be our Redeemer, yet he now occupies a still higher position. NS257:6

God had honored him by delivering to him the scroll of wisdom, and the power and authority to execute all of its provisions. (Rev. 5:5) R2156:2

"Worthy is the Lamb that was slain, to receive power, and riches, and wisdom, and strength, and honor, and glory, and blessing" (Rev. 4:11); a proclamation eventually joined in by "every creature." E37

The exaltation of our Lord Jesus Christ to glory, honor, power and dominion does not imply that the Heavenly Father abdicates the throne of heaven in his favor. E38

No suggestion that the Father is the Son and that the Son is his own Father, but quite to the contrary--that there are two persons, both Gods, both Creators, but the one the superior, the other his honored representative. R3475:1

Because he showed his obedience and his confidence, in that he humbled himself to become a man and tasted death for every man, therefore God highly exalted him. (Phil. 2:9) R1278:4

Although the Scriptures nowhere place the only-begotten and well-beloved Son of God on equality with Jehovah himself, either while here on earth, or as the Logos, yet now, in his highly exalted condition, he is partaker of the divine nature. R2408:3, 1231:1

We are not to honor ourselves, but to honor him whom the Father has honored, our Lord and our Head. R4115:3

As they honour -- We notice a oneness of honor. In honor, each seems to prefer the other. R3161:2

If it be remembered that it is "God in Christ reconciling the world to himself" (2 Cor. 5:19), it will be seen that we honor both the Father and the Son. R27:5*

They should not honor the Son instead of the Father, however. "My glory will I not give to another." (Isa. 42:8) SM498:2

Not honor the Son as the Father, but as the Father's direct representative, heir of all things. OV351:4

Neither did the apostles contradict the Lord and say that he was the Father, nor that he was equal with the Father. NS195:3

Although our Lord taught us to worship the Father and to pray, "Our Father, which art in heaven," nevertheless the general sentiment of Scripture seems to imply there will be nothing wrong in our addressing a petition to our Lord Jesus direct. R3911:6; Q734:6, 540:10

Prayers can be to the Father or the Son or both, for the Father, as well as the Son, loves us (John 16:27); and we have promise of communion with both (John 14:23); and both are to be worshipped and loved equally. R1580:6

Nowhere are we authorized to pray to the dead--either saints or sinners.

On the contrary the Scriptures set forth our Heavenly Father as the supreme object of worship, though they do intimate the propriety of praying to our Lord Jesus also. NS732:6

The Father -- God is first; our Lord Jesus is first to us, as the Head of the Church, because God has given him the preeminence. (Col. 1:18) In recognizing Jesus' full authority and headship of the Church, we are honoring him who appointed him, and thus we keep God first. R2985:3

He that heareth -- The judgment of the Church is here referred to. Those who now hear, believe and obey, have everlasting life promised, as a result of thus favorably passing the present judgment or trial. R2434:6

My word -- The Bible is God's Word because it reveals the Lord Jesus Christ and the great plan of salvation. Our Lord Jesus is the spirit of the Word. (2 Cor. 3:17) R21:2*

Hath everlasting life -- Equally true to say we have eternal life, or we are reckoned to so have. What the Lord promises, we will have. Illustrated by a person with a check saying he has the money, when what he really has is a promise to pay the money. Q263:1

From the standpoint of God's reckoning, the legal standpoint. They are now "saved by hope." From the standpoint of full accomplishment, Paul writes: "If ye live after the flesh, ye shall die; but if ye through the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live." (Rom. 8:24,13) R5931:2, 4298:5

They hold a sure title to this glorious liberty, which all the sons of God will possess when fully restored to the divine likeness. R1738:3
Those who are begotten of the Spirit are said to have begun their resurrection now, figuratively. (Rom. 6:4) NS336:1

Not come into -- While these sons are not to be spared from the polishing processes necessary to make them acceptable as sons, they are to be spared from the great time of tribulation and to escape the thousand years of judgment or trial coming upon the world. R2405:4

The Church will be receiving her reward when the world's individual crisis or judgment is in process. But the Church is not exempt from individual judgment; her crises takes place during the Gospel age. R669:5

They are counted already as having passed from death unto life, merely waiting for the time when, their course completed, they will be like their Lord and share his glory. (Rom. 6:5) Q137:1

Their present judgment will exempt them from any future judgment. R527:1*, 518:6*, 433:5*

"There is therefore now no condemnation [consequently no future judgment] to them that are in Christ Jesus. For the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus made me free from the law of sin and death." (Rom. 8:1,2 Rev. Ver.) R518:6*

Condemnation -- Greek, krisis, judgment, is here translated condemnation. F399; R669:5

This word signifies judgment, and is so rendered in the Revised Version. Compare 1 Cor. 11:32. R2435:1

Those who accept Christ here have their trial, or judgment, in this life; that is, the sentence of life is pronounced and they shall not have another trial. HG40:6

The great mass of mankind, outside the Household of Faith, are still under the original sentence--eternal death. NS6:3

The whole world, during the thousand years of Messiah's reign, will be in condemnation, and have the opportunity of coming out of the condemnation, rising up out of it and getting back into harmony with God. Q137:1

Judgment is not executed until after the trial, but the trial is the judgment, and with the saint ends at death. HG41:1

God will judge--grant trial to--the world in the next age, by Christ. R2398:5

Is passed -- Already, in advance of the world. F399; Q137:1

The present time, the present life, is to each of the consecrated ones his day of judgment, his day of trial, his day of testing--to determine whether or not he shall be accounted worthy of life. F399

From death unto life -- Justified by faith and obedience as members of his body. F399

Figuratively; but the real passing into life will be at the close of this age, at the Second Coming of Christ, in "the First Resurrection." NS582:6
The change is only a legal one. Actually, according to the flesh, they are still imperfect. But, by divine arrangement, their new minds were accepted of God in Christ and their flesh ignored as dead; they were begotten of God and became sons of God. As sons, they were free from all previous condemnation that came upon them as members of Adam's race. CR131:3; R5896:3, 527:3*

Therefore reckoned free--free from sin and its condemnation, death, the righteousness of Christ being imputed to them by faith. R1738:3, 1726:1, 970:6

So that they might die with Jesus. PT389:1

Noah's Ark represented Christ. Whoever comes into Christ comes into safety and salvation, out of danger and destruction. SM341:3

John 5:25

The hour is coming -- As the ransom of man has been paid, why do the living continue to die, and the dead remain dead? Because the resurrection hour has not come yet. In God's plan there is a time for everything.

R690:3*

The general judgment of mankind during the Millennial age is here referred to. R2435:1

And now is -- Omitted in the Sinaitic MS. R1854:3, 1231:6, 1077:3 HG293:3

The harvest of the Jewish age was the dawn of the Gospel age. R27:3*

The dead shall hear -- First will come the awakening; second, the voice of the Son of man--the message declaring the terms on which the life enjoyed may be continued everlastingly. R3433:1

Those who have gone into the prison precincts of the tomb shall be brought forth, so that they may hear the voice of the Son of Man, and, by obeying, live. F701

But the coming forth is merely the awakening in the case of those whose judgment, or trial, shall not have been previously passed successfully. F708

Bearing in mind that the whole world is dead from the divine standpoint, we see that the apostles and the early Church were called out of the dead world and granted the opportunity of hearing the message of life from the Son of God. F708

The whole world, from the divine standpoint, is spoken of as dead, because it is already nine-tenths dead and under sentence of death to the full.

R2435:1, 1231:6, 1077:4

As the world is now counted dead from God's standpoint, so those in the Millennial age who come forth from the tomb will still be dead in the sense that they will not have perfection of life, and not be thoroughly awake intellectually. NS670:5

Be brought to a clear conception of truth. R1854:2, 1231:6, 1077:4

Some of us have already heard the voice of the Son, while we were children of wrath, and from a reckoned standpoint, we have begun to live, through faith in Christ. HG139:1

Son of God -- The Bride of Christ will have to do with the life-giving, but merely as the associates of the great Life-giver. The Ransomer, Jesus, alone is the one who can dispense his own life-rights. R5967:5; Q126:4 Jesus is to be our Deliverer. He is the one who calls all the saints from the sleep of death. Although the Father is the Great Deliverer, who raised up our Lord Jesus, and who "will raise us up also," yet it will be by Jesus. All things are of the Father and by the Son. Q124:4

How strange that we were so long deluded, that we heard the voice of man instead of the voice of the Son of Man. SM311:3

They that hear -- The dead of mankind shall be awakened to such a condition as will permit them to hear, comprehend, understand, though they will still be dead from the divine standpoint. R2630:2

Hear the voice of God speaking peace through Jesus Christ--informing them that they are still sinners, justly condemned to death, but God in mercy has provided redemption through Jesus. Therefore they are awakened from the tomb and caused to hear the message of God's grace. NS670:5

Obey his voice at that time. (Acts 3:22) R4793:2, 2435:1, 1854:2

Receive, or grasp it. R1231:6

Heed. R1077:4; HG293:2

The only condition upon which any may have everlasting life is obedient faith. To be saved through Christ, each human being must hear in the sense of understanding or appreciating perfectly God's plan, and his responsibility to it. R698:4

Some may refuse to hear, refuse to obey. R3433:2, 433:5*

To ascertain which will "hear [obey]," all must stand before the great white throne of justice, then established, and be judged according to the things written in the "books [of the Bible]" even as the Church is now being judged. R1903:3, 333:1

Some now hear the voice of the Son of Man and live, through justification of faith, while others will not hear the voice of the Son of Man and come to life and perfection until the Millennium, and then actually and not reckonedly. R4398:2

Shall live -- Everlastingly. R1903:3

In due time. R1854:2, 1231:6, 1077:4

After hearing, comprehending, if they respond to the hearing, if they obey, they shall eventually attain to perfection of life--gradually.

R2630:2, 1854:2, 1231:6; NS670:5

As with the Gospel Church, so with the world in the Millennium, the hearing of the voice of the Son of God is a gradual matter, line upon line and precept upon precept, the obedient coming to a clearer and clearer appreciation. F709

In proportion as they heed they come into closer and closer vital relationship with the Life-giver and share his rewards--in this and in the coming ages. F708

These will progress step by step to the attainment of all that was lost, and beyond this to the attainment of those things which God had in reservation for Father Adam, which he might have obtained had he remained obedient. R3433:2

A new trial is to be granted to Adam and all his race, an individual trial, under the enlightenment and uplifting influence of the great Messianic kingdom. R5443:6

They shall be rescued, not only from the tomb, but also from all the imperfections, mental, moral and physical, which have come upon the world through sin--be raised up to perfection of life. R2435:1

According to the general conception this should read, "they that live shall hear," but this would not have been true. As a matter of fact, no one will be judged in an unconscious state of death. R1854:1

While such as will not obey will be destroyed from among the people. (Acts 3:22,23) HG306:6

Life in himself -- Immortality. HG752:2; SM496:5

That is, his existence is not a derived one, nor a sustained one--not dependent in any manner upon another or upon conditions, such as food, light, air, etc. R1879:1, 715:1*, 279:2; A211; E396, 389

Independent of any support outside itself, subject to no conditions, incorruptible, exhaustless, unlimited, eternal. R233:6

So hath he given -- Promised. R2435:4

As an immortal being cannot die, it seems clear that Jesus did not have immortality when he died. It was given unto him after he died, at his resurrection. R280:4

Indicating Jesus' knowledge of the fact that both he and the Church would share in the divine nature and inherency of life. R5066:4

To the Son -- Hence he is now the express image of the Father's person. A211

Life in himself -- Immortality. As the Father hath inherent life, so he gave the Son to have this life; and as the Son had the promise of this life during his earthly ministry, so he had the actuality of it in his resurrection. The same promise is given to the Church, which is his Body. (John 10:27) A211; R5608:3, 2435:4, 1642:4, 1052:5*, 715:1*, 279:2, 252:4; Q502:5

The divine nature. SM67:T

The Bride is to have within her a "well of water [life] springing up" (John 4:14), while the rest of mankind may come to the fountain to drink. (Rev. 7:17) R252:4

Nowhere in the Scriptures is it stated that angels are immortal. Immortality is ascribed only to the divine nature--originally to Jehovah only, subsequently to our Lord, and finally, by promise, to the Church. A186; R5731:3

A nature incapable of death. R673:6

"In him was life" (John 1:4), the new life, life as a new creature, partaker of the divine nature. R4155:1

As the result of Adam's disobedience was humiliation, sorrow and death, so the result of Christ's obedience was exaltation, joy, and the crown of life, immortality. R4018:3*

To apply 1 Tim. 6:15,16 ("The blessed and only potentate, the King of kings and Lord of lords, who only hath immortality") to the Father would be to deny that our Lord possesses immortality. The Father is always excepted as being inexpressibly above all comparison. (1 Cor. 15:27) E78

Given him authority -- Given commandment, authorization. R2435:4

Now that the life and power are given to Christ, do not be surprised if he exercises his power in the giving of life. R27:4*

Execute judgment -- The divine will. R2435:4

Christ is the judgment of the world because he is its love, and he is its love because he is its light, and he is its light because he is its life.

R1329:2*

The hour is coming -- Not far distant. D640

Chronologically we are already in the great Seventh Day, or Thousand-year Sabbath. OV349:1

All -- Good and bad, just and unjust. R1592:2

Including those who have gone down into the prison-house of death, the tomb. NS462:3, 664:2; OV215:2

Including those who lived before Jesus came, as much as those who had not yet been born. NS384:3

Why should a ransom be given for all if it was not intended of God that all should benefit by it, or at least have an opportunity of benefiting by it? HG421:3

All were included in unbelief and blindness that God might have mercy upon all and recover every one of them from that blindness, and bring every one to full, clear knowledge which will render every man without excuse and fully responsible. R4781:3

The divine plan is no respecter of persons. Every member of the race, condemned through Adam's disobedience, and redeemed by the death of Jesus, shall have a full opportunity of coming to a knowledge of the fact; and using that knowledge, shall ultimately attain human perfection and everlasting life. HG685:5

In 1 Cor. 15, St. Paul explains how this can be: "As all in Adam die, even so shall all in Christ be made alive." R5612:1; HG646:3

This will include not only the Church of the first-born, but all the remainder of mankind, all of whom, because redeemed, shall come forth unto "judgment-trial." SM436:2; R5060:2; CR50:3

The precious blood will never lose its power till all whom it purchased--all the ransomed of the Lord--shall have heard the voice of their Redeemer. R858:5

It is estimated that 20 billion have died; the tomb is well filled with almost enough to reasonably populate the earth. CR21:1; NS209:5

Resurrection, secured for all by our Lord's death, will be offered to all; but it will be forced upon none. R1853:5; CR37:4

Nothing in the Scriptures implies that all men will eventually attain to perfect life. On the contrary there is a provision for second death for those who will refuse the divine favors. But the Scriptures do teach a universal opportunity for life. HG385:1

Implied by the promise of the Oath-Bound Covenant, that "In thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed." (Gen. 22:18) NS282:2

Therefore the thousands of Ammonites and others slaughtered in Old Testament battles did not go immediately to the theological hell, but to sleep in the tomb until the Redeemer shall begin his work of calling back from the dead all that are in their graves. D640; R5635:6, 4729:3, 3998:5, 3085:3, 1618:1; NS60:6

Therefore such wicked men as Nero will also be called forth from the grave. Q503:7; NS286:5

Robert Ingersoll and other modern unbelievers are thus assured a full opportunity to profit by this "resurrection of judgments." R3559:4

In the graves -- Greek, hades, the prison, the tomb. The grave is really a symbol of hope; for we would not speak of it as a prison-house were it not for our hopes of resurrection. R894:1; NS282:3, 307:3

Wherever the teachings of the Bible have gone, wherever the resurrection hope has penetrated, there the grave and cemetery are to be found, rather than the funeral pyre and incinerating furnace. NS282:3

Preserved by the power of God in the great prison-house of death, ready to hear the command of the great King and to come forth. NS635:4

Therefore not yet ascended to heaven. (John 3:13) R3487:1

All are in their graves, and not alive. All must come forth from their graves, not from heaven, or purgatory, or hell. HG228:5, 194:1; PD61/72; SM311:2, 100:1, 34:1; OV166:3

Resurrection power not only will take hold of the people who will not at that time have fallen asleep in death, but also of those who have gone down into the tomb. R2714:4

Hear his voice -- The voice of the Son of God. R5107:3

At his second advent. R5132:3

Some of us (verse 25) have already heard his voice; but here, speaking of the world, there will be an opportunity for all who have never heard the Son of Man to hear it then, and those who hear in the proper sense of obeying will continue to progress to the attainment of life, in its full sense. HG139:1

The resurrection of the world will not be done by the Father directly, but will be committed to the Lord Jesus and will require the whole thousand years for its completion. R5167:2

Calvary changed the future of the Adamic race, so that they may now be said to "sleep in Jesus" (1 Thess. 4:14). The world therefore is not to be considered as extinct, eternally dead, but as asleep, waiting to hear his voice and come forth. R5107:3, 2618:1; HG293:5

In this sense, we speak of the dead as asleep. R5166:5, 3174:4; PD61/72; Q763:2

Calling them to awake and come to a full knowledge of God and to a full opportunity of everlasting life. E346; R1881:2; HG332:4

The Master's assurance is that by his death he has become Lord of all and has the keys of death and hades. He has the right to open hades and to call forth all who have gone down into it. R4645:3; OV215:2

"Thou shalt call and I will answer thee" and awake out of the sleep of Adamic death. (Job 14:15) E346; R5402:5, 2109:5, 1881:2, 1506:5; HG332:4; NS117:5

As he did to Lazarus, "Come forth," or as he did to Jairus' daughter,

"Talitha Cumi"--"Come, my child." R4588:6; HG139:1; SM100:1

"The tongue of the dumb shall sing." (Isa. 35:6) R1773:6

And shall come forth -- Come forth from the tomb, from the blindness of the Adversary, from the dominion of sin and death. NS535:4

Awaken from the sleep of Adamic death, which would have been an eternal sleep except for Christ's sacrifice. R2051:3

It is needful that we recognize a difference between mere awakening from the sleep of death and full resurrection. The awakening will be similar to that of Lazarus, but it will be only the first step necessary in that "resurrection" by judgment. R1853:4; SM100:1

The coming forth from the tomb will be merely the beginning of the work of regeneration. OV381:7; NS284:3

Not merely will all mankind come forth from the grave, but they will come forth for the purpose of being resurrected out of present sin and death conditions to the glorious perfection of perfect human beings which Adam lost by disobedience. R4298:5, 4552:6

This awakening from death is what the Apostle had in mind when he said that God is the "Savior of all men" (1 Tim. 4:10.) but this does not necessarily mean everlasting life. Adam was perfect, yet he fell into death; and his race, when fully recovered from the penalty, will be placed on trial as was he. R5372:3, 4793:6

There will be two general classes of the dead to come forth: those who have already passed their trial, and those who have not yet had their trial. R4552:6, 3795:4, 1509:5; SM34:1

Not all at once, but gradually. R5531:1, 4795:5

"Every man in his own order" (1 Cor. 15:23) the Little Flock, the Great Company, the Ancient Worthies, and the world of mankind. SM226:2; R4552:6, 4431:3

The Church first. R5612:5

It will be the "sheep" (Matt. 25:31-46) that will be especially interested in praying for and preparing for those who are in the grave. In sympathy with God and Christ, they will be co-laborers in accomplishing the work for which Christ died. Any not so interested will be lacking the Lord's spirit, like the goat-class. R5531:6

Not that all in heaven shall come down and all that are in hell come up. R3074:6 CR278:3

As the world returns from the tomb, our thought is that they will come back in answer to prayer, as did Lazarus. SM226:2

Come forth to have testified to them that Christ died for them, because by that time the seed of Abraham will be completed and the blessing of the Lord shall come upon the whole earth. HG118:1

Mankind has no option but to come forth from the tomb in due time, because the ransom has been provided in their behalf. PT388:2*

That have done good -- Those who have had their trial and have passed it successfully. R4552:6, 3795:4, 2617:6, 1854:5, 1478:6, 722:5; Q830:2, 220:T Who have secured divine approval as worthy of eternal life. OV333:2

The trial of the Church, now in progress, is not a trial of men, to see whether they are worthy of human life and perfection eternally, but it is a trial of new creatures. R409:1

The righteous, faithful Christians. HG514:2

The justified and approved of God through Christ. R1853:3; Q218:T; NS316:4

Those who, during the present time, have heard the Gospel, and who have and use an opportunity to do good. R5108:6

This will include both the Little Flock and the Great Company, perhaps also the Ancient Worthies. R5105:3; Q309:3

Only the overcoming classes--the Church, the Ancient Worthies, and the Great Company. These alone can be said to have done well in the Lord's estimation--passed divine approval. F709; Q219:1

There will be different planes of perfection--human perfection, the perfection that will be like that of the angels, and lastly the perfection that will come to those who shall be like Christ, that of the divine nature. Q309:3

Not done perfectly, up to the divine standard in thought, word and deed, because there is "none righteous, no, not one." (Rom. 3:10) The nearest approach to righteousness which is possible to any is purity of heart--righteousness of intention. F709; NS283:4, 316:4, 535:1

We shall not in this life be perfect as Jesus was; but Jesus had a perfect will, and we can also have a perfect will. To cover our defect, we have our Advocate, in whom God has arranged that we may be accepted. R5108:6 Since there is none good, the only sense in which one could "do good" would be by coming into accord with God by obedience. R4989:3

What the Apostle calls the just and the unjust (Acts 24:25), our Lord here calls the good and the evil. NS283:3, 316:4

There is a general division line between the just and the unjust, those who please God and those who please him not, the First Resurrection class and the latter resurrection class. NS535:1

Dividing the human family into two classes, he declares that there is a resurrection for both. It is for you and for me to determine in which of these resurrections we prefer to have our portion. NS534:5

The resurrection of life -- Full perfection. OV333:2; R5132:4; SM35:1 The First Resurrection. F665; R3026:6, 2630:4; Q818:6; NS119:1

Greek, anastasis, occurs 43 time in the New Testament. It signifies to stand again, or to raise up again; it is never used concerning the raising of a corpse, nor the mere revivifying of the machinery of life. It means the raising up again out of death into the full perfection of life from which Adam fell. F703

Instead of emphasizing the word anastasis by adding the article, the special resurrection is pointed out by calling it a resurrection of life, because those who share it will be perfected in life at once. R1512:1; SM34:1

The heavenly glory and condition, for which they have been prepared by the trials, the disciplines, the lessons, the chiseling, the polishings, of the present life. NS689:5

Their trial being ended, their full reward will be granted them in the moment of their resurrection. HG384:5; NS535:3, 586:3, 689:5

"Changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye." (1 Cor. 15:52) Q503:7

This resurrection of the just began with our Lord and will be completed in the resurrection of the Church which is his body. R1854:4

It will be unnecessary for them to wait for life until the end of the world's judgment. R1854:5

They that have done good will enter immediately upon their reward of full resurrection--human perfection. R1592:2

The faithful of past ages to perfect human life, the overcomers of the Gospel age to perfect life as divine beings. R2613:3, 722:5

The resurrection of the dead, so prominent in the Bible, is one of its unique features, one of its internal evidences that it is not of human origin. NS281:2

That have done evil -- The remainder of the world who have not been acceptable to God; not only heathen, but including all who, having heard something respecting Jesus, have not responded to the privileges afforded them--have not consecrated themselves fully and completely. F710; R5132:4; NS283:5, 316:6

Includes many "highly esteemed amongst men" (Luke 16:15), many noble, wise, rich, great and learned. F710; NS284:3

Those not having come up to the divine standard of worthiness for the resurrection of life. NS284:3

Those of the spirit begotten ones, who willfully walk after the flesh and not after the Spirit, having had their trial in the present life, will be accounted worthy of the second death. NS689:5

That have not secured the divine approval as being of eternal life. OV333:2

All who have not been children of God. HG514:2

Unapproved, but redeemed. HG192:1

The ignorant and the undeveloped. NS664:2

That resurrection will be for all the "unjust" (unjustified by faith and obedience); it will be for all the "evil"--all who have not been approved of God in Christ as "good"--all who have not escaped "the condemnation that is on the world." R3066:4, 4552:6, 2618:1, 1853:3; F665

None have been perfect; not even in their minds have they come up to a standard that God can approve. They are unsatisfactory, which means unfit. R5108:6

All who in this life repent of sin will form character which will be a benefit to them in the age to come; their progress will be more rapid and easy; while with others it will be more slow, tedious and difficult.

R2613:3, 722:5

While blinded ones will not be held entirely responsible for their blindness, since they have been blinded by the god of this world, they are nevertheless to some extent responsible and will be handicapped in the future in proportion to their degree of present willfulness in sin. R3902:5

Those who take a thousand years to make good will not get as high a reward as those who, by self-sacrifice, now prove their love for the truth and die for righteousness sake. R5109:1

Unto -- "Unto," or, that they might have a resurrection "by" judgment. HG232:3, 228:6; NS284:2

It does not say that all of the unjust ones will be raised up. This will not be the case. Only such as conform themselves to the laws of the kingdom will be raised up. R2630:4

The Revised Version labors with a false thought in speaking of a resurrection of life and a resurrection of judgment. The proper translation would be "a life resurrection" and "a judgment resurrection." NS315:6

When all may have a trial, a judgment, under the favorable and righteous conditions which his Kingdom will inaugurate. R2402:4

The resurrection -- The mere awakening of the sleeping dead is not a resurrection. HG232:3, 228:6; NS335:6, 353:4

Greek, anastasis, an uplifting out of sin and death. R3388:6, 2630:4; F703; SM312:T

Anastasis is without the Greek article and hence shows no emphasis, indicates no special peculiarity. R1612:1

The whole work of the Millennial Kingdom will be a resurrection work. R4298:5

This raising up, or restitution, will begin speedily after the Kingdom has been established. NS335:6

It signifies to raise up again, and implies that a thing was once up and got down, and is to be brought up again to the place where it originally was, if not higher. NS284:5

Come forth, not to be tortured, but to be made acquainted with the fact that the Creator is both just and loving, powerful and wise. NS384:3

Adam was 930 years in dying. Similarly man's resurrection will be gradual, requiring the entire Millennial age. NS335:6

The gradual resurrection will be to their advantage in that it will permit the development of character inch by inch and step by step. NS335:6, 535:5

The wages of sin being death (Rom. 6:23), it was Jesus' death, not his three-and-a-half years' suffering, that was the ransom, making possible the resurrection from the grave. (Matt. 20:28) R392:6

Awakened in practically the condition in which they died, but surrounded by the new conditions of the Millennial Kingdom--Satan and every evil influence "bound," restrained, and truth, righteousness and every good influence surrounding them. HG384:6; OV382:T; NS520:5, 586:4

Adam will be awakened in the condition in which he died, but he will be granted the opportunity of standing up again, of resurrection, of full recovery from his fall into sin and imperfection. This is the meaning of the word "resurrection"--standing up again. HG229:1

Full resurrection, full raising up to the life lost in Adam will not be attained by any of the world until the close of the Millennial age.

R1853:5; NS353:4

We cannot suppose that any will be awakened until the knowledge of the Lord shall be well established among the living of the nations. NS284:4

The salvation or recovery of the race, or so many as will accept the grace of God in Christ when brought to a knowledge of the same, by a judgment-trial and restitution, called resurrection. R3106:6

Resurrection in its full, complete, Scriptural sense signifies a complete raising up, out of sin and out of death, to perfection of being, perfection of life. R4793:6, 4298:5; Q819:T

Of damnation -- Rendered damnation only here and in Heb. 9:27. HG41:3

The word damnation, in the Greek, signifies a crisis, a turning-point, a decision. R4989:2

Greek, krisis, resurrection of trial, resurrection of testing, a gradual resurrection. The awakening will be a preparatory work, not the full resurrection, which will require the entire thousand years. R4989:5, 3066:4, 1853:4, 1592:2, 903:2*; F708; Q218:T, 818:4; NS335:6, 353:4, 535:5; OV333:2

The Greek word krisis is translated "judgment" in 39 instances, in only two others is it rendered "damnation. The word signifies simply judgment or trial, including the result or sentence, to enter life or death, at its close. R1374:3, 1371:2; HG41:3

Four times properly translated in the context by the English word judgment, as it should have been here. NS315:3, 284:1

Our English language absorbs words and phrases from all languages, and thus it has absorbed crises from the Greek. We frequently use it, especially in connection with fevers. NS284:2

Crisis, decision. They will come forth to demonstrate fully whether they will come into harmony with God and prove worthy of life or not. Q504:T; SM35:1

A "resurrection of judgment," mistranslated in our Common Version "resurrection of damnation." R4793:5, 4791:6, 2705:6, 1853:3, 803:3; A147; PD61/72; Q742:2; SM312:T; NS315:3, 534:6; OV361:3

Those who have not heard the Gospel and who therefore have not had an opportunity of doing good. R5108:6, 2624:3; Q830:2

Not a judgment, or trial, for past sins; but another trial for life. F711; NS285:2

The rendering of our Common Version, "resurrection of damnation," is a serious error which has greatly assisted in beclouding the minds of many respecting the true import of this passage. F708; NS315:4

The translators of our common English version supposed that there was no hope except in the present life, and consequently could think of no object God would have in calling the unjustified from their graves, except to damn (condemn) them publicly. R1853:3; OV361:4; Q504:T

Not come forth to be damned or condemned. They were "condemned already" as children of Adam because of his sin. It was from that sin and its condemnation that Christ died to set them free. They will come forth free from that condemnation in a judicial sense. HG434:2

The word judgment sometimes signifies merely the execution of a verdict, or decision reached, but it means in a fuller sense the process of trial, including also the decision or result of trial. R408:3

Meantime the unwilling, the disobedient, will be cut off in the Second Death, the death punishment everlasting will be visited upon them, they will have no hope of a future resuscitation. NS353:5

If they resist, they will die the second death; if they respond, they will be raised up to perfection. Q504:3; NS670:6, 664:2, 635:5, 535:5

"By judgments"--chastisements, corrections, with reward for every good endeavor. SM312:T, 34:1; NS782:6

With no outward show, the Kingdom of God will be in the midst of mankind, a spiritual power, restraining and controlling, punishing sin and rewarding righteousness, and thus affecting a resurrection, a raising up by judgments, stripes, disciplines and rewards. NS513:2

Perhaps seeing in one the intention of robbery, allowing him to go to the length of making every preparation, and then just before the committal of an overt act, smiting his hands with paralysis. NS285:6

The future would teach all, not only what righteousness is, but what the joys of righteousness are. Each would begin at once to have a reward for every good endeavor, and thus experience the resurrection. NS286:2

Present wrongdoing, in proportion as it is committed against light, makes its mark upon the characters of men; but this judgment, recorded in the characters of men, is not the judgment here referred to. NS285:2

Illustrated by the trial of a child by his parent after chastisement to see if he really will do better. F711

Signifying that the Millennial age arrangements will differ from those of the present and past ages, in that while now judgments (rewards and punishments) are deferred, whereas then they will follow immediately every act and word of obedience or disobedience. R3066:4, 3063:4

The object of the ransom was not to justify sin, nor to bring back the sinner to continue a life of sin, but to afford each an individual trial for life. R408:3

Now the Lord does not judge among men. Earthly prosperity is not proof of divine favor, and earthly adversity is not a proof of divine disfavor. (2 Tim. 3:12; Psa. 73:7) NS285:4

"Know ye not that the saints shall judge the world?" (1 Cor. 6:2) We see, then, that the judgment of the world is separate from the judgment of the saints. NS285:2

Obedience of will or intent shall be the first requirement; and as this is obeyed, restitution will commence. As gradually imperfection and weakness shall give place to strength and perfection, correspondingly less allowance will be made for transgressions by the Mediator-Judge. R1261:3

The trial of the world, when Satan and evil are bound (Rev. 20:2), will be less severe, and the prize for which they will be running will be less glorious, than that for which the Church runs. R409:1

They will be made more and more alive, and less and less dead, as the thousand years progress, and none will get the resurrection life until they are raised to the condition of perfection--perfect life in the image of God, which was lost by Adam. R4989:6, 4794:1, 3410:2, 3026:3, 2833:2, 2714:5

Condemnation is no more the equivalent of judgment than damnation is. The process of judgment will result either in justification or in condemnation, according to the merits or demerits of each case. R1330:1*

Be judged again--they were tried and condemned once already through Adam, and a second chance for life comes to all through Christ Jesus--an individual chance. R408:3

They will come forth from the grave to have the truth testified to them, for their acceptance or rejection. Their final judgment will be based upon their course under trial after the truth has been testified to them.

R1478:6, 1359:2

It will be a restitution by judgment, or a resurrection by or according to judgment: a judgment according to their obedience or disobedience. R1853:5
Of judgment (Revised Version); coming forth to shame and contempt, which will continue until he shall, under the judgment of that time, learn the lesson and form a better character; or, refusing to do so, be cut off in the second death. R5396:5

A resurrection effected by "judgments," disciplines, chastisements, which will develop in them character. R5017:6, 2613:4, 722:5

Illustrated by the case of Julian Renfro, 21, a Higher Critic, who challenged God to strike him deaf and dumb, or blind. A moment later he collapsed without the power of speech, afterward expressing in writing his faith in the Lord. R3388:6

To be disciplined, to receive stripes in proportion to the willfulness in which they have cooperated in their own downfall into mental, moral and physical degradation, but to be helped by the stripes, to be corrected in righteousness, if they will. R3795:5

In that searching judgment there will be a reckoning, even for every pernicious word (Matt. 12:36). Then the masses of mankind who will to obey are to be gradually raised up to perfection of being, as well as of knowledge. R1654:1; F665

While judgment will pass against one who fails to make progress and will cut short his further opportunity, the same judgment, by the same Judge, will operate favorably to all who seek righteousness and make progress in harmony with the laws of the Kingdom. R4794:1

In the new trial or judgment, the same principle as in Adam's case will hold true again--the redeemed are appointed to life if they will obey the great Law-giver; they are not "appointed" to die, and none will die except as willful sinners in the second death. R2823:1

The "times of regeneration" (Matt. 19:27,28) are the same which St. Peter styles the "times of restitution" (Acts 3:21), the times or years of the Millennium, the times of "resurrection by judgment." R4556:3

"God hath appointed a day [1000 years--2 Pet. 3:8] in the which he will judge [grant trial to] the world in righteousness [equity] by that man whom he hath [afore] ordained [the Christ]." (Acts 17:31) R3028:6, 1505:2; NS285:1

Of mine own self -- Our Lord Jesus in all matters acts as the representative of the Father, Jehovah, in the work of salvation. E35

Do nothing -- When he was risen from the dead, he no longer said, "I can of mine own self do nothing"; but on the contrary, he then declared, "All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth." (Matt. 28:18) R745:4
On so important a question as the equality of the Father and the Son, we must not rely upon any man's testimony except that of the inspired writers of the Scriptures. R5747:6

As I hear -- Of my Father. R5378:3

I judge -- I speak. R2318:6

Testimony is to be taken. This indicates that the destiny of those who come up to judgment (verse 29, Revised Version) is not fixed beforehand. HG336:6

My judgment is just -- That the judgment will be fair and impartial, and with due consideration for the circumstances and the opportunities of each individual, is also assured--by the character of the Judge, the Christ. R2612:6, 1383:6

Not mine own will -- The Father and the Son are one in mind and purpose because Jesus gave up his own will and took the Father's, just as we must give up our will, mind and spirit and receive the Father's if we would be heirs of God and joint-heirs with Jesus Christ our Lord. R296:3

Though tempted in all points like as we, his brethren, he ignored his own will and all suggestions from others contrary to God's plan, and obeyed God implicitly. Therein lay the secret of his success. R1125:5; HG292:6
Self-denial, self-renouncing and fasting in the highest and fullest sense of the word is enjoined, with fasting from both good and bad fleshly desires in the interest of the new creature and for effective service.

NS154:2

He submitted himself to all the Father's will and thus proved his loyalty. R5421:6

The will of the Father -- Therefore he and the Father were one. (John 10:30) SM493:1

Jesus' claim was that he was "a Son," an obedient son. R369:5

There was no disloyalty on the part of Jesus--he never said he was the Father. CR290:2

Hath sent me -- Claiming no higher honor than to be the Father's agent and messenger. HG297:2

Instead of being the Father masquerading as a man, Jesus was the Logos, the Word, or Message of God, whom the Father had sanctified and sent into the world to be the world's Redeemer. R5378:6

John 5:31

I bear witness -- In the next several verses Jesus refers to a few witnesses: himself, verse 31; "another," verse 32; John, verse 33; his works, verse 36; the Father, verse 37; the Scriptures, verse 39. R2011:6*

John 5:32

There is another -- This means that there are two persons, for in no other way could one exalt and honor another. R4165:2

John 5:35

A burning -- Some lights are cold, austere, unsympathetic; but the kind approved of the Master was the burning kind--warm, glowing, sympathetic, helpful, intensive. R4967:3; CR125:3

Shining light -- The Apostle distinguishes between the messenger of the light and the light itself. Here our Lord speaks of John the Baptist as a burning and shining lamp (mistranslated light). A totally different Greek word [phos] is used when our Lord is spoken of being the Light. (John 1:4) R2409:2

For a season -- When he had announced Jesus as the Messiah his work soon began to wane, as he had testified it should do, saying of Jesus, "He must increase, but I must decrease." (John 3:30) B260; R968:5

John 5:36

The Father hath given me -- He ascribed always the honor to the Father. He was merely the Finger of God. R5920:2

Recognizing our Lord Jesus as a god, a "mighty God" and that the Scriptures clearly tell of his greatness, they also tell of his full harmony with the Heavenly Father, Jehovah, and his full submission to the Heavenly Father's will in all particulars. R4051:5, 2726:1

The same works -- Teaching that since he came, his work and the Father's are one and not distinct one from the other. R52:4*

Bear witness of me -- Bearing out the thought that the miracles that our Lord did were only intended to establish his identity, and not with a view of establishing a precedent for the healing of the world or the Church. R3495:5

Which hath sent me -- Proving that the Father and Son are not one in person. If they are two persons, which was first? The names themselves explain: Father signifies sire, life-giver; Son signifies offspring. R1904:5

Nor seen his shape -- Seeing with the natural eye and hearing with the natural ear are not all there is of seeing and hearing. "No man hath seen God at any time" (John 1:18), yet all of God's children have seen him, known him and held communion with him. B122

Search the scriptures -- Our Lord's words express the mind, the will, the Spirit of God. Hence we have continually set before us, as necessary to our victory, the study of the Word of Truth. E204

He who has not a knowledge of the divine revelation, the divine plan, cannot have a Scriptural hope, cannot have the legitimate results of such a hope, namely, the anchorage of the soul, sure and steadfast. (Heb. 6:19) NS505:4

Only by coming into a condition of heart-harmony and teachableness, and then by a full consecration receiving the holy Spirit, can we hope to understand the divine message and obtain the eternal life it promises. R4334:4

Under divine providence apostles, prophets and teachers are necessary, indispensable. But no words of man are to be taken as instead of the Word of God. Man's presentations are to find acceptance only in proportion as they are found to be in harmony with the Scriptures. R4334:4

The Jews came to Christ with their doubts; his reply was not for them to pray, but to search the Scriptures. Prayer and intellectual activity cannot be separated. R653:4*

God has so much more to tell us than we have to tell him, let him speak much, long and often through his Word. R597:6*, 317:1*

More of a reproach than a command or invitation, "You search the Scriptures because you think by them to obtain everlasting life, and these very Scriptures you are searching also testify of me." R2011:6*, 692:1*

In them ye think -- Strictly scrupulous in the slightest ritual performances, in the observance of these forms they thought they had eternal life; but now he who was to bring life and immortality to light had come. R358:4*

Ye will not come -- No one can expect to be taught of God while in that self-sufficient and dishonest condition of mind which boasts of knowledge and faith which it lacks. R2965:5

Although obedience to the laws of Christ's Kingdom will be enforced, no man's free moral agency will be interfered with: these words will be true of those who then know of and fail to gain life, as it is true of some now. R2051:4

The love of God -- We are to distinguish between natural love and the love of God. All mankind has some share of natural love--self-love, love for family, friends. But the love of God is different--unmerited, sacrificing love. R2648:2

John 5:43

In my Father's name -- Our Lord Jesus in all matters acts as the representative of the Father, Jehovah, in the work of salvation. E35

Ye receive me not -- Not because of a lack of prayer, but because they sought honor of another, and not the honor which cometh from God. (verse 44) R653:4*

In his own name -- Boastingly. B357

Him ye will receive -- Papacy's unparalleled success, as a counterfeit Christ, deceiving the whole world, has amply fulfilled this prediction. B357

John 5:44

How can ye -- Upon no class does this trial come with greater force than upon ministers. With them it means truly the loss of all things--reputation, friends, often those of the family circle, and the present means of earning a living, and necessitates the turning to something new and untried. R956:5*

Believe -- Continue in proper discipleship. R4208:1

Honour one of another -- Great power has been, and to some extent still is, in the hands of ecclesiastics; but, in the name of Christ and his gospel, it has been, and still is, selfishly used and abused. D61

The Protestant clergy receives much of the same homage and reverence against which the reformers of the sixteenth century protested. It is a general weakness of fallen human nature to take all the respect, honor and authority others are willing to accord. R1135:6

Everything is done to impress upon the people the idea of the superior learning, dignity, and sanctity of the clergy. R956:1*

There are many consecrated ones, desirous of the prize, begotten of the spirit, who are partially overcome by the allurements of the world. They try to walk a middle road--to keep the favor of God and the favor of the world, forgetting that "the friendship of the world is enmity with God." (Jas. 4:4) A214

A temptation comes to the Lord's people to guide their course not entirely by the Word of the Lord, but with a deference to the sentiments of others.

This is the fear of man that brings a snare. (Prov. 29:35) R4208:1; D61

Hindering some of even God's true servants from faithfulness, while apparently many of the under-shepherds never had any interest in the Lord's flock except to secure the golden fleece. HG715:4

The "wise and prudent" prefer honor one of another rather than that which cometh from God only. Instead of coming out more and more boldly for truth on unpopular subjects, they put their light under a bushel until it is gone out. R2639:6

He that values reputation more than truth, how can he believe? R24:6*

Even Moses -- God dealt with only one man in connection with the making of that Law Covenant, Moses, who stood in the position of father to the whole nation, the nation being regarded and treated as children. R1725:3

In whom ye trust -- As in Jesus' day believers in Moses rejected Christ, so now we find those claiming to trust in Christ, who reject Moses, in spite of Jesus' having endorsed him. R691:6*

John 5:46

Had ye believed Moses -- Equivalent to saying that in the deeper sense Moses, in telling of the Seed, covers the Gospel in its fullness, though deeply hidden. This dept of Moses' writings is the cause of the Jews' rejection of Christ, as well as of the modern Christian rejection of Moses. R691:6*

The manner of the unbelief of the Jews was that of failing to see the spirit of their sacred writings. To them the truth was veiled, because of the veil upon their hearts. R692:4*

Disbelievers in Moses are of necessity disbelievers in Christ. To reject Moses after Christ has endorsed him is not characteristic of a believer in Christ. R691:3*

All who believed Moses and were taught of God were able to receive him when he was present in the flesh. R40:1*

He wrote of me -- There is, it may be safely said, more gospel in Genesis than in Matthew. This fullness of the gospel was given in Genesis in the sense that the undeveloped seed contains all that can be produced from it. R692:1*, 67:3*

The method by which Moses wrote of Christ was not direct statement, but by figure, type and allegory. Even in his most direct words he did not say Christ, though that was what he meant. R692:3*

In the Law, in types. R4352:3; B177

Moses wrote of the ransom (1) in every sin offering enjoining the life of the beast; (2) when he told of how God clothed the guilty pair, expelled naked from Eden, with coats of skins; (3) in the narrative of the offering of Isaac; (4) by showing the ratifying of the typical Covenant with blood representative of his own; (4) by showing the necessity that the firstborn be under the blood of the Passover lamb; (5) in the types of the Day of Atonement; and (6) in the typical Jubilee year, announcing the times of restitution of all things. R692:6

Moses taught restitution in type, in the Jubilee arrangement, in which land and all possessions lost were fully restored. R413:1

Moses, in some particulars, in some of his transactions, was a type of our Lord. R4058:1

Proving that Moses did not die 500 years before the Pentateuch was written, or that writing was unknown in his day. Q633:3

John 5:47

His writings -- The Lord thus authenticating the reliability of the Mosaic record, as opposed to the concepts of the Higher Critics. R3724:4*

John 6

John 6:1

After these things -- A year after the previous chapter. John's Gospel evidently was not so much to give a history of our Lord's life as to mention incidents omitted in the other Gospels. R3502:3, 2435:1 These incidents are accredited to the early part of the third year of our Lord's ministry. John the Baptist had been in the prison at Machaerus for about a year and had just been beheaded by King Herod. R4138:3 The beheading of John, concern among the followers of Jesus over his and their safety, the sending forth of his disciples and the seventy--all called attention to Christ and his Messiahship. R4139:1, 3780:1 Somewhat previous to the martyrdom of John the Baptist, the Lord had sent his disciples to preach in the villages of Galilee. The news of John's death and the possible effect upon their work of the royal wrath seems to have brought them all together again to take counsel. R1754:2

Over the sea -- From other accounts we learn that our Lord's crossing of the Sea of Galilee at this time was for needed rest. R3502:3 Another reason was that his disciples, whom he had sent forth two by two through the various cities had now returned to him, and doubtless needed rest and a measure of peace and quiet to report and get needed instruction. R3502:6

The third reason was that at this time the news had just reached Galilee that Herod had caused the beheading of John the Baptist and his army had been vanquished by that of Aretas, unquestionably stirring the people and to some extent unfitting them for the hearing of the Lord's message. R3502:6

Still another reason was to give the occasion for this miracle. R3503:1 Possibly he thought that his ministry was not yet concluded, and that Herod, having shown such boldness against John, might seek to interfere with his labors and the completion of his ministry. R3332:3 Possibly he feared that a rebellious spirit might be aroused amongst the people, and that his teachings would seem to foster this. R3332:3 Possibly that he might contemplate the character of the work he was to do. R3332:3

Probably in part for private meditation and conference with his disciples, who undoubtedly would be greatly agitated by the news of John's death, and needed his calming influence and assurance that Herod could have no power over them, except such as might be permitted by the Father. R2435:2
Several of the apostles being fishermen, whose boats were at their own disposal, and the Sea of Galilee being small, the undertaking was not extraordinary. R3503:1
Landing near Bethsaida, the home of Philip, one of the disciples, at the north end of the lake. R4139:2
Just outside the boundary of Herod's dominion. R2435:3, 1754:3

John 6:2

A great multitude -- Not only of those who had heard Jesus, but other multitudes on their way to Jerusalem to attend the Feast of the Passover. R2643:2

Multitudes, coming along the road to Jerusalem, heard of the presence of the Great Teacher in the vicinity and tarried. R4139:2, 2435:3

Evidence of his growing popularity at this time. R3332:3

In some respects picturing the world during the Millennial age. R3781:4

Followed him -- The boat was in full view of the shore for probably all of the distance, they thus saw the boat and judged its objective point. R2643:2

They had a heart-hunger, although they knew not what it was really; they longed for better conditions than surrounded them, and this great Teacher seemed to have words such as none other had for them. R3332:3

Being so deeply interested and noting the direction in which the boat was steered, they traveled afoot, a considerable distance, to the same place. R4139:2, 3780:1, 3503:1

John 6:3

Sat with his disciples -- They probably spent a day or two in rest and comparative privacy, communing respecting the interests of the work. R3503:1, 2643:2

Just so the Lord would have all his disciples come to him for counsel, rest and refreshment. "He never asks of us such busy labor as finds no time for resting at his feet." Nor would he have us rest too long when other weary hearts are waiting for our ministries of love and consolation. R1754:3

John 6:4

The passover -- According to Jewish custom, hundreds of thousands were en route to the feast, business was practically suspended by a considerable portion of the population. R4139:1, 3503:1

John 6:5

When Jesus -- The miracle of the feeding of the five thousand is the only miracle that is particularly described in all four of the Gospels. R3502:3

Saw a great company -- Jesus knew that with the vast majority the object in coming was merely curiosity, not faith or desire for instruction; notwithstanding, as always, his generous heart was full of sympathy. R2643:3

From the other Gospels we learn that the day was spent in healing the sick of the multitude, and preaching to them the things pertaining to the kingdom of God, and that it was toward evening that they were miraculously fed. R2435:3

He saith -- Quite probably he and the apostles taught the multitude for some time before the miracle of the feeding was performed. The Gospel narratives are very brief and pass over small and irrelevant details. R3503:2

In season and out of season, so far as his convenience was concerned, he must work the works of God, lay down his life inch by inch, hour by hour. R3332:3

Unto Philip -- Whose home town was nearest and who therefore would be supposed to be best acquainted with the vicinity. R4139:3, 3503:2, 3332:6, 2643:3, 2435:5

Philip seems to have had a rather business turn of mind, an excellent disposition to have among the disciples of the Lord: nevertheless it is inclined to think of earthly means rather than to exercise faith in the Lord. R3503:2, 4139:3

The business head is very useful if restrained by love and faith; love, that it not allow business interests to take sole charge of spiritual affairs; faith, that these not be permitted to ignore faith in the Lord and the power of his might. R3503:3

Whence shall we buy -- Note our Lord's wise method of instruction, stimulating thought. R4139:3

The dialog between Jesus and the disciples reconstructed from the four Gospel narratives. R2643:5

That these may eat -- The people seem to have been so engrossed with the good tidings that they entirely forgot their own necessities. R2435:5

The Lord sees the dark night of trouble approaching, but before sending the people away he instructs all who are his disciples to supply them with something to eat; with spiritual food, truths pertaining to the Kingdom. R2436:1

John 6:6

To prove him -- To stimulate the thought of Philip and the other disciples, and thus to prove or test them and develop their faith in him. R2643:3

John 6:7

Two hundred pennyworth -- His suggestion was that this ($32 worth) would be a considerable sum for them to spend, and that less would do no good. R4139:3, 3503:2, 2643:3

About $200 worth, according to our present day reckoning. R3332:6

Andrew -- Whose mind seems to have been less practical than that of Philip. R3503:3

All the good and helpful suggestions for the interest of the Church do not always come from one quarter. Often, the Lord uses stumbling lips and illogical reasonings as the basis of blessings to themselves and others. R3503:3

Saith unto him -- Apparently thinking of our Lord's power, but scarcely able to realize so great a miracle. R2643:3

Our Lord had use not only for the broader mind of Philip, but also for the simple and less logical mind of Andrew, and used the latter's suggestion by calling for the little supply. R3503:3

John 6:9

There is a lad here -- Jesus did not tell the apostles to get wagons and go to town for bread and meat, but to use what they had. So we should use all our talents; use what we have, and we shall receive the blessing therefrom. R5419:4

Five barley loaves -- Philip was too practical, too much of a business man, to have even thought of mentioning such a morsel of food in connection with the supply of so large a multitude. R3503:3

The loaves of that country and time were about the size of a small flat pie and very similar in shape. R4139:4

The poorest and cheapest sort of bread. R2643:6

Two small fishes -- The kind of fish described by the Greek word used implied very small fish, like herring. R4139:4

But what are they -- He had hardly offered the remark about the lad and the fishes, when he felt ashamed of it. R3503:3

We may feel that the multitude is large and that the means at our disposal for reaching them with the bread of life are limited. It is sufficient for us to know that some are hungry for truth, and that if we will, the Lord will bless us in ministering it to them. R3333:5

It requires faith to go forth and to hope to accomplish the great harvest work under present limited conditions, but the Lord, the Chief Reaper, will make it sufficient so that all who are really hungry may be fed. R3333:6

Make the men sit -- No objection is offered to this command which might make them appear foolish, to prepare a feast when apparently no feast could be spread. They were beginning to learn the power of him who could fill their nets with fish and they obeyed; the Lord did the rest. R3780:5, 4139:4

The men sat down -- In ranks or rows, in groups of fifties and hundreds, upon the grassy slopes. R4139:4, 3503:5, 3333:1

The people were accustomed to a certain method of arranging themselves in groups of fifties and hundreds for general feasts. R2643:6

The confidence of the people in Jesus and his apostles is clearly manifested in the fact that at that late hour they were willing to be directed. R4139:4

About five thousand -- The Gospels give two distinctly different miracles of feeding the multitude. In one case it was 5000, in the other 4000; in one a lad provided five cakes and two fish, in the others the disciples provided seven loaves and a few fish; in one the fragments filled twelve baskets, in the other, seven. R4617:2

Took the loaves -- The lad who had the loaves and fishes and who put them at the disposal of the Lord, we may be sure was greatly blessed, although we hear nothing further of him than is here mentioned. R3334:1

The boy was willing to put his all at our Lord's disposal, instead of attempting to sell it to the hungry at famine prices. R3334:1

Probably they were purchased from the boy. R4139:4

Jesus could have turned the stones into bread and thereby fed the multitude. He could have ignored the little supply on hand as insignificant, but that was not his method. So his followers should learn not to despise the little things, but use them so far as possible. R3503:4
Miracles are only to be expected after we have done all in our power with the means at hand. R3503:4

As the Lord used the barley cakes and fishes as the nucleus for this miracle, so in nature he uses the seed wheat as the basis for the miracle of the crop gathered in harvest. R3503:5

Notice that the feast for which our Lord returned thanks was not a sumptuous one, served in elegant decorated ware, but plain barley bread and dried fish. R3781:1, 2643:6

To thankful hearts the plainest of food will be more appreciated, more happyfying, more satisfying than to others. R2644:1

Both in quantity and quality many people of our day are overfed. Plainness and simplicity of food would not only be more healthful, but would leave much more time for spiritual refreshment. R3781:1

Given thanks -- If the Master himself thus acknowledged that every good and perfect gift cometh down from the Father of Lights, how much more should we. R4139:4, 3780:6

Gratitude to God is appropriate however simple our bill of fare. R3781:1

Our blessing of the bread does not increase its quantity, its bulk, but it does increase its value, its efficiency. The peace of mind from proper acknowledgment prepares our nerves as we partake of food. R4139:4, 3780:6, 2644:1

It would be inappropriate, however, to intrude upon the customs of a host family, nor is it always appropriate to openly manifest thankfulness in a restaurant. We might well refrain if our conduct would be misapprehended as Pharisaim. In such cases, however, the heart should always render thanks. R3781:1

Proportionately the thankful Christian should be less troubled with nervous dyspepsia than are others of the same physical and nervous temperament. R4139:5, 2644:1

We advise the custom of the Bible House family; breaking together the spiritual manna and feasting thereon at the same time of the partaking of the earthly food. R4139:5

He distributed -- Apparently it grew as they were broken, much after the manner of the widow's cruse of oil, which flowed incessantly until all the pots had been filled. R3503:5

Quite probably the increase was while being broken in the Lord's hands, though possibly also the increasing continued at the hands of the apostles as they in turn distributed the food to the people. R3333:1

It is not for us to explain the miracle, but to recognize that God is the giver of every gift, and that miracles are in operation about us every day: the seed germinates and grows, we know not how. R4139:5, 3503:4, 3333:2

The same amount of barley that composed those five loaves, if planted, might have brought forth a harvest sufficient for the five thousand. Two fishes, in the ordinary course of nature, in a short time might have brought forth a sufficient supply of fish for the five thousand. R3333:2, 3503:4

We can analyze a grain of wheat and could construct something very closely corresponding, but we could give it no life, no germ, no power to produce. This is a miracle, too, but so common that we overlook it. R4139:6, 3333:2

To the disciples -- Jesus dealt first with his disciples, representing the elect. To these he gave bread, which, after the multitude was seated, was distributed amongst them. So the Lord has called the Church to be the elect, and breaks for them the bread of life. By and by the whole world of mankind, in their own rank and company, will be ready for the food, and shall have an abundance and to spare. R4141:5, 3781:4

The miracle was intended to inculcate some important lesson of faith or practice, not so much for the public, as for his special followers, his disciples. R3333:4

The disciples to them -- They were thus the better witnesses of the power of the miracle, and the people were more or less made acquainted with the apostles, who perhaps later on, after Pentecost, met many of them, and, as the Master's representatives, bore to them the heavenly bread. R3781:2

Without faith in the Lord they would undoubtedly have refused to take any part in the proceedings, fearing that it would bring reproach and ridicule upon them. R2644:2

The Lord has already made provision sufficient in quantity and variety, and he bids each of his specially consecrated ones to have faith, and go forth in the distributing of the food, trusting the result to him. R2436:4

As we have received of the Lord's bounty freely, so we are to distribute freely. Those who distribute will have the privilege of gathering up for themselves, that each may have more than he gave away. R3504:2

Let us see to it that we have generosity in respect to the spiritual as well as the natural food. R3504:2, 3333:6

Neither our duties nor our privileges are wholly measured by our own abilities. A proper faith in the Lord permits us to realize his omnipotent power, and that if he be with us in the distribution of spiritual food to the hungry, the little of means at our disposal may be so blessed as to accomplish marvelous things. R2644:2

As our Lord could have performed the miracle of feeding the five thousand without the instrumentality of his disciples, so now he could feed the hungry Israelites indeed without our aid. R2644:4

Of the fishes -- We offer no objection to those who claim that they have better health as a result of a purely vegetable diet, but do object to the claim that it gives special sanctity or acceptableness to God. Jesus not only ate animal food (lamb and fish at least), but miraculously created fish for food. R3098:3

When they were filled -- Not merely a taste of food, but a satisfying portion; all had plenty. R3781:3

At the very same time there were doubtless hungry ones in various parts of the world whom he could have fed; but he came not to feed the world, or stop their pain, but to redeem them and give evidence for belief in his Messiahship. R3503:5

It was a lesson of the Lord's ability to care for them as his followers, under all circumstances, under all conditions, and this lesson continues with all of his followers since. R4139:6

Those who are truly the Lord's people have similar miracles today, because in eating of the Word we partake of the spirit of our Lord. We must prefer these higher miracles, and consider them a stronger basis for faith than the poor Jews with the favors bestowed on them, great as were those favors. R3503:6

A meal consisting of barley bread and dried fish would not be partaken of as liberally as if condiments, sauces and sweets had been provided. Perhaps we would all know better when we had enough if we lived more upon the plain substantials of life, and did not too much pamper our appetites. R3781:3

It is further worthy of notice that the Lord's miracles of feeding and healing were performed, not upon his consecrated disciples, but upon others. His followers, having covenanted to sacrifice, might therefore, like him, avail themselves only of the natural means of recuperation. R1754:6

When Christ was weary, he rested; when he was hungry, he partook of food; and never in any case worked a miracle for his own present benefit, nor for his disciples. R1754:6

The Lord afterward, on another occasion (Matt. 16:9,10), sought to further impress upon the minds of his apostles the lesson of faith which this miracle was given to establish in them specially. R1754:6

Unto his disciples -- It was those who scattered to others who had their haversacks filled in the end and gained the supply for themselves. R3504:2

Gather up -- For their own future use. R2644:4

The first lesson was generosity, the second lesson was economy. So it should be with us, our generosity should be equal to our disposition to economize. R3504:1

Showing, first of all, the immensity of the miracles, and secondly, the lesson that we are to use the means which God has put into our hands, and not to expect unnecessary miracles. R2644:5

The disciples and the multitude would be very likely to draw the inference that, where there was such a power to create and to multiply, there would be no necessity for frugality. R2435:5, 2644:4; SM657:1

The same lesson might also be applied to our spiritual food. We are not to treat truths carelessly when we have eaten thereof and found satisfaction to our souls; but are to gather and preserve them for further and future use. R2644:5, 2436:6

The fragments that remain -- It seems reasonable to suppose that the small fragments left by the multitude were allowed to go to the birds and squirrels, and that the fragments gathered by the apostles were those broken by our Lord. R3781:4

Let us take heed to the fragments, too, that we may render up a faithful record of our stewardship, that we may see to it that the talents entrusted to us have not been buried in the earth. R3781:6

That nothing be lost -- None of the Lord's blessings and mercies are to be wasted. Willful waste brings woeful want. R3504:1, 3333:3, 2435:6
The Lord's people should be careful to avoid wasting, in earthly food and temporal matters, not because of selfishness and a desire to hold and accumulate, but, as the Apostle explains, "that ye may have to give."
(Eph. 4:28) R2435:6

If our Lord Jesus were here, none of us would expect him to be wasteful. Our Lord was most economical. Although there was plenty of food to feed the multitude, he told his disciples to "gather up the fragments."

R5002:4, 4139:5, 3504:1

The lesson of economy is appropriate to us all, but in our experience the poorest of the world and of the Lord's people often have greatest need for this lesson. R3781:5, 3504:1, 2644:5

John 6:13

Twelve baskets -- Each of them gathered the full of his bag or satchel or haversack, in our text called a basket. R3504:1, 2435:5

Which they were accustomed to carry in their journeys. R2644:4, 2435:5

The memory is our "basket," our haversack, and divine provision is so bountiful that every disciple may gather his basket full. R2435:6

Those who distribute will find in the end their own vessels full. R2436:4

John 6:14

The miracle -- The only miracle particularly described in all four Gospels. R3502:3

An operation of divine power beyond our comprehension more than are the average affairs of life. R4139:6

That Jesus did -- A power Jesus had by reason of having received the holy Spirit, to do anything that might be necessary in God's service, and in the establishment of the Church, and the instruction of the people at that time. Q495:2

This is of a truth -- While the chief object of the miracle was doubtless to reinforce and establish the faith of the apostles, its secondary object and actual effect upon the multitude was very similar. R1754:6, 4139:5

That prophet -- Doubtless viewing it as an indication that if Jesus were proclaimed a King, he could supply his soldiers with food without a commissary department; and able also to give them the victory under all circumstances and conditions. R3504:4

As a matter of fact, Jesus in the flesh was not the great Prophet, though his work in the sealing of the New Covenant with his blood at Calvary was necessary before he could be made alive in the spirit. R3069:4

This great Prophet that God has promised is not a man, not of the human nature; but is the Lord of glory who has bought the whole world at the cost of his own life. R3069:4

Still further, from the divine standpoint, our Lord Jesus is to be the Head, and the faithful of his Church are to constitute the members of this great prophet. R3069:5

John 6:15

Make him a king -- After the miracle of feeding the five thousand.

R1755:1

A repetition of the temptation in the wilderness. R1755:1

To have encouraged any such matter would be to have opposed what he recognized to be the divine arrangement. R3332:3

He departed -- He had not the slightest intention of alluring the people to his support and for the establishment of an earthly kingdom. R3850:4

Knowing that such was not the Father's plan. R1755:1

Our Lord's constant effort was to avoid publicity; to prevent his miracles and teachings from inciting the people, yet he constantly brought these testimonies or evidences of his authority and Messiahship to the notice of the Jewish clergy. C168; R4139:6

The most famous of earth's heroes have been its warriors; Alexander, Julius Caesar, Bonaparte; but here is a hero who refused the honors of men, who instead of taking life, yielded his own that he might bring back to life the untold millions whose death has been caused by the tyrants of earth. R1063:3*

Later, on Palm Sunday, the due time having come, he deliberately planned his triumphal procession, instead of hindering it, as here. R2745:2; C150

Himself alone -- Possibly his human nature felt the force of the temptation to accept of present advancement and at once enter upon the work of blessing the world, instead of pursuing the long and tedious purpose of God. R1755:1

John 6:16

His disciples went down -- Jesus had a twofold purpose in sending them away: first, to have private fellowship and communion with the Father in the mountain, apart even from his beloved twelve; and secondly, to give his disciples the opportunity to think over the miracle and talk it over by themselves in his absence. R3333:4

He sent the disciples before, not only as a test of their obedience but to give them a still further demonstration of divine power. R4140:1

John 6:17

And entered into a ship -- As the apostles learned the lesson of the Lord's provision, the very fear of Herod and what he might do to Jesus or them gave way, and they were ready, by nightfall, at the command of our Lord, to return to Capernaum. R4140:1

The fact that our Lord's conference with the disciples had a pacifying and strengthening effect is evidenced by their return that same night to Galilee, Herod's territory. R2435:3

A great wind -- Representing the boisterous and troubled experience of the Church throughout the Gospel age. R4140:1

John 6:19

They see Jesus -- At the end of the age, in the midst of a great storm, the Lord appears to his people, and upon being received by them, their outward troubles and difficulties completely vanish. R4140:1

John 6:22

The day following -- After partaking of the miraculously provided supper, the multitude lay down. In the morning they looked for their benefactor, evidently expecting that he would miraculously provide for their breakfast. R4146:1

John 6:24

Seeking for Jesus -- Not from a clear apprehension of his divine credentials, but rather from curiosity and probably an increasing determination to push forward to the ruling position, from which they presumed he shrank from a sense of modesty. R1755:2

John 6:25

When they -- A number of them (we cannot assume very many) conclude that they would follow the great Teacher. R2651:1

John 6:26

Jesus answered them -- He preached no sermon when he performed the miracle, but allowed it to have its effect; but now, instead of working another miracle, he preached a sermon, using the miracle as his text. R4146:2

Not because ye saw -- His reproof was not harsh, though it was quite pointed. R4146:2

Because ye did eat -- Telling them plainly that theirs was a selfish or mercenary interest, and not the kind that he desired to cultivate, an interest in the truth. R2651:1

Probably more of the common people than the aristocracy became his disciples. Now, as then, the interest of the poor, like the interest of the rich, is mostly a selfish interest. Few see the King in his beauty, the beauty of holiness. Few seek him as the bread of eternal life. R1818:2
Perhaps there was never a time in the world's history when humanity manifested more desire for physical healing than today. We could wish that there were a greater appreciation of soul sickness from sin. R4313:2

And were filled -- The trouble with the whole world is that they have either earthly aims or no aims at all, and of the two conditions the latter is the worse. Those with aims accomplish something, making two blades of grass grow where one grew before, thus benefitting civilization. The great majority, without ambition, merely eat to live and live to eat, merely animals of a higher intelligence. R4146:2

Labor not -- There are two general classes of laborers: the world in general, laboring for the things of this present life, and the followers of the Lord Jesus, laborers also, with great difficulties, but they have found the great Helper. CR16:2

We live in a time when there is a great hungering for knowledge, wealth, influence, power, everything. Our day is full of philosophies to satisfy these various hungerings of the soul. Yet these things do not satisfy even the worldly; they still hunger and thirst. Nothing will ever satisfy them but the living bread, the truth. R3334:4, 2436:1

The meat which perisheth -- Earthly food, earthly comforts, earthly pleasures. R2651:1

The more people are satisfied with earthly things the less inclination they will have for the heavenly things, and the more we are satisfied with the heavenly things, the less appetite we will have for the earthly things. R3334:4

The new nature flourishes at the expense of the old nature, and the new ambitions and desires at the expense of the old. Likewise when the old nature flourishes, it is at the expense of the new in all of life's affairs. R3334:4

Though necessary under present conditions, his followers will remember that the heavenly Father knoweth that they have need of these and will not suffer them to come to serious want. R4146:3

But for -- Live for, labor for, and enjoy the things unseen as yet, everlasting in the heavens. E196

Meat which endureth -- A spiritual nourishment, of which, if we partake, we shall attain eternal life. R2651:1

The food that would develop in them, not earthly, but heavenly ambitions, and lead to their satisfaction, would be food indeed and well worthy of every exertion to obtain it. R4146:3

Sealed -- Indicated, marked as his appointed channel for blessing. R4146:2

Marked him, granted him the evidences and proofs of sonship in the powers conferred upon him. The seal was the holy Spirit, the holy power of God, which acted upon our Lord Jesus, enabling him to do the miracles. R2651:2, 1755:2, Q495:2

When 30 years of age, Jesus commenced his ministry by consecration, typified in baptism, and was sealed as accepted to the divine nature, by the holy Spirit of promise. (Eph. 1:13) R329:4

The holy Spirit itself is the seal. E246

What shall we do -- This is just the point that Jesus wished to bring them to and that he wished to answer. R4146:3

Work the works of God -- As Jews they had before their minds the thought that God had made a covenant of works with their nation, with promises of eternal life attached thereto--the Mosaic Law Covenant. R2651:2

Many today ask the same question, hoping to please God by their works, and underrating the importance of faith. R1755:4

John 6:29

This is the work -- Declaring that to believe on him would be a "work"--the only work that could possibly make them acceptable to God. R2651:3

There is work connected with believing; not a work with our hands, but a work with our heads and our hearts. R2651:6

Of God -- The work which God would be pleased with. R2651:6, 1755:4
The work most pleasing and acceptable to God would be their exercise of faith in him as the one whom God had sent in fulfillment of his promise to their fathers. R1755:4, 4146:3

That ye believe -- Not discussing the further step to the high calling of this Gospel age, but only the first necessary step in approaching God--justification. The thing necessary to justification is the acceptance of Christ as the Bread of Life. R2652:1

John 6:30

What sign -- Evidence, proof of our Lord's supernatural power and authority, proof that he was indeed the Sent of God, the Messiah. This was the object of the miracle, not the feeding of the multitude. R3503:5, 4139:6

Instead of realizing that they had already seen the sign, signet, or seal of God upon the Lord Jesus, not only in his spirit, but additionally in the manifestations of divine power upon them. R2651:3

No such gratification was granted them; they had sufficient evidence upon which to found faith had they been so disposed. R1755:4

That we may see -- What reason have we to think of you as the Messiah? R4146:3

And believe thee -- If sign upon sign had been given, the same "evil heart of unbelief" (Heb. 3:12) could reject ten signs as well as it could reject one--just as Pharaoh, who was more impressed with the first sign of Moses than by the succeeding ones. R2651:3

He gave them bread -- Messiah is to be greater than Moses. You furnished five thousand one meal and had the loaves and fishes to start with, but Moses fed our fathers for years in the wilderness without any bread as a start. R4146:4, 2651:4, 1755:4

They were good reasoners in some respects. Intending to stick close to the Scriptures, they would only accept a Messiah greater than Moses, able to feed them and all every day with bread superior to that which Moses gave. R4146:5

Moses gave you not -- Do not credit that to the wrong source. R4146:5, 2651:4

My Father giveth you -- My Father, who sent the manna in the wilderness, has now sent another kind of bread--manna, not literal, but symbolical. R4146:5

The true bread -- Pointing out that the manna given in the wilderness was typical of the true Manna, the true bread of eternal life--himself and the truth he proclaimed. R2651:5, 5279:4, 38:3*; PD34/45

Showing that the comparison between himself and Moses was not as to who would give more earthly food and of a finer kind, but that he would give a heavenly food, a spiritual food, which would secure to them a heavenly life. R4146:2

Jesus, the salvation which he provides, and the kingdom blessings which are coming through him and the privileges of association with him. R3781:6
As the body is nourished by food, so is the spirit nourished by Christ. R29:2*

Down from heaven -- Not merely like the manna from the clouds, but from heaven itself. R4147:1

If Jesus had no previous existence, if he had not a special birth, how could we understand these words except as deceptive? R5767:6, 106:5*; OV328:6

Giveth life -- This gift of God, this bread from heaven, was a greater miracle than the feeding with manna in the wilderness. R1755:5

John 6:34

Evermore give us -- Note the similarity of expression here with that used by the Samaritan woman to whom the Lord mentioned the gift of life under the figure of the water of life, "Evermore give me this water." (John 4:15) R4146:6

From remote history people from every clime have sought for health springs and health foods that thus they might have a longer continuance of the present life, and, if possible, an annulment of death entirely. R4146:6
It is on such longings of the soul for continued life that patent medicines thrive. We are glad that there is such a longing for perpetuation of life. It becomes a basis for further investigation for eternal life. R4146:6

This bread -- They did not yet get the thought, but rather were getting a natural thought, that Jesus was telling them of a still higher class of manna, the partaking of which would yield eternal life. R2651:5

John 6:35

I am the bread of life -- That bread of life is the truth, particularly the truth related to the great Redeeming work of Jesus. He is to be the Bread of Life to the world because he bought the world with the sacrifice of his own life. R5087:6

As the Church now partake of the merit of Christ's sacrifice, and become members of his Body, the one loaf, so in God's due time the bread of heaven is to feed the multitudes of earth. R5087:6

Part of the "table of the Lord" (1 Cor. 10:21), a board richly spread with a bountiful supply of divine truth--bread of life and meat in due season and honey in the honeycomb, and the choicest beverages of milk and wine, and of the pure water of life, clear as crystal. R1899:2

Cometh to me -- Not approaching as his hearers had done, coming across the lake, but as coming with hunger and thirst for righteousness, with a desire for the life eternal, and hence for the bread of life by which it might be attained. R2651:5

Shall never hunger -- Whoever mentally accepts the merit of Christ's sacrifice, and feeds upon it in his heart, feeds upon the flesh of the Son of Man; partaking of the privileges of restitution (or in this age, justification) provided in him. R2652:2

And believe not -- Their slowness to receive him, and the slowness of the people of Israel in general, was not an evidence that he was not the Messiah, but rather was an evidence that they were not in a condition to receive the Messiah. R2652:2

John 6:37

The Father giveth me -- It was not God's purpose that he should attract all the Jewish people, but merely that he should draw, by his gracious words and by his miracles, such as the Father had "given him"; such as were pleasing to the Father. R2652:2

Not all are called, not all are drawn. R5719:2

No one has a right to expect an answer to prayer except one who has become a disciple of Christ through full consecration, with the exception of minor children, one or both of whose parents are disciples of Christ. R5833:2

Shall come to me -- Having first been drawn of God through the truth (verse 44). NS344:4; CR131:6

In no wise -- The thought is suggested that there are many more worthy to have the Master's attention, that we are too insignificant, too sinful, for him to recognize. But faith holds on. R3848:3

Cast out -- Reject. R4476:2, 4147:6

Assuring us that the drawing of the Father which brings us to him will insure for us his aid, his succor, his assistance, his acceptance. Thus, if we fall it will be our own fault, because of failure to heed his voice. R4148:5

But he would also have us understand that it is no easy thing to follow him, for his was a thorny, difficult way, promising no gratification to the natural man. R540:3

It says not one word about his holding men who come so that they cannot go from him again, crucify him afresh and do despite to the spirit of God's favor. R1698:5

John 6:38

I came down -- In his pre-human condition, when in the form of God, a spirit being, Jesus was humble. He did not meditate usurpation of divine authority to exalt himself, to seek a name higher than his own, as Satan did. R5846:6

Not to do mine own will -- The Son was worthy to be the executor of the great plan of Jehovah, because he had no will of his own, but renounced his own will that he might be filled with the Father's spirit and do his will in every particular. E60

Our consecration, like that of Jesus, should be to do the will of our Father in heaven. The fact that you have any choice or preference as to what you shall do is an evidence of itself that your will is not dead. Consecration to a work of our own choosing merely, will never bring us the great reward. R317:1

Honey was forbidden in Israel's meat offerings to teach us that whatever is sweet to nature must be disowned, if we would walk after the example of Christ, who pleased not himself. R84:6*

The will of him -- At our consecration we say to the Lord, All my life is in your hands; do with it as you please. If it means joy or pain, sacrifice or pleasure, we surrender our own will in the matter. R5086:5
The Master always had this disposition of reverence for the Father, and of full trust and confidence in the divine wisdom, love, justice and power. R5846:6

Holiness in the sense of complete submission to the will of God; loyalty, a complete giving up of himself to the Father's will, whatever it might be. CR462:5; R5421:6

God is the great master workman and Jesus is the great chief agent in doing all the work God intended should be done. CR346:3

Because he had fully submitted his will to the Father's will and he had made the Father's will his own, therefore they were one. (John 10:30) SM493:1

Instead of being the Father masquerading as a man, Jesus was the Logos, the Word, or Message of God, whom the Father had sanctified and sent into the world to be the world's Redeemer. R5378:6, 3076:4; CR290:2

There is one God, the Father, and one Lord Jesus Christ (1 Cor. 8:6), and nowhere in the Scriptures are these said to be equal in power and glory. R4107:1

That sent me -- Nor does the Son claim higher honor than to be the Father's agent and messenger. HG297:2

John 6:39

And this -- In the next two verses the Lord seems to distinguish between the two classes of saved ones, verse 39 referring to the elect class of this Gospel age, and verse 40 to the general blessing upon mankind to follow this age, during the Millennium. R2652:2

Of all -- Everyone who obeys the leadings of divine providence, and attains to the likeness of our Lord Jesus in his heart intention (not perfection of the flesh), shall be saved in this great salvation. R2652:4

He hath given me -- The elect are frequently, as here, spoken of as specially given to Jesus, while the whole of mankind are referred to as his because bought with his own precious blood. R2652:3

Lose nothing -- Of such it is written, "No man is able to pluck them out of my Father's hand." (John 10:29) R2257:4

Not so much in respect to all who shall hear the tidings, nor to all who shall be drawn by the message of grace in Christ, nor to those who are called or invited to run the race of self-sacrifice, but especially in respect to the number who shall constitute the Bride of Christ, and to the character of all who shall be in that company. R2652:4

Raise it up -- To the glorious station of glory, honor and immortality. R2652:4

As the baptismal candidate gives himself into the hands of the administrator to be buried, and then to be raised. HG264:5

It is of God that the dead are to be raised, but by Jesus. Our Lord is the Father's agent in carrying out the entire plan of redemption. His power is delegated. He and the Father are one in man's redemption, though not one in person. R2001:2; F399

At the last day -- The seventh of the great week of thousand-year days; the Millennial day. R2652:4, 4148:4

That every one -- Not the joint-heirs, but the remainder of mankind whose ransom price our Lord Jesus has paid, and whom our Lord Jesus himself is to draw during the Millennial age. R2652:5

Which seeth -- Their blinded eyes being opened in that Millennial day, as the Lord promised through the prophets (Zech. 12:10); but not until the god of this world, who now blinds the eyes of their understanding, shall be bound for the thousand years. R2652:6

And believeth -- Even as the Father's drawing is not a compulsory drawing, so likewise the drawing of the Son will not be compulsory. R2652:5

I will raise him up -- To perfection also, though theirs will be an earthly, and not like the others, a heavenly perfection. R2652:6

If it be remembered that it is "God in Christ reconciling the world to himself," (2 Cor. 5:19) it will be seen that we honor both the Father and the Son. R27:5*

At the last day -- But not at the beginning as with the "elect" of the "first resurrection." R2652:6

John 6:41

Bread which came down -- The Passover bread was unleavened. Leaven is a type of sin. Had he been of the Adamic stock he would have been leavened; but his life, unblemished, came from a higher, heavenly nature, changed to earthly conditions. R5192:4, 2772:3, 2272:1, 1636:6, 840:6, 466:6

John 6:42

The son of Joseph -- Evidently a sarcastic intimation that he had been born out of fornication. Even if Joseph was not his father, yet if he came into the world by natural generation, it would have been true, for he was conceived before Joseph had taken Mary as his wife. R443:3

Contrast this with the respectful conduct of the fallen angels, who said: "Thou art the Son of God," (Mark 3:11) and "I know thee who thou art, the Holy One of God." (Mark 1:24) R1680:1

John 6:44

No man -- There is a measure of selection or election as respects the class invited to constitute "the Bride, the Lamb's wife." "No man taketh this honor unto himself, but he that is called." (Heb. 5:4) R4883:1; HG410:1

God has divided mankind into two general classes--one is in sympathy with its environment and general alienation from God, not only outwardly at enmity, but in their hearts loving sin; the other, much fewer in number, has a love for righteousness and an opposition to iniquity, and loathes their own weaknesses and blemishes. NS624:2; R5303:3; CR392:4

The Church is not privileged to say, "Come," to whosoever wills, but only to "as many as the Lord our God shall call." (Acts 2:39) HG410:1; NS743:4
There is an exclusiveness about this: the time had not yet come, mentioned in Revelation, when the water of life shall flow freely, and whosoever will may come. (Rev. 22:17) R4148:1, 2508:1; Q824:4

The Father is not drawing all mankind now, but only believers. He is leaving the general work of drawing the worldly for the next age, the Messianic age. R4783:6

Jesus declared, "I pray not for the world, but for them which thou hast given me." (John 17:9) Similarly our prayers and appeals do not need to be put forth on behalf of the world in general, but in the interest of those who have the ear to hear and the heart to respond to the heavenly calling of this Gospel age. NS644:1; R5939:4, 2508:1

God's missionary enterprise is much grander and more comprehensive than Christendom's. God's plan is first to elect a "Royal Priesthood" during this age and have that priesthood teach, rule and bless the world in the next age. R536:2

It is only the few who are being drawn to Christ by a knowledge of the truth now, because only a few have a knowledge of the truth. R4783:6

Can come to me -- As a disciple, a follower, a joint-heir in my kingdom; as a member of my Bride. R4516:3

In the present time, in the narrow way. R2759:5

The Father points them to the Son through the knowledge of simple truths. R5133:6

The Son receives these and acquaints them with the fact that he has already made atonement for sin. Then he guides them to the further privilege of the Gospel age, that they might become joint-sacrificers with him. R4352:5

Those whom the Father draws to Christ he, as an elder brother, receives as "brethren," and assists in walking in his footsteps in the narrow way of self-sacrifice, even unto death. E146

No one will receive the holy Spirit without having been drawn to Christ, but some may be drawn without receiving the holy Spirit. R5133:6

Except the Father -- I will not draw my Bride, the Church, but the Father. R2759:5

The drawing is of God, and through his Word. Q282:1

But a small proportion of the nations was at that time drawn to Jesus by the Father through the word of grace. The great majority were blinded. R2615:2

The Gospel Church, under the Abrahamic Covenant arrangement, are drawn to the Son by the Father, "Given unto him." The world in the next age the Father will not draw, but the Lord Jesus will draw them to himself.

R4387:6, 4049:1

Illustrated by the Vine, "the Father's own right hand planting." (Psa. 80:15); the Father making a marriage supper for his Son (Matt. 22:2); and John 10:29, "My Father, which gave them me, is greater than all." R4476:2

Jesus was the Father's agent, and he received them in harmony with the Father's arrangement. R5683:6

We must be drawn first before we can come to Jesus, and then we must come to Jesus before we can have access to the Father. (John 14:6) CR40:5

Our primary drawing and calling is of the Father up to the time when we accept his grace in Christ and make our consecration. R4645:2

The Father is credited with doing all the drawing of the Church, although our Lord Jesus and all the faithful of God have been his servants, represented by Eliezer, doing the calling and drawing in the Father's name. R1227:3; PD27/38

Thus we do not read that Isaac called his own bride and then acted as a mediator between her and his father, nor that Isaac had anything to do with the drawing at all. R4516:3, 4476:2; PD27/38; NS293:4

When the Church shall have been exalted as members of his Body, raised up as sharers in the first resurrection, then he will begin his drawing work, which will not be confined to a special class. R2759:5, 1227:1

During the Millennium Christ will "draw all men unto himself" (John 12:32) whether they hear or forbear. All the drawing thus far done has been done by the Heavenly Father himself; not by a mediator, nor by an advocate. R4476:2, 4148:2, 2330:5, 1056:2; E146, 414; HG181:6; NS568:6

Draw him -- Invite him. PD27/38; Q193:3

All of God's dealings with his intelligent creatures are on this principle of drawing, persuading and constraining, and not of compulsion. R1227:1; HG353:6

Instead of urging everybody to become his disciples and threatening them if they do not, the Master treats the subject in the very opposite style. NS344:5

There is room for difference of opinion in which the Father "draws" and "calls" the Church. Our understanding is that the Lord exercises a favorable influence upon a certain class only--an enlightening influence to the extent of bringing this class to a knowledge of Christ and of forgiveness of sins through faith in Christ. NS743:5

By the truth and by his providences. R1056:2

Whenever the truth reaches the heart and understanding, its influence is to draw, although the drawing may be resisted, not only in the present age, but also in the age to come. (Acts 3:23) R4783:6

That which the Scriptures speak of as a drawing of God seems to be a natural drawing along the lines of the flesh, not toward things sinful, but toward holiness, yet along lines which belong to the natural man. R5583:1

With some of the race, desire for God and righteousness has prevailed above the stupefying influence of the world, the flesh and the Devil. This class are drawn by the natural inclination of their minds Godward. SM428:5; R5320:2, 5053:6

In these persons that endowment which God gave to Adam and pronounced "very good" has been less impaired by the fall than it has been in others. Such naturally desire to have God's approval and his blessings. R5133:6, 5201:2

While those not born of religious parents have had a large experience with sin and alienation from God, others, born in a measure of justification, have had a measure of fellowship with God, as children of believers. These are in a favorable condition to be drawn of God. SM429:T

The Gospel message knows nothing of the ordinary mission work of rescuing drunkards, harlots and the profane. While not refusing publicans and harlots it did not go about seeking them. It waited for them to seek for righteousness. SM176:3

Even when drawn, by the opening of our mental eyes to the truth, under the unfavorable conditions of the present time, we are not compelled to follow; we may "go away." (Verses 66 & 67) R1056:2

The Father draws to the Son for "justification by faith in his blood" those who love righteousness and hate iniquity, and are feeling after God, if haply they might find him. R4352:5, 4341:4

As Abraham did not send Eliezer to draw any maiden whom he met, but only one from among those already related to him, so God does not draw sinners (represented by the Canaanites, to whom Eliezer was not to go,) but only such as are already justified, in harmony with God--friends of God. R1227:2; NS293:5

Some of the Lord's followers were drawn to him of the Father before Calvary, and others have been drawn throughout the Gospel age; as the Apostle declares, "Even so many as the Lord our God shall call." (Acts 2:39) R4367:6

I will raise him up -- In due time he will draw all men, and it is for this purpose that the Little Flock is exalted and associated with him, that the knowledge of the Lord shall fill the earth and the power of adverse influences be broken. R1055:4

Exalt him. R2759:5

At the last day -- The Millennial day, "early in the morning" of that day. (Psa. 46:5) R2759:5, 2652:4

Taught of God -- The source of all true knowledge. (John 17:17; Prov. 2:6) R3550:3

God, however, does not teach all in the same time and way. For 6,000 years he has been teaching the world the exceeding sinfulness of sin and its bitter results. By and by he will teach them the blessedness of virtue and holiness. R385:1*

If led of the Spirit, we will take God's point of view in every matter.

Our love will beget a desire to know that we may do his will; our diligence and patience will leave no means unemployed to gain that knowledge; our faith in God will lead us to place implicit confidence in his word; our meek humility will cast out pride and love of self-exaltation. R385:5*

God uses various instrumentalities for communicating his instructions.

They may come through his disciples, teachers, evangelists, etc., but they must all be recognized as emanating from the Father through the Son. Q843:4

Our Lord Jesus was and still is the Great Teacher of men by the appointment of the Heavenly Father, the great Master Teacher. Likewise our Lord appointed special teachers under him, the apostles, and still others, to be under shepherds of the Lord's flock. E50

As our Redeemer said to Peter, "Blessed art thou, Simon Barjona, for flesh and blood hath not revealed this unto thee, but my Father in heaven."

(Matt. 16:17) NS516:5

We should avoid following human teachers as leaders. Their teachings should be received only so far as they harmonize with the word of truth.

R386:4*

Whoever the human agent may be that God has made use of to bring you a knowledge of the truth, he was simply an index finger to help you trace it for yourself on the sacred page. R1321:1

God is teaching us through the words of the Bible. CR454:5

This precious truth is God's message to you, not man's. No such high and glorious hope could ever have entered into the mind of mortal man, had God not revealed it by his Spirit. R1321:2

No one can be a true child of God, "taught of God," and have reached an advanced position in the school of Christ, without having come to an appreciation of the spirit of liberty, which is associated with the spirit of truth, without wishing liberty of conscience for himself, and without wishing to grant similar liberty to others. NS64:1

It is not God's plan to build each member up in the knowledge of the truth independent of every other member. Each member of the Body must perform its part toward the building up of the whole Body. R386:1*

Kept from the Adversary's blinding influences, and on the contrary have the truth revealed to them. R2268:1

Thus able to comprehend the dark and "hard sayings" (Verse 60) of Jesus, the meaning of which cannot be made plain to the masses, though even the world may be taught what they do not mean. NS307:3

The letter and the spirit of the divine word being the keys of the mystery of God. R2419:3

The Master desired that the disciples should come under divine, providential instruction, which he indicated would come through the Word of God. R5319:6

In his own appointed way God would bring to our attention whatever feature of divine truth would be "meat in due season" (Matt. 24:45) for the household of faith. R4685:4, 5615:4

The fact that the Great Teacher is present superintending the "harvest" work is, we believe, a further assurance along this line. R3856:5

That hath heard -- No man can act unless he first hear. Q282:1

Those of mankind who have no ear to hear, or who never hear the message, are not drawn, are not called. Q282:1

If there were twenty people outside the door, and of the twenty, ten were deaf, and I went out the door and shouted aloud, "Every one of you that will, come in, I will give you a ten dollar bill!" How many did I call? Only those that had the ear. Q282:1

Cometh unto me -- This is the sole object of truth. It is not given merely to gratify curiosity, nor simply to reveal God's character, but by that revelation to transform us into his likeness. R385:6*

All who believed Moses and were taught of God were able to receive him when he was present in the flesh. R40:1*

John 6:46

Not that any man -- If Joseph had been his father, this would not have been the fact, for his (supposed) "father and mother" they knew (verse 42). R443:3

John 6:47

Believeth on me -- Not merely a mental assent to some facts connected with the divine plan of salvation, but a faith in the atonement sacrifice and conduct in accord with its opposition to sin; a living faith which manifests itself in obedience of heart. F160

Hath everlasting life -- Not that believers have everlasting life in the full sense of the word, rather that consecrated believers are begotten to newness of life, have the new life begun in them. F161

He made these statements before they had received the holy Spirit at Pentecost. This was treating them as though they had the full initiation into the divine family. R5683:6

John 6:48

Bread of life -- "Bread is the staff of life" amongst all mankind, the main dependence for this present life, and hence the appropriateness of the figure of speech which likens our Lord to the bread which imparts sustenance to the new life. R2291:3

The truth which brings us to the privilege of manifesting faith and obedience, and thus "laying hold on eternal life." (1 Tim. 6:19) R1878:3; E386

John 6:49

Did eat manna -- A beautiful figure of the supply of grace in Christ. As it needed to be gathered daily, so our gathering is to be day by day. Feeding on the heavenly bread is to be a continuous privilege. R4012:5

Typifying spiritual food, the word of God, but in a deeper meaning, referring not only to the written word, but to the living Word, the true Bread of Life. R360:1*

Some of this manna was put into the golden pot and hidden in the ark, illustrating immortality which the "Little Flock" shall enjoy, while, instead of this, the remainder will have eternal life supplied to them.

R4012:1

As God did miraculously preserve from corruption the manna in the golden bowl, so it will not surprise us if, in the Kingdom, God shall show to the world the body of flesh--not permitted to corrupt, but preserved as an everlasting testimony of infinite love and perfect obedience. B130

Typified our Lord's flesh. R5343:1

And are dead -- The type could sustain the natural life only for a brief season, but the real bread sustains spiritual life forever. In either case, however, the bread must be eaten. R38:3*

John 6:50

This is the bread -- Along with the lamb, the Jew partook of unleavened bread, pure, unadulterated, figuratively separate from sin; symbolizing the precious promises which come to us from the heavenly Father through our Lord Jesus Christ. R2918:3

Down from heaven -- Truly said, since he who had been made in the heavenly or spirit state had become earthly or human, being made flesh. R1014:6

A man may eat thereof -- To grow strong in the Lord and in the power of his might, we must feed upon him daily--we must appreciate and appropriate the merits of his sacrifice. R5279:5

And not die -- Though they sleep (in the Adamic death), they shall not be hurt of the eternal death (the second death) from which there shall be no resurrection. R1755:5

As the Israelites would have perished without food, so the spiritual Israelites would not have sufficient strength for the journey without heavenly food. R5279:4

John 6:51

The living bread -- It typified the life-giving qualities which he possessed and which he sacrificed on our behalf. R4011:6

If any man eat -- Feed upon. R2291:2

Including the thought of assimilation and absorption into the blood, signifying: (1) our appreciation of his sinlessness; (2) our faith in the fact that he offered himself a ransom for all; (3) our conviction that his sacrifice was acceptable; and (4) our desire for eternal life and the purity that is in Christ, and our separation from sin. R2291:5; PD67/79

Meaning the appropriating to his own use by the eater, of all the rights, liberties, and life which the perfect sinless "man Christ Jesus" possessed--no more, and no less. R1015:3

The trouble with the world is that they are starving to death, and have been since the Garden of Eden. R4247:3*

What he gave up when he died is ours--it is free to every child of Adam. But it will give life only to such as eat, by faith appropriate, those rights and privileges freely given to us of God through Christ Jesus. R1015:3, 936:3

We cannot eat anything that is alive, nor would anything that dieth of itself (by disease) be fit for food. There was no way to give us this life--food, except by the sacrifice of the man Christ Jesus, who did not die because his life was forfeited, but who gave himself a ransom. R1014:6 In the Passover, through the blood-shedding, the life of the Israelites was preserved; but the wilderness journey was before them, and they had to eat the flesh as well. Through the shedding of Christ's precious blood we have life. But that is not all. The journey of life has to be pursued, enemies overcome, and discipline perfected--this requires heavenly food. R1321:6*

An out and out contradiction of all the various claims to the effect that a knowledge of the historic Christ and of his sacrifice for sins is unnecessary to salvation. R2291:4

Of this bread -- Instead of the lamb would be the unleavened bread, representing our Lord's flesh. SM563:3

To eat the flesh of Jesus literally would have merely produced flesh; but to eat in the sense of appropriating his spirit and disposition is to partake so that our Lord's qualities become ours. R4012:5

The bread -- During harvest there is reaping. Then follows the gathering into the barn. After a little time to season, comes the threshing; then the winnowing. Next comes the grinding of the pure grain; followed in due time by the kneading together of the fine flour. Finally the oven does its work (well heated), and the bread is ready for the hungry. R57:1*

I will give -- He had not yet given his flesh, through he was in the process of giving it. He was drawing out its vitality, its strength, in their service, but would complete the work of his sacrifice by surrendering his all to death. R4147:1

To suppose that our Lord's fleshly body was raised on the third day, would be to suppose that our Lord did not fully pay over the price necessary for our redemption, and would contradict his statement in John 6:51. R4123:6, 1247:6, 253:3

It is our Lord who is sacrificing his "flesh." All the merit belongs to him. R4491:2*

As fleshly Israel gained a standing before God through the typical broken body and shed blood of bullocks and lambs, so do we in the merit of the sacrifice of our Redeemer. R1336:3

Is my flesh -- Man is of the human or flesh nature; hence if the spiritual son of God would give to dying men the bread of life, it must be flesh, full of life-giving nutriment. R1014:5

It was the flesh which he sacrificed for us, not his pre-human existence as a spirit being; although that was laid down, and its glory laid aside, in order that he might take our human nature. R5870:6, 2772:3

The new creature's life was not given for the life of the world, the new creature was not sacrificed for sins. R4108:5

Flesh and blood uniformly represent human nature. (Matt. 16:17; John 1:14; Col. 1:22; Phn.16; 1 Cor. 15:50; 1 Pet. 1:24, 3:18, 4:1) R611:2

The fact that our Lord Jesus was holy, harmless, undefiled and separate from sinners, and without any contamination from Father Adam, and hence free from sin, permitted him to be the Redeemer of Adam and his race. R2772:3, 2291:3

As it was the mission of our Lord not to rule or judge the world at his first advent, but to lay down his life for the world; so it is the mission of the Church not to rule or judge the world but to "lay down our lives for the brethren." (1 John 3:16) R2415:3

The Church is to be counted in as part of that "flesh;" as Paul states, "They two shall be one flesh...I speak concerning Christ and the church." (Eph. 5:31,32) R4491:2*

Which I -- The new creature did the sacrificing of the man Christ Jesus, and was the one recognized of the Father. R4108:5

Will give -- Jesus kept the law inviolate, therefore he had a right to life, hence the Law did not demand his death, but when he died it was willingly a sacrifice for our sins. R608:1

Never to take it again. Consequently, when he was raised again, his existence was in a new nature, that our benefits might not be interfered with, and also that the abundant power of the divine nature might be exercised in actually reclaiming from sin and death those whom he had legally rescued. R1592:1, 1247:5

Our Lord could not take it again without taking back the price of our justification. R1228:5, 253:3, 16:6; NS177:5

He did not conquer nor overthrow justice, but recognizing the justice of the law of God in the forfeit of the sinner's life, he purchased it back with his own. R251:6, 15:4

Therefore it could not be resumed by him, and constitute his resurrection body. R1995:6

Therefore he no longer lives the life in the flesh, the human life, but, having sacrificed that, he is now highly exalted and ever liveth as our divine High Priest. R1806:2

Nor could he return in the flesh. R1873:4

If by Jesus' flesh and blood we are to understand Jesus' spiritual nature, then Jesus cannot now nor ever be a spiritual being, seeing he has given that for the life of the world. R719:3, 611:1

As God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son to redeem them, so likewise Christ loved the world as freely to become the instrument of Jehovah for its salvation. R2099:3*

For the life of the world -- The Son of God was made flesh that he might give his flesh for the life of the world. He was transformed from the spiritual to the human nature, so that he might give an exact equivalent for that which was lost. R1673:3

The giving of our Lord's unblemished flesh as a corresponding price for father Adam's condemned flesh constituted the purchase price by which Adam and all his race was redeemed. R2291:4

As the price paid by the Lord was a corresponding price, this proves that those for whom this price was paid had lost or forfeited just such things as corresponded to what was paid. R1228:4

He did not purchase the divine nature, but purchased father Adam and all of his posterity according to the flesh--human nature. The Church has given up human nature, therefore never shall reach human perfection. But, while developing as new creatures, they need the imputation of the merit to cover the blemishes and imperfections of original sin. SM667:1

Then Jesus said -- While our Lord addressed these words to the Jews, he intended them more particularly for us to whom they have been communicated and by whom they have been more fully understood. R4147:4

Except ye -- The Church. Q279:2, 703:T

Thus by faith. R1800:6

Eat -- But they could not eat him while he was alive, nor could they even understand what he meant. R4147:1

The eating is as much a symbol as the flesh and blood. R611:3

Assimilate and appropriate by faith. R3132:2, 611:4

Eat and digest the truth of his uncorruptness, "bread from heaven." R1636:6

We do not eat the flesh of Jesus literally--we eat it by faith; that is to say, we appropriate by faith to ourselves the merit, the efficacy, which was in his flesh and which he surrendered to death on our behalf. R4147:1; Q703:T; PT389:1

The result of such eating by faith implies our justification on the human plane. R4147:3, 611:5; SM563:3

We have already eaten the true bread, Christ, and appropriated his virtue and merit--by accepting by faith, as his gift of love, the blessings secured for us by his death--"a ransom for all." (1 Tim. 2:6) R1799:5

We are to continue to eat that we may grow stronger and stronger, to appropriate more and more the privileges which belonged to our Lord, but which he surrendered on our behalf. R4147:3 Eventually the whole world shall be privileged to eat of that flesh, to accept the grace of God in the cancellation of their sins, and to realize that these blessings come to them because Christ died for their sins. R4147:4

The flesh -- Sacrificed humanity. R3132:2

Partake of his justification. Q279:2; R936:6

Primarily, the bread (of the Memorial) represents our Lord's broken body.

F465

Represents restitution to human privileges, i.e., the means to its attainment, and restores to man the life which he had forfeited--the life lost in Adam--human life, earthly life. R5342:3

Jesus was so in the habit of saying peculiar things that if they stopped to quarrel over them, they would have been led away from him. R5230:6, 2447:3

And -- There is a difference, we believe, between the bread and the wine. The Church, in order to be accepted of the Lord as members of his glorified Body, must share in both of these by participation. R5342:3

Drink his blood -- Additionally, those who are rightly influenced by the eating, drawn to a full consecration of their all to him, receive a special invitation during this Gospel age to drink of his blood. R4147:3, 611:5

Share his sacrifice. Q279:2; R536:6

The cup (of the Memorial) represents his blood, which seals our pardon.

F465

The blood is the life in Scriptural language, and hence ordinarily the Jews were not to drink blood; to do so would make them guilty, or responsible for the death of the person or creature. R4147:3; SM564:T
Those who partake of the blood of Christ in the communion cup symbolically represent themselves as guilty of his death unless they see it signifying his death as sealing the New Covenant, and their laying down their lives with him in the great sacrifice through which the New Covenant will be established. R4147:4

The world, when dealt with in the next age, by Jesus, will indeed have the opportunity to eat of his flesh--appropriate the merits of his sacrifice, but no opportunity of sharing in his cup, drinking his blood. R5342:2, 5087:6; Q279:2; SM564:T

The world will not share in the sufferings of Christ. The Lord said, "Drink ye all of it"--drink it all. (Matt. 26:27) There will be none for the world to drink. R5342:3

It is not shown symbolically anywhere in the Scriptures that the world will partake of the blood, and thus participate in the sufferings of Christ. R5342:5, 5421:4

All who accept this invitation to drink of the blood thereby pledge their lives in the same service for which he gave his life. This thought is entirely additional to anything in the Jewish Passover type. There is no intimation that any of the household were to partake of the blood of the slain lamb. SM564:1

Symbolically, the cup signifies the sacrificed life. The world will have no share in the sufferings of Christ, represented in the cup. R5342:3, 5421:4

The cup, his shed blood, the blood of the New Covenant shed for many for the remission of sins, had the same significance as the broken bread; our partaking of it also meaning our appropriation of the benefits of his sacrifice, thus securing our justification. R1800:6, 3880:2

Does not this apply to the sufferings of Christ even unto death, the sacrificial cup, members of Christ's Body? Are they not the only ones that have any life in them? R4489:2*

This blood and its use are shown in the Atonement Day of Lev. 16 and in the blood of sprinkling in the Law. (Exod. 24:8) R5342:6

No life -- Unless he had sacrificed himself for us, we could never have everlasting life. R1636:3, 840:5

To appropriate his flesh and its merits to ourselves we must acknowledge our own helpless and hopeless condition and rely wholly on him and his work for us. R1336:3, 5342:2, 611:4

They will be accounted or reckoned as beginning to live from the time that they begin to eat, but they will not be fully alive, perfect, until the close of the Millennial age of trial or testing. R3132:3

In you -- Inherent life--life in themselves. The difference between this life and ordinary life is that the former is inherent, and the latter maintained. R5609:1, 5342:3, 936:6; Q279:2

Not only did the breaking of Jesus' body provide the bread of life by which a man, eating, shall never die; but it also opened the "narrow way" to life, and gave us access to the truth, spiritual food, as an aid in its walking. R1636:3, 840:5

Hath eternal life -- Our Lord's statements in many instances are made so broad that they cover, not only the Little Flock, but the Great Company as well. These, too, will have eternal life, but not immortality; not life in themselves. R5343:1

John 6:55

My flesh is meat -- The typical lamb represented Jesus himself, his own sacrifice for the sins of the world. NS75:1

Indeed -- Meaning that this is the most valuable food and drink ever known. R5343:1

John 6:56

He that eateth -- Continuously. R2291:3

The idea that we are all right, and sure of the Kingdom because of an experience we had five, ten, twenty or forty years ago, is a dangerous one. What is our condition now? R38:5*

Appropriate his merits; justification. R936:6

And drinketh -- Continuously. R2291:3

Share with him in his sacrifice by rendering their justified humanity a sacrifice to his service. R936:6

John 6:57

Hath sent me -- Jesus was the honored servant of Jehovah, and his representative among men in the fullest sense. E43

Came down from heaven -- Whatever others may think or say of him, he claimed to be sent of God, and of heavenly origin. R1059:2

He that eateth -- Not only was it necessary that Jesus should die, a meritorious sacrifice, but it is also necessary that all who would have profit through his sacrifice, must feed upon him, must appropriate the merit of his sacrifice. SM562:2

The eating of the Lamb signifies our appropriating justification from sin.

We eat by faith, and therefore are said to be "justified by faith." SM562:3

The more we eat, the greater is our feeling of satisfaction in respect to our freedom from condemnation and our reinstatement in divine favor through the merit of our Passover Lamb. SM562:3

This is an hard saying -- A difficult saying. R5088:2

It was a custom with Jesus to express truth under cover, in "dark sayings," and to many this is one of the darkest. R611:1, 5506:3

Our Lord spake in this dark manner with the very intention that the majority might not understand. NS307:2

We can imagine their consternation, and to assist us in sympathizing with them we should remember that they were not spirit-begotten, because Pentecost had not yet come. R4146:6

Today, while it is generally recognized that Jesus did not mean that they were to eat his literal flesh, few have a very clear idea of what he did mean. R611:1

Considerably true is the claim of some that the doctrines of Christianity can be better gleaned from the writings of the apostles than from the sayings of Jesus because he spoke to none who had been spirit-begotten. R5088:2

Similarly, shortly after, when telling the twelve of his approaching crucifixion, Peter brought upon himself a rebuke by saying, "Far be it from thee, Lord. This thing shall not happen unto thee." (Matt. 16:22) R4756:1

Are not some who were co-laborers, now stumbling at the word that the suffering of the Church as a sin-offering by the High Priest of our profession is a hard saying and will have none of it? R4489:3*

Who can hear it? -- Nothing can be explained, only to such as are able to receive it by previous leading or training. R38:5*

So today there are some who cannot receive this teaching, which is the fundamental one of the Gospel of Christ. R4147:1

John 6:61

Doth this offend -- What consternation would follow in the churches today if the ministers of the Gospel should similarly declare the whole counsel of God! How quickly they would become unpopular. R5507:6, 3153:2

John 6:62

Ascend up -- A part of the great lesson that Jesus was no longer dead, and no longer flesh--that he is "highly exalted." PD71/85

Where he was before -- On the spirit plane. R5578:6

Proving the Lord's pre-existence. R1161:4

Identifying the "Son of Man" with the Lord of glory, and with the man Christ Jesus, who gave himself, and with the pre-human Logos, which came down from heaven and was made flesh. E150

We conclude that before his advent to earth he occupied the right hand, or chief position on the heavenly or spiritual plane, but not so exalted as his present position at Jehovah's right hand. R1059:3, 445:5* Referring to a difference in nature, in condition, from that he then had. Jesus had been in the world many times before, but never before was made flesh. R5622:4

Not merely a return to a previous place; rather, it should be understood to signify a return to a previous condition, a spirit condition. R5589:5

His memory extended back to his previous existence with the Father before the world was. R1916:5

The Bible nowhere tells us that Jesus took the human nature to keep it forever, and to return with it to heaven, where it would be completely out of order and out of place. HG627:6

Quickeneth -- Has an invigorating influence upon. R193:1*

The words that I speak -- Although the apostles explain the philosophy of the divine plan in great detail, yet in Jesus' sayings we find the very essence and kernel of the Gospel, and nowhere are the terms of discipleship more carefully laid down. R5088:5

They are spirit -- To impress his disciples with the thought that they should not take his words too literally, but should look for the deeper meaning, which they could not expect to get until after his ascension.

R5088:5

The words of Jesus were spiritual and could be understood only by those possessing the spiritual key, the illumination of the holy Spirit. R5088:5

It is useless to pray, Lord give us the Spirit, and neglect the Word of truth from whence that Spirit is to be supplied. Many seek the outward signs as proof of relationship, instead of the inward witness with the Word of truth. R376:3; E225

If we merely pray for the Spirit and do not use the proper means to obtain the Spirit of truth, we will continue to be at most "babes in Christ." E225

Independent thinkers, rejecting the dogmas of the past, have rejected the Bible also. These wander hither and thither, hungering and thirsting, looking for the Bread of life, and finding it nowhere, because they seek not where alone it is to be found. OV260:2

Jesus did not say that his flesh was spiritual, but his words. R611:1

They are life -- In the sense that they conveyed the great message of the terms upon which we may have everlasting life and become his joint-heirs. R5088:5

This quality of the Lord's message makes the religion of the Bible different from that of all the heathen--a message of life as well as of holiness, of forgiveness as well as of condemnation, of love as well as of justice. R4644:6

Moses, personating Christ, foretold the blessed influence of the Lord's words, saying, "My doctrine shall drop as the rain; my speech shall distil as the dew, as the small rain upon the tender herb, and as the showers upon the grass." (Deut. 32:2) R1937:2

There are some -- The Lord's preaching always produced two opposite effects upon the multitudes that heard him: he attracted one class and repelled the other. R5507:6

Jesus knew -- The Lord's message and leading were so much intended to shake off and repel one class as to attract and hold another class. R2257:3

John 6:65

Therefore said I -- We read nothing of our Lord's becoming excited to a frenzy and appealing to the people and teaching them that they were about to fall into an eternity of torture if they did not receive him. R4147:6

Except it were given -- Ye have seen me and believed not; because ye are not of the flock of sheep whom my Father hath given me to lead at the present time. R4147:6

John 6:66

Of his disciples -- Of course they then ceased to be his disciples and were no longer so recognized. A disciple is a pupil, a learner; and when a man ceases to be a student and pupil of Christ, he is no longer his disciple. R5508:1

Went back -- Because of the claim of heavenly origin and pre-human existence. R1059:2; E89

Some because the chief priests said, "He has a devil and is mad." (John 10:20) Some because they did not understand his teachings. Others because his teaching drew the line too sharply between righteousness and sin.

R2257:3

Failing to enter into the spirit of his teachings, failing to get the eyes of their understanding opened, because their hearts were not in the proper attitude. The way was too narrow for them; they had not a sufficiency of consecration or of love to lead them to the full surrender. NS382:2

The Lord's leading and the Lord's words lose their attraction to such, and they lose their interest correspondingly. R2258:4

Such siftings and testings of the Lord's disciples have been in progress throughout the Gospel age, and shall continue. R2257:3

This was at the Passover season (verse 4), when there seems to be a greater liability of falling into sin than at other seasons, a peculiar force of temptations. R3178:3

No more with him -- We are intentionally exposed to the various voices which would call us away from our Shepherd, and from following in his footsteps. R2257:2

If the Lord had undertaken the work of the ministry according to the methods pursued today, depending for support on the good will and contributions of the people, the support would often have been very meager. R5507:6

John 6:67

Will ye also -- The Lord turned to some of his faithful who had remained and who had taken his yoke to follow him. NS382:3

As our Lord was not expecting all to come to him, so he could not expect either that many would go on still further and make the consecration to walk in his steps in the narrow way and thus be partakers of his cup.

R4148:1

Every trial, persecution and difficulty of life is permitted to come upon those who have made the covenant of sacrifice to prove them, to test their love, to see whether or not their characters are fixed in righteousness.

R2258:3

Only the merest handful remained. R5507:6, 3153:2

There is just a tinge of disappointment in our Master's words. It was because he was true, noble and sympathetic, and loved his friends, the lonely sadness crept over him and found expression in these words. R1710:3
"The Lord your God proveth you to know whether ye love the Lord your God with all your heart and with all your soul." (Deut. 13:3) R2258:1
When various voices call in various directions, away from the narrow way of consecration, and sacrifice, humiliation and self-denial, in answer to the Lord's query, "Will ye also go away?" we will answer as the apostles of old. R2258:5

To whom shall we go? -- Peter had known what it meant to seek God's favor and everlasting life through keeping the Law; and had been discouraged, finding himself condemned both by the doctrines of the Pharisees and by his own conscience. Doubtless, also, he knew something of the various heathen philosophies. R1711:1

Peter's faith and hope had found in the doctrines of Christ a foundation and anchorage which they could not find elsewhere. R1711:2

So it is with us, we decide that although we have liberty to turn from the Lord, we could not think of so doing. We have formed a hatred for our former taskmaster, sin, and a dislike for the wages, death. NS382:4

For the consecrated to turn back would be to "turn back unto perdition," to the second death. R2258:5

Having once heard the good tidings--the words of everlasting life--for what would we exchange it? R1711:2

Those who will stand the test here will be just like those for whom Peter spoke in the previous harvest testing. We will abide with and follow the great captain of our salvation: in his words and love and service we live and move and have our being as the elect of God. R1711:6, 2558:6

We would starve spiritually if we went to any other than the Lord's table. R5570:4

The true people of God have no desire to go to any one but him. If they stumble, they recover themselves, avail themselves of his arrangements for forgiveness and press on. R5218:3

Having heard the calls of the world, the flesh, and the devil, they have seen the emptiness of all their false promises, and how none of them can give a satisfying portion. R2258:5, 2257:2

How long it takes us to learn assuredly that worldly pleasures are fleeting, and that they have a bitter which counterbalances every sweet, and that the tendencies of Vanity Fair are quite contrary to the new ambitions, new hopes, new desires of our new natures! R2257:6

Words of eternal life -- The message of eternal life. R3795:2

His teaching was that as a result of the ransom-sacrifice, which, by divine love and arrangement, he was about to give for all, all shall have the opportunity of everlasting life. R1711:1

He has been feeding us on the message of truth and life. R5570:4
The promised reward of righteousness through Christ, which he has promised to them that love him--namely, eternal life. R2258:5
The class who hear the Master's voice are most wonderfully blessed. These find in his word the promise of a blessing in the life that now is and also in that which is to come. NS412:1
We are so in love with the Savior, the true yoke-fellow, who has become our burden-bearer and the burden-bearer for the whole world, that we could not turn back. NS382:4
There is no other message of eternal life open during the present age than the call to joint-heirship with Christ, suffering unto death with him that we may share his glory thereafter. SM347:2
So it has been from that day to this, amongst those who have really heard and truly appreciate God's message through his Son and through the apostles. They have found in the Gospel message the only balm for this present life, the only explanation of the present unhappy condition. NS495:3
In the present harvest of the Gospel age, we have seen many of the "deep things" in the divine plan; clear lessons of the great Teacher--the words of glory, honor and immortality--words of eternal life. R1711:4

John 6:69

That Christ -- Peter recognized Jesus as the Messiah sent of God to be the Life-giver to the world, the true light that shall ultimately lighten every man that cometh into the world. (John 1:9) R1711:2
The refreshing evidence that the truth had taken fast hold of some. Not only was Jesus' heart cheered by Peter's zeal, but Peter also was blessed, "Blessed out thou Simon." (Matt. 16:16, 17) R785:2

John 6:70

Chosen you twelve -- There never were to be more than these twelve. OV395:5, 396:1
The Lord's specialization of the twelve apostles is variously referred to. R5002:6, 1521:2
The apostles occupied a special place in connection with his Kingdom, his Church, assigned to no others. R2820:1
The commission of the apostles was, in the main, the same as the commission of the Lord and of the whole church. It was to preach the gospel of the kingdom; but the twelve also were to be his witnesses to bear testimony of him after his death. R1521:5
Our Lord's object in selecting or ordaining the twelve was to so train and empower them, and to so establish their testimony concerning the truth of God, that other seekers might be convinced of the truth. (John 17:6-9, 20, 21) R1521:6

In making the choice the Lord doubtless took cognizance, not only of the willingness of heart on the part of these twelve, but also of the circumstances and fitness of the individuals for the pioneer work that was before them. R1521:3

The number corresponded to the sons of Jacob, the representatives and founders of the tribes of Israel, which in one phase of their typical character stood for the entire Gospel Church, and in another for the whole world. R1522:1

Seven reasons that these were ordained to fill the important office of apostles in the church; and four points on apostolic inspiration.

R1524-1526

The early Church never regarded the apostles as lords in the Church; and the apostles never assumed such authority or dignity. Nor did any of these leading servants go about in priestly robes. R1523:5

They rightly revered the piety and the superior spiritual knowledge and wisdom of the apostles, and regarding them, as they really were, as the Lord's specially chosen ambassadors to them, they sat at their feet as learners, yet not with blank, unquestioning minds. R1524:4

We have their teachings in the New Testament, so full and complete as to require no addition; and hence the twelve apostles have no successors.

E207; CR396:1

The early bishops, in accepting the title of apostles and claiming for themselves succession to the apostolic office, were honestly deluded, as much as were the people who thus acknowledged them. OV396:2

God gave the twelve to Jesus and he lost none of them save Judas, whose disloyalty had already been foretold. CR395:5

The other disciples, not so chosen, were also beloved of the Lord, and were doubtless in full sympathy with this appointment, recognizing it as in the interests of the work in general. R1521:3

Is a devil -- Or adversary. R439:1

Upon Judas alone, of all who had to do with his death, our Lord placed the full responsibility and guilt. (Matt. 26:24) R4909:3, 1962:5

Jesus lost none of the twelve save Judas, whose disloyalty had already been foretold. OV395:5

In his own due time God brought forth the successor of Judas, St. Paul, of whom it is written that he was "not one whit behind the chiefest of the apostles." (2 Cor. 11:5) God ignored the choice of Matthias. OV395:4; R1522:2, 1523:2

John 7

John 7:1

After these things -- At least six months later, quite possibly a year and six months later, than the previous chapter. Evidently there was a considerable time in which our Lord "could not walk in Jewry, because the Jews sought to kill him." R3509:4, 2437:2

In Galilee -- His home, to the extent he ever had one, most of his time being spent there. R2448:1

Not walk in Jewry -- Judea. R1069:3*, 2437:2

Sought to kill him -- The scribes and Pharisees were jealous of his popularity, ashamed of his following and afraid that he would yet become the center of a futile movement antagonistic to the Roman government and their own prestige. NS629:5

They had greater animosity toward Jesus than toward John the Baptist, for in him they recognized a superiority over themselves, and because the ignorant, common people heard him gladly. R4130:2

Later they also sought the death of Lazarus, who was a living witness to his Messianic power. R2448:1; NS629:5

John 7:2

The Jews' -- The usage of the Jewish people on this occasion is described in lengthy quotes from Edersheim and others. R3509:1, 2438:5

Feast -- From the 15th to the 22nd of Tishri, the seventh month, corresponding closely to October 1, but varying according to the Jewish calendar, which was calculated on lunar time. R3508:3

Of tabernacles -- Held in connection with the Day of Atonement and its sacrifices for sins, which typified the better sacrifices of the Gospel age and the ultimate atonement for the sins of the whole world. R3508:6
Dwelling in booths. R3508:3

Instituted at the time Israel passed from the wilderness into the land of promise. It commemorated the wilderness life and the entrance into Canaan, where they were privileged to enjoy their inheritance. R3509:1

Really the festival of the New Year, and a kind of thanksgiving occasion for the ingathering or harvest of the year. R3509:1

This and the Passover Feast divided the Jewish year. On these occasions people from all over the kingdom were expected to visit Jerusalem to spend a week in fellowship, in thanksgiving to the Lord and the making of vows. R3508:3

These two festivals represent the beginning of a year--the one the civil year, the other the church year, yet both might be termed religious since the entire national government was built upon a religious foundation. R3508:3

Was at hand -- This was the last feast of Tabernacles attended by our Lord, occurring just six months before the crucifixion. R3509:4, 443:2*

John 7:3

Go into Judea -- Where the most learned men of the nation would have an opportunity for seeing, criticizing and fault-finding, and if possible, refuting his claims and miracles. R3509:5, 2437:2, 1069:4

John 7:4

If thou do -- Either do something, and make yourself great in the eyes of the whole world, or give the whole matter up and admit that your claims to Messiahship are fraudulent. R2437:2

Shew thyself -- Their interest all along had been rather of pride than of faith. R2437:2

John 7:5

Neither did his brethren -- His kinsfolk. R2437:2

Probably his cousins, for cousins at that time were called "brethren." R3509:4

In olden times the expression "brethren" signified kinsfolk, including cousins as well as brothers. R2424:6

They seemingly could not understand why he was so revolutionary in his teachings and so antagonistic to all the recognized religious teachers of his day, while his mother doubtless still pondered the mystery in her mind. R1736:5

Persecution from his earthly kindred was not lacking. He was unwelcome in the home of his childhood. (Matt. 8:20) They seemed ashamed of the unpopular notoriety which his course brought upon them as a family. R1069:3*

So it will probably be in the end of this age with the Body of Christ. The separation must come closer and closer, with friend after friend departing. R1069:4*

Mark 3:20,21,31 (Diaglott) seems to indicate more a spirit of fear and anxiety on the part of the Lord's mother and brethren, than of opposition. R1736:5

His mother was doubtless always in sympathy with him, though she could not fully understand him. With a mother's love as well as that of a disciple, she shared his reproach and followed him to Calvary and the tomb. R1069:4*

John 7:6

Is always ready -- They might go at any time, but he was under certain restrictions. R2437:2

John 7:7

Cannot hate you -- They had not drawn upon them the murderous animosity of the most influential and powerful class of the nation. R2437:2

Me it hateth -- And they seek my life. R1069:4* Because of his faithfulness to the truth, which he came to the world to serve. R2437:2 In proportion as you "let your light so shine" (Matt. 5:16) the world will hate you as it hated me. Q321:4

If we are finding no opposition to the world it is because we have not been faithful to our Father's Word, and to our appointed mission in connection with it. R2437:3

John 7:8

I go not up -- Evidently not for fear of death. He felt it to be his duty not to ignore the Father's plan, so as to require a special miracle for his deliverance, that the divine plan might not be frustrated. R2437:3 While realizing that he had divine protection until his "hour" should come, nevertheless he did not tempt providence by going unnecessarily in the way of danger, rather shaping his course according to the conditions he found. R3509:4

We should not needlessly place ourselves in positions of jeopardy, expecting the Lord to miraculously intervene for our preservation; however we are not to deny the truth or forsake a duty for the preservation of our lives. R2437:4

Yet -- For our Lord to have gone up early to the feast might have provoked the animosity of the religious teachers the more. R3509:5 His delay in going was no injury to the publicity of his teachings, because the people naturally inquired for him, expressed wonder, discussed his claims and told one another what they had seen and heard in their own areas. R3509:5

Full come -- Neither the time for manifesting his power to the world, nor to lay down his life as a sacrifice. R1069:4*

John 7:10

Not openly -- Seemingly avoiding the very means of centering public attention upon himself which would favor the sentiment of making him the King. In the triumphal entry, he deliberately does the opposite. R2296:2

John 7:14

About the midst -- He may have known that the rulers would seek to apprehend him at the beginning of the feast, during the commotion incident to the arrival of the pilgrims. Thus he deferred going until after the multitudes had gone. R2437:5

John 7:15

How knoweth -- As a perfect human being his mind was active and strong, his reasoning powers astute, his perceptive awake to educating influences, his moral perceptions discarding all evil and his memory treasuring up all of worth. R1682:2

They knew of Jesus' power with the people through the spirit of the Lord and of his straightforward presentation of the truth. To this day this is true of the followers of Jesus. R5840:1

Having never learned -- In any of their schools. R5840:1

His humble birth gave him none of the advantages of education or social culture, yet even at twelve, all that heard him in conversation with the learned doctors of the Law were astonished at his understanding and answers. R1682:1

The class chosen to announce Jesus as King of the Jews was not a prepossessing one (being "unlearned"--Acts 4:13). It was so unlike the expectations of the Jews and out of harmony with their religious teachers, that they failed to recognize Jesus as the Messiah. R748:1

Similarly the perfect minds of the resurrected Ancient Worthies will quickly grasp present-day knowledge and inventions. And as Jesus taught positively, definitely and clearly, so it will be with these. D626

John 7:16

My doctrine -- My teaching. E50; R3726:5; NS773:5

Not mine, but his -- Our Lord's discourses were along the lines of divine revelation--the Law and the prophets. We should teach, as his representatives, along the same line; not human speculations and philosophies, but the Word of God. R3726:5

John 7:17

If any man -- Obedience is important if we want the Lord's help to understand the plan. R85:4*, 74:2*

Mere depth of knowledge, power of discernment, or even prophetic insight, must be qualified by love of the truth, faith in God and devotion to personal holiness. R782:1*

The intimation is that wrong-heartedness is intimately associated with wrong-headedness, as respects doctrines. R4334:2

If obedience to the Lord and to the truth brought us into the light, disobedience or loss of the Spirit of the Lord undoubtedly will lead us out of the light into the darkness prevalent all about us. R4334:3

Whoever, therefore, loses the doctrines of Christ after once having them, has surely done more than get his head confused; his heart must have been separated from the Lord previously. R5948:3

Will do -- Wills, or wishes to. R285:5, 210:5*

Fully consecrated to God and fully desirous of knowing his will and his plan. R5137:5

The Jews and the majority of professed Christians do not understand his words now; only such as have consecrated themselves to the Lord and have received the holy Spirit. R2419:3

For those who have made a covenant with him by sacrifice, a provision has been made whereby the willing, all desiring to do the divine will, and manifesting efforts so to do, are counted as righteous. R5137:5

If we are advanced in truth, we should also be advanced in holiness; and obedience to God's will is an important aid in knowing the truth. R24:6*

His will -- The Father's will. R4334:2, 5948:3, 3188:4, 2453:6, 923:1

Whosoever will resolve that he will no longer fear man, neither be in subjection to the creeds of the Dark Ages, but accept the Lord as his Shepherd, and listen only for the voice of his Word, walking only in accordance with its directions, fearing God and not fearing man, shall be blessed. NS400:4

God's will represents actual perfection of thought, word and deed toward God, the Body of Christ and all mankind. This is the divine standard set up, but we are no more able to fulfill its demands than were the Jews.

R5137:5

He shall know -- Only from the "inside" can the great plan of God be seen and appreciated, and only the "brethren" are admitted to this inside view. R2453:6

In proportion as not only the Jews, but all others, come into close accord with both the letter and the spirit of the divine Word, will they find in them the keys of the mystery of God. R2419:3 He is revealed in one sense in the statements of his Word, but he is revealed to the heart when his statements are understood; and the spirit of obedience is essential to understanding. We are to grow in grace and in knowledge. R74:2*

"Light is sown for the righteous." (Psa. 97:11) R4809:4, 1114:6

They shall not walk in darkness. R1114:6

These will learn faster to be able to prepare themselves for regal employment in the royal family. R285:5, 210:5*

Those who sacrifice, suffer and endure most in the cause they serve--the Lord and the truth--are "always rejoicing" (2 Cor. 6:10) because, having done the Father's will, they know of Christ's doctrine. R1103:2

While education and thought-habits have much to do with our way of looking at matters, yet to suppose that honest-minded men, whose whole desire is to learn the will of God, could each go to the Bible and arrive at dissimilar religious views, implies either that God's Word is not a revelation, or that fallen man is so twisted that it is impossible for him to reason with the Creator. R922:6

Of the doctrine -- We are living in a day when the very word "doctrine" seems offensive to the majority of Christians. Each denomination realizes its own system of doctrines is imperfect, and the same is believed in respect to all others. R5136:3

Instead of shunning doctrines, we should realize that they are the very things needed to cause the scattering of our darkness and superstitions, and to draw all of God's people nearer together. R5136:6

Evolutionists certainly cannot hold the fundamental teaching of Christianity. CR119:6

Whether I speak of myself -- Whether Jesus merely made up these teachings himself, or whether he was the active agent of Jehovah in what he did and in what he taught. R5137:6

What we all need as God's people is to put away human theories and other gospels and take hold afresh on the Gospel of Christ. These other gospels are other messages of hope, aside from the one which the Bible presents. R5137:2

That sent him -- Our Lord Jesus was and still is the Great Teacher of men by the appointment of the Heavenly Father, the great Master, Teacher above all. Likewise our Lord appointed special teachers under him, the apostles and others in the Church, to be under-shepherds of the Lord's flock. E50

John 7:19

Moses give you -- God dealt only with one man in connection with the making of the Law Covenant; and that man was Moses, who stood in the position of a father to the whole nation, the nation being regarded and treated as children under age. R5046:4, 1725:3

As God's representative on the one hand, and as Israel's representative on the other, Moses could be and was the Mediator of the Law Covenant between God and that nation. R5046:6, 1725:4

Was our Lord deceived respecting Hammurabi's law, palmed off by Moses as of divine origin? No! R3177:4

None of you keepeth -- Our Lord's censures of Pharisaism were not of their endeavor to keep the Law blamelessly, but for hypocrisy, claiming perfection and holiness with an outward cleansing, while their hearts were still impure, unconsecrated. B84

Since the Law was the measure of a perfect man's ability, no Israelite or any other man could get the blessings which it promised. All got more or less the curse or punishment, which failure to keep it threatened. R5946:3 They could not keep it, could not be justified by it. R4014:2

While the Jews had a blessing in the way of divine instruction through the Law, yet because unable to keep its requirements, they were specially condemned by it. NS18:5

John 7:23

On the sabbath day -- So, during the antitypical sabbath, the Millennium, it will be declared to all the world that "whosoever will" (Rev. 22:17) may have life and health eternal if they take the steps of faith and obedience. B40

John 7:24

Judge not -- The "doctors of divinity" of that time not only ignored our Lord's teachings, but opposed, and spoke evil against him falsely; warning and cajoling the common people, who heard him gladly, until they cried for his blood. R2432:3

According to the appearance -- We cannot judge each other's hearts. We are incapable; and, besides, we are forbidden. R4334:2

If we see one doing something improper, we might say, "Your conduct would seem to be contrary to the Word of God." If he should reply, "It does not seem to me that I am doing wrong," we must not judge or condemn his heart. R5245:5; Q384:5, 385:3

Righteous judgment -- There is a difference between judging the heart, which we have no right to do, and judging the conduct, which is right to do. But it does not follow that our judgment of another's conduct must always be right. R5245:5; Q384:5, 385:4

Do the rulers know -- The fact that he was teaching publicly, and the rulers did not interfere with him, led to this inquiry. R2437:6
The common people always referred to the learned. R5087:2

Then they sought -- When the rulers saw that their timidity was really advancing the cause which they hated. R2437:6

No man laid hands -- Because they feared the people, that too large a proportion would have at least a sympathy for his teachings. R2437:5
He seems to have exerted that power which belonged to him as a perfect man over weaker, imperfect men--the power of his mind alone, we believe, which overwhelmed and cowed their fierce passions. R1715:6

However great a power Satan may exercise over the world, we know that his power does not extend to the Church. In Heb. 2:14 his "power of death" should evidently be translated "dominion of death." R1271:3

His hour was not -- Everything that God does is in accordance with a definitely prearranged plan; and his appointed times and seasons are no insignificant or unimportant part of that plan. B25

The type could never pass away until its antitype had come, and the antitype of the killing of the Passover lamb must occur on its anniversary, the fourteenth day of Nisan. R2771:6, 3526:1; F461, 481; NS77:5

When the appointed time came for the sacrifice of the Son for the redemption of the world, then the rulers of the darkness of the world had their way. R1682:1

But when his hour was come he opened not his mouth, nor resisted in any degree the throngs that sought his life. R1715:6

John 7:31

More miracles than these -- Many of the multitude were favorably impressed and wondered if they could expect any greater miracles from Messiah than Jesus had done. R2437:5

John 7:32

The chief priests -- The special opponents of our Master were not the unbelieving world, but the unfaithful professors of holiness and of devotion to the divine Law. So our special opponents are to be looked for within the nominal Christian church. R2437:3

Sent officers -- Similar to the ones they sent to arrest him in the Garden of Gethsemane. R2467:6

John 7:33

Unto them -- Apparently they felt they must hear some rebellious, anarchistic or blasphemous utterances from his lips or they would not be justified in the eyes of the people in making his arrest. R2437:6

Yet a little while -- Only about six months longer. R2438:1

I go -- Jesus had in mind the murderous designs of his enemies, and that it behoved the Son of Man to suffer and to rise from the dead. R2438:1

John 7:34

Ye shall seek me -- The Jews have been seeking the Messiah during the eighteen centuries of trouble experienced since that time. R2438:1

Ye cannot come -- Meaning, he was going to heaven. R2438:2

Whither will he go -- The apostles did this afterward, preaching to the Jew first, and afterward to the Gentiles. R2125:3

The dispersed -- There were probably more "Jews" living outside Palestine, among the nations, than resided in Palestine. R2125:3

The scattered Jews amongst the Greeks, speaking the Greek language, and not the Syrian, the language of the Jews in Palestine. R2438:2

It was to these "dispersed Jews," "Israelites" of "our twelve tribes" that James and Peter wrote epistles. R2125:3

Contrary to the teaching of "Anglo-Israelites," the scattered Jews were not considered lost in the Lord's time. R2438:2

Teach the Gentiles -- It would not occur to a Jew that anyone claiming to be the Jewish Messiah would go to the Gentiles. R2125:3

In the last day -- The eighth day. R443:2*, 2438:4

The seventh day. R3509:3

Seven days were devoted to sacrificing, seventy bullocks being burned upon the altar, and understood to be sacrificed for the whole world; but this eighth day was especially a Jewish day, the most joyous of this thanksgiving feast. R2438:4

That great day -- The last day of the feast, early in the morning, a priest with a golden pitcher led a procession to draw water from the Pool of Siloam, to pour on the altar, apparently symbolizing the outpouring of the holy Spirit. R3509:3

When the religious sentiments of the people were at their highest pitch he called their attention to the deep spiritual things symbolized by them year by year continually. R3509:5

The feast -- The Feast of Tabernacles; about six months after the third Passover which was observed by our Lord: about six months before his crucifixion. R443:2*, 3509:4

Jesus stood -- Presumably it was just at the close of the pouring of the golden pitcher of water on the altar, with the multitude in the warm climate probably thirsty, aggravated by the sight of water, that Jesus made his announcements. R3509:5, 38:2*

Using the pouring out of the libation as his text. Presenting himself as the giver of the water of life, as in the more private discourse to the woman of Samaria. (John 4) R2438:4

And cried -- At the moment of the water offering there arose, so loud as to be heard throughout the temple, the voice of Jesus. He interrupted not the services, for they had for the moment ceased; he interpreted, and he fulfilled them. R2438:6*

If any man thirst -- All have some conception of natural thirst, but there are other thirsts and cravings of the human nature which need satisfaction; cravings for rest, peace, joy and fellowship. R3509:6, 2438:5 All who have sought to satisfy the earthly desires of fame, pleasure or wealth have found that they do not satisfy, but those who have received the water of life have received the only satisfying portion. R2438:5 Before anyone can come to the Lord he must thirst, he must have an appreciation of that which the Lord has to give--the water, the refreshment of eternal life. Our thirst is our desire. R4132:4

Only those who have such thirsts are called upon; "Blessed are they that hunger and thirst." (Matt. 5:6) R3509:6

In the present time our thirst is in one sense of the word insatiable, in the sense that the Lord's blessings are so great and so good that we can never in the present day and present condition have enough of them. R4132:5 Nevertheless, there is a measure of satisfaction in our drinking, even in the present time. As a thirsty one at a fountain drinks with relish, with appreciation and satisfaction, only to take more and more. R4132:5

Let him come -- The coming to the Lord is the approach of faith. R4132:4

Unto me -- Let us see to it that we recognize no other fountain than the Lord Jesus, no matter how much we may appreciate the channels through which the supply may have come to us. R4132:5

And drink -- The receiving of the Spirit is the satisfying of our thirst. All through life we are drinking at this fountain. We will not be satisfied until we awake in the Lord's likeness. (Psa. 17:15) R3510:1 Water is the symbol of truth. R4132:4

He that believeth -- In the present time those who drink are merely the sanctified. In Rev. 21 we have the picture of the Body of Christ in glory, the New Jerusalem, from which issues the water of life which our Lord referred to in his discourse. R3509:2

Out of his belly -- While the Lord will lead the Great Multitude to waters of life, they will not be, like the Bride, possessed of immortality, which the Lord describes as water springing up in his people. (John 4:14) R5865:5

Not fulfilled at Pentecost. There the Lord's followers began to drink and be united into one body. It is from this one body that the stream of water of life shall flow during the Millennium for the blessing of the world. R3510:1

Shall flow rivers -- In each member of the Temple class already is a well-spring of truth and grace. When these well-springs shall be united to the great Head and Fountain, the results will naturally be a stream of good proportions; a river. R2508:3, 3510:2, 2424:4

Now a well of water in each believer's heart, overflowed many times, then the pure river of the water of life flowing wide and deep from out of the city and over the world. R118:1*

The river of water of life does not flow at the present time. It cannot flow out to the "nations" until all the Little Flock as well-springs shall be brought together in the Kingdom. R2424:4

In order to be of the class from whom the great river of water of life will usher, it is necessary first that we come to Jesus and drink of him. As a result, all of the elect Church shall become minor well-springs in due time. R2508:4

Living water -- Water of life--truth. R3510:2, 2424:4; E386

John 7:39

They that believe on him -- They were not waiting as sinners for power. They were already believers in the Lord and already consecrated to doing the Father's will, but they had not yet been acknowledged by the Father. NS201:3

The holy Spirit was given as a guide and comforter of the heirs of immortality, ever since Jesus was glorified. R385:4*

The Holy Ghost -- Various called the holy Spirit, the Spirit of God, the Spirit of Christ, the Spirit of truth, the Spirit of a sound mind, the Spirit of sonship. The various qualities are all applicable to the same class, the spirit-begotten. R5582:6

The Spirit in the sense of a witness of our sonship; as a guide into all truth. R218:4

Not yet given -- No manifestation of the Spirit of God, prior to the first advent, was exactly the same as that upon our Lord Jesus, from baptism to crucifixion, and upon his Church from the day of Pentecost until now. E176

The holy Spirit exercised upon the prophets and under which influence they spake and wrote is different from the holy Spirit granted to the Gospel Church since Pentecost; a spirit of adoption and not the spirit of prophecy. R3510:1; E177

Throughout the Jewish age God was the instructor of the Israelites through Moses and the prophets; but they were not sons of God. They did not have the Spirit's begetting to sonship, but were only a house of servants. R5582:6

The begetting power of the new nature was given after Jesus' death, resurrection and ascension, to those who waited to be adopted from the house of servants into the house of sons. R2788:2, 2584:1

Previously the holy Spirit simply signified a holy energy and meant no begetting to sonship. Only persons fully consecrated are spirit-begotten now, but any person might be used of the Lord as a servant. R5637:3 Even the angels, sometimes used of the Lord as his channels in communicating with the prophets, were not permitted to understand the meaning of their communications, any more than were the prophets. E178 Jesus sent out the twelve, and afterwards the seventy as his personal representatives. He gave them of his own spirit. But they had not been recognized of the Father, they must wait for the spirit-begetting and anointing. R5587:5, 4593:2; NS201:3

The power by which the disciples did miracles then, while it was holy spirit or holy power, was not their own, but the Lord's. He gave them power, but they received no power direct from God until Pentecost. R1416:6 No wonder the people were astonished at such doctrines as Jesus gave forth, for none could perfectly understand except through the enlightening influence of the holy Spirit, which was not yet given. R5408:2, 4146:6 They could not expect to get his deepest meaning until after the Master's ascension. R5088:5, 2456:5

Thus even the disciples understood not his statements of his coming death, and feared to ask explanations. They were only natural men; none were begotten of the holy Spirit until Pentecost. R5361:3, 5291:2, 2657:4

The Spirit dispensation began at Pentecost, after our Lord was glorified. R4908:5, 4593:2, 4146:6, 1962:2; OV407:3

This added to the difficulty of proving his resurrection to still natural men. It was needful to make this lesson relating to spiritual things so plain that the least of them might be fully convinced. R666:1; B129; D618; NS198:1, 655:6

At that time they must be taught spiritual things in a natural manner, in pantomime. NS198:2

Nor could they understand the times and seasons. B120

Jesus had many things he desired to make known to his disciples, and that were necessary for them to know, but they could not receive them as yet, because the holy Spirit had not yet come upon them. R2456:5

They were justified human beings, but not begotten new creatures, thus Jesus' teachings refer but little to the highest things. Though justified men, they must be begotten of the Spirit to comprehend spiritual things. R412:2

Thus there may appear to be, at times, a lack of harmony between the words of Jesus and those of the apostles. Our Lord addressed those who had not yet received the spirit of adoption, while the epistles were to the Church. R954:1*

Thus the choosing of Matthias as an apostle was not a selection by the Church under the direction of the holy Spirit, for this was before Pentecost, and the disciples were not recognized of God as the Church. R1891:5

Jesus was especially alone in the world; even his disciples could not enter into fellowship with him in respect to spiritual things. R2649:6
Thus, although our Lord proved to his hearers that his pronouncement of forgiveness was backed by power and authority, he did not explain the how and why of his conduct, and hence left their questions unanswered. R2584:1
They were still natural men, not fully begotten of the holy Spirit, hence unprepared to understand spiritual things "for the natural man receiveth not the things of the spirit of God." (1 Cor. 2:14) R2981:6, 5065:6, 666:2
Thus the dying thief, while having an abundant reward for the words of comfort spoken to our Redeemer in the hour of his trial, will surely not be rewarded with a place in the throne. R2788:2
Hence, though their prayers were answered, they could not "worship in spirit"; neither in "truth," for the truth would only be revealed by the spirit's guiding them into it. (John 4:23) R2070:2
We are to tell the heavenly things, but not to the natural man. R5065:6
The period from Jesus' baptism to his ascension differs from the period after Pentecost as the Millennial age differs from the Gospel age. The consecrated in these two periods, to a considerable degree, walk by sight. R4908:6, 1962:3
Not yet glorified -- The ascension of our blessed Lord to the right hand of power signifies his ability to "give gifts unto men." (Eph. 4:8) R1829:5
Being under condemnation, none could be adopted into God's family, begotten as sons, while they were yet sinners. Our Lord's death could not benefit them until he ascended to God and presented the price on their behalf. R2819:2
Until after the ransom price had been made at Calvary and offered in the Holy of Holies. R2456:5, 5088:5
He went into "the Holy Place" unglorified. HG23:2
He had received his glorious body in the resurrection, as shown in 1 Cor. 15:43, 44; but it remained for him to be honored, and officially receive divine approval. R2819:2
It was not possible until he had ascended up on high and presented the merit of that sacrifice on our behalf to the Father; not until it had been accepted by the Father. R3510:1, 5831:1, 218:4, 182:4; B120
The Pentecostal blessing was of the Father, but by the Son. It was the Father's recognition of the merit of the sin offering. R1416:3
Referring to the installation into the majesty of power. When the Scriptures speak of a glorious body, the glory of grandeur of the person is referred to, and not the glory or power of office. R262:2
The glorification, or instalment in honor and power, should not be confounded with the change, which occurred at our Lord's resurrection. Likewise the Church will be given spiritual bodies before sharing his glory. R2156:5, 169:5*, 168:5*
From the time our Lord ascended up on high until the descent of the holy Spirit was ten days. R2075:5

The Scriptures speak of the Spirit of God as a special influence coming from God upon a special class, in a special manner, since a particular event, and not before that event. R5582:6

Since glorification, the Lamb has been breaking the seven seals (Rev. 5), thus opening the divine plan before men and angels. We share this knowledge most because, the last seal having been broken, the scroll is open to all. R2156:4

Hence, the holy Spirit poured out upon the Church at Pentecost became a sure indication that at that time our Lord had been glorified. R2155:6

John 7:40

Many of the people -- How many, how few of the multitude who heard could gain any reasonable understanding of this message! R3509:5

John 7:43

There was a division -- Some approving and some opposing. R3510:3
Because there is no fellowship between light and darkness, there can be no peace nor truce between the two. In proportion as the one obtains control, the other is excluded. R3510:3

With us, too, if we let our light shine, those who love truth will be attached in proportion as their hearts are sincere; those who love error will become antagonistic in proportion to their lack of sincerity. R3510:4

The officers -- Representing the Sanhedrin; present in the Temple amongst the people, charged with finding some fault with our Lord's teaching and making it the pretext for a measure of insurrection, and further, the arrest of our Lord. R3510:4

And Pharisees -- What a sad commentary, that the men seeking the apprehension and death of Jesus were the most influential men in the holiest nation of earth; Doctors of Law, corresponding in Judaism to Doctors of Divinity in Christendom now. R3510:5 Why have ye not -- Is it possible that any man could speak in public and that keen-minded men such as you would be unable to entrap him so as to form a charge against him in violation of the Law of Moses or the Law of the Romans? R3510:6

Similarly, the soldiers who came to take him in Gethsemane were overpowered for a time by the majesty of his presence and obliged to retreat before him, though he rebuked them neither in word nor act. (John 18:6) R575:3

John 7:46

The officers -- The very men that were commissioned to lay hands on Jesus and deliver him to death. R646:5

Never man spake -- The man Christ Jesus "holy, harmless, undefiled and separate from sinners." (Heb. 7:26) R5003:2; E154

The teachings of Jesus has a positiveness quite different from the various speculations of the scribes. So it is always with the truth. Wherever there is confusion and mysticism, there is error and ignorance. R5408:2

While recognizing that he was far above their plane, they nevertheless were drawn to him because he was the burning (warm, glowing and sympathetic) as well as the shining light. R4967:3, 4675:5

He told the people that God loved them, that he did not despise them even though they were miserable sinners. R5275:6

They had never before seen one in whom was life: all others whom they had met, like themselves, were dying creatures, nine-tenths dead. R4107:4

We can reason together with God when we take the voice of his Son and reject the voices of the "Dark Ages." R3795:3

While our Redeemer's ability to teach came through the anointing of the holy Spirit, the public knew not of this. His right to teach consisted in the fact that he could teach, that he could make plain the Word of God. OV159:1, 151:5

The common people heard Jesus gladly, but did not clearly comprehend his teachings. Nevertheless, there was something very attractive in the Master's style, so that they would say this, though not fully comprehending. R3803:2

They perceived that he was a remarkable character. "All bare him witness and wondered at the gracious words that proceeded out of his mouth." (Luke 4:22) R4107:4, 3803:2, 1937:2, 1682:2; E154; NS629:2; SM263:1

He had allowed his words and his works to testify for him. R3788:2, 4308:1
However much we appreciate the miracles wrought by our Lord, that which appeals to us as the most wonderful manifestation is his teaching, his doctrine. SM263:1

As in John 6, they did not believe, although they recognized Jesus as a very wonderful personage. R4147:5

Truth, rightly divided and fairly presented, commands the respect, even of its opponents. Its symmetry and beauty will irresistibly stamp itself upon the mind. Paul's eloquence was this eloquence of truth; the result of a thorough understanding and conviction of truth. R646:5

The Lord's people are to set a guard upon their lips that they sin not with their mouths. (Psa. 39:1) In proportion as this is true, it will also be true that they will be wiser and more discreet in their language than others. R3511:1

It should be true with all of the Lord's followers that their speech should be with grace, well within the limits of reason and righteousness, and strictly in conformity to the Word of the Lord. R2437:6, 1937:3

It is so easy to say what ought not to be said, to cast reflection upon the character of another. Let us seek to be more like our Lord in this particular also--to speak as other men do not speak. R3511:4
"Thou art fairer than the children of men: grace is poured into thy lips."
(Psa. 45:2) SM55:1
Like this man -- Even his opponents recognized him as far beyond the ordinary of our race. E154

John 7:47

Are ye also deceived? -- Jesus' teaching of the people was weakening the power of the scribes and Pharisees and of the traditions of the elders. R5561:2

John 7:48

Have any of the rulers -- The Jewish clerical class--priests, scribes and Pharisees--represented that system as a whole. Our Lord so recognized them. He rarely rebuked the people for failure to receive him, but held responsible the "blind leaders." C168

Pharisees believed -- In accepting their suggestions and blindly submitting to their leadings, some missed their privilege, and failed to enter into the blessings of the new dispensation. So it will be with a similar class in these last days of the Gospel dispensation. D65; HG717:1
The secret of Israel's blindness was that the religious leaders relied so implicitly upon their interpretations, that they could not regard the humble Nazarene and his unlearned followers except as imposters. R5926:3

John 7:49

Who knoweth not the law -- Jesus perceived that those who sat in Moses' seat received not the message, and gave most of his time and attention to the lower classes who had not heard the invitation to the wedding feast. (Luke 4:16-22) R342:6, 2438:2

The theory of erroneous religious teachings is that ignorance and superstition are necessary for the preservation of sacerdotal power. Thus always has error hated the truth, and darkness hated the light. R5561:2

John 7:50

Nicodemus -- In his heart believing Jesus to be a teacher sent from God, though doubtful of his being the Messiah. R2437:6
Mentioned three times in connection with our Lord's ministry: here, visiting Jesus by night (John 3), and in connection with his burial (John 19:39). R4173:6

Carefully excluded later from the trial of Jesus before the Sanhedrin.
R1809:2

Saith unto them -- Defending the officers. R2437:6

Nicodemus cautiously interposed on Jesus' behalf when an attempt was made to seize the Lord. R4174:1

Being one of them -- Nicodemus, a member of the Sanhedrin. R2437:6, 1809:6

John 7:51

Doth our law judge -- Nicodemus was making a plea for justice. R2437:6

John 7:52

Art thou also -- We should not be content with neutrality in connection with the truth and its service, but be positive as far as possible, taking our stand for righteousness and on behalf of the Lord's cause and his brethren. R4174:1

Out of Galilee -- Even this plea for justice was met with a sarcastic remark. R2437:6

Ariseth no prophet -- Jonah, a prophet of God, whose prediction at another time came true (2 Kings 14:25), was from Gath-Hepher, in Galilee, contradicting the unscrupulous, or else ignorant, Pharisees. R3568:2*

John 7:53

Every man went -- The meeting disbanded, the conspirators angry because they were foiled in their murderous attempt. R2437:6
Nicodemus was not ready to affirm discipleship. R3485:3

John 8

John 8:2

Early in the morning -- On the day following the eighth or great day of the Feast of Tabernacles. R2438:3

This ninth day is a solemn day likewise, and is called "The Feast of Joy for the Law," because on that day the last section of the Law was read. R2439:1

Another view is that this was part of the discourse of the eighth day. R2438:6

John 8:7

He that is without sin -- Many who feel it to be their duty to speak slanderous words of others, if they would but hear the Master saying, "He that is without fault may speak against his neighbor," would be silenced. NS401:5

The country would surely be safe from lynchings if those who applied the instruments of torture would first see to it that they themselves were wholly without sin. NS401:4

They were all thus convicted of imperfection in some particular themselves. R3434:4

John 8:11

Neither do I condemn -- It was not by chiding and accusing the apostles, but because instead our Lord sympathized with them, interpreting their heart intentions liberally, that they became more and more his faithful followers. R3434:4

Go and sin no more -- Jesus was not forever blaming the people for not keeping the Law, but on the contrary, he was continually expressing sympathy for them in their weakness, and helping them out of them and encouraging them. R5095:2

I am the light -- Everywhere light stands for truth, for righteousness. Darkness represents error, superstition, sin. Our Lord Jesus, being in full harmony with the Father, was the light of the world. R5718:3, 5038:1 Only a few yet recognize him as "the true Light." But eventually he will "light every man that cometh into the world." (John 1:9) SM560:3 Now, enlightened from his Word, we, as his representatives, are the light of the world. We should keep our light trimmed and burning. We must let it shine, that those following us may not walk in darkness. R3243:2 The Spirit of Christ is the light which shines from the true Christian, which reproveth and condemns or opposes the darkness of this world. E293; R375:2

It is the light of God's truth shining in our hearts, which shines out upon the world. Thus seen not directly, but by a reflex light through those who possess it, the spirit operates upon, but not in, the world. R375:2

The Sun of Righteousness. (Mal. 4:2) R3509:2

His Church are invited to become associated with him as lamp-bearers; and if faithful in permitting their light to shine now, they will by and by be parts of that great Sun of Righteousness. SM560:3

It matters not that this light was not comprehended and appreciated by the Jews in the days of his flesh, and that he is not comprehended even today by the world of mankind; he nevertheless is the true light. R2409:1

Therefore this light was not prior to Jesus Christ. R5105:5; Q66:1

At this Feast of Tabernacles four golden candelabra were in the center of the court and pious men danced before the people with lighted flambeaux in their hands, symbolizing the light of the Temple amidst the dark night of heathendom. This was the setting for Jesus' words. R3509:1*, 2438:6

Another suggestion is, that as this Feast represented Israel's sojourn in the wilderness, the great light to be followed would probably refer to the pillar of fire and cloud which led Israel. R2439:2

On the ninth day the custom of the Jews was to take all the books of the Law out of the chest and to put a candle into it, in allusion to Prov. 6:23 and Psa. 119:105; symbolizing the light of the Law being superseded by the true light of the Gospel. R2439:1

Christ is the judgment of the world because he is its love, and he is its love because he is its light, and he is its light because he is its life.

R1329:2*

Our Lord is spoken of as being a great Light, in the same sense that the Heavenly Father is called the Father of Lights. (James 1:18) R5338:3

Of the world -- Not merely the light of the Church. NS792:3

He that followeth me -- We should esteem very highly all who may be used of the Lord as finger posts to point us to the Light, but not to follow them, except as we discern clearly from the Word that they are closely following Christ. R2548:5

Walk in darkness -- The reason for so much darkness is that, under Satan's misleading, those who see the true light to some extent get to following popes, conferences and confessions of men, instead of following the Lord. R2548:5

Shall have the light -- Walking in the light is understanding, acting upon and being in harmony with the divine arrangement, viewing matters as God views them. R2439:6

Of life -- Plants may live a long time in the dark, though they lose their foliage and their beauty; but it is wonderful how soon the sun will revive them and restore their verdure. R860:3*

Jesus' life-giving beams can vivify your soul more speedily than the natural sun can revive withered plants. R861:1*

John 8:16

I am not alone -- Before Jesus came, God did the work, but since the Son came, the Father works by him. R52:1*

I and the Father -- Jesus' work and the Father's are one and not distinct one from the other. R52:4*

John 8:17

Two men -- God the Father and our Lord Jesus Christ are two beings, not one. R802:5*

John 8:19

Nor my Father -- If Joseph had been his father, this would not have been the fact, for his (supposed) "father and mother" they knew. (John 6:42) R443:3*

Known my Father -- They who recognized his spirit or mind, and thus knew him, would also be acquainted with the Father in the same way. T85

John 8:20

His hour -- The type could never pass away until its antitype had come, and the antitype of the killing of the Passover lamb must occur on its anniversary, the fourteenth day of Nisan. R2771:6; F481; NS77:5

Not yet come -- Jesus exercised power whereby he walked away from his enemies. R5563:4

John 8:23

From beneath -- Meaning that he was going to heaven, and that they could not come to heaven. R2438:5

John 8:28

Ye have lifted up -- Clearly referring to the lifting up on the cross, not his exaltation to glory. R1054:2, 669:3

Do nothing of myself -- Unlike some who style themselves teachers today, neither our Lord Jesus nor his apostles attempted to claim originality. E51 A statement he no longer made after he was risen from the dead. R745:4

John 8:29

For I do -- The secret of Jesus' power with God was in the fact of his full and complete harmony with the will of God; and this likewise is the secret of power among all of God's people. R1945:5

We, being imperfect, cannot say this; but, realizing our imperfection, we can come with humble confessions of our shortcomings and faith in his love and mercy. Then we are accepted in the beloved One. R1945:6

Because, in Christ, they endeavor to do always those things which please him, they are able to approximate the sentiment expressed by him when he said, "I know thou hearest me always." (John 11:42) R1903:1

As with Daniel, where the king properly associated Daniel's faithful service to God with his hope respecting God's faithfulness to Daniel. (Dan. 6:20) R2502:3

That please him -- Hence God twice burst heaven open to explain, "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." (Matt. 3:17; 17:5) R84:1*

John 8:30

Many believed -- Our Lord's preaching always produced two opposite effects upon the promiscuous multitudes that heard him. It attracted one class and repelled another. R3153:1

Apparently the multitude of those who heard him were so much on his side that the officers of the Sanhedrin failed to take him; the division of the people was quite largely in his favor. R3511:2

John 8:31

Then said -- One of our Lord's discourses while at the Feast of Tabernacles, probably delivered on the last, the great day of the Feast. R3511:1

To those Jews -- At his first advent our Lord came to the Jewish nation, which was in covenant relationship with God. To these he granted the first privilege of becoming sons of God. R5506:3

Which believed on him -- Sinners are not called to discipleship, but are called to repentance and faith in the Redeemer for the forgiveness of their sins, justification. R2439:3

It was necessary that he should present the truth to those who were believing, that it might sift and separate amongst them. R3511:3

Not especially to the twelve apostles, but to the Jews in general who were sympathetically drawn. Nicodemus may have been one of these. R5506:6

If ye continue -- Continuing under his direction, under the direction of his Word of truth, faithfully and perseveringly that the grand object of this school shall be attained. R2440:1

It is a blessed thing to take the first step, acceptance of Christ as our Redeemer and yielding ourselves fully through him. But the reward of this step depends entirely upon our continuance in his Word. R5508:1, 3153:3

The idea that we are all right, and sure of the Kingdom because of an experience we had five, ten, twenty or forty years ago, is a dangerous one. What is our condition now? R38:5*

Hold on for a little while, you will grasp the situation in due time.

Exercise faith, exercise patience. R5506:6

To study and meditate upon them, to trust implicitly in them, to faithfully conform our characters to them is the implication. R5508:2, 3153:5

Their blessing would be in proportion as they were faithful to the light that would come to them. R5506:3

The relationship to Christ is a matter which can be dissolved. R2439:2

A disciple is a pupil, a learner; and when a man ceases to be a student and pupil of Christ, he is no longer his disciple. R5508:1, 3153:3

In my word -- As distinct from John 17:17, where it is the Word of Jehovah that sanctifies. Here Jesus says, If you continue in my word, you will become more and more acquainted with the heavenly Father and his Word. R5507:1

Then are ye -- As you fully become my disciples you will be granted a knowledge of the truth. R5506:6

My disciples indeed -- Those who finish their course in the school of Christ and graduate and become joint-heirs with their Lord, and ultimately become associated with him in teaching and blessing all the families of the earth. R2440:1

They were not yet fully his disciples; this discipleship would imply a desire to hear his message further, and a willingness to obey it at any cost. R3511:2

Implying a distinction between real and merely nominal disciples. The hypocrisy of merely nominal discipleship is an abomination to the Lord. R5508:1, 3153:3

Our Lord associates his Word and doctrine with true discipleship. R3188:4

The school of Christ may be considered a school of self-denial, of self-sacrifice, prompted by love and maintained by devotion. R2439:3

John 8:32

Ye shall know the truth -- This truth which our Lord gives has various aspects: first, realizing our enslavement to sin; next, that Jesus died to cancel its power; third, the time to free the world is the Millennium. R3512:3

When Pentecost came they were begotten of the holy Spirit. Then they began to see spiritual things, they were illuminated. R5507:1

Divine truth is found only in the divinely appointed channel--our Lord, the apostles and the prophets. R5508:2, 3153:5

This idea is compatible with that of heeding all the helps which the Lord from time to time raises up (Eph. 4:11-15; 1 Cor. 12:13,14); but it is the duty of each to prove their teaching by the infallible Word. R3153:5

We do not come into the knowledge of the truth at a single bound; but gradually, step by step, we are led into the truth. R5508:4, 3153:5, 2440:1

We have no commission to set before the household of faith anything which we do not believe to be truth. R1406:3

Not, Ye shall be "ever learning and never able to come to the knowledge of the truth." (2 Tim. 3:7) R5508:2, 3153:3

The truth shall -- Many tell us that it makes no difference what we believe--truth or falsehood--that it is by our works that the Lord will determine our standing. SM292:2

Where have we found any sect or party which has given special attention to Scriptural study, to an understanding of the Word of God, to an application of it to heart and life, with the desire for sanctification?

NS471:2

The truth will mark in their foreheads (Rev. 7:1-3) those who receive it, branding them in a way that others of mankind are not marked or branded.

R4880:5

Knowledge of truth and of Law was the ground of Jesus' liberty in denouncing the doctors of divinity in his days as "blind guides," etc.

(Other illustrations from Martin Luther and the Apostle Paul.) R402:1, 310:2

Make you free -- As soon as any measure of truth is received into a good and honest heart, it begins to strike off the fetters of sin, of ignorance, superstition and fear. R5508:4, 3153:6

The general effect of the light of truth is to break the shackles of superstition and to make people independent. R2440:1

The real need of the Church of Christ is still more liberty, until each member shall stand free and independent of all human bonds, creeds and confessions. F242; R5144:6

Only the courageous "overcomers" of those bound in the congregational fetters could even think of bursting the bonds which associate them with their food supply, their honor of men, and all opportunity they know for divine service. R5145:1

Let us be free from these awful dogmas of the past, free to love God, to believe his Word, to trust in and understand how Jesus tasted death for every man, to believe that he who redeemed will restore. SM33:1

Free from ignorance and superstition, and bold to declare the whole counsel of God. R1425:2

Not only free from superstitions and ignorance, but also from the service of sin. R2440:2

Not only made free from the condemnation of the Law Covenant, but made free from sin and death. R5507:1

This freedom is necessarily incomplete so long as we have this treasure in an earthen vessel, so long as the new creature must use the imperfect body of the flesh as its instrument and exponent. R2440:2

Those who make satisfactory progress will have in the resurrection full deliverance from sin, from all imperfections of the flesh, and from the flesh itself--through the power of the first resurrection. R5507:4, 2440:2

Made free, too, from the fear that we now see coming upon the whole world as the great civil and ecclesiastical systems that have so long ruled the world are being terribly shaken. R5508:5, 3153:6

The more you are getting of the truth, the more you are getting free indeed. CR14:2

John 8:33

We be Abraham's -- Touch a man's pride and you arouse his whole being.

R3511:3

Were never in bondage -- In this case our Lord's hearers resented the thought that the truth could make them free. R3511:5

How could they regard him as the Messiah when he spoke thus slightly of the Jewish nation and implied that in some sense of the word they were bondmen? R3511:5

The servant -- And not free. R2440:3

To some freedom and light are apt to bring as much bane as blessing, leading often to arrogance, self-conceit, unkindness, boastfulness, combativeness, dissatisfaction and general unhappiness. R2440:2

Bond-servant. R5149:5

To will to do right was present with them but not the ability to perform.

Sin had such a hold in their members that their best intentions were unable fully to control their words, thoughts and deeds. (Rom. 7:15-23)

R3511:6

Of sin -- Recall the Apostle's expression, "Ye were sold under sin"--into slavery to sin. (Rom. 7:14) R3511:6

John 8:36

Make you free -- Free from the bondage of sin and death. CR391:6

Free from the terrible bondage to sin, which has become so interwoven with the very fiber of our being that the process of emancipation must of necessity be long and painful. R1738:4

Upon certain conditions: (1) a realization of sin and a desire for reconciliation with God; (2) the renouncement of sin and acceptance of forgiveness; and (3) a consecration of all to the service of God. NS668:5

If, freed from sin and condemnation to death, one intentionally returns to sin willfully and persistently, he loses this liberty and becomes again a slave to sin and a subject to death--second death. NS668:6

Having been tied with cords of vanity and enslaved to sin with a cartrope (Isa. 5:18), the sinner often rejoices and seeks pleasure in his slavery, knowing not the only One who can secure liberty. R3893:5

It was the divine purpose that all enjoy liberty under the limitations of righteousness, of respect for divine law, and mutual love and respect for the liberty of fellow-creatures. R1737:2

Freedom to cast off all restraints of God and man, to pursue a selfish course without regard to obligations to God and the rights of others, leads only to riot, anarchy and destruction. R1737:2

To fully emancipate all the slaves of sin and death will require the full thousand years of Christ's promised reign on earth. When sin and Satan will be destroyed men can be entrusted with the boon of liberty. R1737:6

Now liberty to one class of men brings slavery to another. R1738:1

Ye shall -- Not the world nor nominal Christians, but merely those who come into special relationship to Christ by faith and consecration during this age. NS668:5

Free indeed -- For he is made free by the truth. R1658:5

The truths of the Scriptures induce individual liberty amongst Christian people, enabling them to rise above sectarian limitations to a clearer knowledge of God, and a fuller degree of separation from the world, its spirit and methods. NS389:6

In the same way, when a man is sick, he must give up his will and personal liberty to the physician who undertakes to restore his health. R1738:4

Freedom from the condemnation of sin; freedom from the bondage of fear concerning the future; and daily, as we submit ourselves to Christ, more and more released from the hereditary bondage of sin. R1738:6

Released entirely from both the law given in Eden and that given at Sinai. R1726:2, 970:6

Freed from the service of sin that we might become the bond-servants of another, even Christ. R5356:3, 3512:5

Reckoned free--free from sin and its condemnation, death, the righteousness of Christ being imputed unto them by faith. R1738:3

Before we can fully realize the actual liberty which God designed for all his sons, we must first become the willing servants of a new master, Christ, in order that he may accomplish our deliverance. R1738:4

The true teacher's place, and the true Bible student's place, is outside of all human bondage, free to examine and feed upon all portions of the good Word of God, and untrammelled to follow the Lamb whithersoever he leads. C145

Those who are bound by love of human approbation, and fear of the consequences of a public, bold advocacy of the Lord and his truth are not worthy of him. R2421:3

Escaped from slavery, being justified by faith in the precious blood of Christ. R3956:2, 3512:5

The Scriptures ascribe no sin to the new mind, and no perfection to our fallen flesh. R2440:3

But we should be on guard lest we use our liberty in such a manner as to stumble others weaker than ourselves. R4920:1

Those who seek to use liberty for themselves, who boast that they have a mind and will of their own, know not how dangerous is their position, that surely they will succumb to the ensnarements of sin. R3512:6

No other religious system teaches personal liberty to the degree that it is taught in the Bible. The essence of all human religion seems to be bondage to custom by ignorance, superstition and priestcraft. R4005:1

John 8:38

With my Father -- Our Lord Jesus was and still is the Great Teacher of men by the appointment of the Heavenly Father, the great Master Teacher above all. E50

John 8:39

Abraham is our father -- God's special promises and dealings with the "fathers," through pride and selfishness, they failed rightly to apprehend and use. R2604:6

If ye were -- Not all the natural descendants of Abraham are to be heirs with him of the promise, but only such as Abraham would be honored in owning as sons--such as partake of his spirit or disposition. R4071:6

John 8:40

Told you the truth -- The truths which Abraham could not tell, because Jesus was proffering them assistances which their relationship to Abraham could not secure aside from him. R3512:1

John 8:41

Not born of fornication -- They knew that Jesus was not the son of Joseph, and this was the evident purport of this sneer. R2424:6

John 8:42

Proceeded forth -- A father is a life-giver. A son is an offspring, one who receives life from the father. This distinction implies that the father existed first. R5747:3, 3861:5

The terms "Father" and "Son" imply this; otherwise these terms are meaningless. R2408:5

Came from God -- Being merely developed and nourished in Mary. E105
Therefore our Lord never regarded himself as one of the "children of wrath." (Eph. 2:3) E108

John 8:43

Not understand -- The sore or bruised head (Gen. 3:15), we understand to represent the thinking part. Those whom Satan corrupts are injured in the head. R192:3*

John 8:44

Ye -- Pharisees. R5462:2

Are of -- His tools and dupes, because his work they do. HG365:6; R1217:4
Not that they were utterly devoid of every moral principle, but they were under the control of evil in the main as is the large majority of mankind today. R761:2

When our first parents sinned they forfeited fellowship with God, and because of disobedience became children of the Adversary. R5038:1

Your father the devil -- The Israelites were fatherless in the sense that they had denied the Heavenly Father; the Creator, and had become children of the Adversary. R4811:2

Originally our race was recognized as related to Jehovah, but the relationship was broken by man's willful disobedience, so that none are recognized as sons of God today without being begotten again. R3269:2
Satan is another name for sin, which is personified as a great monarch holding relentless sway over mankind. Satan properly stands as the representative of sin, of all unrighteousness. R5356:1

They became children of Satan in the sense that they became obedient to him. He did not give life actually to the world, but they adopted him as their father by accepting his terms and becoming members of his family. R5623:6

Since men's minds ceased to be godly, and became carnal and devilish, they might be said to have been reconstructed by the tyrant Sin to bear much of the image of God's adversary: sons of the devil, bearing his moral likeness. R1005:5

Satan is the corruptor of the human race, and those whom he corrupts are called his children. R192:3*

The Apostle declares that Satan now works in the hearts of the children of disobedience (Eph. 2:2); who certainly are vastly in the majority. SM310:2

The image of God has largely given place to the image of Satan. R3773:6

The world, not having the spirit of God, but more the spirit of the Adversary, are walking in the way of slander and hypocrisy. R5462:2

Our position as Gentiles is as "children of wrath even as others"--strangers and aliens and foreigners--without God and having no hope in the world. (Eph. 2:3,19,12). R3365:6

Only those who have "escaped the condemnation that is in the world" (2 Pet. 1:4), and who have gotten back into harmony with God, through Christ, are Scripturally authorized to consider themselves the sons of God. E108

Some dogs are better born than some of Adam's race; and some with better dispositions--more of meekness, gentleness, patience and love and less of anger, hatred and strife. R3774:1

All along it was true that some children of Jacob, professedly children of God, were really of their father the devil, because they were not all Israelites that were of the nation of Israel. (Rom. 9:6) R4781:3

In opposition to the thought that there is no personal devil. R3165:6

In opposition to the concept of the "Fatherhood of God and brotherhood of man." R3269:2, 2323:6; SM268:1

In opposition to the thought that "humanity was naturally in Christ."
R3457:6

What Jesus said of some in his day must be applicable in what today is styled Christendom. OV385:3

He was a murderer -- He murdered our race by his deception. He did not tell the truth, but he misrepresented it. R5238:3

Indirectly, he is the murderer of the 20 billion of our race who have already gone down into the tomb. SM575:1

Though, like many another murderer, he had not probably intended to commit murder at first, but only robbery. R2839:6

He intended the murder of the race, and he was successful. R822:1*

Errors and principles are not murderers and liars. It would be a misuse of language to make such application. Only an intelligent being can be a murderer or a liar. R5209:6

He did a killing thing, he told a murderous lie, when he said, "Thou shalt not surely die." (Gen. 3:4) R433:1*; HG192:2; NS549:4

He lied to our first parents, and through that deception he brought them under the divine death sentence. Thus Satan is the murderer of the entire race. SM96:T; R910:5

By his misrepresentations, not only he become the "prince of this world"
(the present order of things), but additionally, he became the murderer of the race. HG593:6; SM548:1

He "murdered" our first parents that he might gain control over them--the object of his ambition. R5186:2, 2777:3; OV303:3

Some ministers murder in a spiritual sense the people under their care by taking from them their spark of faith and spirit-begetting; and doing it as did the great Adversary, by lies and contradictions of the Lord's Word.
SM301:1 It was the spirit of Satan that entered into Cain, taking the place of the spirit or disposition of the Lord. Satan's spirit in Cain was a murderous spirit. R3928:4

According to the Christian standard, slanderers are murderers. Thus seen, the very suggestion to slander is to be shunned, as of the spirit of
Satan. R3595:4

All haters are murderers. R3928:4

The final penalty for Satan and his angels is to be quite appropriate for them--fire, the fire of God's anger, the fire of God's opposition. SM231:T

From the beginning -- Certainly not from the beginning of his own existence, for every creation coming from God's hand is perfect; nor can we think of any other beginning referred to than man's beginning in Eden.
R1678:1, 5909:3, 5801:1; F612

It does not appear that Satan had any sympathizers or associate conspirators amongst the angels at the time of his secession. F612

No truth in him -- Satan is the great deceiver. R5909:3

He is a liar -- And thereby the slayer of our race. R910:5
In Eden God declared, "Ye shall surely die." (Gen. 2:17) It was Satan who declared, "Ye shall not surely die." (Gen. 3:4) Heathens, as well as Christians, have accepted Satan's lie and correspondingly rejected God's truth. R4551:5, 4792:1; HG513:1
Satan contradicted God point blank, by telling mother Eve that she would not die by partaking of the forbidden fruit. CR426:1; R4627:5
And he has since kept it up, and the sophistries used to back it up are truly wonderful, and worthy of such a master deceiver. R910:5; F616
The Devil has succeeded in keeping up this lie for so long a time, and today nearly all the world believes what he said. R171:1*
Christian Science, Theosophy, together with the evolutionary and anti-Biblical theories, all bear the distinctive marks of the "father of lies." They all declare man to be immortal. R5800:6
Scientists, our own senses, and the Word of God, all agree that the dead are dead; and not alive, as Satan, and all his emissaries would have us believe. Q765:4
If Satan had turned from his iniquity, then no doubt God would have found some way, even in Satan's case, by which he might come back to God. Q322:1
Father of it -- Satan told the first lie, "Ye shall not surely die." (Gen. 3:4) Q799:2
The father of lies. R4551:5; CR425:6

John 8:51

If a man keep -- But if any "fall away" after having the full benefits of this great favor, they "see death." As they reach the tomb "they perish." (Heb. 6:4-6; 1 Cor. 15:18) R875:6*
Never see death -- He may fall asleep, but he will be sure to be awakened, and if then he shall keep the Word of the Lord, he shall have everlasting life. Q208:2
The Church are "asleep" and have not "perished." (1 Cor. 15:18) They have escaped from the condemnation and will be fully released (Rom. 5:18; 8:1) at once when their Head assumes control. R875:6*

John 8:53

Art thou greater -- Jesus was then as much better and greater than they as the divine nature is superior to the human. R218:3

John 8:54

My Father -- Jesus calls Abraham their father, and God his Father. R218:3

John 8:56

Rejoiced -- He did not see God's plan clearly, as we see it, but he saw enough of it to make him rejoice. R5433:2 To see -- Not with his natural eye, but with the eye of faith. R5433:2

My day -- He may have seen his day of sacrifice, typified in the offering of Isaac his only son, but at all events he saw Messiah's coming glory- day, the Millennium. E90

The day of Christ--the Millennium. R5905:5, 3937:1

The day in which Christ, who has died for all men, will uplift the human family. R5433:2

Abraham believed that God was able to raise the dead, so much so that when he was tested he was willing even to part with Isaac, accounting that God was able to raise him from death. (Heb. 11:19) F110

The Bible mentions days of various lengths. R5139:3, 2836:1

He saw it -- By the eye of faith. By the same eye Abraham saw the millions of Adam's race blessed of God by the Messiah, his Seed, during the Millennium. R5905:5, 5433:2, 4387:4

By going out to the unknown land and offering his son Isaac, Abraham grasped the future, seeing Christ and the heavenly country. R74:2*

I am -- Signifying that there had been no cessation of his existence at any time; positively identifying Jesus, the Son of God, in the flesh, with the Logos, the first-born of all creation. E90

The Scriptures no place intimate that the existence of the Only Begotten ever ceased from the time it began until it ceased at Calvary for three days. E90

Originally he was on the spirit plane. Later as a man, he lived; he died.

At his resurrection he was made alive on the spirit plane. But the identity, the personality, is the same. R5065:2, 1263:2*

Since his humanity resulted from the transference of the life- principle from spiritual to human conditions, Jesus recognized himself. The "I am" expresses his continuous existence. R1059:3

The Logos could be translated to a lower condition, the human, and yet could preserve a good recollection of his previous experiences, and did so. R2477:4

It was his knowledge of heavenly things, his intimate and long acquaintance with the Father, which enabled him, as a perfect man, to overcome the world and present an acceptable sacrifice for our sins.

R1060:1

The memory of things past is still with our Lord. He remembers the experiences which he had in the flesh, and also those which he had before he became flesh. Otherwise he could not identify himself. R5065:5

We have no reason to doubt that at the age of twelve his memory was active, and that he knew then what he here affirms. R1916:5, 1682:5
Nothing in this text implies that our Lord was born with the knowledge of all his previous experiences. After his consecration he received this knowledge by some means which we can not understand. R5065:5
Whatever others may think or say of him, he claimed to be sent of God, and of heavenly origin. R1059:2
By induction he tells of a pre-human existence. R5767:5, 4964:2, 1161:4, 505:2*; OV328:5; SM491:4

John 9

John 9:1

As Jesus passed by -- Our Lord was in Jerusalem on the occasion of the Feast of the Tabernacles, in the fall of the third year of his ministry--just six months before his crucifixion. R4148:2

He saw a man -- Sitting by the wayside soliciting alms, especially at that season of the year, when the crowds gathered for worship and were apt to feel benevolent. R4148:2

The blind man would fitly represent the world of mankind in general, who during the present life are mentally blind. R2670:1

Blind from his birth -- Few now have the ability to see or hear. The majority are blind and deaf to his message, some completely blind and completely deaf, others partially so. R3519:4

Some of us were born blind--blind to the Lord and his true character, blind to the truth of the divine Word. The blindness upon us was neither our own fault nor the fault of our parents. R4150:2, 3520:5

This blindness does not represent a blindness on the part of those who have once seen God's grace, represented in his Word and plan, and who have then become blind thereto. R2670:1

Tabulated information shows that in 1870 the proportion of blind in America was one in 1900; in Egypt one to every 100; and Palestine probably one in every 200. R2667:3

At Gaza it is said that one-third of the population have lost one or both eyes, but amongst these cases it is difficult to find any born blind.

R2667:6

This blindness is in great measure the result of the scarcity of water and the neglect of children, whose eyes are, in consequence, attacked by the flies. R2667:6

Showing the fallacy of the idea of Christian Science that there is no such thing as sickness or blindness, but they are simply mistaken thoughts or misbeliefs. R2669:2

John 9:2

His disciples asked -- It is proper, when we find ourselves in sickness, that we examine to what extent we have been responsible through careless living. If so, it is well that we repent and take steps to make correction. R4148:6, 2668:6

If we cannot find that our experiences and sickness was the result of self-gratification, we should examine carefully if they resulted from our activity in the Lord's service. If so, we should glory in them. R4149:1, 1773:3

Finding none of the above to fit the case, we should consider that our affliction is simply for our welfare, to assist us in the application of some valuable spiritual lesson. R4149:2, 2668:6

Who did sin -- The question of the Lord's disciples was the expression of a common opinion among many Jews--that all suffering is the direct result of some personal sin. R1773:3

They had the thought that all sickness, pain and sorrow in the world was the result of sin. The Scriptures indicated that the various evils were, to some degree, the result of individual or inherited sin. R3519:1, 2668:4

While it is true that some afflictions are the direct results of personal sins and are promptly administered penalties designed for the warning and correction of the offender, such is not always the case. R1773:3

There is a great difference between claiming that all sickness is of sin and the devil, and admitting that much of it is produced or intensified by sin. R2668:4

This man -- The man could not have sinned before birth; but it is barely possible that some of the heathen ideas respecting the transmigration of souls had come to their attention. R4148:3, 3519:1, 2668:1

It would be extremely unlikely that the apostles, "unlearned," should have any particular knowledge of these theories of the heathen. R3519:1

Job's case is another illustration of sickness and calamities of various kinds which were not the punishments of sin. R2668:5, 1773:3

John 9:3

Neither hath -- Not that he and his parents were without blemish; evidently meaning that it was not because of any special sin committed by this man or his parents that he had been born blind. R4148:3, 3519:2

Nor his parents -- The principal point of this lesson is that calamities are not necessarily marks of divine disapproval. R4148:6, 2668:4

Not that God had specially intervened to cause blindness in this case, rather we may suppose that the blindness came through the general weakness of heredity. R3519:2

The Scriptures tell us that the darkness or blindness came from the Adversary, who blinds the minds of them who believe not, lest the glorious light of God's goodness shine in their hearts. (2 Cor. 4:4) R3520:6

The blindness that is upon the world is, to a large extent at least, a matter of heredity. R2670:1

Be made manifest -- The miracle gave unmistakable evidence of divine power manifested through Christ, and was a testimony to the truth of his claim to the Messiahship. R2058:1*, 1773:3

John 9:4

I must work -- It behooved the Lord and all the members of his body to make use of the opportunities in hand for doing that portion of the Father's work which is to be accomplished in the present age. R1774:1
Let us each do with our might what our Master has placed within our reach; and let us do it promptly and zealously, remembering the nearness of the night. R1746:5, 1591:5

The works of him -- The works of God were not merely in the healing of one of the blind, but the manifestation of Jesus as the Light of the World and the influence and testing which that would mean to the Jewish people. R4149:2

We are not laboring for ourselves, but for the cause of the Lord, including the cause of all that are his. CR17:3

The work of him that sent him was the sacrificing of himself in the declaration of the good tidings, in the teaching of the people through parables, dark sayings and miracles. R3519:5

The Lord's people are eager to do good, but in the way that will be the most effective, and in the way that will not stumble others. Their good works are the works of God. R5462:2

While it is day -- The present little season before the storm-cloud bursts upon the world is a most favorable time for the work of the Elijah class, and corresponds to the successful days of both Elijah and John. B257
Since our Lord's first advent the glorious light of truth has had more effect upon the world than at any previous time. So much so, that the Gospel age may be called "day" in contrast with previous experiences. R5097:3

The light now shining more closely resembles that which shone upon the early Church, and in both instances it is the light of the parousia, the light of the presence of the Son of Man. R4149:4

Our Lord's ministry was in the eventide which followed the Jewish day, the day of Moses. A little of its light still remained. R3519:5

Our Lord's day and opportunity were rapidly drawing to a close. R4149:2

Similarly, with each one of the Lord's followers there is a daytime of opportunity when his time, talent and zeal may bring fruitage to the Lord's praise. To each will come a night when the opportunities will pass as he passes into death. R4149:3

The word "day" would seem to belong to the present time. R2670:2

While the eyes and ears of the masses are open. R5559:5

The night cometh -- He well knew of the dark night which would follow his ministry, in which darkness would cover the earth and gross darkness the people. (Isa. 60:2) R3519:5

The apostles after Pentecost entered fully into the Master's spirit in respect to the shortness of time, laboring incessantly with the Jews until all the elect had been gathered from the once favored nation. R3519:6

A much darker time in comparison with the present, called day. B257 Even in this morning of dawning light we are to expect another time of deep darkness; a night time, an overcasting of the skies, a great morning storm. R4149:4, 3519:6

We may expect not only to see the storm-clouds grow much darker, but also to hear and to feel the rising "winds" which will culminate in a wild hurricane of human passion--a whirlwind of trouble. C230

When the religious liberty now enjoyed will be greatly restricted and when, as a consequence, the present work of disseminating the truth will be interfered with by the strong hand of combined civil and ecclesiastical power. R1409:1 Brought about by the wrath incurred by the true Church. R1754:5

"The morning cometh, and also the night." (Isa. 21:12) R1409:1

When the world, that has loved darkness rather than light, shall be overwhelmed by it, and in the midst of its shadows, reap the fruit of its own sowing. R1774:1

The opportunities for service will soon now be closed. The great time of trouble just preceding the shining forth of the Sun of Righteousness is near. R3521:1, 3332:1

As a snare, it shall overtake the world. D273

The gloom of that "night" will be dispelled only by the Millennial sunrise. C230 Typified by the imprisonment of John the Baptist. R1754:5

"The sun and the moon [the illuminating influences of the Gospel and Law] shall be dark [general infidelity having become widely prevalent], and the stars [apostolic lights] shall withdraw their shining." (Joel 2:10) D544

No man can work -- Except those who worship the beast and his image. (Rev. 13:16,17) R1002:6

Our work will be cut short--gradually at first, and then completely and finally. C230

When our opportunities for serving the cause and the brethren and for the public dissemination of the truth will be forcibly closed by the powers that be. R4149:4

The closing of the "door" in the parable of Matt. 25, marks the end of all opportunity to prove worthy of the prize by faithfulness: all opportunity for service will there terminate. C213

The warning is designed to increase diligence in the use of present opportunities. R1409:2

The Millennial morning comes, and just as surely the great time of trouble will immediately precede it--the night wherein no man can labor for the dissemination of divine truth. R4926:2, 3332:1, 1409:1

"The time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine." (2 Tim. 4:3) R948:2

John 9:5

I am the light -- His light shone for another six months, but he left behind him some who were illuminated by the Pentecostal blessing. Of these he said, "Ye are the light of the world." (Matt. 5:14) R4149:4

Now, enlightened from his Word, we, as his representatives, are the light of the world. We should keep our light trimmed and burning. We must let it shine so that those following us may not walk in darkness. R3243:2

Our Lord let his light shine upon many, and so we have opportunity to let our light shine upon many. But no one has the light within him except he is begotten of the holy Spirit. R4149:5

The Spirit of Christ is the light which shines from the true Christian, which reproveth or condemns and opposes the darkness of this world. R375:2; E293

Of the world -- It will be at his second advent that our Lord will be "the Light of the world" in the full, glorious sense--The Sun of righteousness. R3519:5

John 9:6

He spat -- As the blindness of the man was figurative of the general blindness upon the people--to the truth, to the Light of the world--so this method of healing the blindness well illustrates the method the Lord has been using throughout the Gospel age. R3520:2, 2669:6

Made clay -- The making of the clay would represent the formation of the elect Church for the blessing of the poor, blind world. R2670:4

We are imperfect ourselves, blemished, fallen; but the spirit of the Lord's lips coming upon us so transforms our energies and talents as to make them useful in his service. R3520:2

The ointment had no particular virtue in it, neither had the waters used. It was merely an aid to the blind man's faith, but did not in his mind perform the cure. He recognized that it was a miracle, as did the Pharisees. R4149:6, 1774:1

Of the spittle -- The secretions of our Lord's mouth represent his grace and truth, while the earth used may well represent the poor earthly talents of us and his disciples. R3520:2, 2670:2 He took of the clay of human agency and mixed it with his Word, the fruit of his lips. With that combination he anointed the eyes of our understanding and bade us wash in the waters of Siloam, his Word of truth and grace. R4150:3

So now, the words of his mouth, mixed with and used through the clay of humanity, may have been the agency in the opening of your spiritual perceptions to understand the truth and see its beauties. R213:3

He uttered the truth, brought it in contact with the dust of the earth--not in contact with all the dust, but with a limited portion, an elect portion, and of this he made the anointing clay. R2670:2

The Word of God's grace is designed in the present age to act upon a small fragment of humanity, and to consecrate them for the Master's use in the anointing of the eyes of the blind. R2670:2

John 9:7

Go wash -- After the Lord has used us, his servants, as the clay in his hands for the anointing of blinded eyes, it is necessary that we should direct them to the fountain of his truth and grace where they may wash. R3520:2

The washing of his eyes and the cure would seem to belong to the next age, the Millennial age. R2670:2

The world must be witnessed to during this age, but will not have the eyes of their understanding opened until the great washing time of the Millennial age. R2670:4

The pool of Siloam -- The word Siloam signifies "The sending forth," or "The fountain." R2670:4

"In that day there shall be a fountain opened to the house of David for sin and for uncleanness." (Zech. 13:1) R2670:4

He went -- Implying some assistance from the blind man. Faith was first followed by works and this attested a degree of perfection. R4149:5
Had he had no confidence in Jesus he might have despised the means and ridiculed the idea that the anointing with clay and the washing in the pool of Siloam would accomplish such a miracle. R1774:4

An act based doubtless upon what he had heard of Jesus previously. R2058:1

Came seeing -- The opening of blind natural eyes could not give sight to the eyes of his understanding, the eyes of the heart; but it could and did figure or illustrate this. R3519:4

Thus washing we realized the forgiveness of sins and saw in a new light the love and mercy of our Father in heaven. Then came testings, not to destroy us, but to prove us and to develop us. R3520:6

Only a sample of the great work of restitution to be performed in the Millennial age when not only will the bodies of men be blessed, but their minds and hearts similarly liberated from the fetters of sin. R1773:6

The methods of restitution will doubtless be as varied as were the methods employed by Jesus in healing diseases at his first advent. R759:3

Our Lord did not heal all of the blind; the recorded instances are just six. R4148:2

This lesson differs from the five other instances in that this man was born blind. R2667:6

While multitudes were healed, still greater multitudes remained unhealed. R3519:4

If it had been our Lord's special mission to heal all the lepers and all the blind and all the deaf, and to have awakened all the dead of Palestine, then he failed most signally in accomplishing the work. R3519:4

The neighbours -- The agencies used by our Lord for our blessing were produced perhaps by our friends. R3520:6

John 9:13

Brought to the Pharisees -- This was a part of our Lord's design and a part of what he meant when he declared that the man was not born blind as a punishment for sin, but for the glory of God. R3520:3

John 9:15

The Pharisees also asked -- Full of envy against Jesus. R3520:3
Lest the matter should spread, and, if possible to corner it and head it off, they made an investigation. R4149:6
The scribes and Pharisees of our day wonder, criticize and try to account for the blessing which has come to us, finding fault with every agency the Lord used in connection with our blessing. R4150:3

John 9:22

Be put out -- Be counted unworthy of the name and privileges of a Jew, treated as an outcast from God and his people. R3520:3, 4149:6
This was the only "respectable church" in those days, and to the poor Jew it seemed disgraceful to be cut off from the church. R213:5
So now, those who receive present truth have so long been identified with the churches that the thought of sundering those ties is like cutting off a right hand. R213:5
All through the Dark Ages those who were faithful to the light were kept out of the churches. The church creeds and practices were conscience-barriers to keep light-bearers out. R5479:2

John 9:24

They -- The Pharisees. R4150:1
Give God the praise -- The time of the healing of the world's blindness is in the Millennial age. R2670:1
Turning to the healed man, the Pharisee said to him, Thank God for your sight, even though it came through a bad channel, for we know that Jesus is a sinner, a hypocrite, a falsifier in claiming to be Messiah. R4150:1

John 9:25

He answered -- He might have kept quiet and believed in his heart and retained his standing in the church, but that would have been cowardly, and had he done so he would have missed his subsequent communion with Jesus. R213:6

It remains with us, as it did with him, to keep silence and remain in the church, or confess his presence and be cast out. R213:6

He answered them -- It is for us now to take a similar stand--to confess the truth, confess the light, confess the miracle which the Lord has wrought upon the eyes of our understanding, and to give him our hearts. R4150:4

Ye did not hear -- As they repeated their questions, he became more indignant at their evil spirit. R3520:4

John 9:30

A marvelous thing -- Envy, hatred and the spirit of rivalry were absent from his mind, and wonder and gratitude prompted him to reason out the logical deductions from this marvelous fact. R2058:1*

John 9:31

Heareth not sinners -- Consequently we, who by nature were sinners even as others, could have no audience with Jehovah until justified by faith in the sin-offering of Jesus, our Lord. R1410:4

Christ is the way, the truth, and the life, and no man cometh unto the Father but by him. (John 14:6) Prayer is the privilege of "believers," reconciled children of God, only. R2024:4

The habit of inviting people who are out of covenant-relationship with God to pray is both unscriptural and unreasonable. Those who come to him through Christ are acceptable only because Jesus is their Advocate. R5021:6

It is to no purpose to be a saint in the morning in thy closet, and then a sinner all day in the world. Having prayed against sin, be sure to watch against it. R585:3*

There is a significance to the words so often sung, "Come to Jesus." God "heareth not sinners," but Jesus does. He says, "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden [with sin], and I will give you rest." (Matt. 11:28) R469:1*

Cast him out -- Consider yourself an outcast from the religious people of your own nation. R4150:2

The threat of ostracism was before our mind as we had confessed the blessing we had received and the source from which it came. R3520:6

All who follow the noble course of loyalty and obedience to God have found that, while it leads to a loss of fellowship in the nominal church, it leads also to greater fellowship with the Lord himself. R2670:5

It is for us to find that this will lead men to separate us from their company. R4150:4

As the Lord and the apostles shunned not to declare the whole counsel of God, they soon found little and finally no opportunity to teach the people in the synagogues. R986:5, 805:3

Jesus heard -- So with you, the Lord will hear of your witness for him. R214:1

When he had found him -- He did not spare him from being cast out of the synagogue, but turned the same into a special blessing of instruction of much advantage to the man in every way. R4150:2

It was after we had endured something for the Lord's sake that the Lord found us in a particular sense, revealed himself to us, and thus we became his disciples in the highest sense. R3520:6, 1774:4

His faithfulness under trials and difficulties, and his willingness to suffer the loss of earthly fellowship, led directly to a still greater blessing, even direct fellowship and communion with the Lord himself. R2670:5

On the Son of God -- The belief that Jesus, the Son of Man, was also the Christ, the Son of the living God, lies at the very foundation of Christianity--on it the Church was to be built. R944:4*

John 9:37

And Jesus said -- When you are separated from the nominal church, your experience will be that Jesus himself will teach you. R214:1

Seen him -- The Lord granted him the opening of the eyes of his understanding in addition to the opening of his natural eyes. R3520:5, 2669:1

John 9:38

I believe -- This ignorant beggar was evidently at heart honest and sincere, because character and principle cannot be put on in a moment, but is the result of development. R3520:4

And he worshipped -- In spirit and in truth, and no longer worshipped the creeds of men. R214:1

In many instances the Lord's people, looking back, can clearly see that things which at the time seemed to be adversities were really blessings, leading to the opening of their eyes of understanding. R2669:2

John 9:39

For judgment -- Greek, krima. Its strongest significance is condemnation or rejection. R699:6

A trial. R214:1

Messages of divine truth are the oracles of God and the principles of his holy law by which every man must be judged as worthy or unworthy of eternal life. R2057:5*

The judgment in the case of the Lord's consecrated people culminates with the present life, and in the case of the world it will culminate in the world to come. R2058:5*

There was the natural judgment of Israel, so also upon the nominal spiritual Israel, the nations of Christendom, the judgment of God is also to blindness and an overthrow in a great time of trouble. R2058:5*

I am come -- It was to establish the principles of judgment, and to acquaint men with them, as well as to redeem them, that Jesus came into this world. R2057:6*

Might see -- The authority of truth was received and appreciated, and from its blessed testimony were drawn the precious lessons of faith. R2058:4*

And that they -- The same truth which blinded one, enlightened and blessed the other. R2058:4*

Be made blind -- The blind sectarians who retained control of the synagogues were the more blinded by their prejudices. R805:3

The authority of truth was despised and its light rejected, the darkness being preferred because their deeds were evil. (John 3:19) R2058:2*

Are we blind also? -- The theological pride of the Pharisees, representing some of their successors in spiritual Israel who are spiritually proud. R4150:4

Let us not be high-minded but fear lest the light should pass from us, lest pride of heart, the cares of this world or the deceitfulness of riches should again blind us to the goodness and grace of God in Christ. (Matt. 13:22) R3475:4

John 9:41

If ye were blind -- It would have been better for them if they had been blind, if their course had been actuated by total ignorance. R4150:5

Your sin remaineth -- If you (Pharisees) were totally blind, you would not have been responsible. But now you admit that you see some; therefore you have sin. R723:6

They had considerable enlightenment and therefore corresponding responsibility. R4150:5, 723:6

John 10

John 10:1

I say unto you -- It was doubtless as a reproof of the false shepherding, which our Lord spoke of in the previous chapter, that he spoke this parable. R2441:1

By the door -- Our Lord Jesus, as the "Shepherd," by fulfilling the terms of the Law Covenant, entered the "door" and secured all the blessings and privileges which had been promised in the Law. Q845:3

The one way of approach to the Father during the Gospel age is repentance of sin, turning from it, acceptance of the merit of Christ, and a consecration to the Lord to walk in the footsteps of Jesus. NS411:5

The sheepfold -- The homeland of the Lord's sheep of this Gospel age is heaven itself, and his bringing them to it will mean their resurrection change. R5694:1; NS412:5

Jehovah established a typical kingdom or sheepfold, and accepted the nation of Israel as his sheep. He fenced them in with a Law Covenant. R2441:4

The sheepfold was the Law Covenant arrangement under which Israel was placed at Sinai. R4732:2, 2672:1

The fold described in the parable is a place of safety, rest, and protection from prowling wild beasts and from robbers. R4157:2, 4732:2

It is contrary to the will of the great Chief Shepherd that his sheep should be separated from each other by pens, and hindered from the proper liberties of the fold. R3142:2

Those who enjoy its security, enjoy also its liberty. It has one, and only one, wall to keep out the "wolves." This wall is faith in Christ as man's ransom-sacrifice. R3142:2

Let us stand fast in that liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free; allowing none to pen us up by human creeds; nor any to lead us beyond the Chief Shepherd's bounds, into unauthorized liberties and speculations.

(Gal. 5:1) R3143:1

Some other way -- Than that of keeping the divine Law and purchasing the sheep. R2673:3

By a hypocritical observance of the letter of the Law, rather than by a heart observance and fulfillment of the spirit of the Law. Q845:3

By climbing over the Law, or by digging under it. R2441:5

Than that which God has appointed, through faith in the atoning sacrifice of Christ. R1647:6, 1582:3, 1442:2; NS411:5

There is "none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved" (Acts 4:12) than Jesus, and the way he opened up when he "gave himself a ransom for all." (1Tim. 2:6) R688:4

So-called Christian Science and the various no-ransom Evolution theories all are attempts to show men how to climb up to everlasting life by some other way than faith in the precious blood of Christ. R3199:5, 2672:6, 1647:5

Whatever theory does not square with the ransom for all, absolutely and in every particular, is proven to be a false one. R1719:4

A thief -- Referring to those who attempted fraudulently to palm themselves off on the Jewish people as their leader. These are particularly referred to by Gamaliel in Acts 5:35-38. R4732:6

Various others presented themselves as the Messiah, falsely claiming the right to lead Israel--false Messiahs. R2441:4

Pretenders, who sought to gain possession of the sheep for their own selfish ends. R2672:2

Attempting to take what they had not secured a right to, and that for selfish gain. R2673:3

He not only steals the title of Shepherd or Pastor, but is willing to risk the destruction of the spiritual life of the sheep that the sectarian lines may be kept up, and his own personal interests served. R3527:3

The Scriptural basis of fellowship and disfellowship is of two parts: (1) an acceptance of Christ as the Redeemer; and (2) a full consecration to him. R3673:1

And a robber -- In combining these two words our Lord represents the foes of the flock, some of them being crafty, and some of them open, bold, aggressive. R3527:2

John 10:2

By the door -- There was but one doorway into these folds and it was supposed to be guarded by a porter who would know the true shepherd and admit him and no other. R4157:2

Opening up a new and living way, or, more correctly, a new way of life. R4157:3

Not a new door, but the opening of the door which had previously been closed. The door was the Law, which could not open except by obedience to the Law. R4157:3

Is the shepherd -- The Apostle John first presents Christ as the Light of the world; then as the Feeder of the hungry; the Giver of the water of life; the Healer of human woes; the Supplier of human needs; the Opener of the eyes of our understanding; and now as the Good Shepherd. R2441:1 David wrote prophetically, "Jehovah is my shepherd" (Psa. 23:1); for in David's day the arrangements for the Shepherd and his flock of this parable had not been completed. R2672:1

Our word "pastor" signifies shepherd, as does also the Greek word rendered "bishop" in our Common Version New Testament; and God, the Great Shepherd, "set" these in the Church, says the Apostle. R2431:4

Of the sheep -- Symbols of meekness, gentleness, harmlessness. R2441:2

The Messiah was introducing a new system of teaching the philosophy and ethics of a new dispensation, but it was so radical and revolutionary that it would only appeal to those with sheeplike meekness. R1647:2

The flock which the Lord was gathering to himself at the time of this parable was not natural Israel, but spiritual Israel. R3527:6

They were a small flock compared with the nominal Jewish system. R3528:1
A Little Flock. R1648:2

The porter -- The door was barred by justice, as represented in the Mosaic Law, Israel's covenant. R2441:5

The porter who could thus discriminate between the true and the false was the Law Covenant. Our Lord met the demands of the Law fully, and is thus identified to us as the rightful shepherd. R4157:2, 2672:2

The holy Spirit of God. R1647:3

Openeth -- When the true Shepherd came, he satisfied the Law, the porter. R2672:2

By the various ways which proclaimed him to be the Son of God, as at his baptism, on the mount of transfiguration, at his death, etc. R1647:3

His own sheep -- The special characteristics of the sheep are meekness, docility, lack of self-confidence, and the obedience to the shepherd in whom they fully trust. R5491:4

The barons and lords of England have adopted lions' heads, tigers' heads, eagles' heads, etc. This represents the natural mind. He who represented himself as a Good Shepherd and his followers as sheep had a very different idea of the whole matter. R4157:1, 2441:2

By name -- In Palestine every sheep has a personal acquaintance with its shepherd, and he with it, and it is said that this acquaintance is so particular that the shepherds have a separate name for each sheep, and each sheep knows its own name. R2672:3, 2441:3

The Greeks had a similar custom with names corresponding to certain defects, such as Torn, Broken Legged, One Eye, etc. In a flock of hundreds of thousands each individual sheep knows and is known by his name. R4157:6

The call of the present time is not a general one, but a special call.

R2441:6

He is interested in them, not only as a general flock, but as individuals.

R1647:5

He gives to each one of us a new name, and we are each personally known to him--our peculiarities of character, temperament, etc., our strong points and our weaknesses--he knows them all. R2672:3

This suggests to us the intimacy of the relationship between Christ and each member of his flock. R2672:2

Leadeth them out -- They had been "shut up" under the Law Covenant.

R3527:6, 2672:2, 2441:5

Nevertheless, having started them in the way, he will not drive them. He goeth before them to lead, that they may follow. R2672:3

This means a very special supervision of the affairs and interests of each one of his true disciples. Whatever may come to these is not a matter of choice or luck. R5711:5

Our Lord's parable does not tell about the disciplines which the sheep are sure to receive, but these are set before us in the prophetic Psalm on the subject, in the words, "Thy rod and thy staff, they comfort me." (Psa.

23:4) R2672:5

John 10:4

Putteth forth -- Signifying his looking after them, that they all get started in the way of the green pastures and still waters for soul refreshment. (Psa. 23:2) R2672:3

They needed to be led out into the green pastures. The fold is a place for rest and protection, but not a place for feeding. R4732:2

Before them -- To lead, and not behind them to drive. R1648:2

In Palestine the shepherd goes before his flock and the sheep will follow him. CR497:5

However varied the experiences of Christians may be, the Lord knows all about it, for he has felt the same, "yet without sin." (Heb. 4:15) R140:1

The sheep follow him -- The sheep manifest their relationship to him as his flock by their obedience to his call, by following him. R2442:1

Know his voice -- In the voice of the true Shepherd there is something that has the proper ring. In the sound is the chord of justice mingled with those of love, wisdom and power. R4732:3, 4158:1, 2672:5

Truth, like a magnet, gathers to itself all who have an affinity for it.

Thrust it in wherever you will, it will invariably accomplish its work of finding the loyal and faithful. R1362:2

The important thing is that we should become true members of the Lord's flock, intimately acquainted with him, and familiar with his word, his voice. R2441:3

How important from the divine standpoint is knowledge, not merely head knowledge, but heart knowledge, intimate acquaintance with the Lord and his glorious plan. R4158:4

A stranger -- With such thoughts as universal salvation, evolution or eternal torture. R1648:4

The very ones who should have been helping the scattered sheep of Israel to recognize the true Shepherd were seeking to prevent the Lord's sheep from recognizing the Shepherd. R2441:1

Not follow -- We have the Lord's assurance that none of the true sheep will be satisfied with the false gospel; it will not appeal to their hearts. R4158:1

The sheep will not follow another having a different voice, a different sound or message. R4732:3

They shun all profane babblings of science, falsely so-called, and being close students of the divine Word, are prepared to quickly detect error, though it lurk behind a plausible semblance of truth. R1206:3

It is the duty of every sheep to take special notice of the message and the manner of every brother before they aid in putting him forward as an overseer, either local or general. F247

We are to hear the Lord and his chosen mouthpieces rather than to follow our own imaginations or the imaginations of other uninspired men. R3346:5

A great mistake which some have made, in view of the conflicting ideas of what is truth, has been to discard every human instrumentality and expect God's guidance through the Bible alone. R1206:4

A Scottish traveler changed clothes with a shepherd, and thus disguised began to call the sheep; they remained motionless; then the true shepherd raised his voice and they all hastened to him in spite of his strange garments. R4158:1, 2441:3

If we see some whom we had supposed were of the Lord's flock heeding another voice, we need not be fearful; for if they are true sheep of the Lord's flock they cannot long be deceived, if at all. R2673:1

Flee from him -- They will not be deceived by the Adversary, though he should disguise himself in garments of light, to deceive, if it were possible, the very elect. R2441:3

They know not -- They do not recognize. CR444:5

Voice of strangers -- Intimating that others would seek to call the sheep in his name, and to direct them, whose leading would be contrary to his. R910:2

John 10:6

Unto them -- It is supposed that this parable was uttered in the hearing of the man born blind, and in the hearing also of the Pharisees. R4157:3, 2441:1

No doubt the man was feeling discouraged because of his excommunication from the supposed fold of the Lord's people. The Lord illustrates the fact that he had not really been cast out of the Lord's fold, but merely out of a human organization. R4157:3

They understood not -- Therefore the Lord repeated it in slightly different terms, proclaiming himself as the doorway by which any could enter into divine favor as members of the Lord's flock. R4157:4

John 10:7

I am the door -- He is both the door and the shepherd. He entered the door of the divine plan, and thus became to us the door of opportunity; he was also therefore counted worthy to be the Shepherd to lead us back to the fold of God. R1647:3

There was only one door, which had not been opened, and which none of these would-be leaders could open. That door was the door of redemption. Our Lord, by giving his life for the sheep, opened that door. R4732:3, 4157:3, 1647:3

Jesus as the "door" represents all the privileges and blessings of the true sheep. R3528:1

Jesus became the door of egress from the Jewish sheepfold, and there is no other egress. R4732:3

Thus the man who had been cast out of the synagogue might perceive that he had really lost nothing, but that on the contrary he had been assisted toward the right door of the true fold. R4157:4

Thieves and robbers -- The scribes and Pharisees. Q845:3

The word here rendered thieves contains the thought of craftiness, embezzlement. R3527:2

The word robber contains the thought of open violence, free-booting. R3527:2

John 10:9

I am the door -- As in the Tabernacle, there was only one gateway to enter the Holy Place or Court; the type thus testifying that there is but one way of access to God, one Gate, Jesus. T18

If any man -- Inasmuch as there were not enough who heard his voice to complete the elect number of his flock, the Good Shepherd has lifted up his voice and has called sheep from amongst the Gentiles. R2441:6

Enter in -- Many true sheep had gotten out of the fold and were lost in the wilderness of sin. His ministry was a call to these as well as to those who remained in the fold. R2441:6

He shall be saved -- The Master did not say that he came to deliver the sheep from eternal torment, but that he came to deliver them from death. R4157:4

Go in and out -- By him we enter into rest in the fold, the rest of faith. By him also we may go out to enjoy the liberties and refreshments to which as our Shepherd he leads the flock. R3528:1

Out and into pasturage and refreshment and to rest and security. R2673:3

John 10:10

Might have life -- Men by disobedience had "lost" the right to eternal life. It was this life-right that man needed and that Christ came to give back to him. NS3:1; SM534:1

The language spoken in Palestine in Jesus' day was the Syrian. One of the Great Teacher's titles is The Savior. This, in Syriac language signifies, "The Life Giver." R4702:1; SM534:1; HG191:6

They will get back their soul, being, existence, with "life [Greek, zoe] more abundantly." E336

More abundantly -- Perfect life, everlasting life. NS340:4

Referring to two classes--the obedient of the world who sustain life everlastingly; and the Church who, with Jesus, will share the divine nature, "more abundant" inherent life, not requiring sustenance. R5609:4, 4157:5

Those becoming participants in their Lord's grace, renounce, or sacrifice with him the earthly inheritance, the earthly life, that they may attain heaven and its "life more abundant." NS74:1

The good shepherd -- More literally, the grand Shepherd, the ideal Shepherd. R4157:1

Fitly representing the close confidential relationship, but it is a figure that is quite contrary to the world. R2441:1

Giveth his life -- Greek, psuche, soul or being. E336

There was but one way to become the true Shepherd. That way was the way of the cross, to give himself a ransom for all. R4157:2, 2441:5

He demonstrated his devotion to his office by the sacrifice of everything, even life itself, on behalf of the sheep. R3527:3, 2673:4

No matter how many others might claim to be the shepherd, he declared himself to be the only true one, and that he would prove it, even to the sacrifice of his life for them. R1647:2

Our Lord defended the interests of the sheep against the false spirits and the wolves of his day, and it cost him his life. R3527:5

The link between the Shepherd and the sheep, as here indicated, is love. R2672:5

Literally, lays down, as in Diaglott and Variorum. Young gives the meaning, "to put, set, place." Not in the past tense. The Lord was speaking of something he was about to do, not what he had already done. R1298:6*

For the sheep -- Our Lord's death not only satisfied the Law, "the porter," so that he opened the sheepfold, but it gave the true Shepherd the ownership and control of the sheep. R2441:6

John 10:12

That is an hireling -- The owner of the flock or his son usually did the shepherding, or sometimes an employee who was given an interest in the increase of the flock, as, for instance, Jacob with his father-in-law, Laban. R2441:2

The responsibility of those who have undertaken the gospel ministry in the name of Christ is very great. D62

To advance their own personal interests; but he, as the true Shepherd, instead of seeking his own welfare, was seeking the welfare and advantage of the sheep. R4157:4

Seeking their own advantage: honor of men, influence, wealth, etc., and willing to sacrifice the sheep to serve these ends, illustrated in the treatment of the man whose eyes had just been opened. R3527:1

They think chiefly of their own ease and comfort, honor and dignity. They are not very deeply concerned respecting the spiritual progress of the sheep, but specially in numbers and collections. R2673:4, 1647:6

Plato, Aristotle, Socrates, Confucius and others could not be classified as false shepherds, but as bell sheep, themselves lost, leading the flocks to the best pastures and purest waters they could find. R1647:5

Those who, after being enlightened, love darkness rather than light, and who, instead of pointing men to Christ, direct them to human philosophies, merit the appellations which the Lord applies to them. R1647:5

The wolf -- The false teacher. R3142:3

Of infidelity. R1647:6

In sheep's clothing, of course; otherwise they would not be received. R3142:5

Scattereth the sheep -- Only the wayward and heedless sheep can be harmed and scattered. The obedient, trusting sheep, will be tenderly cared for by the good Shepherd. R1648:2

John 10:13

The hireling -- Of all the professions, the Christian ministry has afforded the quickest and easiest route to fame, ease and general temporal prosperity, and often to wealth. D61

Fleeth -- Some are fleeing from the old systems and running after Darwin and Huxley. Many are industriously endeavoring to dissuade the sheep from all faith in the inspiration of the sacred Scriptures. R1647:6

The great Parliament of Religions held in Chicago [1893] was a manifestation of the disposition of prominent hireling shepherds to attract the attention of the sheep to various heathen philosophies. R1647:6
Ignominiously, by silence and allowing the sheep to be misled. Our Lord could have taken this course by refraining from antagonizing the scribes, Pharisees and chief priests. R3527:5

Careth not -- While none of them could have bought the sheep, since all were under condemnation, we have no reason to suppose that any of them would have been willing to purchase them at the cost of his all. R4158:3

For the sheep -- The scribes and Pharisees neglected the interests of the people and were engaged in seeking their own gain--wealth and fame--while piously posing as religious leaders. Q845:3

John 10:14

The good shepherd -- He, in his absence, has made provision for his flock, that he would give them pastors and teachers who were to feed the flock of God, and to watch for their souls, for their lives, to protect them. R4158:3

The Good Shepherd will always be represented amongst the sheep by those who have his own characteristic. Through these he will utter his "voice" and lead his own sheep to pasture and to rest. R2673:5

As the true sheep know the true Shepherd and are known by him, so the true Shepherd should know the true under-shepherds and they should know the sheep intimately. R4158:3

Know my sheep -- The shepherd was acquainted with his sheep and loved them, not merely as so much wealth and merchandise, but as friends with whom he conversed, and whose welfare he defended. R2441:2

Not all mankind are sheep, or have the Shepherd's care. In the present time only those who have heard the Shepherd's voice and responded to his call to become his sheep are his flock. His word is that it is a little flock. R3268:3

Other sheep are consecrated to human leaders, human institutions, human theories, human efforts, following their own bents, and are thus separated from the Little Flock. R2673:2

At the present time there are many sheep in the nominal church, but they are not all the Lord's sheep. The harvest is the time for separating the different flocks of sheep. R2673:2

And am known -- From the standpoint of election, the Lord chooses such characters, and such characters choose the Lord. NS264:2

This class recognize, know, the Lord more and more intimately day by day, and find their love and devotion to him continually increasing. R3527:5
He knows us fully, we know him in part, known as we progress, but when the journey is finished then shall we know even as also we are known. (1 Cor. 13:12) R140:4*

The true sheep must not judge of fellow sheep by the pelt; for a wolf can wear a sheep's pelt; but must learn to note the Shepherd's voice and manner--directly through his Word, and indirectly through his representatives. R3142:6

The Father knoweth me -- Has confidence in me, has entrusted the care of the sheep to me. R2673:5

So know I -- I have full confidence in him, and recognize him as my Shepherd. R2673:5

This intimacy of acquaintance, this fellowship divine, is something which cannot be explained to others, but which is certainly appreciated by all the true sheep. R3527:6

Lay down my life -- Greek, psuche, soul. E337

His life as a man, his life in the flesh, his humanity, was what he gave for the life of the world as the world's sin-offering, "My flesh I will give for the life of the world." (John 6:51) R1247:5, 4536:1, 1228:4

The drawing of the world could not take place except he were lifted up as the sin-offering. R2467:4

In harmony with God's arrangements for me and for my sheep. R2673:6

The sheep of the Little Flock now being called are to be sacrificed: as the Shepherd, the King's Son, himself was sacrificed as the Lamb of God. R2442:2

As it was the mission of our Lord not to rule the world at his first advent, but to lay down his life for the world, so it is the mission of the Church, not to rule the world now, but to "lay down our lives for the brethren." (1 John 3:16) R2415:3

His followers will not only have the same voice, the same Word, but they will have the same devotion to the interests of the sheep. R2673:5, 2442:5

For the sheep -- For us, the Church, and for all mankind. E446

John 10:16

Other sheep -- There are two classes of sheep: obedient ones, easily led by the voice of the shepherd, and a more listless and somewhat wayward class who need some driving and guiding with the crook. R1648:2

Others who will become the Lord's followers under different conditions and a different call. R4784:3

Every soul that longs for the truth is one of the Lord's lost sheep.

R1374:5

These other sheep will include all of mankind who, during the Millennial Kingdom, will be glad to avail themselves of the great provision the Lord has made for them in his plan. R5694:1, 5490:6, 4940:6, 4157:5, 3528:3, 2442:1, 1919:1, 1648:2, 1374:5, 655:1; NS272:6

The Good Shepherd gave his life a ransom for all his sheep, not merely for the Little Flock of this age. Christ's larger flock will be gathered after the kingdom is set up. R2442:1

I bought the whole world with the one sacrifice for sins, and all who have the true sheep disposition. R2673:6

Whosoever will live godly shall go out with joy and be led forth in peace by the great Shepherd of the flock. R3597:5

These other sheep are particularly mentioned by our Master in the parable of the Sheep and the Goats in Matt. 25:31-46. R4784:6, 3528:3, 2606:6, 701:2; NS181:5, 272:6

Evidently also referred to as another "book of life" from that of the Gospel age. (Rev. 20:12) R701:3

"Israel after the flesh" will not be neglected; for though of another flock, they are under the same shepherd. R633:5

While this may be particularly applicable to the sheep of the next age, it may not be amiss to apply it now to those who are received from amongst the Gentiles. R4732:6

The view that we who are of the Gentiles or "other sheep" mentioned are now being brought into the one fold is not correct. We were not the Lord's sheep at all at the time of this parable. R3528:2

God for a time recognized only Israel and left others unrecognized. These, blinded by Satan, are hindered by weaknesses within and errors without, and include such notable shining heathen lights as Aristotle, Plato, Confucius and others. R1180:3

He was speaking to his flock, spiritual Israel, whom he was gathering out from amongst nominal Israel and subsequently from amongst the Gentiles. The other sheep, now lost, the world in general, blind and deaf, will be found of the Lord shortly. NS272:6

The Good Shepherd has various flocks. "As a shepherd searches for his flock on the day that he is among his flocks that are scattered, so will I search for my flocks." (Ezek. 34:20--Leeser) R633:1

Not of this fold -- Not of the Little Flock of this Gospel age. R3268:3

They will be of a different nature from the flock which the Lord is selecting during this Gospel age. R5694:1, 5491:1

We who are not Jews by nature, but Gentiles when we came into Christ, are members of this same flock. R3528:2

I must bring -- In due time, to a knowledge of the truth and to the full privilege of sheep. R3268:3

He has not yet begun to bring the other sheep; he is still taking the flock he first started to call, namely, spiritual Israel. NS412:2

The Lord will lead his sheep back to the heights of life. He is now leading his sheep of the Gospel age, the Church. By and by he will lead the world, during his Millennial Kingdom. R5654:4, 4158:5, 2673:6
Lead into truth and righteousness during the Millennial age. R655:1, 5490:6
The entire Millennial age will be required for the finding of the Lord's true sheep amongst the world of mankind. R3528:3, 3268:3
At that time the present flock will have passed beyond the veil into the Kingdom and its full glories. R4158:5, 2673:6
The Lord intends to use the very elect Little Flock of this Gospel age to carry his mercy and favor to all, and to give them an opportunity of becoming members of the human flock. R4158:6; NS412:6
One fold -- In the Revised Version and Diaglott: "one flock." R4159:1
Illustrating unity and indivisibility. R81:2*
"Of whom the whole family both in heaven and in earth is named." (Eph. 3:15) R2673:6
The two flocks will come back into harmony with God, but the one flock will be of the heavenly fold while the other flock will be of the earthly fold. NS412:6; R4732:6
Eventually all of God's creatures on various planes of being shall be recognized as one family of God. R3268:6
The flock will be one, but the sheep will be of various natures on various planes of being. R4159:4, 4940:6

John 10:17

Therefore -- Love with an if in it means love that is conditional, or because of something. R1253:5

My Father love me -- There are two kinds of love: the intense, particular love, and the general love, or kindness; and two sorts of love, affectionate love and loving kindness. This text shows special love, or affection. R1254:3

My life -- Psuche, being, existence; not zoe, life. R667:4, 53:4*; E337

That I might take -- According to the divine promise and power, in the resurrection. E337

Literally, receive; in his resurrection. R667:3

When he laid down his being, it was a human soul or being; but when he was made alive from the dead, it was no longer a human being, but a life-giving spirit, of the divine nature. R667:3

No man taketh it -- Jesus' death was a voluntary act. While men might seem to take his life by crucifying him, yet they were mistaken; in reality, "no man taketh it from me." R198:2*

No man took it from him in the sense that no man had that power, since God had promised that "he that keepeth the law shall live by it." CR95:5; R4642:4

I lay it down -- Jesus surrendered his life. He did not give away his life, nor did he forfeit it; nor did the Jews or Roman soldiers take it from him contrary to his permission. R4704:4; Q445:2

He did not barter or exchange his life for the heavenly nature. Our Lord's life would have been protected had he not voluntarily submitted and laid down his earthly rights. CR96:5; R4751:4, 4642:4

He laid it down in the Father's hands, saying, "Into thy hands I commit my spirit." (Luke 23:46) R4642:4; CR96:5

Of myself -- Christ likewise so loved the world as freely to become the instrument of Jehovah for its salvation. R2099:3

It was necessary that his disciples should know this, not merely that they might esteem their Lord more highly, but especially that they might realize him as their Redeemer, whose voluntary sacrifice for our sins redeemed father Adam and his entire race. R3528:6

Our Lord's earthly life was not forfeited, but merely laid down. The intention of laying it down was to abandon it, personally, forever, that humanity might get it. R5342:1, 4704:4; Q194:2

All other men are in bondage to corruption, and have no life in them by nature, but he being a perfect and sinless man, was not liable to sin's penalty, death. R677:1*

Christ was able to, and did, keep God's perfect law of love, and by thus remaining a perfect human being, was not subject to death. R1213:3*

Jesus kept the Law inviolate, therefore he had a right to life, hence it is that the Law did not demand his death, but when he died it was willingly a sacrifice for our sins. R608:1, 2037:5

Instead of the penalty of sin being "inflicted" upon our Redeemer, our Lord Jesus gladly and freely gave himself as our ransom, in harmony with the Father's plan. R1287:1

He submitted in Gethsemane, not because he must, but because he was voluntarily submitting himself to death, steadfastly refusing to yield to any appeals from his flesh to escape or lessen his sufferings. R5585:5, 4591:2

I have power -- Or, privilege. R2037:3, 667:3

Authority. R4751:4, 1213:3*, 667:3; Q445:2

He was commissioned or authorized by the Father so to do. R2037:3

To lay it down -- Thus the human nature remains forever dead, and mankind, having a substitute in death, can justly be brought forth from death, and will be, in due time. R1337:1*, 823:5

The life to which we are justified by our faith in Jesus' ransom must be laid down, even as he laid down his life. Thus we are "crucified with Christ." (Gal. 2:20) R814:2*

Not, "laid down;" not past tense, but of an act in the future. R1298:5*

To take it again -- This passage should read, "to receive it again."

R2037:3, 667:3

Our Lord's commission was not merely to lay down his life, but also to receive it again. R3528:5

The human existence of Jesus, our ransom, was surrendered to everlasting death; but he lives as a divine being to claim and restore to perfection mankind, purchased by his human life. R823:5

Jesus rights to earthly life, protection, dominion and power all belonged to him as a new creature when he arose from the dead. Those earthly rights are the basis of all the blessings of God through him to mankind. R4642:4; CR96:5

The Father was not content to merely restore him to his previous high position of the past, but made him a partaker of the divine nature in the fullest and most absolute sense. R3528:6

This same promise is open to us if we are faithful: "If we suffer with him we shall also reign with him," sharing his "glory, honor and immortality"--the divine nature. (2 Pet. 1:4) R3528:6

This commandment -- Word, precept. R667:3

Authority or power to say this. R198:3*, 4642:4; CR96:5

I received -- I have obtained. CR96:5; R4642:4

John 10:20

He hath a devil -- That they were blinded by their own willful prejudice beyond that prejudice engendered by the fall, is evident because others, no less depraved, asked, "Can a devil open the eyes of the blind?" R724:1

And is mad -- In the opinion of men he foolishly wasted his life. His life and teachings were mysteries to them. They could not understand him. A85

The world says of us that we are of an unsound mind because we care for the better things, the heavenly things. R5094:6; E196

John 10:25

In my Father's name -- Our Lord Jesus in all matters acts as the representative of the Father, Jehovah, in the work of salvation. E35
Neither Elijah nor Elisha nor Jesus claimed to give life to the dead by their own power. It was the power of Jehovah delegated to, or active through them. R810:3

John 10:26

Not of my sheep -- All who believe are his sheep. R140:1*

John 10:27

My sheep -- During the Gospel age the Lord has but one Church, one flock who follow him. R4784:3

It is well that all should have the docile, sheep-like nature, but it is necessary also that the sheep have character, else they cannot be overcomers. F247

Hear my voice -- Obey. F247; R279:4, 142:5

The Word of God. R2672:5

How does God call? By the Gospel. (2 Thess. 2:14) Jesus called by the Gospel when he was on earth, and then he gave the commission to the disciples, and so the calling goes on through the long dark night until the fullness of the Gentiles be come in. R810:6*

There are many voices in the world, some calling in one direction and some in another. The world calls us, the flesh calls us, the Adversary calls us, and the Master calls us. R3163:3, 2672:6, 2257:1

We are intentionally exposed to the various voices which would call us away from our Shepherd, and from following in his footsteps. R2257:2

We may have difficulty in discerning between the voice of the Adversary and the voice of the good Shepherd, because the Adversary's method is to simulate, or counterfeit, the voice of the Shepherd. R3163:6

Not all are able to hear and recognize the Shepherd's voice in the present time. The majority are deaf on the subject. The Scriptures say, "He that hath an ear to hear [the Gospel] let him hear." (Rev. 2:7) R2257:1

The true sheep will listen intently for the faintest sound of the Shepherd's voice. R5491:4

The voice of the Lord, the Great Shepherd, amongst his sheep is to be heard now, because it is the time of his second presence. R5693:6

During this harvest time, the increase of light, this hearing of the voice of the Lord, brings a test--the separation of those who are the true sheep from others who do not belong to this flock. R3883:6

The true sheep hear the Shepherd's voice, saying, "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me." (Matt. 16:24) R1790:3

We hear his voice assuring us that it is his will that we who belong to his chaste, espoused virgin class should all be one, no longer separated into sects and parties by creedal fences. SM125:2

If any are in Babylon and do not hear the voice of the Lord now calling them out, the inference is that they are not his true sheep. R5697:5

The shepherd of one flock calls his sheep in squads, and when the squad has done drinking, orders it away by sounds which the sheep perfectly understand, and calls up another squad. R4157:6

The Apostle tells us that "the ox knoweth its owner and the ass his master's crib." (Isa. 1:3) Although brute beasts, they know where to go for their nourishment. R3786:1

They follow me -- Follow the voice, the instructions, of the Shepherd.
E386

"Take up their cross and follow me." (Mark 10:21) R279:4, 142:5
To gain everlasting life we must become the Lord's "sheep" and follow the voice, the instruction of the Shepherd. It will not be forced upon any, but must be sought, desired and laid hold upon by all who would gain it.
R1878:4, 1648:2

John 10:28

I give unto them -- Jehovah is our Father, life-giver, though he has used the Spirit and the Word as his agents in our begetting, and will use Jesus as his agent in our birth or resurrection. R297:2

It is God in Christ reconciling the world to himself. We honor both the Father and the Son. R27:5*

As Lord, Christ gives immortality. R62:4*

Granted only to those who, when they learn of it and the terms upon which it will be granted as a gift, seek for it, by living according to the spirit of holiness. E386

Contrary to Romanism's teaching that immortality is inherent in all men. R560:4*

Eternal life -- It was by virtue of purchasing the sheep by his now precious blood that their eternal life is possible. R4157:5

"I will deliver him and honor him. With long life will I satisfy him, and show him my salvation [make him understand my plan]." (Psa. 91:15,16)
R3332:5

Never perish -- As the Father hath inherent life, so he gave to the Son to have this life--he had the promise of it during his earthly ministry and the reality of it in his resurrection. This same promise is given to the Church. R5608:6

A truly regenerated soul who abides under the blood never will be lost. R140:1

Neither shall any -- We are as dear to him as the apple of his eye. He that began a good work in us is able to complete it in the day of Jesus Christ. (Phil. 1:6) R5118:5

My Father -- There is something thoroughly incorrect in the idea that our Lord Jesus was his own heavenly Father, Jehovah. R2773:3

Which gave them me -- All the drawing thus far done from the time of our Lord to the present has been done by the Heavenly Father himself, not by a mediator nor by an advocate. R4476:2

Greater than all -- On so important a question as the equality of the Father and the Son, we must not rely upon any man's testimony except that of the inspired writers of the Scriptures. R5747:6; OV114:4

In combatting the error that Jesus was a mere man, some, loyal to the Lord, went to the other extreme and declared him, contrary to his own words, equal to the Father. R4165:1

Meditating no such usurpation of divine authority as did Lucifer. On the contrary, he was the very personification of loving obedience and self-abnegation. OV307:T

He had no thought of robbing the divine glory and honor by putting himself upon a equality with God the Father. R5846:6

The word "all" may be used to refer to all mankind, or all of a certain specified class. Here the all includes creatures on every plane of being--men, angels, etc. It is the plural form of the Greek word pas.

R838:2

Even "the Son himself being subject unto him, that God may be all in all." (1 Cor. 15:28) R715:4*

The great Shepherd now present with his sheep and gathering out of all the various pens of Christendom those who know his voice, will not suffer the wolves to stampede his flock, nor to devour them. R4710:4, 4449:4

No man is able -- There is no danger of others plucking or forcibly separating us from God's favor, or turning his love away from us. The only danger is in our own doings. R1458:5

While each member of the Royal Priesthood is at liberty to go back to wallowing in the mire, yet if he choose to remain, none shall be able to pluck him out of his Father's hand, nor to separate him from his grace. (Rom. 8:38,39) SM11:T

If the salt loses its savor it will be because we abandon the truth and turn unto fables, and not because God fails to supply it to his saints with abundant and convincing proof. R634:6*

It does not imply an imprisonment of those in God's care, so that they cannot go from him as they came to him, by the exercise of their own free wills. R1698:6

So long as our hearts are loyal, neither angels nor devils nor men will be permitted to separate us from him; but if we do not earnestly desire to abide in him, he will not only permit us to leave him, but will force us to do so. R2287:1

The Lord himself keeps the Church books and the individual accounts of each member. His unerring wisdom alone is sufficient for that. It is most unbecoming in any member of the Body to assume the authority of the Head of the Church. R1893:5

To pluck them out -- Or blot their names from the records in heaven. R1893:5

Are one -- One in sympathy, one in plan, one in operation, and not one in person. CR229:5

This text is considered as a proof that our Lord Jesus is entitled to the name Jehovah, that he was both the Father and the Son; or that he had no Father and was not a Son. On the contrary, the thought of this text is that of harmony. E75

He and the Father were one in mind and purpose, because he would not do any will of his own; he would do only the Father's will. They were in absolute oneness. E75; CR248:5

Because he had fully submitted his will to the Father's will and had made the Father's will his own, therefore they were one. SM493:1

It is a oneness which results from having the same mind or spirit; it is the same oneness that should exist between a heart union of man and wife; they twain are one. R369:5

The Bible says that all men should honor the Son even as they honor the Father. CR248:5

In John 17:20-23 the oneness of the Church for which the Lord prayed is stated to be exactly the same as the oneness between the Father and the Son--a oneness of mind, and not a personal oneness. E75; NS258:6

Christ's followers, when united to him, will be given immortality, thus being made one with him in the same sense that the Father and the Son are one. Thus will their lives harmonize and blend, yet the Father will be greater than all. R715:4*

The Jews -- "A man's foes shall be those of his own household." (Matt. 10:36) The Master was a Jew. The Jews were his brethren according to the flesh; and it was they that hated him without a cause, they that persecuted him. SM218:2

John 10:32

From my Father -- In discoursing with his disciples, Jesus tells them that they might pray to God as their Father. No Jew had ever done this before. R5683:6

John 10:33

Blasphemy -- Applicable to any indignity offered to God. Bouvier defines it: "Blasphemy is to attribute to God that which is contrary to his nature and does not belong to him, and to deny what does." B306

Blasphemy, as the word is used in Scripture, does not signify profane swearing, but rather a misstatement of character. R499:6

Makest thyself God -- Reasoning thus: that if a son of God, he was making himself to be also a God, or of the God family. R301:3

Jesus said that not only was he the Son of God, but that he would bring many sons to God. R5623:3

John 10:34

Written in your law -- Where all of the Lord's consecrated people, the Gospel Church, are called "sons of God." He merely claimed the same title that was there freely given to those who would come into that relationship. (Psa. 82:6) R2781:5

Ye are gods -- Clearly showing that the term "gods" in Psa. 82 is applied to all the sons of the Most High God, who will be joint-heirs with Christ Jesus. C239

Referring to other mighty ones--the Church, the sons of God, of whom Jesus is the head or chief. R421:3, 338:2

Greek, theos, seldom used in the New Testament except in referring to Jehovah, because the apostles rarely spoke of false systems of religion; yet so used of other than Jehovah, here and in Acts 7:40,43; 17:23; 1 Cor. 8:5. B274

Unto whom the word -- Those having ears to hear; and it applies still to the same class. E69

The gods there mentioned are the ones who receive obediently his words and example. If God calls such as receive Jesus' teachings "gods," the teacher of those gods could properly claim the same relationship as a son of God. R474:2, 301:3

Cannot be broken -- Not only David was inspired, but this text proves that the 82nd Psalm, a "Psalm of Asaph," also "cannot be broken." R1418:3; HG310:6

John 10:36

Hath sanctified -- Jesus Christ was sanctified, and sent into the world for the good of the human race; and his Body or Bride are for the same purpose. R69:5*

I am the Son of God -- The charge of blasphemy against our Lord was based on his claim of being a Son of God--not the Father himself; that thus he was placing himself on a parity with God, as being of the same kind or nature. R2781:5

This feature of the Master's teachings especially angered the Jews; for they declared that in claiming to be the Son of God, he was establishing himself upon a pedestal of honor in competition with Jehovah. R5768:1; OV329:2

He never acknowledged Joseph to be his father; nor did he ever acknowledge his earthly life to be the beginning of his existence. E89

Jesus claimed to be the Son of God, and consequently the Messiah. He also required his disciples to believe this truth. R944:4*

Just what we claim. "Beloved now are we the sons of God." (1 John 3:2)
"The God and Father of our Lord Jesus hath begotten us." (1Pet. 1:3)
R301:3

John 10:38

Believe the works -- Messiah was to heal the sick, etc.; consequently our Lord must do these things, and in a measure begin the work of restitution, so that Israel could recognize him and be responsible for rejecting him and his "works." R2000:4

John 10:39

But he escaped -- It seems as though his explanation satisfied them, for they did not stone him. R474:2, 301:3

John 11

John 11:1

Was sick -- Probably with one of the fevers common to that part of the country, similar to the one from which our Lord recovered Peter's wife's mother. R3529:1

Lazarus -- It has been supposed by some that the rich young ruler who came to Jesus for advice and subsequently went away very sorrowful was his friend Lazarus. R3529:1

It has been inferred that later on Lazarus did become a consecrated follower of the Lord. R3529:3

Some have thought that they discerned Lazarus amongst later disciples of Christ--possibly Barnabas. OV334:4

John 11:3

Sent unto him -- The message was brief; it did not urge him to come nor ask a miraculous intervention; it merely stated the fact. In some respects it was a grand model of a Christian prayer. R4160:2, 3529:1

They thought it proper to send the Master word respecting Lazarus, but not proper to dictate to him what should be done in the case. OV333:T
They knew of Jesus' power to heal, even by the word of his mouth. They had faith that if he could help strangers, he would certainly be glad to assist his friend. R4552:4

They manifested their faith and submission also as to what answer would come--as to whether he would simply send word, or bless a handkerchief, or what not. They felt that he would care for them. R5230:2

Beyond Jordan, a distance of only about 30 miles. R3529:1

Whom thou lovest -- For he was a special friend, and their home was his home whenever he was near Jerusalem. OV333:T Though one whom Jesus loved, he was not one of the apostles which followed with the Lord. OV334:4 It speaks volumes for the character of Lazarus as a man that he had the love of the Lord Jesus. R3529:2

John 11:4

Not unto death -- Not that our Lord was mistaken, that Lazarus would not die, rather that the result would not be continuous death, knowing that he would awaken him. R4160:3

But for the glory of God -- The matter of Lazarus' death was a part of the divine program, as was also his subsequent awakening from the tomb. R3529:1

John 11:5

Jesus loved Martha -- Jesus loved all mankind to the extent that he "tasted death for every man." (Heb. 2:9) But among men he had his special loves. R439:4

Yet, when choosing his twelve apostles, and later the "seventy," he chose none of his female followers. F265

Martha comes down to us as a synonym of bustling, energetic hospitality, "busied about many things." Yet surely she was loving and loyal to the Master. OV334:4

As we note the special features of character which called forth the Master's love, we shall more and more be able to copy them in reaching our goal. OV335:2

John 11:6

He abode two days -- In order that the miracle might be more pronounced. R3529:4

It must have been a great trial of their faith when our Lord remained away. R5230:2

John 11:7

Let us go -- There would be no particular danger. The miracle he intended to perform would disconcert his enemies long enough to permit of his return to Berea a little later. R4160:3

John 11:9

Walk in the day -- As though we were living in the broad daylight, so that if the world understood all about any transaction of ours, they would realize that we are honest--even as the Lord understands all about it. R5098:5

John 11:11

Sleepeth -- Lazarus was not dead as a brute beast, but was merely inanimate for a time, awaiting the Lord's due time to call him forth, to re-animate him. R4160:3; OV333:4

Mankind's condition would be actual death, the same as a brute beast, were it not that the Lord has provided in Jesus for their resuscitation. We are to think of the world of mankind as not being extinct, but merely asleep.

R4160:5, 3529:3, 2796:5, 1377:6; PD61/72; NS751:1

The Adamic death penalty was to perish, but it has been cancelled by Christ's ransom. No longer should it be regarded as a perished condition, but as a "sleep" from which the Redeemer will awaken all. R1126:2; HG293:5

In his sleep of death the four days of death were but as a moment; his awakening thought was next to the one he had when he fell asleep in death. R3531:4; E344; HG331:6

God's purpose of a resurrection is fixed, unalterable. Those whom men call dead "all live unto him." (Luke 20:38) From God's standpoint they are asleep, and not destroyed. R5611:5

Throughout the Scriptures we find death repeatedly mentioned as sleep: Abraham slept with his fathers; so did all the prophets and kings of Israel. R3529:4, 3027:6, 2959:1, 2197:6, 2172:3, 1881:1, 678:2; E345; HG332:2, 194:1, 121:6; OV333:1; SM38:2; NS830:6

All mankind fall asleep to wait for the morning of the great Millennial day, when the Sun of Righteousness shall arise. R5166:5; OV333:4

Many who use the term sleep, and who place it upon the tombstones, overlook entirely the fact that it implies that the sleeping one is unconscious, that he will not be conscious until the waking time, the resurrection. R2959:4

The Scriptures say also that all live unto God (Luke 20:38), for from his standpoint they only sleep. R5073:2

Did we suppose that the good "sleep" in heaven? We were told that the bad go to a place too warm for sleep. OV333:4; SM39:T

Out of sleep -- A sleep that otherwise would have lasted until the dawn of the Millennial day when the general resurrection would be due, but a sleep that was interrupted temporarily. HG136:1

John 11:12

He shall do well -- The disciples had not understood the Master's words.
R5611:6

John 11:14

Lazarus is dead -- Coming down to their ordinary use of language.
SM39:1; R3027:6, 1880:6
It is actually death, but it was likened to a sleep in view of the resurrection. R1017:6*

John 11:15

I am glad -- Because it will give me an opportunity to demonstrate to you and through you to all who shall be my disciples in the future the great power of God that is vested in me in respect to the resurrection of the dead. OV333:T; R4552:5
Remembering that their tears and troubles may be made to them, under the Lord's providence, a great blessing. R4160:6
So with us, the Lord will be glad to permit our trials, sorrows, tears and difficulties for our sakes, that we may thus receive some important lessons which we could not otherwise so well learn. R4161:1
Let us go -- Manifesting a change in Jesus' attitude; discarding caution, he went directly to the house of Lazarus and his sisters. He knew that his hour was come; that the end of his ministry was at hand. NS629:5
With his disciples, he began the three days' journey to Bethany. R4552:5

John 11:16

That we may die -- This was the spirit of courage which the twelve shared, and it helps to reconcile us to their apparent cowardice on the night of his betrayal, a cowardice which was incited by our Lord's own refusal to accept assistance. R4161:1
Some of us who feel courageous for the Lord and his cause and ready to die therefor need indeed to watch and pray that we maintain this disposition and not succumb in the hour of stress. R4161:2

John 11:17

When Jesus came -- Portions of two more days were spent in reaching Bethany. R3529:4

John 11:19

To comfort them -- It was the custom of the time to have a funeral service of mourning for seven days. R4161:2

John 11:20

Went -- Evidently in the direction of the tomb, for the Jews who were mourning with her in the house, followed her. R4161:4

And met him -- Jesus did not consider it the part of wisdom to go to the home, which he knew would be crowded with mourners. R4161:2

Mary sat still -- Mary was so overcome because he had not sent some help in her brother's case, that she did not feel that she even wished to see the Lord. She did not feel like honoring him. R5230:3

Bowed with her grief and perhaps disappointed that the Lord's word, "This sickness is not unto death, but unto the glory of God" (verse 4), had apparently failed. R4161:2

It has been assumed that there was a special heart-fellowship between our Lord and Mary, and it is in full harmony with this thought that we find her remaining at home until she received the message that the Lord inquired for her. R3529:6

John 11:21

If thou hadst -- If thou hadst come when we sent thee word. OV334:1; SM39:2

There was in this remark something of the suggestion of chiding. R4161:3

We cannot blame the sorrowing sisters that they felt hurt that the Messiah should apparently neglect their interests. R4552:5

How apt we all are, while laboring under the weight of sorrow, to wonder why the Lord's omnipotent power does not intervene on our behalf, feeling that as his special friends we should have special consideration. R3529:4

Had not died -- The sisters were greatly disappointed. They had not thought of the possibility of their brother's dying, because they so thoroughly believed in the power of Jesus. SM39:2

John 11:23

Shall rise -- Notice that our Lord did not say, "Thy brother is not dead; thy brother is more alive than he ever was; he is in heaven or in purgatory." R4552:5, 4161:3, 3530:1; HG194:2; OV213:5

He did not tell Martha and Mary that Lazarus was in heaven, with a harp in his hands. R5611:6; OV334:2

John 11:24

In the resurrection -- The disciples and followers of Jesus were Jews who, as a people, believed the dead were dead, and placed their hopes in a resurrection. R2795:4

While the doctrine of redemption is the central doctrine of the Christian system, the doctrine of resurrection is the end of our faith, our glorious hope through Christ. R1774:2

To those that believe that the dead are more alive now than when they were alive, the doctrine of the resurrection must, of necessity, be foolishness. SM35:3

The resurrection is contrary to the laws of nature, according to all the history of the past. Only those who have an implicit faith in the Creator will be able to receive this doctrine. SM36:1

At the last day -- The great day, the seventh thousand-year day, the day of Christ's Kingdom, when all the dead will be due to come forth. R5611:6, 5339:4, 4552:5, 4161:3, 2795:5

John 11:25

I am the resurrection -- Speaking of the intended results of his sacrifice. F696

There will be no resurrection except by my power--why not ask me now? R5611:6, 4552:5, 4161:3; OV334:2; SM39:3

Jesus is God's appointed channel by which the world may obtain reconciliation, restitution, life everlasting, or, refusing it at his hand, their portion will be the second death. HG96:3 Even then he suspended temporarily the power of death, restoring Lazarus again, and thus illustrating the resurrection power which will be used in much fuller measure and degree. R2795:5; OV214:4

Resurrection power resided in our Lord Jesus because in the divine plan it was he who was to redeem the world by the sacrifice of himself and consequently to restore it. R3754:3, 846:1

He only hath the keys of hades and can re-create from nothing the beings that before existed and give them back the boon he purchased for every son and daughter of Adam. R822:6*

Then he gave an illustration of his power in the awakening of Lazarus to life. R846:5

All the hope of the world is in the resurrection, yet even Christians now have little or no faith in it. R846:4

Not merely an awakening from death, but also such vitalization as would overcome the dying process of disease and ultimately bring the revived one up to the full perfection of being enjoyed in Eden. R3754:3, 3529:5, 1118:5*

A deeper thought is that we who now believe in the Lord are sometimes spoken of as already having a new life, the resurrection life, as already having passed from death into life. R4162:6

Anastasis here has the Greek article, showing emphasis and indicating the first or special resurrection. The emphasis when used with anastasis always marks the chief or spiritual resurrection. R1512:1

All of these procedures are of the Father, though through the Son and through the Church. F399

Contrary to Christian Science teachings. HG700:1*

And the life -- Others may indeed think that they have eternal life in themselves, that by some inherent, immortal principle they will live forever. R3795:2

He that believeth -- All mankind, through Jesus, will be made alive. No one will come up to full perfection of life without faith and obedience. Q591:4; R1232:4

Only believers shall be resurrected, made to live, which is the full force of the words "resurrection" and "life." R1231:3

Belief in the ransom will be necessary to the full acquirement of the favor purchased, life. R1231:5

The preaching of the Gospel to all who hear it now is a savor of life unto life or of death unto death, knowledge proving our condemnation if we do not accept the free gift. R1965:4*

Yet shall he live -- Adam and Eve lived, had life in perfect measure, before sin entered. When death entered, dying commenced. It was a process of ceasing to live. R1231:3

John 11:26

Whosoever liveth -- The class referred to are reckoned dead to the human will, nature, hope, etc., and are alive toward God as new creatures. R473:3, 293:6

And believeth -- Then, after "living." F665

When awakened from death and brought to a knowledge of the truth, those who believe in Jesus and who walk in obedience to his commandments, may have life everlastingly. R846:5; Q592:T; NS670:5

If they believe, they will "never die." R1856:2

We make no claims of universal salvation; for the Scriptures speak of some who will die the second death, having proven themselves not sufficiently in harmony with righteousness to be worthy of eternal life. SM442:3

Shall never die -- Referring to those who will be fully made alive in the resurrection. R1856:2

Not only is the resurrection power vested in our Lord, but also power to keep the resurrected believers alive everlastingly. R1856:2

It is God's assurance that any who reach the condition of life may retain it forever, if they shall forever continue to be believers. R1232:4

We have everlasting life by faith and must wait for its actual reception until the resurrection. R1856:1

Will not die, but immediately, in the twinkling of an eye, be transferred to the new body like unto Christ's spiritual body. R473:6, 294:1

Believest thou this? -- "Only believe" was the keynote of our Lord's reply to Martha. So each of us must learn the lesson of faith and confidence in the Lord's wisdom, love and power. R3529:5

If thou hadst been -- The same expression Martha had used. If the words contain a measure of chiding or suggestion of wounded hopes, it was a very delicate one. R3530:1

Likewise we are more or less inclined to think of what might have been if something had been different, apt to forget that our Lord has full charge of all our affairs, that no "if" or chance has to do with the Little Flock. R3530:2

Weeping -- According to the Greek original, wailing. R4161:4

At the very moment of death, a wild, piercing shriek, high and prolonged, a quavering wail announced the fact. The mourning continues violently for three days. R3530:2

While a certain amount of the emotion was perfunctory, nevertheless it had the element of sympathy for the bereaved, and illustrated the Apostle's words, "The whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together, waiting." (Rom. 8:22,23) R3530:2

Groaned in the spirit -- He was touched with a feeling of man's infirmities. His perfect mind would make all his sensibilities more active than ours, his sympathy would be stronger, his sense of pain keener. R5103:6

John 11:34

Where have ye laid him? -- Not an indication that he did not know, but rather that it was his polite manner of saying, Shall we now go to the tomb? Lead the way. R4161:4

John 11:35

Jesus wept -- While the word used in connection with the weeping of the others indicates wailing, it is not so with the Greek word which refers to our Lord's weeping; he shed tears, but lifted not up his voice in grief. R4161:5

Theirs was the weeping of wailing or emotion, our Lord's was the silent tear of sympathy. R3530:3

In sympathy, not only with his bereaved friends, but also with the many similar scenes of sorrow which must thus afflict mankind before the dawning of the then far distant glorious day of resurrection. R1774:5; OV212:9

Entering deeply into the affliction that is resting upon our race. Our Lord is sympathetic, he knoweth our frame and remembereth that we are dust. (Psa. 103:14) R4161:5, 3530:3

The tear of sympathy is not to be understood as a sign of weakness. R3530:3
How unlike all the great ones of this world, whose greatness is so often represented in their coldness, stoicism, and really represents their lovelessness, their lack of sympathy. R3530:3

Our Master himself has bidden us to weep with those who weep and rejoice with those who rejoice. (Rom. 12:15) R3530:4

It was our helpless and pitiable condition as condemned sinners that induced his tears. NS189:1

Our Lord's tears were shed chiefly in sympathy on behalf of others. He forbade others to weep for him. (Luke 23:28) We also should be strong to bear our own griefs, and tender to feel the sorrows and sins of others. R1886:5*

Nevertheless great weeping and wailing are not appropriate to us, for, as the Apostle says, "We sorrow not as others who have no hope." (1Thess. 4:13) R3530:4

The tears of Jesus forbid the thought that Lazarus had been in heaven. R3531:4

There is not a word throughout the Scripture to the effect that Jesus laughed; the surroundings as viewed from his standpoint were too serious. NS189:1

John 11:37

Could not this man -- So there are some today inclined to criticize the Lord for permitting sickness, sorrow and death, and inquire whether the power of God is lacking or the willingness of God lacking that he does not restrain these adverse influences. R4161:5

John 11:38

To the grave -- A cave, the doorway of which was closed by a large stone. R3530:4

John 11:39

Take ye away -- Of course, the same power that could awaken the dead, would have been sufficient to roll away the stone also; but it is a rule of the Lord never to do anything by miraculous power which could be as well done by human agency. R4161:6, 3530:4

So when we come to our Lord with our griefs and ask for his blessing, we should not expect any special intervention in matters that are possible to us. Indeed, we doubtless would lose a blessing thereby. R4161:6, 3530:5

Martha -- The same Martha who a little while before had said, Even now I know that whatsoever thou shalt ask of God, he will hear thee. R4161:6

He stinketh -- Decomposition has set in. OV334:3; R5578:2

We may assume that it was not the custom to embalm all the dead. R2795:6

See the glory -- Greek, optomai. The general significance of the word is recognize. R140:6

Mary saw no glory; but she did see Lazarus raised, and in the power thus displayed, she recognized the glory of God. R141:1

John 11:41

Lifted up his eyes -- In acknowledgment of the Father's power and that he was acting as the Father's agent and representative. R3530:5, 4162:1

Father, I thank thee -- Here our Lord gave sanction to public prayer, showing that when he objected to the prayers of the Pharisees on the street corners it was because the time and place were unsuitable, and because they prayed to be seen and heard of men. R4162:1

The Lord's prayers could not have been recorded if they had not been heard; and the very object of their utterances in their presence was evidently for their benefit and blessing. R2251:6

As the world return from the tomb, our thought is that they will come back in answer to prayer, very much the same as did Lazarus. SM226:2

John 11:42

And I knew -- The Father was in loving sympathy with the Son, not leaving him to bear any trial alone, but always granting him the light of his countenance and a joyful sense of admiring approval. R3161:1

His prayer was in the nature of a conversation, as between a Son and his Father. R3530:5

Thou hearest me always -- He never had a refusal because he always asked the things in harmony with the Father's will. R5708:1

Our Lord kept the incense continually burning, and thus could say this. So the under-priests will be heard always if they continually offer the incense of faith, love and obedience to God. (Rev. 8:3) T120

A small minority who, in Christ, endeavor to do always those things which please him, are able to approximate this sentiment expressed by him.

R1903:1

Because of the people -- That they might know that he did nothing of himself, that he claimed nothing of himself. R3530:5

He was acknowledging the Father that all those who stood by might take knowledge that not by his own power, but by the Father's power, as the Finger of God, he worked these miracles. R4162:1, 3530:5

From this we may assume that it would have been entirely consistent on our Lord's part to have proceeded to speak as the Father's representative without offering prayer. R3530:5

For the same reason Pastor Russell permitted his friends to express themselves with considerable freedom and laudation, as an offset to the calumnies of the "false brethren" before the minds of newer readers.

R1659:3

That they may believe -- It is proper to pray before believers. R3698:5

Our Lord himself set us the example of offering prayer in public; not only in the presence of his disciples frequently, but also in the presence of unbelievers. R2023:3, 4162:1, 2251:6

Prayer influences all who join in it. Jesus and the apostles indicate that it should be uttered in such a voice and manner as to enable those about to appreciate and intelligently join it. R799:6, 2251:6

John 11:43

He cried -- Or, commanded in a loud voice. No secret mumbling, nor incantation, or legerdemain. R4162:1

Come forth -- Jesus did not say, Lazarus, come down from heaven, nor did he say, Lazarus, come up from below. R5611:6, 4552:6, 3531:4; HG135:6; OV334:3; SM40:T

These restorations are never called a resurrection in Scripture. Its meaning is broader and fuller than these partial resurrections. R360:2, 3531:1; OV352:1

Lazarus was not resurrected, he was merely awakened from the sleep of death. Resurrection would signify the complete raising up out of sin and death conditions, to perfection and life conditions. R3530:6, 5578:2

"The hour is coming in the which all that are in their graves shall hear his voice and shall come forth" (John 5:28), but, unlike him, to be then granted an opportunity for anastasis, raising up complete out of sin and death conditions to the full perfection of human nature. R4162:4, 3531:1

The Church class will come forth to perfection of life on the spirit plane. The world of mankind will come forth from the tomb imperfect, and will have to prove their worthiness of eternal life. SM40:1

Coming forth is one thing, resurrection is another. R4552:6
Though it is true that all that are in their graves shall "come forth," they will come forth with a small measure of life, such as men now have.
R1231:3
"Thou shalt call and I will answer thee, thou wilt have respect to the work of thy hands." (Job 14:15) NS234:1

John 11:44

He that was dead -- Mark well that it was not the living that came forth, but that Lazarus was really dead. R4552:6
Came forth -- The most notable miracle which our Lord performed. R4552:4
Where was Lazarus? What account did he give of himself? Not a word is there written on the subject. He had no account to give of himself; he was nowhere, he was dead. R4162:3, 3531:4, 1880:6
How strange it would be, if after he had been in heaven for several days,
Jesus should do him the unfriendly act of calling him back to earth life.
R4162:4; E345; HG332:1
He was quickened by our Lord's power and authority. OV214:1
But later Lazarus died again. This is proof that the death of the condemned one does not make reconciliation for sin, nor entitle to a release from its penalty. R392:1
A picture, a demonstration, of the power of the Lord to testify in advance of how he eventually will be the resurrection power to the whole world.
R4162:3, 4335:6
A foreshadowing, and therefore in a sense as typifying or illustrating the resurrection. R4603:4, 4552:4
Bound hand and foot -- In a measure bound, though loosely; what we would call, swathed. R3530:4
With graveclothes -- Or, the winding sheet customary at that time.
R3530:4
Loose him -- For in his burial his jaw had been bound and his limbs wrapped. R4162:2
This case, and that of Jairus' daughter (Mark 5:43), indicate that the revived ones will require clothing, nourishment and assistance, and will acquire strength gradually. R734:2
A refutation of the claim that it would be impossible to provide food and raiment for so many. SM36:1
This miracle was intensified by the fact that he permitted those about him to do as much as was in their power in connection with the miracle: first, the rolling away of the stone; and here the loosing of the binding sheet.
R3530:4

John 11:45

Which came to Mary -- After Jesus had called forth Lazarus from the tomb, Mary's faith, love and zeal were revived and intensified. Her faith had been sorely tried and tested, and had finally triumphed. R5230:3

Believed on him -- No wonder. It would be wonderful indeed that they could disbelieve under such conditions. R3530:6

All men will believe -- Fancying that the teachings of Jesus, if allowed to proceed, would certainly awaken the people to a faith in the Messianic Kingdom. They thought of Jesus as an imposter, but feared that his teachings would incite some kind of fanatical uprising. R5541:1
Fearing that the people would be so influenced by Jesus' teaching that they themselves would avail nothing; that Rome would pay no attention to the rabble, and that if they failed, God's cause in the earth would be blotted out. R5676:3, 4162:2

Our place -- The clergy are as anxious now to perpetuate the institutions of nominal Christianity as were the scribes and Pharisees and Doctors of the Law anxious to perpetuate Judaism; and for the same reasons. D163

John 11:49

Caiaphas -- Evidently the ringleader in the conspiracy against Jesus. R2780:6

John 11:50

It is expedient -- Being outwardly and nominally a religious man and a representative of justice, he felt constrained to put the murder of Jesus, which he felt to be a necessity for the public good, in the light of an act of justice. R2780:3

For us -- Caiaphas was probably only thinking of human expediency. R2780:3

For the people -- For the good of the people. R1633:3, 4162:3

One man should die -- Not because they believed him a bad man, but because they were so thoroughly wrapped up in their own plans and purposes in connection with their nation. R4162:2

They seem to have been unanimous in believing that his destruction would be for the good of the Lord's cause, as they understood that cause. R5540:6

Nation perish not -- He realized that the teachings of Jesus were opposed to the general traditions of Judaism, and that their acceptance must mean a religious revolution. This, he reasoned, would mean the loss of prestige of the nation with the Romans, and the abrogation of all their rights and privileges. R2780:3, 5676:3

The difficulty was that they had a wrong view of God's cause and of their nation. They were leaving God out of the account. They were thinking that they must do the whole thing. R5676:3, 4162:3

John 11:51

He prophesied -- Illustrating how God may at times use the thoughts and intentions of wicked men to express prophetically profound truths.

R2780:3, 2470:2

But we have no intimation in the Scriptures, nor any reason for supposing, that God ever used or recognized that church-nation, its rulers and representatives after it was cast off. C181

The same is true in connection with Babylon. She is "spewed out" of the Lord's mouth; and neither the voice of the Bridegroom nor of the Bride shall be heard in her any more forever. (Rev. 3:16; 18:23) C181

It is not sufficient that we see certain facts; it is necessary also that we be in heart-harmony with the Lord, else we might, like Caiaphas, aid in fulfilling the Lord's plan, but nevertheless, taking a wrong position, may be bringing ourselves, with others, under a curse. R2470:2

That nation only -- It was indeed expedient, not only for the Jews, but also for the whole world, that a ransom should be given for Adam and his race. R2780:3; E446

John 11:53

They took counsel -- Conspiring against the Master, as they supposed, for God's glory. R5315:4

Similarly, in the end of this Gospel age, religious leaders, moved by similar motives of self-preservation, may conspire for the smiting, the injury, of some of the Lord's followers. R5315:4, 4162:3

What the Sanhedrin there did in determining to oppose Jesus, the federation of churches will probably do in the way of opposing Present Truth. R4162:3

To put him to death -- The religious leaders had murder in their hearts. It was merely a question of how they could accomplish the murder and deceive the people, so as not to provoke those who had begun to exercise faith in Jesus. R5541:1

But this determination was to be kept quiet. The chief priests and rulers worked secretly. R5230:5

We are not to suppose that these learned men got out into the streets with the people and hurraed for Barabbas and shouted against Jesus; but rather that they incited the rabble, and themselves assumed a more dignified line of conduct. R5676:2

Jesus continued his work until the whole city was in an uproar and the order-loving scribes and Pharisees had him executed. R1633:3 11:55

To purify themselves -- The appropriateness of the still greater purifying of all who accept the New Covenant must be evident. R2022:4

John 12

John 12:1

Six days before -- On Sunday afternoon. R4212:1

The Jewish Sabbath, which ended at six o'clock in the evening. R2447:3

They probably arrived on what corresponded to our Friday, or the Jewish sixth day of the week. R3534:2

To Bethany -- To the home of Lazarus, Martha and Mary; called the house of Simon the leper either because he was the father of the family, or the husband of Martha, who at this time was a widow. R3534:2, 3363:3

Our Lord and his disciples were en route to Jerusalem, and Bethany was on the way, in the suburbs. R3534:2 To whatever extent we have comfortable surroundings, in that same proportion we need to be specially on guard against the cares of this life and the deceitfulness of riches. R3534:6

Economically, the Bethany house was probably of a comfortable class. They had their own home, their own tomb, and on this occasion Mary was able as well as willing to spend considerable in honoring the Lord. R3534:5

Our Lord was a visitor in those parts, his home, to the extent that he ever had one, being in Galilee, and the most of his time spent there.

R2448:1, 3363:3

The town is now called in Arabic El' Azireyeh, or the town of Lazarus.

R1395:3

About two miles from Jerusalem. R668:3

Where Lazarus was -- Also one of the table-guests. R2447:3

Whom he raised -- Greek, egeiro, simply meaning, "to awaken, arouse, stir" (Liddell and Scott); used in speaking of temporary awakenings.

R1512:2

Probably the first visit the Lord had made to the Bethany home since that great event. R3534:3

John 12:2

They made him -- In harmony with the Jewish rules governing in such cases, the dishes were evidently prepared in advance, as Sabbath labor was prohibited. R3534:3

A supper -- No ordinary supper, but in the nature of a feast or banquet in our Lord's honor. R2448:1

On Sunday night. R4212:1

On the eve of the Jewish Sabbath. R3852:2, 2447:3

Saturday night, the evening following the Jewish Sabbath, after six p.m. R3534:2

Martha served -- The two sisters evidently had the matter planned between them: Martha served at the table and Mary served in an especial manner with the ointment. R3534:6

John 12:3

A pound -- Nearly a pint, the Roman pound being twelve ounces. R2448:2

Of ointment -- A misimpression: the word perfume would more nearly describe the liquid used. R3535:1, 2448:1

Hers was a literal perfume and in time lost its virtue; but the little acts of kindness and helpfulness we may render one to another will never lose their merit in the estimation of the Lord, nor their fragrance in the estimation of each other. R3536:3

The sweetest perfume that the home circle ever knows arises from the deeds of loving service which its members do for each other. R2448:6

Very costly -- The amount that love is willing to expend for others is, to some extent at least, a measure of the love. R2448:2

The use of such expensive perfumes was very rare; indeed, even the emperors used it sparingly, but when used it was generally poured upon the head. R3535:1

Nero was the first of the Emperors to indulge in the use of costly perfumes for his anointing. R2448:2

Considered in the light of the odor and blessing which it has shed upon all of the Lord's people, Mary's alabaster box of precious perfume, very costly, has proven to be extremely cheap. R3535:2

And anointed -- It is not our privilege to come into personal contact with our dear Redeemer. It is our privilege to anoint the Lord's "brethren" with the sweet perfume of love; and the more costly as respects our self-denials, the more precious it will be in the estimation of our Elder Brother. R2448:5

Those who bring the alabaster boxes of the perfume of praise and thanksgiving very generally have little to ask. Rather, they realize that they are already debtors. R3535:4

The feet -- Our Lord, reclining at the table, both his head and feet were conveniently accessible to Mary, who proceeded to anoint first his head and afterward his feet with the ointment. R3535:1

John seems to have forgotten entirely the anointing of our Lord's head, so deeply was he impressed with the still more expressive devotion manifested in the anointing of the feet and the wiping with the hair. R2448:4

The entire Church of Christ, in the largest sense, is the "body of Christ." The Mary class would rather purchase perfume at a great cost whereby to serve the anointed Church, than to spend it upon themselves. R3536:2

Not only was the Head of the body anointed, perfumed, but all of the members of the body since have likewise received a blessing from the spikenard Mary class. R3536:2

It is our privilege to pour the perfume upon the feet of Christ, the last members of his Church of this Gospel age. R2448:5

We may all be of the Mary class as well as of the feet class. In other words, each member of the body may to some extent serve the fellow-members of the body, the fellow-members of the feet, as Mary served the feet of Jesus. R3536:3

Not to imply any neglect of our natural families, but our interests and efforts are not to be confined to those of fleshly ties, but to be "especially to the household of faith." (Gal. 6:10) R2448:6

Wiped his feet -- Those feet which had trodden the valleys and hillsides of Palestine, and that were so weary at times, symbolize the feet of consecration treading the narrow way. They soon would be pierced with nails on the cross, but now highly honored by one which appreciated and trusted them. R3536:1

She could not put him on the throne of earth, but she would show that she was his devoted servant forever. She showed her devotion to the best of her ability. R3535:2

With her hair -- She took woman's chief ornament and devoted it to wiping the travel-stained feet of her teacher. She devoted the best she had to even the least honorable service for him. R2448:4

The feet, recognized as the humblest members of the human frame, and the woman's hair, recognized as her special treasure, are brought together in a way which signifies that Mary esteemed her Lord as infinitely above and beyond her. R3535:2

The Church are to wash one another's feet, not in the rudest and clumsiest manner imaginable, but with appreciation symbolized by Mary's spikenard, and in the love and solicitation represented in her using the very locks of her head. R3536:4

With the odour -- And we doubt not that the odor remained for a long time; but far more precious was the sweet odor of Mary's heart-affections. R2448:5

Ours is a sacrifice of sweet odor unto God; but the Gospel refers to it as of life unto life to some, and of death unto death to others. (2 Cor. 2:16) R3537:1

John 12:4

Then saith one -- Matthew says "the disciples." Mark says, "There were some." John mentions Judas only. Quite probably all the accounts are correct. Judas, no doubt was the instigator. R3535:3, 2448:3

Judas Iscariot -- At Bethany, the sweet odors that filled the house had a very different effect upon Judas. R3537:4

Nothing appeals to us more than does the evident unselfishness of the Master and his specially chosen ones, Judas being the only exception, and his avarice cost him his fall. F286

John 12:5

Why was not -- It is necessary to be economical, not extravagant, as in the gathering of the fragments of broken bread after feeding the multitude. But the person who is economical in his dealings with the Lord is the loser thereby. R3535:3

It is for us to learn to be economical in respect to our own affairs, and to be liberal to the extent of extravagance in matters which pertain to the Lord and his service. R3535:4

Money is not the only thing of which people are sorely in need; some need love and sympathy who do not need money. R2448:3

It is the deep, loving hearts like that of Mary, which delight in costly sacrifices at times, which are also likely to be deeply sympathetic and helpful to the physically poor. R2448:3

The love of money and the begging system of Babylon today is much against its powerful influence; and the absence of this spirit amongst the Lord's faithful now, as at the first advent, tells much in their favor. F286

Three hundred pence -- Greek, denarii. One denarius is represented as being the average daily wage at that time. (Matt. 20:2) R2448:2

Probably not an extreme valuation, worth about six dollars. Then the silver penny represented a day's labor and three hundred pence would practically represent the labor of a year. R5541:4

About $48. R3535:1

The equivalent in wages of $150 of our money. R2448:2

Given to the poor -- Judas thought to himself, There are the poor; I am the poor one. Q616:1

John 12:6

He was a thief-- As though he were a deliberate thief. When the Lord had been telling them that he would be crucified, Judas was thinking at the time about the money. Q616:1

The beginning of his downfall was the harboring of a love of money. R4906:2, 2779:3

The difficulty with him being that he loved the Lord too little and money too much. R2448:2

The selfish spirit not only led him to rob the Lord and his fellow-disciples, but eventually led him to think of how he could obtain money from the priests for the betrayal of the Master. R4487:6 His passion for money, like all other abnormal propensities of our fallen nature, grew stronger as it was encouraged, until finally he was ready to sell his loving Master for thirty pieces of silver. R4906:2, 2779:3; Q616:1 Some of the Lord's brethren may be killed, symbolically, as the Master was actually betrayed and killed, by the "money-lovers." R2045:5

Judas is probably not the only person who has plead for the poor and at the same time sought to divert funds to himself. R5541:2

In many instances people who are so careful lest money should be spent except for the poor are often like Judas, so avaricious that whatever money gets into their possession very little of it gets to the poor. R2448:3

Doubtless, even when appropriating the moneys contributed to the support of the little company of disciples, Judas could have some plausible excuse; for sin is always deceptive. R5552:3, 4488:1

Judas began to feel that if he was not to sit upon the throne as at first expected, he had best be "feathering his nest" financially, so that however matters may go with the others, he would not have made such a failure as they. R4487:6, 3887:5

It is possible for any consecrated one to let himself go and allow wrong motives to rule in his heart. I do not think this is possible for anyone who is loyal to the Lord. Q616:1

Not at first, but afterward apparently, did the disciples learn that Judas, who carried the treasurer's bag, was a thief. R5552:3 Had the bag

-- We may surmise that he chose the office of treasurer for the little company, whereas, had he been sufficiently alive to his own weakness, his proper course would have been to refuse it. R4906:2, 2779:3

Accustomed to voluntary giving to the Levites, the Jews evidently extended this usage to everything religious that appealed to them as being of God. F286

They evidently never lacked; though it is equally evident that they never solicited alms. F286

Bare what was put therein -- The Revised Version renders it: "He was a thief, and having the bag, took away what was put therein." R3535:3
"He was a thief and had the box, and stole what things were deposited in it." (Diaglott) R2448:3

John 12:7

Let her alone -- Trouble her not, take it not from her, as though when the first motion was made to use the spikenard, the apostles had wished to have it spared that they might sell it. "Hinder her not." R3536:1

In the nature of a severe reproof to those whose sentiments of love had no other measure than that of money. R2448:3

The day of my burying -- A little while and his sufferings would be ended and he would be glorified, beyond the veil, beyond the power of human attention. R3536:1

If Mary had waited another week she might have used the perfume upon herself, but not upon the Lord. R3536:5

Flowers on the coffin cast no fragrance backward on the weary road. R3537:1, 2449:4

The poor always ye have -- Indeed there were plenty of poor, and there would still be plenty of poor, and plenty of opportunities to minister to them; but the opportunity to specially honor the Lord would not be for long. R2448:3

Many of them have been the Lord's precious ones. Poverty has proven itself a blessing in many ways in many senses of the word under present conditions. R3535:6

There will be other and future opportunities of doing good to mankind in general, but the opportunity for serving "the body of Christ" is limited to the present age. R2448:6

Looking into the future, we rejoice to know that under the reign of the Kingdom, there will be no more poor, no more sorrow, no more want. R3535:6; Q813:4

Me ye have not -- Our Lord, his own heart full of love, found comparatively little companionship even amongst his apostles. In Mary he seemed to find the depth of love and devotion which was to him an odor of sweet incense. R2448:4

They came -- The next day probably. R3537:4

That they might see -- And when they had seen, the people were convinced that this must be the Messiah, the king long foretold by the prophets; and upon the spur of their convictions, they acknowledged him publicly as their king. R668:6

Three and a half years of public teaching and works, ending with the raising of Lazarus, culminated in a seeming triumph which raised high the hopes of his disciples and many in Israel that their king had indeed come. R1795:1, 668:6; B111

To death -- Who was a living witness to Jesus' Messianic power. R2448:1 "For the good of the cause." This has nearly always been the basis for every mean and despicable act against the truth from first to last. Let us beware of such a sectarian spirit. R3537:4

John 12:12

On the next day -- On Monday forenoon. R4212:1

The first day of the week--Sunday. R3852:2, 2447:6

Just five days before his crucifixion. (See verse 1) R839:2, 465:3, 211:3*

As the high priest leaves the holy on the tenth day of the seventh month, he starts from heaven; five days before the fifteenth, as when going to Jerusalem. HG73:3

Typified by the choosing of the Passover lamb on the tenth day, four days before his crucifixion. And it was on that very date that our Lord offered himself as their King, riding into the city on the colt. R5191:4, 2270:6, 1289:4 NS74:5

Much people -- Not only from every quarter of Palestine, but from Babylon, Egypt, Greece and Spain. It is estimated that at some of these Passover feasts a couple of millions assembled within and on the outskirts of Jerusalem. R3537:3

Branches of palm trees -- Fernlike in shape and sometimes ten feet long. These were symbols of rejoicing and honor, symbols representing in this case that our Lord was the hero of the hour, whom they delighted to distinguish. R3538:1

Fulfilling the prophecy of Zech. 9:9. B224; R2447:6, 1795:1; Q522:7

Palm Sunday was not established by the Roman Catholic Church, it was given to us by Jesus centuries before there was a Catholic Church; likewise, if any desire to keep Good Friday as a remembrancer of Christ's death, I have no objection. Q522:7

To meet him -- Evidently divine providence had much to do with this entire arrangement, the meeting of the two companies, etc. R3537:6

Hosanna -- The word Hosanna is a word of praise and confidence and expectancy and very closely resembles in thought the word hallelujah. R3538:2

There was a joyous uproar of praise and thankfulness to God; they were carried away with the enthusiasm of the moment. R3538:1

Jesus knew that the shout now around him, gladly hailing him as the Messenger of the Covenant, would be disconcerted by the wolves--that they would be fearful of their own lives and interests. R3538:3, 1795:2

He knew that their unstable and fickle minds, swayed by false teachers, and unwilling to act upon their convictions in the face of opposition, would only a few days later cry, Crucify him! Crucify him! R1795:2

Blessed is -- Their hearts were right. They had not yet been spoiled by the doubts and fears of human wisdom. R3538:1

So it sometimes is with the Lord's people today. In the simplicity of our hearts we see precious promises in his Word and are ready to believe them; then the Adversary brings along objections, fears and doubts. R3538:2

The King of Israel -- For over sixteen centuries, since they had come into Canaan, they had been waiting for Messiah. The majestic personality of our Lord fitted to their grandest conceptions of Immanuel. R3538:1

The term "Jew" had come to be synonymous with the term "Israel." Pilate wrote for the cross, "Jesus, the King of the Jews;" while here the people shouted, "Blessed is the King of Israel." R2085:1

Evidence that the House of Israel was no longer regarded by our Lord and the apostles as the "ten tribes" merely. R1341:1; C293

Ass -- Donkey. R3537:6

John 12:15

Thy King cometh -- It was on account of the covenant of God with their fathers that Jesus, instructed by the prophecies, offered himself to fleshly Israel as their King. R1795:1

The triumphal entry prefigured the coming of Christ as King, in the end of this Gospel age, 1878 AD, which is the antitype of the Jewish age, the two being exact parallels in both time and circumstances. R1795:2

A message to test the people. C136

John 12:16

Understood not -- A detailed reference of a number of statements which were fulfilled in Jesus, but mixed up with other statements not specially applicable to him, that they might never have been so applied had not the holy Spirit brought them to the attention of the apostles. R435:3

The Pharisees -- The "rulers." R4351:6

Gone after him -- Our expectation is that the truth will have a very brief season of wonderful prosperity, which will draw the attention of Christendom to it through the pens and tongues of foes. R4351:6

John 12:20

Certain Greeks -- These Greeks were Jewish proselytes, hence not permitted to approach nearer the holy places than the Court of the Gentiles. R2757:3

Many Greeks were attracted to the early Christian Church because they recognized the wisdom of some of our Lord's teachings. His Sermon on the Mount, for instance, appealed strongly to their philosophical minds. NS41:2 The movement started by these Greeks continued for several centuries, and there was quite a commingling of the Greeks and Christians, to such an extent that Grecian philosophy engrafted many of its tenets upon Christian doctrine. NS41:4

Among them -- Our Lord continued his teachings in the Temple daily after his triumphal entry, going to Bethany at night, and returning to the Temple each morning during the few days that intervened prior to his arrest and crucifixion. R2757:3, 3539:6

To Philip -- They naturally enough went to Philip and Andrew, whose names of Greek origin implied that they had a knowledge of the Greek language. R3539:6

Probably the only two of the disciples who spoke Greek, they coming from Bethsaida in which the Greek language was considerably used. R2757:3

Desired him -- Our Lord was at this time in a part of the Temple inaccessible to any except Jews by birth. R2757:3

Realizing that the Lord was not appreciated by his hearers, they apparently thought to invite him to go with them to their homes. R3539:6 Eusebius, a church historian of early days, relates that an emissary was sent to Jesus by the king of Edessa, Syria, inviting him to take up his abode with him, and promising him a royal welcome. R2757:6

We would see Jesus -- Their request was that Jesus come out to where they were for an interview. R2757:3

Our Lord doubtless responded to their request for an interview, but the subject of their converse has not been considered necessary for the Church, and hence has not been recorded. R2757:6

John 12:23

Answered them -- We do not presume that our Lord's words here were addressed to the Greeks, but rather that a break in the narrative occurs. R2757:6

Probably after the interview with the Greeks the apostles' hearts anticipated that the world would shortly exalt their Master to the Messianic position and them as joint-heirs in the Kingdom. R2758:1 Jesus sought to prepare them in a measure to receive the coming disappointment, talking of the necessity of entire consecration, even unto death, and that the Father would reward and honor such service. R669:1

The hour is come -- To show how his sufferings of the immediate future were the foundation upon which all the future glory must rest. R2758:1 His heart, fully consecrated, was merely waiting for the opportunity to finish the work which the Father had given him to do. R3539:6

At no other time was it possible for our Lord to have finished in death the sacrifice which he began when he was thirty; hence, though the Jews often sought to take him, no man could because "his hour was not yet fully come." (John 7:30) NS74:4

Not sixty minutes, just as "day" does not always signify 24 hours, but a comparatively short period. As compared with "Jesus' day," these experiences were properly enough said to occur in an "hour," or short time. R2758:2

Should be glorified -- The disciples at first would take this as intimating his earthly exaltation, but he speedily drew their attention to the fact that while the beginning of this glorification was near, it must be preceded by the suffering of death. R2758:1

Verily, verily -- Truly, truly; most positively; emphatically. R2758:2

Except a corn -- The grain of wheat was himself, "the man Christ Jesus." He alone had life. R729:1

In furnishing a reason for his death, the Lord drew an illustration from nature, likening himself to the seed grain whose death becomes a source of life to many grains of like kind. R1238:2

A dark saying. No wonder that the apostles and the Jews were mystified by such statements of the truth. R3539:6

And die -- The grain of wheat which dies never revives, never rises; it is gone forever, it has ceased to be; its life is given as a substitute for the lives of the grains which receive their life and nature instead of it. R1238:2, 729:1

This illustration shows only the death of the man Christ Jesus as our ransom price; it does not show his previous condition as a spirit being, nor his subsequent exaltation. R1238:3, 729:4

Jesus did fall into the earth and die. We become sharers with him in his death, which the world will never do. They share in its outcome. R5343:4

It abideth alone -- Had our Lord chosen to do so, he at one time had the privilege of remaining alone--of not dying on our behalf. If he had done so, he could have brought forth no fruitage. R2758:2, 1238:3

As in the natural life Christ was alone (he had no Church, then); so Adam was alone for a time. R67:6*

But if it die -- If Jesus had kept his life, had not sacrificed it, he might indeed have maintained it forever, but would not in that event been privileged to bestow life upon the Church and the world. R3540:1

Much fruit -- Our Lord Jesus was the only kernel which had a germ of life, the only man who had a right to life since Adam lost his rights by disobedience. R1238:3

The immediate fruitage of our Lord's death was the bringing forth of the Church and the "household of faith." R4354:3

His death brings forth choice fruit in his Church, and indirectly, the fruitage will be still larger, for his disciples are invited to lay down their lives with him--the resulting fruitage will mean a larger crop in the age to come. R3540:1, 729:5

Our Lord's going down into death brought forth the first fruits, the Church, the 144,000. If the Church brings forth the same in proportion, that number would bring forth 144,000 times 144,000, or 20,736,000,000. R3626:5*, 3540:1

All the work of this Gospel age is the getting ready of the food for the world. R5343:4

If a grain of wheat is planted and dies, it brings forth other grains like itself, and never produces grains of another kind or sort. R1238:2

All the blessings which result directly from our Lord's death are human and earthly. R1238:5

The man Christ gave all that he had in order to reproduce the human race lost in death through Adam. R729:3

"There shall be an handful of corn in the earth upon the top of the mountains; the fruit thereof shall shake like Lebanon." (Psa. 72:16)

R4354:3

John 12:25

Loveth his life -- That loves to keep it after having consecrated it to sacrifice. R729:3

Supremely loveth. R669:5

That is to say, if we esteem highly our present existence we will not be willing to lay down our lives in the Lord's service in the hope of future life, seen only by the eye of faith. R3540:1

Those who would be the followers of, and sharers with, Jesus, must during this world willingly lay down existence in his service. R667:5

A new creature is no longer to be controlled by phileo or duty-love toward earthly life, but, moved by agapee love, he is to willingly lay down his natural life in the service of God--"for the brethren." R2807:2

Greek, psuche--soul, being. E337

Life is the Greek psuche. Young defines it and the corresponding Hebrew nephesh to mean "animal soul," limiting the word to earthly existence; but we cannot agree with this definition. R667:1

Being, or existence, is not life, neither is it body or organism, though both are needed. Heat is a good illustration: coal is not heat, nor is oxygen heat; but properly united they produce heat. R667:1

Shall lose it -- Prove himself unworthy of the future existence God has proffered us, unworthy to have his soul, his being, restored in the first resurrection. E337

If now, after consecrating his life, voluntarily engaging to sacrifice himself in accord with his Father's will; if he should love his life he should lose it. R2758:3

This verse was applicable to our Lord alone, and not to his followers, for they had no life to lose. R2758:3

As soon as the ransom was given, the redeemed ones could be reckoned as having life-rights which they could consecrate and exchange for the heavenly life, following in the footsteps of Jesus. R2758:3

Hateth his life -- Greek, psuche--soul, being. E337

Is willing to sacrifice it. R729:3

Faithfulness to God under present evil conditions necessarily means dissatisfaction with present conditions, and a willingness to sacrifice them all in the service of God. E337

Subordinates. R667:5

He must indeed despise the present life in comparison with the future and eternal one which the Father had promised him as a reward for obedience unto death. R2758:3

In this world -- The Lord's words do not apply beyond the Gospel age. In the Millennial age things will be greatly reorganized. The Lord limits this matter, saying, "in this world"--that is, this kosmos or order of things. R3540:4

Shall keep it -- Be accounted worthy of existence (soul, being) under the more favorable conditions of the dispensation to come. E337

Thus they can preserve their (psuche) existence unto eternal (zoe) life.

But with them as with him, it will not be the same kind of existence.

R667:5, 53:2*

Shall have it. R729:3

John 12:26

Serve me -- The idea of service is one which is becoming more and more obnoxious to the minds of all classes of people, the understood motto being, The least possible service for the largest compensation. R1707:3

The reverse of this is the spirit of Christ, whose pleasure it was, in the execution of God's plan of salvation, to render the greatest possible service without money and without price. (Isa. 55:1) R1707:6

The only men and women worthy of remembrance when they have passed away are those who have faithfully and ably served their fellow men, such as, Moses, Elijah and Paul, and more recently, Washington and Lincoln. R1708:1

Follow me -- To serve Christ is to enlist under his captaincy in the very service to which he devoted all his energies, even unto death--the service of mankind along the exact lines of the divine plan. R1708:1

Let him sacrifice the human nature to which he is justified by my sacrifice. R729:6

Follow him in this experience--the consecration and then the despising of his earthly existence compared with the spirit life and the heavenly glory promised. R2758:3

Our Lord Jesus was not only the Redeemer, but also the Great Shepherd and Guide of his followers. SM629:1

He does not say, Go in yonder way of humiliation and self-sacrificing service; but he says, Come, follow where I have led the way! I have not despised humble service, and the servant is not greater than his lord.

R1708:1

There shall also -- Whosoever will suffer with him during this Gospel age will attain to the same divine nature, the same glory, the same immortality--the difference being that our Lord will always be Head over all. R5621:4, 5588:4, 3540:4, 1708:4

Servant -- Disciple. R5588:4

Serve me -- Share with me in this service. R729:6

The same thought is expressed by Paul when he speaks of filling up that which is behind of the afflictions of Christ. (Col. 1:24) R729:6

Father honour -- All such will receive abundance of honor in due time, but the crown must not be looked for until the cross has been borne to the end. R1708:5

The Father honored the Son because of his faithfulness unto death. Those who faithfully walk in his steps the Father will surely honor as he honored Jesus, whom he raised from the dead to glory, honor and immortality. R3540:4

My soul troubled -- While the world's representative crisis was reached at the time appointed for Jesus to lay down his life in sacrifice, it was also a crisis to him as an individual. R669:6

My feelings are turbulent; I am in a commotion. R2758:6

At that critical hour the whole world's salvation hung upon the shoulders of the trembling, suffering Lord. R669:2

To Jesus, undeluded by Satan's sophistries, death was a bitter cup. He knew of death as the great enemy. R729:2

No wonder if when he came to Gethsemane, he again found it needful to go to the Father for help to do his will. R146:6

Father, save me -- Spare me. R729:1

Shall I pray, Father, deliver me from this hour? Shall I not, on the contrary, remember that for this very cause I am come to this hour.

R2758:6, 669:1

Prayer proper before believers and unbelievers. R3698:5, 2252:1

From this hour -- From death! R729:1

But -- But no. R669:1

For this cause -- Or purpose, to sacrifice. R729:3

He had come to this dread hour for the very purpose of suffering death.

R669:1

He undoubtedly knew of his own pre-human existence. R146:2

John 12:28

Glorify thy name -- Faith questioned but for a moment, when his knowledge and past experience triumphed and he answers, Father, do as seemeth to thee best. R729:2

In thine own way, at whatever the cost to me. R2758:6, 3161:3 Jesus' self-denial meant the relinquishment of all desires to accomplish his beneficent work by any methods that might glorify himself, and a complete surrender of his own will to that of the Father. R814:4*

A voice from heaven -- God does not today speak to his people by such an audible voice; but he speaks none the less forcibly to us--through his Word and through his providences. Yet, now as then, some hear and appreciate more than others. R2759:1

Such a voice was heard on three different occasions: here, at the time of our Lord's baptism, and on the mount of transfiguration. R2237:4

It -- "I have already glorified [honored] thee, and I will glorify [honor] thee additionally." (Vatican MS) F66; R5269:1

And will glorify -- Our Lord's present condition in the heavenly, the spirit condition, is not only as high a condition as before he came into the world, but still higher. R5269:1

John 12:29

It thundered -- A voice which some understood, and others misunderstood, as is always the case with the voice of God. The world hears no message; believers hear partially; but begotten ones, in full accord with the Father, hear and understand fully. R2758:6

The voices from heaven, while understood and appreciated by some as attestations of our Lord's acceptance with the Father, were by others variously attributed. So it is with every manifestation of divine truth.

R2237:5

We use this same form of expression today. If someone speaks in a low or indistinct voice, we say that we did not hear. We mean that although we heard the voice, we did not understand or comprehend it. R2117:6

John 12:30

Not because of me -- No doubt our Lord received a blessing through this message from the Father, and yet it was not sent specially for him. R2759:1

Now -- Now, notwithstanding the fact that it would be centuries before these things would be accomplished. R2759:4

By the arrangement of Christ's death, Satan is to be cast out. By this means will finally be accomplished the judgment of this world. R433:5* He evidently meant by "now" the same as in his previous expression, "The hour is come." (verse 23) But a little space of time now intervened until this would be accomplished. R2759:2

When our Lord Jesus by obedience upheld the Law, and proved that it was within the range of a perfect man's ability to keep it, he thereby "condemned sin in the flesh" (Rom. 8:3), and incidentally condemned Satan's entire rule. R3032:2

There could be no individual judgment until there was individual untainted life, and there was no individual untainted life until Christ brought it in. R1328:5*

In another sense, the world is now passing judgment upon its rulership and condemning it. The world, by acclamation, will cast out the prince of this world, and the universal desire will be for a different ruler. R518:6* The final judgment of all mankind began with the Head of the Church, who, of course, passed his trial triumphantly. HG40:3

The judgment or testing of this world is now about to begin. R1226:3

The Lord uses the word "now" in the sense of applying it to the whole time from Christ's first to his second coming; as though he had said, the time to "begin" the work of salvation has come. R518:4*

Is the judgment -- Most authorities have it, Is a judgment. R517:6
Greek, krisis, or trial. R2759:2

The same Greek word from which our English word "crisis" is derived, and to which the same exact meaning is given, the turning point. R668:3

From the moment that Jesus said, "It is finished" (John 19:30), and died, the crisis was past. That was the great turning point. R669:2

As judgment means trial, it follows that where probation ends, the judgment ends. With the gospel Church it ends at death; and with the world it will end with their time of trial. HG40:5

As in a crisis of a disease, the patient may be entirely unaware of the change which takes place at the critical moment, yet it may be clearly discerned by the skilled physician, so with the world's crisis. R669:3

The world has passed through two crises in its two representatives, Adam and Jesus, though unaware of both. R669:4, 1328:5

As the crisis with Adam was followed by the krima, or sentence of death, so this crisis is followed by the krima, or sentence which came by the one man Christ Jesus, unto "justification to life." (Rom. 5:17-19) R669:4

The Greek here for judgment is the same word as in Matt. 11:24, and that class of texts; and evidently refers to the final and decisive judgment.

HG40:3

The first trial took place in Eden, father Adam being the one who was on trial; now Jesus was on trial and the fate of the whole world was in the balance and depended upon his victory. R2759:2, 669:2

Satan and his rulership of disorder and sin had received no particular sentence or rebuke from the Lord up to this time. R3032:1

Of this world -- The order of things then in vogue and still in vogue, was condemned, sentenced to overthrow, from the time that our Lord Jesus was lifted up. R3032:4

Society, as at present organized under civil and so-called religious restraint, is to be dissolved. R716:1*

The great overthrow of Satan, and the great liberation of mankind has been delayed, waiting for the gathering out of the elect, the full lifting up of the whole Body of Christ. R3032:4

Prince of this world -- Or, age. CR78:1 The prince of darkness. R2976:5

Satan, who fell from his holy estate and became the adversary of God through unholy ambition, has blinded the minds of mankind. R5909:3, 3032:1

There are three great ages in the Bible: "the world that was" (2 Pet. 3:6), "the world that now is," and "the world to come." (Heb. 2:5) "The world that now is," or "present evil world" (Gal. 1:4), is the one over which Satan is the "Prince" or ruler. (2 Cor. 4:4) Q826:6; NS70:6

It is because Satan is the ruler over this present order of things that it is termed an "evil world." Q827:T; R4350:3, 3032:4, 2303:4

He is not the Church's adversary alone, but that of all mankind. F611

Whose very existence is now denied by many. F609

Who now dominates the world and who sways fallen men by ignorance, superstition and fear. R1226:3, 5304:3

Unwittingly represented, not by murderous thugs, but by very intelligent, cultivated, refined people, who under various names represent the wisdom of this world, the aristocracy and wealth of this world. NS377:3

Who now operates through the disobedient, through those not in harmony with God, who constitute the vast majority in Christendom and elsewhere.

OV246:3

Not by right, but by usurpation; through fraud, deception and control of fallen men. It is because he is a usurper that he will be summarily deposed. Had he a real title as prince of this world, he would not thus be dealt with. A250

Not by divine commission, but by getting possession of mankind through misrepresentation of darkness as light, he has so blinded the world that he easily held the position of master of "god of this world." (2 Cor. 4:4)

E113

Our own flesh does not oppose us from bitterness or hatred; the opposition of the world is likewise not malicious; Satan alone is the willful, intelligent plotter and schemer. F611

This age is the one in which evil, as personified in Satan, prevails, and in which the Lord's cause and his people are more or less set at naught.

HG681:2; NS71:1

In contrast with Jesus, the Prince or Ruler of the coming age, the Millennial age. OV246:3

We would not at all agree with Wakefield's suggestion, as given in the Diaglott footnote (on John 14:30). R3032:1

His kingdoms are falsely called "Kingdoms of God." R720:5

How absurd to say that the present governments are of divine appointment, or Christian governments in any sense. R362:4

A detailed contrast between Satan's reign and the reign of Christ. R492:2

Jesus refers to himself as the Prince or Ruler of the coming age, the Millennial age. CR78:1

Not a reference to Christ himself, nor the "judgment of this world" to his trial before the Sanhedrin and Pilate, as some say. R519:1*

Be cast out -- From the moment of Jesus' death it was a settled thing that Satan, the prince of this world, should be cast out. Satan's sentence of ejection was sealed at Calvary. R669:2

The trial now in progress in my own person will result not only in a cancellation of the death sentence, but it will also result in the present rule of evil in the hands of Satan. R2759:4

He shall be chained for the period of the Millennial reign, and shall subsequently be destroyed. R2759:4

The casting out of the prince of this world would be the deliverance of those held captive by him. Their resurrection will be their emancipation not only from bondage in death, but from the yoke of Satan. R1082:4*

The casting out of Satan followed the redemptive work by Christ. He is cast out so far as the Church is concerned: for we are not to allow Satan or sin to bear rule in our mortal bodies. R3032:4

John 12:32

If I -- The drawing of mankind was dependent on the death, the lifting up, of Christ. R1054:5

Showing that the decisive act which determined the change of rulership and turned the condemnation from the world was the death of Christ. R669:3

Be lifted up -- Clearly the lifting up referred to was a lifting up at the cross. R1054:2

To say that the lifting up of the Son of man meant his glorification--"I, if I be glorified, will draw all men unto my glorified condition"--would be a wresting of Scripture. R1054:2

It is a fact that our Lord Jesus after he was lifted up on the cross was highly exalted, but this fact is not taught in this passage. R1054:3

He has indeed been lifted up on the cross, but only a few as yet appreciate the fact; but he is to be lifted up in glory during the Millennium, and then the message will go forth, "Look unto me, all ye ends of the earth." (Isa. 45:22) NS568:6

The day is nearing when he who was lifted up at Calvary, and afterward lifted up in resurrection power, will be manifested in power and great glory. R5316:1

We do not claim that our Lord's lifting up to the glory of power was separate or apart from his being lifted up on the cross. On the contrary, "no cross, no crown." R4476:3

The fiery serpent of sin has bitten our race. We are all dying. Only by exercise of faith in the Crucified One can any be healed. R5316:4

As the sin offering. R2467:4

The result of the lifting up of Christ will eventually be the drawing of all men unto him. R1849:3

It will be the power of the cross of Christ, it will be the love of Christ and of God there manifested, that will be the drawing power upon the hearts of men. R1849:3

The same Greek words rendered "lifted up" are used in John 8:28 and John 3:14. R1054:2

Will draw all men -- "In due time," granting them blessed opportunities for knowledge and blessing and restitution. R4507:4

Whether they hear or forbear, during the Millennium. R4476:2

This universal drawing belongs to the coming Millennial age. It will not be the drawing of a few nor of a class, nor of a nation, as in the past, but the drawing of all mankind, redeemed with the precious blood. E414

The drawing will continue throughout the Millennial age, until every member of the race shall have felt its influence and all the willing and obedient shall have been blessed, uplifted, restored to perfection. R4476:3

All men are not yet drawn to the Lord because the lifting up is not yet complete. The Head was lifted up, not only at Calvary, but subsequently was highly exalted. His Body must finish their course and also be highly exalted. R4148:2, 4476:3

Not that all men will come into a condition where they will be everlastingly saved; not Universalism, but merely a universal opportunity which must be decided by each individual for himself. HG353:5

Mark the distinctive difference between the drawing of the present time by the Father and that later drawing of the Millennial age, which will not be by the Father, but by the Son, and which will not be exclusive, but inclusive, including all mankind. R4148:2, 2759:5, 2397:3, 1056:1

The drawing of all men is a future work, to be accomplished by the Christ, while the drawing of the Little Flock in this present time is the Father's work through various agencies. R4049:1, 4367:6, 4148:2, 1849:5, 1227:1; E146; HG181:6, 353:5; NS568:6

Men cannot be drawn until they hear of him, therefore all men are to hear of him. R691:1*

Not only will the way be much more favorable than the narrow way, but the call and drawing will be more attractive to mankind. Instead of being called to leave the human and earthly, it will be a drawing in perfect harmony with all that is good of human nature in mankind. R1227:4

The Father draws to the Son for "justification by faith in his blood" those who love righteousness and hate iniquity, and who are feeling after God, if haply they might find him. (Acts 17:27) R4352:5

All this time the drawing power of Christ has been exerted upon a special class, a Little Flock. Christ does draw some now to be his bride. It is the love of Christ that constraineth or draweth us now. (2 Cor. 5:14)

R1055:1

The residue of mankind will not even be called or drawn until the Christ (Head and Body) has been lifted up, both in sufferings and in glory. E414

The Glorified One will draw all men by the influence of truth and righteousness. Only those who resist and refuse this drawing shall ultimately die the second death. NS568:6

The power which constrains or draws the saints into harmony and union with Christ, and through him with our Heavenly Father, is the truth. R1055:2

A knowledge of the same truth of God, of which the lifting up of Christ is the foundation principle, will be the drawing and moving power of the Millennial age. R1055:3

The Father's method of drawing is a proper sample of the drawing which our Lord Jesus will do. The word draw in both cases is from the same Greek word helkuo. (John 6:44) R1227:3

The Father draws us by the truth and by his providences. R1056:2

There will be no coercion or compulsion. It will be by the cords of truth that all will be drawn. Those who resist will be privileged to do so, none being drawn against their wills. R1227:3, 1056:2

The drawing is one thing and the coming another. It is God's prerogative to invite, and man's privilege to come. R1056:2

Even when being drawn by the opening of our mental eyes to the truth under the unfavorable conditions of the present time, we are not compelled to follow; we may "go away." (John 6:66,67) R1056:2

We have two cords binding us--first, the truth coming out from God and fastening upon honest hearts; and secondly, the faith and trust of our consecrated hearts reaching back unto God again. So it will be with all mankind. R1056:4

As the Father drew the Bride by the special promise of the heavenly estate, so our Lord Jesus will hold out an earthly calling. R1227:3

The "undrawn" and "uncalled" of the present time, the vast majority of the human family, are not reprobated to an eternity of torture, but will be given a fair and gracious trial for life. R1941:1

The testimony of the ransom is universal. R2633:1*

Calvinists see in the word "all" no more than the elect, and in the word "draw" nothing but force and compulsion; Universalists get the "all" right, but hold the same erroneous view of "draw"; Arminians have a correct view of "draw," but not of "all." R1226:3

Unto me -- The Greek word here rendered "unto" is pros, signifying toward. R1226:6, 2759:5

John 12:33

What death -- The narrator states what these words signified; nevertheless, they meant more than this. They meant also the high exaltation which was promised Jesus. R2759:5

And not with reference to his exaltation to glory. R1054:3; 78:1*

The Jewish Talmud states, "Forty years before the destruction of the Temple the judgment of capital crimes was taken away from Israel. The Jews never crucified anyone. Only by the taking away of this authority from the Jews that very year was the matter put in such a form that Jesus was not stoned to death, but was crucified. R3554:4

Predicting that though our Lord's death by crucifixion might seem like Satan's victory, it would lead to his exaltation and power to draw all away from error and the service of Satan, to himself. R1226:6

John 12:34

The Son of man -- The Scriptures identify "The Son of Man" with the Lord of glory, and with the man Christ Jesus, who gave himself, and with the prehuman Logos, which came down from heaven and was made flesh. E150

This Son of man -- The Jews evidently identified this expression, "The Son of Man," with their hoped-for Messiah, no doubt basing their hopes in large measure upon Dan. 7:13. E150

John 12:36

Believe in the light -- But alas! Israel heeded not the light, nor the warning. R2036:2

John 12:38

Who hath believed -- The joyful message, which, rightly appreciated, should bring ready responses from every class, is generally rejected. E489
The vast majority of mankind are blind, so that they cannot see the light; some are stone blind, so as to see nothing; others partially blind and get a little glimmer by which they can discern some things indistinctly.

R2414:4

The Church is to realize that her mission is not to the blind and deaf, but, To him "that hath an ear [to hear], let him hear." (Rev. 2:7) R2414:4

Our report -- Preaching. E47

To whom -- Few recognize the Lord's Arm during this age--"not many great," etc. E47

The arm of the Lord -- Our Lord Jesus is prophetically represented as the "right arm" or strength of Jehovah. E47

Christ is the power of God unto salvation. E489

John 12:40

He hath blinded -- "Unto you [not only the disciples of that day, but the disciples all through the age] it is given to know the mystery of the kingdom of God, but unto them that are without, all these things are done in parables." (Mark 4:11) R1742:1

These minds are so prejudiced and blinded that they cannot receive the message of redemption and reconciliation until the next age, when all the blinded eyes shall be opened. (Isa. 35:5) R790:5

Hardened their heart -- That is to say, they were in a faithless attitude, not readily impressionable, but rather inclined to be skeptical. Therefore the evidences of the seal of God upon Jesus were not sufficient for them. R2651:3

Esaias -- Greek for Isaiah. E47

Saw his glory -- In fulfillment of the divine promise, Jesus appeared at his first advent and tentatively offered himself to Israel as their great King of Glory. R4787:2

Applying Isa. 6:1; but in neither case referring to Jehovah, but Adonai, which in this text does not apply to the Father but to the Son. E47

John 12:42

Many believed -- Such as Simon and Nicodemus. Nicodemus came to the Lord by night to interview him, but Simon more shrewdly thought to get the opportunity of a conversation directly with the Lord by inviting him to dinner. R2201:1

John 12:43

Loved the praise of men -- Jesus' doctrines so conflicted with the popular customs that they could be accepted only at the cost of social position. Thus the integrity of his hearers was put to the test. R582:1*
Many modern preachers and intelligent lay members are fully convinced of the fallacy of modern theology, but their love of popularity and ease cause them to remain through life in a false and hypocritical position. R582:1*

"Ye are they who justify yourselves before men; but God knoweth your hearts; for that which is highly esteemed among men is abomination in the sight of God." (Luke 16:15) R582:4*

John 12:46

Not abide in darkness -- Throughout the Scriptures light is used to represent God, his servants and their messages; and, contrariwise, darkness is the synonym for Satan, the prince of darkness, and all his deluded followers. SM241:2

John 12:47

Not to judge -- The Lord's own testimony that the judgment of the world did not begin at his first advent. R2434:4, 1405:2*

While judgment begins in a measure with every man as soon as he begins to comprehend the divine testimony, it does not, in the case of the world in general, reach its final decision until the Millennial age. R2057:6*

Though our Lord's mission at the first advent was not to judge, but to redeem the world, the testimony is unmistakable that, at his second advent, he will judge the world, and his saints will be associate judges. R1383:6

As it was the mission of our Lord not to judge the world at his first advent, but to lay down his life for the world; so it is the mission of the Church now not to judge the world, but to "lay down our lives for the brethren." (1 John 3:16) R2415:3

We are not to judge the world now, but on the contrary to judge nothing before the time. But in God's due time the saints shall judge the world, and that to the world's blessing. R2415:3

That the world has not yet been judged is evident; the wicked are not yet overthrown. R1383:6

John 12:48

That judgeth him -- Greek, krino, is here used in referring to the judgment or trial of the Millennial age when the Christ, Head and Body, will be the judges. R2426:4

The word -- The Scriptures. R2677:5

In Rev. 20:12, the books opened (according to the rulings of which men will be tried) we understand to be the books of the Bible. None are now on trial to whom those books are not to some degree opened, understood.

R332:6; HG233:2

Not only the words of the Master and the apostles of the New Testament, but also the message through the prophets of old. According to these standards, each who would have eternal life must conform his living and his thinking. NS858:1

The same law and the same understanding of the divine character that is now presented to us will then be presented to them. God changes not, his plain law changes not. HG233:2

The removal of the Jewish ban from the New Testament is the beginning of the fulfillment of these words. R2420:4

The truth concerning the divine plan which he has been revealing since 1874 is doing its separating work; and the saints can see clearly where the lines of judgment are being drawn between the faithful and the unfaithful. R1362:2

Happy has it been for the comparatively few who have heard the Master's Word in this present life, and have judged themselves thereby, and submitted themselves to his righteous precepts. NS857:6

Individual Christians cannot shirk personal responsibility, placing it upon pastors, teachers, councils and creeds. It is by the Word of the Lord that we are judged and not by the opinions or precedents of our fellowmen.

D66

When judgment shall begin at the nominal house of God, the nominal systems will fall, condemned by that Word. R5574:1

The Lord's Word is the test now to the nominal church--judging them, telling them where the right line is, not only telling you and me, but telling through us the fallen angels. Q19:T

We read also that they will be judged according to their works, and this is quite contrary to the judgment that is now upon the Church; for we are judged according to our faith, our endeavors, and not the actual results.

HG233:3; NS858:4

That I have spoken -- Directly, and through the apostles. R2420:5

The same -- The judgment will not be along new lines, but along old lines. OV41:5

Judge him -- The same word is in Rev. 20:12 and 1 Cor. 6:1; and is rendered "sue at the law" in Matt. 5:40. R332:6

The last day -- The day of judgment, now present, since 1874. R5574:1, 2420:5, 1362:2

The day of final reckoning. R2057:6
The last thousand-year day of the seven, the Millennial day. R2434:4,
2057:6; HG233:3

John 12:49

What I should say -- Our Lord's discourses were along the lines of divine revelation, the Law and the prophets, and the fulfillment of these. Our teaching should be along the same line, not human speculations and philosophies, but the Word of God. R3726:5

John 12:50

As the Father said -- Our Lord Jesus in all matters acts as the representative of the Father, Jehovah, in the work of salvation. E35

John 13

John 13:1

Before the feast -- The thirteenth of Nisan apparently was spent by our Lord in quiet retirement. R3542:2

Jesus knew -- The cup of bitterness and ignominy which Jesus was draining to the dregs was permitted of the Father. His will was entirely submitted to the Father's will. R2313:1

His hour was come -- At the time of the Passover, to fulfill the types and prophecies of the Law. R2312:3

Having loved -- Because of his love, he laid aside his glory and became a man; because of his love he devoted himself as the man Christ Jesus. R3542:6

There are two kinds of love; the intense, particular love, and the general love, or kindness; and two sorts of love, affectionate love and loving kindness. Here we see the special love or affection. R1254:3

His own -- Jesus loved all of his disciples; but that love was more intense for some than for others. CR151:3

Not forgetting the length and breadth of Jesus' love for all humanity, he had a special love for all his disciples. OV331:3

Because they had those qualities of heart that would make them lovable from his standpoint. R5725:1

The quality that made Jesus love them was, first of all, their honesty.

The disciples manifested that they were ready to confess that they were nothing of themselves. CR473:5

According to the Jewish custom, the Passover was celebrated by families, and the twelve apostles, specially chosen by our Lord, constituted the nucleus of the family of God, Judas not being excluded. R2449:2

This furnishes us the lesson that, as followers of Christ, we should not judge one another's hearts, nor surmise evil. R2449:2 Nor need we suppose that his love for the twelve applied to them exclusively: rather, that he viewed the twelve as his representatives of "them also which should believe on him through their word." (John 17:20) R2449:2

We are not to think of giving the world the same affection or love or interest that we give to the household of faith. Neither does God. CR473:3; R5724:6

He loved them -- Because of his love, he was now anxious to help his dear disciples over a difficulty which, if not conquered, would hinder their usefulness as his followers both in the present and future. R3542:6

Unto the end -- Completely, fully: his own sharp trials, present and approaching, did not distract him, nor absorb his attention. R2449:2

At the conclusion of his earthly ministry, the Master still dearly loved his disciples. R5724:3

Because he loved them, and knew that they loved him, he permitted them to accompany him to the place of prayer, that they might watch and pray with him. R1801:2

No waning of his love, not even when on the last night they all forsook him and fled; his love for them never decreased. CR151:3, 474:1

Sending out Judas, who had a different spirit, which he did not love. R1254:3

John 13:2

Supper being ended -- This was the Passover Supper--the Memorial Supper of bread and wine being instituted afterward. R2450:1

He waited until supper was being served (not ended as in our Common Version). R5091:1, 3543:1

They even proceeded to eat the supper, contrary to custom, with unwashed feet. R2449:4

The devil having -- Judas' case resembles somewhat that of a lady who had permitted evil spirits to get control of her will and lead her to do a wrong, and then make her believe she had committed the unpardonable sin. R2283:5*

Deliberate and intelligent rejection of the first principles of the Gospel seems to imply an unfitness for further favors, on the ground that he that is unfaithful in that which is least, would be unfaithful also with more. R2283:6

Whose very existence is now being denied by many. F609; R3165:6, 2169:2

John 13:4

He riseth -- We, too, should not wait until our assistance is requested, for in proportion as the served are developed disciples, they will not ask. R2279:4, 844:4

From supper -- Apparently our Lord let the matter go to its full limit to see whether or not any of his followers would improve the opportunity to make himself servant of all. R5091:1, 3543:1

Permitting them to disagree without settling the dispute, without appointing any to the menial service. He allowed them to think the matter over, to relent and reconsider. R2449:4

His garments -- His outer garment, or mantle. R3543:1

Took a towel -- Attaching the towel to the girdle of his under-garments. R2449:4

Girded himself -- That is to say, tightened the girdle worn around the waist, which would hold up the flowing undergarments and keep them out of the way of his activity. R3543:1, 5091:2

John 13:5

Poureth water -- The water was poured from a pitcher in a small stream upon the feet, which were washed and rinsed. The basin was merely a receptacle for receiving the soiled water. R5091:2, 3543:2, 2449:4
Thus each had clean water and little was wasted --for water is much more scarce and precious there than with us. R2449:4

Wash the disciples' feet -- Apparently they not only did not have the disposition to serve one another, but they did not desire to wash even the Master's feet. R5091:1, 5193:4

The act was a pointed reproof for their neglect to wash his feet and one another's. R5091:2

Love not only led our Lord to administer the reproof necessary, but led him to do it in the wisest, best and kindest manner. His example should be observed and copied by all his followers. R3542:6

Jesus did what he did because it was a helpful service, and was the Father's will. R5375:5

We do not get the lesson of the institution of a formal ceremony. It was only a case of necessity. No such need exists with us today. R5091:3, 5375:5, 3543:6, 2450:2, 2278:3, 843:3, 194:5

There seems to be nothing symbolical in it. It is merely an illustration of the principle of humility. R2450:2, 3537:5

Only one of the Evangelists remembered even to mention it. R2278:3

Because of the wearing of sandals, the feet would be considerably soiled even after only a short journey and would, therefore, need refreshing. R5091:3, 3543:1, 3364:1, 2449:3, 194:5

In our climate, washing the feet would be an inconvenience, the very reverse of a pleasure and service to them; therefore contrary to the example. R2479:1, 194:5

As we are in contact with the world, we are liable to a certain degree of earthly defilement, and it behooves each, not only to look out for himself, but to help one another to get rid of earthly defilements. R3544:1

As the Lord's company were not guests, but merely had the use of the room, no servant appeared to wash their feet; and it would have been properly the duty of one of the number to perform the service. R3543:1, 2449:3

Some Christian people have adopted feet-washing as a religious custom. We are not to berate them. So long as they think they are doing the Lord's will, they are right to follow the custom. R5091:4

Once a year, on the day before Good Friday, the Pope washes the feet of twelve aged paupers, who are brought from the streets and duly prepared by a preliminary washing in private. A similar ceremony is performed annually by the Emperor of Austro-Hungary. R2450:4

Neither these ceremonies nor the ceremonious washing performed by various denominations of Christendom is according to our Lord's example, but contrary to it. R2450:4

Those who sat, really reclined with their feet extending backward, and could quite easily be reached without disturbing those who were eating. R2449:5

John 13:6

The cometh he -- Our Lord very evidently had already washed the feet of several of his disciples, and seemingly none of them offered objection. R2449:5

Peter saith -- Peter had a peculiar combination of character, part of which was extremely good. R3543:2, 2449:5

Lord, dost thou -- "It is not appropriate, Lord, that one so great as you should serve a person of my standing, a poor fisherman." R3543:2

John 13:7

Jesus answered -- But our Lord did not stop to reprimand Peter. R2449:5

John 13:8

Thou shalt never -- Peter had too much reverence to wish the Lord to be his servant. R5091:2, 3543:2, 2449:5

Peter's second remark was less praiseworthy than his first. It was hard for Peter to realize that he was the disciple and the Lord was the teacher; that it was for him to obey and not to dictate. R3543:2

John 13:9

Not my feet only -- If this gives me a more particular part with you.

R5091:2

If his washing had anything to do with his nearness to the Master and his relationship to him, then he wanted it. R3543:2

Noble, thorough-going, whole-hearted, fervent Peter! R2449:6

But also my hands -- There is a lesson for us in this matter: We are not to dictate to the Lord, nor to attempt to be wise or good or obedient in ways that he has not directed. R3543:3

John 13:10

He that is washed -- Properly they had all bathed in accordance with the Jewish requirement of the putting away of all filth at the beginning of the Passover season. R3543:3, 4906:5

The apostles had been with our Lord, and for three years had been greatly blessed by "the washing of water through the Word." (Eph. 5:26) R2449:6, 2279:4, 844:5

All who are justified and consecrated members of his Body already had the bath, the washing of regeneration, and are already clean through the word spoken unto them. (John 15:3) R3544:1

To wash his feet -- The Lord was giving a deep spiritual lesson: each one needs to be washed, to be cleansed, before he can be a joint-sufferer, before he can be a joint-heir. R5091:3

Public baths were in use at that time, but even after having taken a general bath, on return to the home it was customary to complete the matter by washing the feet. R2449:6

They merely now needed the rinsing of their feet, the cleansing of the members that had come in contact with the earth. R3543:3

But is clean -- Somewhat obscure; the Revised Version is better: "He that is bathed needeth not save to wash his feet to be clean every whit." R3543:3

"He who has been bathed has no need except to wash his feet, but is wholly clean." (Diaglott) R2449:6

Every whit -- Those who are cleansed by obedience to his message and its spirit, are thereby made clean outwardly, as well as inwardly. R5389:3

Ye are clean -- He had accepted them as his disciples and had reckonedly imputed to them the merit of his sacrifice as a covering of their blemishes, the full testimony of which would be given them by and by at Pentecost. R3543:3, 4906:5

But not all -- There was one in the number whose heart was not clean. R3543:3, 4906:5

There is an intimation in the Lord's words, too, that the spirit of pride which had manifested itself among them had been inspired to some extent by Judas, as evil communications always are corrupting. (1 Cor. 15:33) R2449:6

For he knew -- Our Lord did not pass Judas by, but washed his feet with the rest, knowing the while of his perfidy. R3543:4, 4906:5, 2449:6
It seems probable that Judas was not with the others when our Lord washed their feet. R2772:2

Not all clean -- This expression shows us clearly that he had in mind a higher cleansing, of which the washing of their feet and their previous bath were but figures. R3543:3, 4906:5

Although not understood by the rest, our Lord's words must have been appreciated by Judas, as were also his subsequent words in verses 18, 26, 27 and 28. R3543:4

John 13:12

He said unto them -- To the foot-washing illustration he adds his words of counsel, showing how different must be the disposition among his disciples from that which characterizes the godless world. R1987:3
All four evangelists heard this discourse, but it was left to John to describe it. R1047:1*

Know ye -- Understand ye. R3543:5 This was in harmony with what he told Peter in verse 7. R3543:5

John 13:13

Master and Lord -- The man Christ Jesus, before his death, might be properly styled a Lord, a high one in authority. E134

When a man he was perfect, and hence far superior to those about him. In addition to this, as the agent or messenger of Jehovah, he was a Lord, a master, a teacher, among men. R809:4

Ye say well -- Or, properly. R809:4

So I am -- Pointing out that this menial service did not signify that he was not the Lord and Master; but, that as Lord and Master, he was not unwilling to serve the lesser members of Jehovah's family. R2450:1

John 13:14

Have washed your feet -- Thus rebuking their inhumility, and at the same time setting them an example that would apply to every affair of life, namely, that they should be glad to serve one another on every proper occasion. R3543:6

Ye also ought -- You have witnessed my humility in this matter, and now I want to tell you that you ought to have this attitude toward one another. R5091:3

Esteem and honor one another in proportion as you find in each other unselfish sacrificing love and service. R2278:6, 844:1

Wash one another's feet -- To teach the disciples that they should not be above doing the humblest service for each other as brethren, and to emphasize the need of daily cleansing of the Lord's disciples from earth-defilement. R5375:5

By love we are to serve one another, but not as a mere formality. (Gal. 5:13) R5091:6

The washing of the Body with the truth, the sanctifying and cleansing of it with the Word, is in progress now. What are we doing to cleanse and purify the faith and lives of our fellow members? R2279:4, 844:5

Wash and be washed one of another, cleanse and purge away the defilements with which each comes daily in contact in the world, that ye may be clean. R2279:4, 3544:4, 844:5

Before we can help others to cleanse their way of life, it is necessary that we have experience along the same lines. R5091:5

Some think it necessary to wash the feet of others. But since there is no real good to be accomplished by such a ceremony, there is no reason why it should be done. Jesus would not have washed their feet if they had not needed washing. R5375:5

The thought is to appreciate the privilege of real service, rather than the opportunity of doing something merely because it is menial. R5375:5, 4399:3

In 1 Tim. 5:9-16 we read that if a widowed sister had washed the saint's feet, if she had shown such a disposition, Paul would advocate a special care for her, for she had manifested a loyal and true spirit. R5091:4, 3543:6

An example -- Was the example in the principle, or in the method of service, in the ceremony? To suppose the latter would be to hide the real lesson under a form. R2279:1, 844:2

The example which our Lord set was not so much in the kind of service, feet washing, as in the fact of service. R2450:2

If the example were in the form, then every item in the form should be observed: an upper room; a supper; sandals; the same kind of garments; the towel girdle, etc. R2279:1, 844:2

Those in Eastern countries, where sandals are still worn, may find opportunity to follow the example in the same form; and those differently circumstanced may follow the "example" in a thousand forms. R2279:1, 844:4

As I have done -- So it can be said that we remind others of someone they have known, Jesus of Nazareth; resembling him so much that we must be his brother. R285:4, 210:4*

John 13:16

The servant -- Preceding events--the feast at Bethany, the triumphal entry, the inquiry of the Greeks--indicated a growing popularity, and the disciples were full of ambitious thoughts respecting the future. R3542:2 Even a very little prominence may become a dangerous snare unless it is coupled with great humility. R1987:3

As they assembled with a host to appoint them their places at the supper, a discussion as to their prominence and their rights to the most honorable places, nearest the Master, was not surprising. R3542:2

From Luke's account it would appear that on this occasion there was a strife amongst the apostles, a contention, respecting which of them should be esteemed greatest. (Luke 22:24-31) R2449:3

The spirit of rivalry was warm in their hearts, and no one volunteered to render the service, nor had any one the right to demand it in a company in which the Lord had made no special rank. R3543:1

The Lord noted among his disciples a spirit of selfishness; overhearing them disputing which of them should be greatest, and foreseeing that this would injure them, he rebuked them for their lack of humility. R2278:3, 843:3

In their fear to be the least, all the disciples had shunned the opportunity of service to the Master and for each other. R3543:5

Greater than his lord -- If the majority heard his words, you might expect them to hear yours; but if as a mass they rejected his words, they will reject yours also. R571:5

They called in question the legitimacy of his birth, applied all manner of vile epithets to him, denounced him as an enemy of the government, and finally caused his crucifixion. HG713:2*

John 13:17

If ye know -- If you appreciate these principles applicable to all the affairs of life. R2450:4

These things -- The things that make for our peace. R5228:5

The putting away of bitterness, evil-speaking, busy-bodilying, that we may the more completely put on Christ, and be more fully under the control of his holy Spirit of love, meekness, patience, long-suffering, kindness. R4584:2

Happy are ye -- You will be blessed thereby, helped in my service, and prepared for the Kingdom in which I have promised you a share. R2278:6, 844:2

If ye do them -- If you practice the lesson. R844:2, 2278:6

If you live according to this rule, loving and serving one another. R2450:4

It is not enough simply to resolve or determine to do right or to obey God. Unless we go further, and actually make advancement in character, we will prove failures. R1802:2*

How prone we all are to desire and to acquire knowledge at the expense of our spiritual development, forgetting that "knowledge puffeth up, but love edifieth." (1 Cor. 8:1) R1802:2*

John 13:18

I know whom -- Jesus knew who it was that should betray him, and was, therefore, neither surprised nor disconcerted because of Judas' course; yet undoubtedly it must have had a saddening effect upon our Master. R4908:2, 3760:3

The scripture -- Psalm 41:9. R4906:6

Eateth bread with me -- Our Lord went so far as to quote the very prophecy which marked Judas and his disloyalty, his violation of even the common hospitality. R4906:6

Lifted up his heel -- Would betray him. R4906:6, 4908:2

John 13:19

Before it come -- They did not yet know the full import of the word baptism and the word cup. When Pentecost should come, these things that Jesus had spoken to them would come to their remembrance. R5421:4

When it is come -- When a vast amount of prophecy becomes a fact, it will prove the Scriptures true; and when they are proved true by fulfillment, it can but be a terrible blow to skepticism and infidelity. R108:1*

John 13:20

Receiveth me -- If teachers be of divine appointment, those taught are divinely taught. R380:1

John 13:21

Troubled in spirit -- His sorrow was for Judas; for the thought that one of those he had so tenderly kept and cared for should now prove so ungrateful, unthankful, unholy. R2772:1, 4906:6, 3364:2

John 13:23

One of his disciples -- John seems to have been of a very modest disposition, quite unwilling to make his own name very prominent in his writings. R2571:3

John 13:26

He it is -- Repeatedly bringing his attention to the error of his ways, in hope that he may be turned therefrom, long-suffering toward all who become his disciples. This is a proper outline of our conduct in similar cases. R3543:4

So far from these incidents melting the heart of Judas, they seem to have aroused in him a malevolent spirit, just as his divine mercy toward Pharaoh in the stopping of the plagues, hardened his heart. R2772:2

So it is with all who professed the Lord's name in every time. The instructions which prove beneficial to some prove injurious to others: "a savor of life unto life, or of death unto death." (2 Cor. 2:16) R2450:1

Satan entered -- Fully, completely--took possession of his heart as an instrument of evil. R2772:2

Satan had been working with Judas previously. R4577:3

Satan's work in the heart of Judas was a gradual one. R3884:6

Instead of resisting the Adversary's suggestions, Judas entertained them more and more until he was filled with the Satanic spirit. R2772:2

Not the case of obsession, but of domination of the mind. R4311:3

And he resolved to earn the thirty pieces of silver by betraying the Lord. R3887:2

If Judas had maintained an attitude of consecration to the Master, Satan would never have had the opportunity; it is because he was at heart disloyal. Q616:1

For the accomplishment of his purposes there is no measure of hypocrisy which Satan would spurn; no depth of iniquity to which he would not descend; no measure of cruelty that he would spare; and no height of folly to which he would not lead his deluded victims. R1687:4

Do quickly -- Implying that the matter was already arranged, and that Jesus by supernatural power was aware of it. R3366:3

John 13:29

Judas had the bag -- Accustomed to voluntary giving to the Levites, the Jews evidently extended this usage to everything religious that appealed to them as being of God. Evidently they never lacked, though it is evident that they never solicited alms. F286

John 13:30

Went immediately out -- Doubtless because he felt out of place in such society. R2772:2

None of these things moved Judas, evidence of the willful intention which marked his crime and enforcing our Lord's words calling him the "son of perdition" (John 17:12), declaring it would have been better for him if he had not been born. R3543:4

In the close of this age, the sop of truth will have become so strong as to drive forth from the company and communion of the faithful, all who do not rightly appreciate and value the ransom. R5191:2

John 13:31

When he was gone -- The promise of the Comforter, the holy Spirit, though it was ultimately to reach the whole Church through the administration of the apostles, was specially given to them on the night of the Last Supper, after Judas had gone out. R1525:3, 1254:3

John 13:33

Little children -- These were the "little ones" in malice and pride, and in the world's estimate. R2063:4

"Be not children in knowledge [character], howbeit in malice be ye children." (1 Cor. 14:20) R2063:2

Ye cannot come -- Were the apostles promised translation to heaven at death? R1881:5, 2438:2; HG347:5, 334:3

Disbelieving Jews were not the only ones who could not go to heaven; neither could believers. R2438:2

It is because the believers of the past as well as the believers of the present age cannot go to the Lord, that all of them looked earnestly for his return, his second advent. "I will come again and receive you unto myself." (John 14:3) R2438:3

John 13:34

A new commandment -- A higher commandment, a higher law than was given to the Jew under the Law Covenant, hence higher also than will be given to Israel and mankind under the New Covenant. R4549:4, 5072:3; Q180:4

We are not without law, but under law in Christ. This law in Christ is the law of our covenant, which is the law of love, a sacrificial love beyond any requirement of justice. R5072:3; 4827:5

The Law said, "Thou shalt not steal" (Exod. 20:15), but Christ taught us that we should not merely refrain from robbing our neighbor, but be ready to share with him what we had, even laying down our lives for our brethren. HG582:5*

The third commandment is not applicable to any except those who become the disciples of Jesus. He voluntarily put this regulation upon himself, and laid down his life sacrificially, which no law could justly demand.

R5947:5; Q134:4

Jesus, who made us free from the Law under which Israel was placed, gave us another. This law of love contains the spirit of the Law to Israel, and is termed the "royal law." (Jas. 2:8) R542:6

The Bible lays down no particular parliamentary usages, but gives to God's people the one broad, general law to govern each one of them in all the affairs of the Church; to measure our every act, word and thought. R4772:5

I give -- The new commandment is not the Father's commandment at all, but the command of our Head to all those who have entered the school of Christ and who are hoping to become "members" of the Anointed One. R4549:5; Q180:4

Unto you -- This new commandment applies only to the Church of this Gospel age. R4549:5; Q180:4

Love one another -- Love is the law of God's being, and shall ultimately be the controlling law of all his universe. R415:3*

The rule of righteousness is to be observed toward our Heavenly Father and toward all our neighbors; but to our brethren we are to do more than the right, we are to sacrifice on their behalf. R5947:6, 4584:4, 31:5*

It is easy enough to love some of the brethren, those on our own plane and of our own style and liking; some of the refined, wealthy, noble or educated, those on our own level or a little above. R4253:6

Experience shows that many of God's dear people, striving to keep the first two commandments, find it more easy to sacrifice time, influence and strength in the service of the world than for the brethren. R5947:6

Love for the Lord and his truth he places on a parity when he says, "Me and My Word." (John 14:23) Then comes love for the brethren, because they are his, because they have his spirit and seek to walk in his footsteps.

SM259:1

This special love is not to be exercised toward the world, to whom belongs only the love of pity and sympathy; but is to be exercised toward them of like precious faith, of one mind with us and the Lord. R1670:5, 4766:6

We cannot love the world with that deep, intensive love. It is not incumbent on us to sacrifice our own interests for the world, but it is made obligatory toward all the household of faith. HG481:3; CR166:5

You are to deal with your neighbor as with yourself. You are not to give all that you have or sacrifice your own interest and yourself go without.

But when it comes to the Lord's disciples it is a different matter. Q440:T

Those who are less noble will need our love the more, because of a natural depravity and weakness and imperfection. R4254:1

If Jesus had loved just according to the Golden Rule, he would not have died for us; but he did more, and he requires that his followers should do more for each other. Q286:6; R5700:1

This will mean tender-heartedness, humble-mindedness and forbearance to recent injuries and revilings; not only submitting to these without retaliation, but, on the contrary, returning a blessing. SM703:1

Each should have sympathy for each other, should encourage one another, build one another up in the most holy faith, and by all means, do nothing to stumble each other in the narrow way. SM393:1; R4766:6

As daily and hourly we seek to cultivate this spirit of love, and allow it to dominate in our words and deeds, in the same proportion will be the measure of our blessing. SM339:1

When contending with an unseen but wily and powerful foe, what mere hypocrisy is that profession of love which fails to warn of immediate or approaching danger. R416:4*

Being full of love for the brethren, our refusal to join with them in what we consider unwise or unscriptural arrangements would be presented in such kind and gentle terms as would be helpful to them. R5948:2

Even with good intentions, we would still be in danger unless we observe to the full the Lord's direction as to how love should deal with brethren who, in our judgment, have committed a fault. This procedure is stated in Matt. 18:15-17. NS566:1

It is one thing to love all God's children though entangled in sects, and another to avoid the meshes of their captivity. Oneness of thought, mind and action are required of the Church of God. R1130:6*

Even, if despite our every endeavor to the contrary, it should finally seem necessary for a class to divide, nevertheless love for the brethren ought to be the blessed tie that binds. R5948:4

Therefore, when admonished to "hate" father and mother in Luke 14:26, the Lord used the word to impress that the terms of discipleship meant that they must love him more than all earthly ties and considerations. Q782:4

It was because the apostles had not enough love for one another that they disputed who should be the greatest, and were so determined not to stoop to one another that they neglected also to wash the Master's feet. R5193:4

Manifested, not by a socialistic community of goods, but this love will work no ill to its brother, it will neither slander his character, nor cheat, nor envy, nor in any way wrong him. It will not only be thus negatively good to him, but it will be active to do him service. R1327:6

As I have loved you -- To the extent of dying for us. R5947:5, 4568:4, 4501:6

As he loved the Church and gave himself for the Church. R4584:4, 4549:5; Q180:4; SM703:T; NS566:1

With a pure, unselfish love which thinketh no evil, vaunteth not itself, is not easily offended, and seeketh not its own. (1 Cor. 13:4, 5) R4460:6
Namely, to the extent of laying down our lives for our brother, directly or indirectly, giving moments or hours, time, money or influence to aid one another in making our calling and election sure. NS644:3; R4445:6; OV211:T; SM703:T

"We ought to lay down our lives for the brethren." (1 John 3:16) R4568:4, 5947:5, 4501:6

If we had love one for another as Christ loved us, it would lead to the giving of our lives for each other if necessary. R31:6*

He commends his love to us in that it is to each according to his needs: the more noble, the less of the Lord's grace is sufficient for them; the more degraded, the more grace is necessary and will be supplied. R4254:1
In effect: If you would be my disciples, if you would share my throne, glory and immortality, you must have my spirit--you must do more than keep the Law, you must be self-sacrificing. R4549:5; Q180:4

By this -- Brotherly love--the one important test of membership in the body of Christ. R4267:2

Not by intellectual or physical strength, not by wonderful works, not by anything that we can do or have done for the Lord, his cause and his people, are we to hope for eternal glory. R2230:4

Shall all men know -- Legitimate children of God, begotten not of pride and formalism, but of God by his Word of truth, are to be found today and readily identified, not by titles or gowns, but by their love for the truth and by their sacrificing for it. R985:4

Ye are my disciples -- The new creature must attain this character of love; for all of his hopes depend upon his attaining this character-likeness of his Lord; otherwise he will not be fit for the Kingdom. SM280:1

If ye have love -- As love is declared to be the distinguishing characteristic of all who have the Spirit of Christ, so lack of love may be considered the distinguishing characteristic denominated the "error of the wicked." (2 Pet. 3:17) R4326:2

Such will be the spirit of all the Lord's followers. Their delight will be, not in self-gratification, but in "doing good unto all men as they have opportunity, especially to the household of faith." (Gal. 6:10)

R2435:5 If any professed follower of Christ see his brother have need and close up his heart of compassion against him and refuse him aid, this would be an indication that he lacked the spirit of the Head. R4358:5

One to another -- Love to God alone is not the full manifestation of this grace; nor can there be, according to the teachings of God's Word, a sincere love for God, without a corresponding love to man. R2155:5

John 13:36

Thou shalt follow -- Explained in John 14:3, "And if I go, and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself, that where I am, there ye may be also." R700:1*

John 13:38

Lay down thy life -- Greek, psuche; soul, being. E337

Denied me thrice -- Perhaps the Lord allowed that to happen to Peter for our sakes, that we might realize that we need to be careful to put our confidence in the Lord. CR307:5

John 14

John 14:1

Let not -- Three chapters of St. John's Gospel (14, 15 and 16) record the incidents of the intervening time between the leaving of the upper room and the arriving at Gethsemane, the place of the oil press. R4707:2 Hiding his own sorrow, he comforted them, and thus set an example to all of his followers. SM263:1

Be troubled -- After washing the disciples' feet, giving the sop to Judas, telling the disciples that they would all be offended and Peter that he would deny him thrice, we may well suppose that their hearts were filled with fearful foreboding. R2453:3

He sought not needlessly to make them mourn, but sought to prepare them for the ordeal. R102:2*

The trouble in their hearts was not in respect to the foundations of their hopes, for these were well established, The whole question before their minds was respecting Jesus--if he was the Messiah? R2453:6

They needed comfort, and the Master proceeded to give them the best and strongest spiritual food and instruction that they were able to receive. R2454:1

The Father knows your heart troubles. He wishes the burden to be there until you shall appreciate its weight, until you shall be ready to cry to him that you are sin-sick. OV180:4

Ye believe in God -- In the hour of trouble remarkably few doubt the existence of God. But as we look to the Almighty for protection and realize our own weaknesses and shortcomings, the heart of man fails. OV180:T

Believe also in me -- Believe that the Father hath sent me. OV180:3 Recognize the fact that all of the Father's plan will be accomplished, and inasmuch as you have seen my loyalty to the Father, continue to trust me. R2454:2

While still sharers in the trials, the consolations of the Scriptures offset these troubles and make of them "light afflictions" (2 Cor. 4:17), not worthy to be compared with the glories promised to be revealed to us. SM271:T

John 14:2

In my Father's house -- All creation is the Heavenly Father's house.

R4064:3

The Father's house is really the universe, and figuratively speaking heaven is his throne, the earth his footstool. R2454:2; Q775:4

The Universe, and the different members of his great family. Q453:2

The Kingdom. R632:4*

Are many mansions -- Many apartments, many planes, but all harmonious, grand. R4159:4, 2454:2

Many stations; one is for the angels, another for the Little Flock of the elect, and still another for the world in general. SM85:2; HG235:1

Upon different planes of being he has creatures made in his own likeness, called sons; and for each of these a provision has been made suited to their conditions, nature, etc. R4064:3; HG751:6; Q452:T

We know not how many angelic orders there are, but the Scriptures intimate that there are spirit beings of various grades, of different nature, each perfect, but differing one from the other. Q776:T, 452:2

Conditions of being. What he was going to prepare for the Church was not all that is to be attained by God's creatures. A Kingdom has been prepared from the foundation of the world for the human sons. R632:4*

The Scripture testimony clearly and explicitly points in every instance to the second advent of Christ, and the resurrection, as first, the hope of the Church, and, second, the hope of the world. F664

To be fit for any place in the Father's house all must cease to be children of wrath and become children of love. F403

I go -- Our Lord's ascension was not only according to the type--not arbitrarily; it was an essential part of the plan. It corresponded to the act of the high priest entering into the Most Holy with the blood of atonement and presenting it before the Mercy Seat, together with the sweet incense. R1828:3, 5181:6

It was necessary that, after laying down his life, he should ascend to the Father and present his sacrifice as on man's behalf, as man's ransom.

R2454:3

Explanatory of John 13:33-36. R700:2

To prepare -- God has provided for mankind; the earth was made for man.

But now was a new thing, a new creation, and there was no place for the new creation. Q453:2; R4966:2

Thus far no provision existed for a family of sons on the divine plane.

Our Lord Jesus was the first born to this condition, and it is only through his merit that the Church can have this inheritance. R4064:3, 5181:6, 4973:6

There is no place yet for this "new creation," except in the Father's purpose, or plan, in which provision for the Church, as the Bride of Christ, has already been made. Q776:T; R4974:1

There is no "Bride" now; Jesus, during the Gospel age, has been preparing a place for the Bride. Q750:2

By making an imputation of his merit on behalf of the Church, thereby permitting them to become participators with him in present sufferings, that they may also become sharers with him in future glories. R5181:6; Q453:T

Not only present the ransom sacrifice on our behalf, but also that he might succor and help us to the eternal city and might correct and discipline us, and thus prepare us for the new conditions. R4064:3

He was to prepare the place, and they were to be prepared for the place through the teaching of the holy Spirit. R526:3*, 341:4*; Q776:T

A place -- An official position. R341:4*

A place in the divine nature. Q453:2

On the heavenly plane. CR401:6; R5654:6

One special place in the divine family would be made for the special followers of the Lord. The chief mansion will be for those called to the highest honor. HG751:6

The Bride of Christ shall, in the resurrection, be like unto the angels, heavenly or spirit beings. But the place for man, the earth, is a very different one from ours. R4966:2; SM122:T

Like unto the angels, but higher than the angels. Q776:T

"We know that if our earthly house of this temporary dwelling-place were dissolved, we have a permanent structure of God, a house not made with hands, everlasting, heavenly." (2 Cor. 5:1) F673

For you -- The Church, as represented by the twelve. R154:6*

All the disciples and followers, not only the Apostles, but the humblest of the sheep, are included in these conditions and the promised rewards of the faithful. NS591:6

This word does not apply to the world, in the sense of embracing the whole human race. R526:3*

John 14:3

If I go -- The leaving of his flock for a time was incidental to their testing proving, and development. R5694:5

I will come again -- This will be the second advent. CR401:6; R5654:6

The Master says not a word about our going to him, but quite the contrary, that he will come and receive us unto himself. R5132:2, 2765:2, 1881:6, 700:2

Why say this if the Apostles were to go to heaven immediately at death? HG347:5, 334:5

Jesus would "depart" from the Father and at the same time "return" to his disciples. Q751:2

This Scripture is rendered meaningless by the acceptance of the theory that each member of the Church at death passes immediately into glory. HG267:6

It is because the believers of the past as well as the believers of the present age could not go to our Lord, that all of them looked earnestly for his return, his second advent. R2438:3

In like manner as he went away, quietly, secretly, so far as the world was concerned, and unknown except to his followers. B154; NS656:6

We look backward, if we have faith, to Christ dying on the cross, and we ought to look forward no less, if we have hope, to Christ coming again. R2798:3*

He has come, he is even now present, and will soon receive us unto himself forevermore. R5863:1

The interim between our Lord's death and his second advent is not long: from God's standpoint, "a thousand years are as one day" (2 Pet. 3:8); from the believer's standpoint, his average life and waiting about 50 years. R2454:3

Some confound the presence of Christ as a spiritual being with the presence of the Spirit of Christ. They are quite distinct. The latter never left the Church. Here we refer to the personal presence, which did go away and will come again as a spiritual body. R580:4; A89; B105; OV222:1

A personal coming and not, as quite a number think, that when sinners are converted, that forms a part of the coming of Christ. HG341:3; OV222:2

Not referring to the descent of the holy Spirit at Pentecost, or the destruction of Jerusalem, for in Revelation, 26 years later, he says, "Behold, I come quickly," and John replies, "Even so, come, Lord Jesus." (Rev. 22:12,20) A89

Error has so beclouded this clear statement that many have reached the impression that Jesus comes again every time one of his faithful followers dies. HG664:4

All of these procedures are of the Father, though through the Son. F399

And receive you -- The object of Christ's second coming is to receive or gather his Church unto himself. Because neither Christ nor Paul mention any interval, it is most commonly supposed that the gathering is immediately after his coming. R154:6*

A comparatively large proportion of true Christians are not living in that attitude of heart and daily life which would permit them to anticipate this meeting with sentiments of pleasure. R3191:3

Not only false doctrines, but sin, likewise, hinders joyful anticipation, inducing shame and fear--knowing that even those conditions of heart which may be hidden from fellow-servants cannot be hidden from the Master.

R3191:3

Paul believed this doctrine and taught it to others, and was looking for and waiting for the Savior from heaven, when he would "ever be with the Lord." (Phil. 3:20; 1 Thess. 1:10; 4:16,17) F671; R1827:1

Unto myself -- And take you to the heavenly plane by a change of nature from the earthly to the heavenly by a resurrection. CR401:6

His Bride is to be the Church glorified. The marriage takes place at the second advent of Christ. The reign of Christ, Bride and Bridegroom, follows. Q838:2

Under Jewish custom, the espousal brought the same obligation of chastity as though the marriage had taken place. Thus the Church, by her vow, is obligated to the full, although the marriage with the Heavenly Bridegroom will not take place until his second advent. SM122:T

Thus to enter into his glory and become heirs of God and joint-heirs with himself in the Kingdom. NS296:1

Their gathering unto him must precede their coming with him. (Zech. 14:5) R154:6*

Ye may be also -- The presence and providential care of the Lord in ones affairs, all being consecrated to the divine will, bring a peace and joy which the world knows not of. NS451:3

John 14:4

Whither I go -- For three years our Lord had been making them acquainted with the Father's character, hence they were to feel that they knew the Father better than ever, and could appreciate such a home of righteousness. R2454:4

The way ye know -- Their experience with the Lord, and under his instructions and leading, had made them acquainted with the way to God, even though they did not recognize it as such. R2454:4

I am the way -- The way to the Father. R493:1*

In that only through his sacrifice, the "ransom," imputing his merit to sinners, could they be made acceptable to the Father or be received back again into fellowship with him. R2454:5

There is only one way of return, through acceptance of Christ and obedience testifying thereto. Its gate is Faith, and at present it is a very difficult road to travel, even after it has been found. R1771:1

There was only one gateway to enter the Holy Place or Court; the type thus testifying that there is but one way of access to God, one Gate, Jesus.

T18 He is our Ransom, or Way; our Teacher, or Instructor in righteousness, in the truth, and our Life-giver. R2454:5

The breaking of Jesus' body opened the "narrow way" to life, and broke or unsealed and gave us access to the truth, spiritual food, as an aid to walk the narrow way which leads to life. (Matt. 7:14) R1636:3, 840:2, 466:5

Before justification, while getting a sight of our sin and corruption, we cry unto Jesus; he is our way unto God. R469:1*

Reconciliation with God was impossible until first the redemption had been secured, that the one seeking at-one-ment might approach God through the Mediator of the New Covenant. E28

The door of Israel's Law Covenant was barred by justice. There could be no proper ingress or egress. All were prisoners of the Law, shut up unto that hope which should afterward be revealed, namely, Christ. R2441:5

The truth -- The truth relating to the Father. R493:1*

In the sense that only through his words, his instructions, his guidance, could there be any hope of coming into harmony with the spirit of God, the spirit of truth. R2454:5

Through him, the Word, and the Truth and the Life, they were sanctified, while he sanctified himself. R444:4*

He was sanctified by the truth, but he himself said, also, "I am the truth." R442:4

And the life -- In that all the race was dead, under divine sentence, and none could come again into life conditions except through him. R2454:5

This is a prize never until the Gospel age placed within the reach of any, and it is obtainable only during this age. R814:2*

The life from the Father. R493:1*

No man -- Those today turning to the Law, to good deeds and self-denials as the basis of hoped-for future life forget or fail to see that, because of sin and depravity, none can render perfect works to God. R688:1

So also Christ will be the Way, the Truth and the Life to the world of mankind in the Millennial age. R2454:5

Unto the Father -- We must be drawn first (John 6:44) before we can come to Jesus, and then we must come to Jesus before we can have access to the Father. CR40:5, 346:5

If we merely come to the Advocate and do not proceed further we are not going to the Father. We must come to the Father in the name and through the merit of the one who redeemed us. Q734:6

We are "accepted in the beloved" (Eph. 1:6) by the Father, as sons. R1007:2

But by me -- First of all, Jesus is made unto us wisdom. He gives us the necessary knowledge to come to God. Q123:5

God refuses to have any dealings whatsoever with those who cannot or will not accept of the great sin-offering which he has provided. R5737:2

The Lord causes his sun to shine upon the just and the unjust, and his rain to fall upon good and bad alike. (Matt. 5:45) But he recognizes none as his servants except those who have come to him in the appointed way. SM511:2

This excludes Jews, Mohammedans, the heathen; all who have not a knowledge of Christ and a faith in him as the Redeemer. R2252:3

Only such as are in covenant relationship with God have any right to go to God in prayer, to ask either forgiveness of sins or anything else.

R5690:5, 5692:2, 3806:2, 2252:3

He cannot go to the Heavenly Father direct, but he can go to Jesus, because him hath God set forth to be our Savior. He did not say, "No man can come to me except through a preacher, bishop or pope." HG694:2;

R4786:4

As in the type, none but the priests offered incense before the Lord, so only the royal priesthood, the members of the Body of Christ, have this privilege in the present time. R3806:3

Where the husband or wife is not a child of God, unbegotten of the Spirit, it would be inappropriate that he or she lead in the worship, addressing the throne of grace. R3806:2

The apostles declare the necessity of an Advocate with the Father before any can approach him, come into his presence or receive any favor from him. HG621:6

There is a general tendency to ignore personal faith in the redeeming blood. Prayer is a wonderful privilege. It is not for sinners, but for those who have been justified by the great Advocate, Jesus. R5379:2, 5877:2, 5737:2

He is the Advocate for those who become his disciples and who engage to walk in his steps; but he is not the Advocate for the world--merely for the special class, his followers. R5690:6

God (the Father) "heareth not sinners" (John 9:31), but Jesus does. He says, "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." (Matt. 11:28) R469:1*, 2024:1 CR304:6

Through an acknowledgment of sin and imperfection, and the realization of the need of a Savior. CR167:3

The Lord Jesus does not spurn sinners who evince a desire to forsake sin and to approach him. By their measure of faith and obedience all such are justified to fellowship with him. R5196:1

Contrary to the Roman Catholic Church tenet of praying to saints. R560:5*

The court of heaven has regulations and ceremonies of respect and due deference which must be complied with by every man who would gain an audience with the King of kings. R1864:5

While God's desires and plan are all centered in Christ, yet "he desires all men to be saved and to come to an accurate knowledge of the truth." (1 Tim. 2:4, Diaglott) R1781:6, 1273:4

Faith in any creed or system of religious teaching not wholly founded on Jesus, as the purchaser or redeemer, and expression of God, is a delusion. R555:3*

Our Lord forewarns of various theories of salvation through another channel than that which God has provided. SM268:2

The channel of all of God's mercy is Christ Jesus. R5179:3

An Advocate in this age, and a Mediator in the next. R5833:1

Whoever attempts to come to the Father in his own righteousness, or in the righteousness and merit of any other than this Savior, the same is a thief and a robber. (John 10:1) NS411:5; CR368:4

Known me -- Understood me. R493:1*

Known my Father -- Our Lord Jesus expressed and fully manifested the Father's love. R2466:4

To know God we must gain knowledge of him, and knowledge is assured belief, enlightenment, acquaintance with or understanding of God, his plans and purposes as revealed in Christ. R493:1*

Have seen him -- Jesus revealed or caused his disciples to see his Father by making known his character, revealing him by words and deeds as the God of Love. T86

Seeing with the natural eye and hearing with the natural ear are not all there is of seeing and hearing. All of God's children have seen him, known him, and held communion with him. B122

The word "see" has a fuller meaning than eyesight. It is "to know," "to recognize." R453:4

John 14:9

Hath seen the Father -- As it was impossible for the Lord's followers to actually see God, the only way in which they could see him was in the representative sense. Our Lord Jesus fully and perfectly represented the Father. He was God manifested in the flesh. Q781:T; R5653:6

In seeing Jesus they saw the most that was possible to be seen of the divine character, its likeness, its perfect image in the flesh. E77; R2454:6; CR249:2

He was the living representative of the living Father who had sent him. R1298:6*

Perfect man is a perfect image of the invisible God. During the Millennium the Ancient Worthies, perfected, will be the best representatives among men of the Heavenly Father, Heavenly Son and Heavenly Bride. E77

John 14:10

In the Father -- Not that he was the Father, for this he had distinctly disclaimed repeatedly, telling them that the Father was greater, and that the works which he did were done by the Father's power. R2454:6

Not of myself -- As a man. T54

Not merely because he was a perfect man while all others were imperfect, but also because his words were indited of the indwelling Spirit of the Father, men said of him, "Never man spake like this man." (John 7:46) R240:4

That dwelleth in me -- By his spirit. T54

The anointed Jesus, filled with the holy Spirit at the moment of baptism, was the divine "new creature," though not perfected as divine until the resurrection. T54

He doeth the works -- He ascribed always the honor to the Father. He was merely the Finger of God. R5920:2, 3161:2; HG661:4

Jesus' claim was that he was "a Son," an obedient son, who did not do his own will, but the Father's who sent him. R369:5

Neither Elijah, Elisha nor Jesus claimed to awaken the dead by their own power. It was the power of Jehovah delegated to, or active through them. R810:4

Before his death he had none but human powers, except as the Father's power was operated and manifested through him; since his resurrection he claims divine powers, not as the Father in him, but as his own. R188:6

If we, as our Head, are "led by the Spirit of God" even unto death, we become "the sons of God," who will also "work in us to will and to do of his good pleasure." (Phil. 2:13) R418:1, 164:6

John 14:11

In the Father -- He would have them understand the unity subsisting between the Father and himself. His will was buried into the Father's will. He would have no other. His words and works fully and completely represented the Father. R2454:6

John 14:12

Greater works -- Referring to the spiritual work of the Church during this Gospel age--opening the eyes of men's understanding. R1722:4

Which is the greater work--the opening of the eyes of the naturally blind, or the opening of the eyes of the understanding? R2582:5, 4314:2, 2455:4

Not any of his followers have ever been able to do "greater works" than he accomplished in opening blind eyes, etc. These works, therefore, must be of a different nature or on a larger scale. Both are true. Q805:5

When the holy Spirit was come, after Pentecost, the Lord's people, in his name, and as his representatives, began to do greater, more wonderful works than those which he himself had performed. R2455:4, 5104:4

Referring either (1) to a future work in which the Church will share with her Lord, during the Millennium, or (2) the works of spiritual quickening and revival as higher than physical healing and revival. R2126:4, 2454:6; Q806:T

Then the sick and the dead were only partially restored, and for a limited time only, which is as nothing compared to the full restitution of the health and vigor of perfect everlasting life. R2000:5

The Lord's works were on a fleshly plane as a matter of necessity. The holy Spirit had not yet come. R2455:1

Amongst these the Lord mentions the quickening of the dead, looking down into the future, to the resurrection of the Church in glory and to the subsequent resurrection of the world during the Millennial age. R2434:3; Q806:T

Because I go -- He ascended on high, presenting the merits of his sacrifice, so that he could bestow the holy Spirit. Receiving this Spirit, his followers would be able to accomplish the "greater works" of opening spiritually blind eyes, etc. Q806:T; R5104:4

His going was expedient (1) to make intercession for us, and (2) to receive his Kingdom and permit him to bring gifts for us--chiefly, the holy Spirit. R1829:1

John 14:13

In my name -- Means more than merely "by his authority." It means that the petitioner must realize his own actual unworthiness to be received, and therefore he presents it in the merit of Christ, his Ransomer. R1410:4 Not that our Lord Jesus should no longer be recognized in prayer, but rather that, as the disciples had freedom toward Christ and confidence in approaching him, the time was coming when they could approach the Father direct, in his name. R1580:6

That will I do -- As the active agent of the Father. R2455:4

The answer is certain. R5380:1*

John 14:15

If ye love me -- Loving obedience must be more pleasing to the Lord than anything short of it, and doing it is the best evidence of love. R85:4*

Keep my commandments -- His commandment is: "A new commandment give I unto you, that ye love one another as I have loved you" (John 13:34), with such a love as would lay down life for the brethren. NS566:1

As God's love shows itself in his works, so will our love show itself in our works. R21:4*

Absolute perfection would mean perfection of thought, word and deed. The most that any of us can have now is perfection of love in our hearts.

Those who have perfect love will fulfill their sacrifice. R4837:5

In honor to give each other preference, to forgive one another, to sacrifice for each other, to love even enemies--John speaks of these commands of the Lord, and not the Ten Commandments of Israel's Law Covenant. R1730:6, 976:3

These commandments, under which we are placed, are not grievous and impossible to obey as were those of the Jewish Law Covenant, for Christ's yoke is easy and his burden is light. R1731:1, 976:4 14:16

I will pray -- The gift of the holy Spirit comes to us, not because of any direct relationship between the Father and us, but at the instance of our Lord Jesus, at his request and for his account the Father does this.

R2456:2

How could one equal in authority pray to another that a third one equal to either of them should be shed forth as a gift? R4166:5

He shall give you -- The holy Spirit must come from the Father, not from the Son. R4307:1, 4166:5

The promise of the Comforter, the holy Spirit, though it was ultimately to reach the whole Church through the ministration of the apostles, was specially given to them. R1525:3

The Apostle Peter said that our Lord, having been exalted to the right hand of divine power, received this holy Spirit from the Father and shed it forth or sprayed it forth upon his followers at Pentecost. R4166:5

Another -- Instead of our Lord Jesus himself, whose going away was necessary and expedient. R4307:1

Our Lord thus mentions himself as a comforter. At the close of his ministry we hear him say, "I will not leave you comfortless"--orphans, bereaved of a caretaker. R3434:3

Our Lord Jesus was a comforter in Zion above and beyond all other comforters. He entered into sympathy with the meek and lowly and right-intentioned in all their weaknesses, trials and difficulties. This is the hold his character and words have today on our hearts. R3434:3

He was limited, as a man in the flesh, to the ordinary means of travel, and could only be in one place at a time, but the Spirit can be everywhere, and with any number of people at once. R102:5*

The holy Spirit would be another Comforter, but the comfort would be of the same kind. R2455:3

Not implying that another God is meant, or another person of a trinity of Gods. E204

Comforter -- Greek, parakletos. The thought usually conveyed by the word comfort, to soothe or pacify, is not the correct one. The correct thought is that of help, encouragement, assistance, strengthening; to sustain. E202; R2455:3

Not merely a comforter of woes and a soother of fears, but it would quicken their understandings, strengthen their zeal, and energize them for doing and enduring such things as divine providence might permit. R2455:6

The Spirit is a Comforter because it is a Teacher, as was Jesus himself. R102:3*

A comforting influence, a guide, an instructor and helper to the Lord's people in the narrow way. R4166:5

Foretold in advance: "The Spirit of the Lord God is upon me; because he hath sent me to comfort all that mourn." (Isa. 61:1-3) R3434:3

Invisible, but its effects are tangible and visible, as illustrated by the electric current in the copper wire. E203

This meant to them a new era, a new dispensation. R2818:2

Abide with you -- This abiding was not to be a temporary matter, for a day, a month, a year, but to the end of the age, age-lasting, for the entire period. R4167:1

Had our Lord remained as a person in the flesh, he would have been hampered by the fleshly and earthly conditions. R4307:1

For ever -- Greek, aion, the age. R183:4, 2455:6, 4167:1

John 14:17

The Spirit of truth -- As God's children we are entitled to be "filled with the spirit" and we cannot ask for this filling too earnestly, nor too frequently go to the fountain of truth at which we may copiously drink into his spirit. The more of the spirit we receive, the more we will have room for. R183:4

Although a knowledge of the Truth is essential to possession of the Spirit of the Truth, nevertheless, one might have much knowledge of the Word of God without having any of its Spirit. E205

Not the letter only, but the very nature of truth, the truth itself, should be their guide. R526:6*

The truth itself is the main channel of the Spirit of Truth; but all who are closely connected with the truth, and have its spirit, are to that extent also channels through which the Spirit influences others. E203

Our Lord indicated the channel through which the Spirit of Truth would come to his people, saying, "The words that I speak unto you, they are spirit and they are life." (John 6:63) E204

Whom -- This passage has no reference to a person, but to the influence of the truth. The Diaglott reads: "The Spirit of truth, which the world cannot receive, because it beholds it not, nor knows it; but ye know it; because it operates with you and will be in you." E170

World cannot receive -- What interest today has the world at large in Christ, God's dear Son, or in the revelation made of him in the Scriptures as the heavenly Bridegroom? R752:2*

Shall be in you -- The Apostle John and others heard his wonderful teachings and witnessed his exemplification of the holy Spirit of love and marveled; but it was not their privilege to possess the same Spirit until Pentecost. R2225:4

As by John the Baptizer repentant sinners were immersed in water, he was instituting a Church on a much higher plane, all who would be received would be immersed in the holy Spirit. R2818:2

Through them it would exert an influence upon others (Acts 24:25); but none others than the "sons" could receive it as an indwelling power, for it is a seal of sonship. R2070:4

If we would be used and useful as God's agencies, we should seek to be guided by him. We are to hear his voice through the Scriptures and we are to realize his energizing power through the spirit of the truth. R4357:3

John 14:18

I will come -- The comforting of the holy Spirit is the Spirit of the Father and of the Son. The Father (verse 23) and the Son are referred to as the ones who strengthen, guide and comfort the Church--through the Spirit. E203; R2455:6

John 14:19

The world -- The appearances after our Lord's resurrection were only to the believers, and never to the world. R2082:2, 1995:6

Seeth me no more -- He will never again appear in the flesh. NS458:6; R2082:2

He whom the Father hath highly exalted, and who was the express image of his Father's person, will be invisible to men at his second advent. NS178:5

When Jesus left heaven and was made flesh it was not the divine intention that he should remain a fleshly being forever. There was no reason to continue fleshly, and out of touch with heavenly conditions. R5830:1

Our Lord Jesus is no longer a fleshly being, but he is now a spirit being, as he was before he was made flesh. Hence he is not expected to return a flesh and bone being, but a spirit being. R1903:6

The world will not see him thus because it is not the divine provision that the world in its salvation shall be changed from earthly to heavenly nature. NS459:1

Never yet disproved; for none but the brethren saw even his manifestations after his resurrection, and no others witnessed his ascension. B154

None of the world ever saw our Lord after his resurrection, but merely his disciples, to whom he "showed himself." (John 21:14) R2980:6

Neither would it be to the advantage of the world to thus see the Lord, and to have their physical eyes injured, as were the eyes of Saul of Tarsus. NS89:1, 459:3

The tribes of the earth will not see the sign of the Lord's presence, nor will they ever see the Lord by natural sight; on the contrary, they will see the clouds of trouble and confusion incident to it. (Matt. 24:30) D599

If we should not be changed to spirit conditions by the power of our resurrection, we would not see him any more than will others who will continue on the human plane. R5291:3

The world will never see Messiah, except as they will see his mind, his disposition, through his earthly representatives in the Kingdom. SM733:T; R5291:3

All will see him, however, in the sense that eventually all the eyes of understanding will be opened, that all may see the light of the knowledge of the glory of God fill the whole earth. R5762:1, 5291:3; CR471:6

The seeing that is promised in the Millennial age will be the result of the opening of the blind eyes of understanding. NS459:2

Jesus said not one word about anyone seeing himself or any one of the apostles in Kingdom glory. But he did say, "Ye shall see Abraham, Isaac and Jacob and all the prophets." (Luke 13:28,29) R5199:5; CR369:3

Although a spiritual Kingdom, invisible to men, it will be a real kingdom, exercising power more completely than any earthly kingdom could, because not handicapped by human limitations and conditions. R5761:6, 5455:3; OV56:2

But ye see me -- Here, as everywhere, we have a clearly drawn line of distinction as between the Church and the world. NS458:6

"We shall see him as he is" (1 John 3:2)--not as he was in the flesh.

NS459:1

Spiritual Israel would see him, but only with the eye of faith. R3539:2

With the eyes of their understanding. R2455:6

The faithful of the Gospel age, as the Bride, will be with the Bridegroom, and behold and share his glory, while mankind in general will neither see the Lord nor the Bride. HG366:5; NS89:1, 656:6

We do not see him as he is now, for we are still in the flesh, still human; but when our resurrection change shall come we shall be made like him. NS178:5

At his second coming our Lord will not appear in the flesh, else it would not be necessary for his Church to be changed to spirit beings, in order to see him as he is. NS657:1

Only the Lord's faithful followers were to see him--because they are to be changed in the first resurrection. (1 Cor. 15:51) R5269:1, 5291:3, 1904:1; CR471:6

"Follow peace with all men, and holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord." (Heb. 12:14) None but such will experience the first resurrection, be made like the Master, of the spirit nature, and see Him "as he is." (1 John 3:2) SM458:1

Because I live -- A dead Christ could not be our Savior. R4174:2

John 14:20

Ye in me -- This word "in" means something more than is generally appreciated--a glorious oneness with the Father and with the Son. NS740:1

I in you -- Through the holy Spirit. R2455:6

John 14:21

Hath my commandments -- Plural, therefore not the same as when he said, "A new commandment I give unto you" (John 13:34); neither the epitomized statement of the Law of the Ten Commandments. R5520:3

These "commandments" would seem to be the general teachings of the Lord as they bear on all the affairs of life. R5520:4

Signifying, he that received my commandments and is willing to become my disciple. R5520:1

We are to recognize a distinction between the Law, the commands which Christ gives, and the Law Covenant. R5520:2

In the inspired words of the Lord and the apostles and prophets we have the divine will expressed, explained, illustrated, and enforced, line upon line and precept upon precept. R2093:3*

Those, therefore, who ignore the Word of the Lord and have not his commandments, but who hearken to the voice of their own imaginations, are quite mistaken in claiming this promise. R3251:2

And keepeth them -- Our Lord would have us apply not only our heads, but also our hearts, to the instructions of his Word. R2093:6*

These experiences are promised conditionally to those who, hearing his commandments, are moved by responsive love to do them. R2456:1

Obedience to the heavenly wisdom constitutes the proof of our love to God. Thus also is proved our love of righteousness. R2093:3*

It is not enough to simply resolve or determine to do right or to obey God. Unless we go further, and actually make advancement in character, we will prove failures. R1802:2*

How prone we all are to desire and to acquire knowledge, at the expense of our spiritual development, forgetting that "knowledge puffeth up, but love edifieth." (1 Cor. 8:1) Knowledge does not bring happiness; obedience does. R1802:2*

The mere hearing of the command, or the mere understanding of the command, is not the receiving of it. R5520:2

It is one thing to have a begetting of the Spirit, and quite another matter to attain to that condition urged by the Apostle, saying, "Be ye filled with the Spirit." (Eph. 5:18) R2456:1

This implies the study of ourselves, as well as of the divine Word, that we may see just what portions of the Word apply to our individual present necessities. R2094:1*

A person may be a visitor at a school, but he has not become a member of the school unless he has met the terms--has accepted the rules and regulations under which the school is operated. R5520:2

Having taken the first step of belief, and the second step of response, the important question with each of us must be, Am I doing whatsoever he says? R3163:6

Not self-gratification, but self-abnegation, and self-purification. In meekness and humility we must deny ourselves. R2094:6*

Not only are faith and obedience of the heart necessary before any can come into the spirit begotten condition, but a continuance and growth in faith and obedience are necessary in order to a continuance and growth in the spirit of holiness. R2456:1

This matter of a definite contract with the Lord is a very important one. Those who do not make it are not truly his disciples, have not really put themselves in his hands, and are in danger of shipwreck. R5520:2

The Vow was a binding of the sacrifice closer to the altar that I made when I consecrated. Since taking it, though I am weak and frail and old, the Lord has drawn me closer to himself. R4402:3*

"Thy words were found, and I did eat them." (Jer. 15:16) R2093:6*

That loveth me -- Our Lord's commands are not put in the form of compulsion, but whoever loves him will serve him. R5520:5
Nothing is put in the nature of an arbitrary command, merely the statement of principles. But these become to us commands. To know his will is a law to such as love him, they wish to serve him. R5520:5

I will love him -- The Lord will take note of those who appreciate this great honor, and when he comes to claim his Bride these are the ones who shall reign with him. R5520:6

There are two kinds of love: intense, particular love, and general love, or large-hearted generosity, kindness; and two sorts of love can be traced throughout the Scriptures in reference to our Lord and the Heavenly Father: affectionate love and loving kindness. Here we see the special love, or affection. R1254:3, 139:3*

The love of Christ is as the love of a bridegroom. Marriage is the most complete expression of union between not only Head and Body, but all the members of the Body. R139:6*

Loved of my Father -- He is the mouthpiece of Jehovah, the Father, and consequently in pleasing and obeying him, we are pleasing and obeying the Father. R2456:4

Fatherly love and pity. R139:6*

Manifest myself -- Through the holy Spirit. R2455:6

If our hearts are humble, earnest and true; and if our candid, thoughtful endeavor is always to find the purest motive and the exact truth that we may conform our lives thereto. R1823:6

Seen from afar, the Lord is clothed with terror and awfulness. A near approach changes the terror into worship. R139:6*

John 14:23

If a man -- Love with an "if" in it means love that is conditional, or because of authority. R1253:5

If any lose his relationship to Christ through loss of faith or loss of the holy Spirit through willful sin, such a one falls out from the covering of Jesus into the hands of the living God and his judgment by facts and works. To all imperfect creatures this means death. R2456:4
The Body of Christ is to be one, as a collective number, but this oneness is contributed to by each individual. R2638:4*

Love me -- A true son of a beloved and approving father naturally experiences the fervor of tender emotion. Especially is this so of a true son of God who recognizes in his Heavenly Father the perfection of every grace. R1914:3

We have promise of communion with both the Father and the Son; both are to be worshipped and loved equally. R1581:1

He will keep -- Surely there can be no better test of love than devotion, and no better test of devotion than obedience. R2456:4

Father will love him -- If there be a constant ripening of the fruits of the spirit, a sense of the divine acceptance and favor is given us from day to day in increasing measure. R3215:4

In the midst of all the temptations and trials that beset us in our earthly pilgrimage we may recognize the voice of our God, saying, "Fear not: I am thy shield, and thine exceeding great reward." (Gen. 15:1) R1906:1

We will -- The thought and care and interest of the Father and the Son will be constantly upon us; and we may engage the special attention of either or both. R1865:2

Come unto him -- Day by day it is our privilege to realize the presence and favor of God, if, by walking in the path of life, the path of obedience and loving service, we draw near to God. R1949:2

Our abode with him -- Through the holy Spirit. R2455:6

The promise not only of the occasional attentive hearing, but of the abiding presence of both the Father and the Son. R1865:1

Thus each individual saint becomes "a habitation of God through the spirit" (Eph. 2:22), a holy temple, a royal residence. R1981:4

The spirit of holiness prompts to the cleansing and purifying of body, clothing, home and all with which we have to do; for the outward man must be in conformity with the pure heart within, and with their heavenly guests that make their abode with us. R1739:6

A more serious error could scarcely be entertained than the idea of personal infallibility because of the supposed mysterious presence of another being within. R3251:2

John 14:24

But the Father's -- Our Lord Jesus was and still is the Great Teacher of men by the appointment of the Heavenly Father, the great Master Teacher above all. E50

He "did not his own human will" but was "led of the Spirit," and the actions now were of God. (John 6:38) R418:4, 164:6

John 14:26

The Comforter -- When the holy Spirit came upon our Lord at his baptism it was a comfort indeed, but it nevertheless meant to him the sacrifice of every earthly aim and hope in the execution of the divine plan. E268

Only as we receive of the Spirit of the Lord are we able to understand and appreciate his love, compassion and provision for us, and to be comforted thereby. R2665:1

No matter how painful the crucifying of the flesh, we have learned to view it from God's standpoint, and to esteem present afflictions as light, compared with the glory that shall be revealed in us. (Rom. 8:17) R372:3

The clear comprehension of the Father's will and plan are comforting indeed, bringing peace, joy and contentment, even in the midst of tribulations and persecutions. E268

The Holy Ghost -- Ghost is but another and bad translation of pneuma, generally rendered spirit. R372:2; E169

Whom -- "Which," Diaglott. E170

Father will send -- The fact that the Father sends the holy Spirit shows that it is under his authority, just as your powers are under your control. (See 1 Cor. 14:32) R372:2; E267

In my name -- Just as a servant is sent in the name of his master and not in his own name, another contradiction of the unscriptural theory of three Gods of equal power and glory. E267

The holy Spirit is Christ's representative in his Church. R158:1*, 2455:6
Because the entire work of redemption and restitution of sinners has been committed unto the Son, and the holy Spirit of the Father is the channel by which the Son operates. E268

He -- Omitted in the Diaglott. E170

Might with equal propriety be translated she, herself or it, itself. Greek, heautou, rendered himself, is rendered "itself" nine times and ekinos, rendered "he," is much oftener rendered "that" and "those." E204
The masculine pronoun is often used in our Common Version for the holy Spirit because God, who is a Spirit, is represented as masculine, as indicative of strength, but can with equal consistency be translated it, and is often so rendered. (See Diaglott) R5749:5, 4306:5

Teach you all things -- The holy power by which he would guide and direct his people and enable them to "walk by faith, and not by sight." (2 Cor. 5:7) E203

There were certain things that his disciples could not understand at that time, but would know afterwards, at Pentecost, because he would send the holy Spirit. R5088:3

Our Lord, using true wisdom, refrained from saying more than would be to his hearer's advantage to know, leaving such information for unfolding by the Comforter to them, at Pentecost. R2729:5

Nor was full knowledge then necessary: it was quite sufficient that they should faithfully take each step as it became due; hence the Master taught them little by little as they were able to receive it. B110

The mind of Christ, or the new spirit, leads us to search the Scriptures, God's storehouse of truth: thus the Spirit of truth works in us. R372:3

It also acts upon us by helping our infirmities and enabling us to comprehend his Word, that we through patience and comfort of the Scriptures might have hope while enduring present afflictions. (Rom. 15:4) R372:3

Those wholly consecrated and gladly following the Lamb "whithersoever he goeth" (Rev. 14:4) know that their Master will continue to give them "meat in due season" (Matt. 24:45), both in things "new and old" (Matt. 13:52), as they are "able to bear it." (1 Cor. 10:13) R1151:1*

To a certain extent this is applicable to the entire Church, but it was specially applicable to the apostles. It still operates toward the remainder of the Church through the apostles' words. F217

The holy Spirit will be our instructor--using instrumentalities for bringing the instruction to us--the Word of truth, the writings of the apostles, and various helps and agencies. R2456:5, 2665:2

For sanctifying power, Jesus pointed us forward to truths to be revealed by the Spirit through the apostles. R442:4

The prophets' words are valuable as showing many of the interests of the Jew and natural man and events, but, except in types and shadows, discernible only by the Spirit's revelation through the apostles, they contain little spiritual food. R442:5

Though the writings of the prophets were held sacred as the Word of the Lord and reverently read by his anciently chosen people, fleshly Israel, their understanding fell short of its significance until the holy Spirit was given. R3052:3

Thus during this age the true followers of Christ have been led into a fuller unfolding of the mystery of God, which was entirely hidden from past ages, and is to be finished under the Seventh Trumpet's sounding in the end of this age. R368:3

Bring all things -- The only superhuman influence in the writing of the New Testament was that the Lord would facilitate the work by bringing important matters clearly and forcibly to the attention of these historians, and guarding them against misunderstandings. R1419:1; HG311:3

To your remembrance -- The apostolic inspiration was threefold: (1) refreshment of memory; (2) guidance into an appreciation of the truth; and (3) special revelations of things to come. F218

The holy Spirit shows us things to come, and explains to us things that are past. R4167:4

Our Lord's teachings were almost wholly in parables and dark sayings and may have been misinterpreted. After his resurrection, particularly after Pentecost, they remembered his words. R2476:3; A80

John 14:27

Peace I leave -- The peace of God is compatible with great commotion and with sorrow and pain of various kinds; for it is not dependent upon outward circumstances, but a proper balancing of the mind and heart. R4818:5

We need rest and peace and life everlasting. These we do not find in the world around us. There is no real peace outside of the Lord's provision. R4883:2

It causes us no surprise to know that the saints will "be joyful in glory" (Psa. 149:55); but it may strike some as peculiar that the present condition of imperfection and physical frailty in which we groan should be a condition in which songs and thanksgivings and joy should prevail.

R2231:6

Whatever their condition, whether sickness or health, whether very poor or in comfortable circumstances, these have peace within, and realize that godliness with contentment is a great gain. (1 Tim. 6:6) R1245:3

In the midst of the "perilous times" of this "evil day" how precious to the saints are the assurances of divine protection, care and personal love. R3331:2

As faithful servants of Bible times could rejoice in whatever experiences God permitted to come to them in the discharge of duty, so may we remember that ours is the same God, that he changes not. R3123:2

The foundation and security of this abiding peace which is able to survive the heaviest storms of life was their faith in the love, power and wisdom of God. R1834:6

As we learn to take a proper view of the Lord's dealings, learn to have faith in him, learn to note his providences and trust his promises, proportionately it is our privilege to have peace and rest in every time of storm and distress. NS660:5

To the world it may seem that the course of the Christian is far from peaceful, for the Lord's saints often have a stormy voyage. But if our hearts continue stayed on Christ we shall be kept through the storms of life. R5432:1

This peaceful condition is to be the rule; anything else is to be the exception, and more and more the rare exception. NS66:5

With you -- Not alone to the early Church was this legacy of peace bequeathed. It is the blessed inheritance of the entire Church, even to the end of the age. R1834:5, 5432:1

My peace -- That tranquility of soul, that rest and ease of mind, which he himself possessed--the peace of God, the same peace which the Father himself has always enjoyed. R1834:2

With Jehovah this peace was self-centered, because he realized in himself the omnipotence of power and wisdom; while the peace of Christ was centered, not in himself, but in God. R1834:2

Not the peace of indifference and carelessness, not the peace of self-indulgence, not the peace of sloth, not the peace of fatalism; but the peace of Christ. R2456:6

Not the short-lived peace of the world, which is sometimes enjoyed while fortune smiles and friends abound and health endures; but the peace that endures through loss, persecution, scorn and contempt. R1834:5

The darkened heavens, the quaking earth, the rending rocks, the torn veil of the Temple, all spoke to them a message of comfort which the world could not receive. R1834:4

He desires to develop in us character, and therefore permits temptations and "fiery trials," promising that amongst these difficulties and besetments of life we may have "the peace of God which passeth all understanding" ruling in our hearts. (Phil. 4:7) NS597:1
Peace, deep and abiding, and ever increasing proportionately as we come to comprehend with all saints through faith and obedience the riches of divine grace. R2456:5

It is a peace which implicitly trusts to the divine wisdom that nothing shall by any means hurt his faithful, and that all things shall work together for good to them that love God. (Rom. 8:28) R2456:6

If the stoop of full consecration to pass under the veil be made, the result is full or perfect peace. R4901:5, 4579:4

I give unto you -- Our Lord's last will and testament. R1834:2

Yet how quickly the storm-clouds of trouble, which was even then growing very dark, burst in fury upon the heads of those very disciples to whom the words were directly addressed. R1834:3

Not as the world giveth -- That is, not in stinted measure or in perishable quality. R4818:5

Heart be troubled -- "That peace of God which surpasses all conception shall guard your hearts and minds by Christ Jesus." (Phil. 4:6,7, Diaglott) R1046:4*

Be afraid -- There is nothing to fear. "If God be for us, who can be against us?" (Rom. 8:31) CR149:1

Fear has been one of the terrible scourges through which man has afflicted himself. CR147:1

Greater than I -- The New Testament is as explicit as the Old in its statement that there is but one supreme God. HG661:3

In combatting the second century influence of Grecian philosophy that related our Lord to such philosophers as Socrates and Plato, some, loyal to the Lord, went to the other extreme and declared him, contrary to his own words, equal to the Father. R4165:1

In harmony with the usage of the Greek definite article in John 1:1. R3076:2*, 2408:3

"The Son himself being subject unto him, that God may be all in all." (1 Cor. 15:28) R715:4*

The Scriptures clearly tell us of his greatness, his full harmony with his Heavenly Father, Jehovah, and his full submission to his Heavenly Father's will in all particulars. R4051:5

We notice a oneness of honor. In honor each seems to prefer the other, the Father saying, "Let all men honor the Son, even as they honor the Father." (John 5:23) R3161:2

The Master always had this disposition of reverence for the Father and of full trust and confidence in the divine wisdom, justice, love and power.

R5846:6

Contrary to the denominational view that the Father, the Son and the holy Spirit are three in manifestation and yet "one in person, and equal in power and glory." R2047:1, 1904:5, 560:2*, 405:6*, 290:3*, 207:3; HG410:6; SM492:3

Should we think it strange that in the heat of discussion some of the followers of Jesus would make extravagant claims for him in their endeavor to oppose the theory that made of Messiah a mere sinful man? SM492:2

Sometimes Jesus spent the entire night in prayer to God. How inconsistent this would have been if he himself were the Father, who for a time was with men, outwardly appearing as the "man Christ Jesus!" R5378:3

Our Lord Jesus in all matters acts as the representative of the Father, Jehovah, in the work of salvation. E35

True messengers of God always seek to give the honor unto God, and decline it for themselves. R1634:6; HG297:2

"Of mine own self, I can do nothing." (John 5:30) R2408:4, 5747:6, 5378:3, 4051:5, 3161:3, 3076:4*

John 14:30

Not talk much -- Before our Lord's crucifixion, he had been on familiar terms with his disciples, but after his resurrection his manner was more reserved, to impress them with the dignity and honor of his exaltation.

B131; Q826:2

During the forty days from the time of his resurrection to the time of his ascension into heaven, he manifested himself and talked very rarely with his disciples. Q826:2

The prince -- Typified by Pharaoh on the night of the Passover. NS73:3

We would not at all agree with Wakefield's application, as given in the Diaglott footnote; rather, we understand the prince here to be Satan.

R3032:1

Elsewhere called the prince of the power of the air, and the old serpent, which is the devil, and Satan; also, Beelzebub, the prince of devils.

R1686:1; NS547:3

As "the prince of the power of the air" (Eph. 2:2) controlling the present "heavens," and as the "prince of this world" controlling the present "earth," both of which are to pass away. R332:4

Satan's castle is in the air, his dungeon is the prison-house of death.

R615:1*

The power of Spiritualism is not difficult to account for, and it has not yet reached the climax of its power; its powers are to increase wonderfully. R266:4

An intelligent being of great power and influence, and an ambitious leader. Yet in the beginning of his existence, he was pure and perfect. R1686:1

The grim reaper, death, is Satan's Brigadier-General, not the Lord's. R615:2*

Though God has given over the world to his rule until the full end of the Gentiles Times, yet God has not given unlimited power. The wrath of man shall not work ruin to the plan of God. R5205:4

He has a great spiritual empire amongst men, which controls through ignorance, superstition and fear the vast majority of the human family. SM546:2

When Adam was created it was that he might be the Lord of this world. To him was given the "dominion." (Gen. 1:29) When Adam fell, his dominion and possessions passed into the hands of the crafty conqueror. R615:1*

Man's inability to establish a perfect government is attributable to his own weakness, which has also been taken advantage of by Satan, who has led them captive at his will and made himself the ruler of this world.

A250racter

Satan, who fell from his holy estate and became the adversary of God through unholy ambition, has blinded the minds of mankind. R5909:3, 3032:1

Not by right, but by usurpation; through fraud, deception and control of fallen men. It is because he is a usurper that he will be summarily deposed. Had he the real title he would not be thus dealt with. A250; E448, 113

History convinces us that Messiah has not been King, and should not be charged with responsibility for bloody and atrocious persecutions, for wars, famines and pestilences. SM693:3; NS856:1 Satan is still the prince of this world. R4350:3, 5078:2

His schemes for power and dominion were deep laid and far reaching, having, as he supposed, ample time for full development. R1686:3

Unceasing vigilance, art, cunning craft, unscrupulous hypocrisy and unblushing impudence are the characteristics of Satan, who, unrecognized by men, is constantly manipulating human affairs, civil and religious, for the accomplishment of his own diabolical purposes. R1134:3

Who came to our Lord just as he comes to his followers--as an angel of light, with his real character and purposes cloaked. R1688:1, 1094:5

In the great temptation, when Satan could neither make our Lord to doubt nor tempt the Father, his last desperate stake was "the dominion."

R615:1*, 314:4; E113

"We wrestle not against flesh and blood [not against human beings, but against evil spiritual beings] but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high [controlling] places." (Eph. 6:12) R267:1

Of this world -- Dispensation, age. R2724:4, 2717:5, 525:3; NS855:6
The present evil world. R532:2; A67; NS87:6 The conditions of the "present evil world" (Gal. 1:4) are in harmony with the characteristics of the "prince of the world who now worketh in the hearts of the children of disobedience" (Eph. 2:2) --the prince of darkness. OV248:3; R1134:3
Or the order of things then in vogue, and still in vogue with the world. R3032:4

While Jesus has all power, for wise purposes he has not made use of it, permitting evil to reign and measurably control the world. R256:3

Working through the ambitions and selfishness of men, he has over turned kingdoms and revolutionized society with reckless indifference to miseries of men, in establishing his own dominion. R1686:6

In the great Papal system, the most complete representative of his policy, his lionlike strength has most fully appeared. R1687:5

We deny that kings and emperors now reign by the grace of God, or that God is in any degree responsible for their misruling. R1094:5, 1092:3, 362:4

We complain not at their appointment, we interfere not in their exercise of power, but say not, "By the grace of God," countenance them not in the name of Christianity. Their appointment comes from the prince of this world, Satan, whose interests they advance. R507:6

Satan is not the Church's adversary alone, but that of all mankind. F611

The kingdoms of the world, while professing to be the kingdoms of God, are really under the control of the "prince of this world"--Satan. R5917:2, 5853:6, 5832:4, 5204:4, 2691:5, 720:5; HG569:3; OV342:1, 193:1

Not that they realize this, but rather, they are deceived. Not that God has given Satan any authority to rule these kingdoms, but that he is ruling through human weakness. R5853:6

Seeing that Satan has wielded an evil influence, blinding mankind and deceiving the nations, will it be any less possible for the Prince of Peace to rule the world, open the blind eyes, and cause the knowledge of God to be generally appreciated, without his appearing in the flesh? HG365:6

The thrones of Rev. 20:4 are those of earthly kingdoms at the present time. These are all condemned as unfit, and are to be overthrown, to give place to the Kingdom of Christ. R331:3

It was no part of his original policy to prostrate the human race in death. He probably believed the lie, "Ye shall not surely die" (Gen. 3:4), having deceived himself. His object was to transfer man's allegiance from God to himself. R1686:4

If posted in the world's history, and candid, all must admit that the government men attribute to Christ has been a monstrously bad rule.

Humanity, if given the entire control, would not do much worse than has been done in the way of misgovernment. R1092:3

Our great Adversary is he who "has the dominion of death"--whose power is manifest throughout the earth among those under condemnation to death.

R1687:4

Understanding God's plan, we are not to expect full justice or human rights to have great consideration now because Satan's kingdom is based upon neither love nor righteousness, but selfishness. R2724:4

When God's time for the establishment of Christ's Kingdom comes, Satan's kingdom will be brought to naught as effectually as was his former purpose at the time of the flood. R1687:1

The time of trouble will be the natural consequence of the transfer of rulership from the Devil, the prince of this world, to "him whose right it is" (Ezek. 21:27)--Christ. R592:2, 409:2

The present invisible spiritual prince of this world, Satan, will be fully cast out when the new invisible spiritual Prince, Christ, shall fully take to himself his great power and dominion. R547:4

"The earth is given into the hand of the wicked one; he covereth the faces of [deceiveth] the judges thereof; if not, where and who is he [the rightful ruler]?" (Job 9:24) R615:4*

"Of this world," and not in some far-off and unknown place called hell, stoking fires and causing untellable anguish to millions of our race. SM546:2

Surely conditions are not so in heaven; else it would not be heaven; Satan is not the prince there; sin does not prevail there; death is unknown there. NS547:6

Cometh -- In the sense that he would triumph over the world and bring it into subjection to his own evil sway and dominion until the time for the Lord to set up his own Kingdom at his second coming. Q826:2

Soon he was to come in the power of his kingdom, the counterfeit kingdom of Christ, which was actually set up in the year 800 under the name of "Holy Roman Empire." R1686:6

Hath nothing in me -- And consequently no interest in his followers except to oppose, tempt, annoy and buffet them. A68; HG538:3

There are mighty invisible powers under the leadership of the prince of this world plotting to accomplish the stumbling of the "feet" of the Body of Christ. R1687:5

While evil predominates now, under the prince of this world, the Lord's favored ones, his "jewels," seem to be less favored and have more afflictions, more trials, more persecutions, more difficulties, a narrower way, than others. R2406:1

Let us go hence -- The statement of John 18:1, "When Jesus had spoken these words he went forth with his disciples," would imply a considerable tarrying in the upper room after the supper was ended, probably to near midnight. R2464:3

John 15

John 15:1

I am the true vine -- The vine of Jehovah's right-hand planting. (Isa. 60:21) R3544:3

Some infer that this was an object lesson either suggested by the vineyards on the route or that their journey led past the golden gate of the Temple on which there was a large golden vine which Josephus describes. R3544:1, 2464:3

Probably suggested by the drinking of the "cup" representing the blood of the New Covenant, and may have been uttered after Judas had gone out, and before the Lord and the eleven went to Gethsemane. R2464:3

Suggestive of a false vine, and this thought is accentuated and elaborated in our Lord's last message to his people in the symbols of Revelation. (Rev. 14:9) R3544:2, 2464:6; B234; F207; NS59:1

The vine of the earth is the nominal Christian system organized along the lines of earthly wisdom. Its branches are the various sects and parties of Christendom. Its fruitage is temples, political power, etc. R3544:3; F207; NS376:5

There is a difference between the fruits of the true vine and the fruits of the vine of the earth: one bears the form of godliness without its spirit or power, the other transforms the mind. NS377:1

We who live at a time when both the true vine and the false vine of the earth have developed, have opportunity for noticing the difference between the two, that the one is a counterfeit of the other. R3544:2

God gave Christendom the advantage of the "choicest vine," Christ, and when he looked for justice and righteousness as the fruits, behold oppression and a cry. (Isa. 5:7) R2804:3*

The grapevine was honored of the Master in that he used it in this parable to symbolize himself and the Church. R4666:1

My Father -- Nevertheless the disciplines and prunings are accomplished in us and toward us through our Head, as the Father's agent. F401

The husbandman -- Who planted, who owns, who cares for the true vine, and to him it yields its fruit. The word signifies not merely the caretaker, but rather the vineyard-owner. R2464:6, 3544:2

Whatever the channels or agencies employed by the divine power in the care of the vine, the entire matter is, nevertheless, of the Father, the husbandman. NS377:6

Therefore it is God, not Christ, who is the judge of the Church. R2425:3*

John 15:2

Every branch -- Not every nominal Christian, every professor, nor even "justified" believers, ready to become branches, but only those who, by consecration, have been "immersed into Christ." R2465:1

In me -- Being "in Christ" gives the thought of membership in his Body; in the Vine, partaking of the nourishment therefrom; "Christ in you, the hope of glory." (Col. 1:27) R5227:3, 140:2

While God in Christ has opened up the way and made it possible for us to become members of his Church, yet the joining of that Church is our part, and can be accomplished only by a full consecration. R1301:4, 374:1; Q303:2

The apostles did not join each other, but each was united in heart. So we should not join the apostles, but each should individually join the Lord as a member, each must have the sap if it would bear fruit. R3544:5

The sap of the Vine corresponds to the holy Spirit of the Lord, which invades the entire Church. NS378:1

Beareth not fruit -- More than the mere making of a consecration is necessary. Consecration opens the door and gives us the standing. But to maintain this standing requires that fruits be produced, evidencing love and devotion. F78

The fruit of the spirit. R1414:6, 1301:6

They are all the same fruit, love, only in various stages of development, just as the flower and the green grape are developments toward the fully ripe grape. R1301:6, 2667:3

Jesus used the fruit of the vine to symbolize his death, and the fruit expected of every branch of the vine is the same, namely, a giving of your life for the world. R140:2

Some may become true branches in the Vine and yet overlook and not possess the fruit-bearing disposition. R3545:2

At the beginning of our existence as new creatures the fruits of the holy Spirit germinate within us, but these must grow to maturity. We must bear fruit. R5208:5

All the branches of the vine have a tendency to spend their strength upon themselves, in branch-making rather than in fruit-producing. R2465:2

If the transforming work is not going on within us, we are either dead or dying branches that must sooner or later be severed from the vine.

R1414:6, 1081:5

The branch was in the Vine and yet did not bear fruit, did not make the effort to become Christlike. R5901:4*

He -- The Father. R5023:4, 1301:4; Q404:2

No one is competent to say of another that he has ceased to make his consecration. It is not given us to determine who are and who are not. It is the Lord's own work, and it is for him to determine who are in the Body. Q106:T

Taketh away -- As a "sucker," cut off from further affiliation and privilege. E206

Cuts it off from fellowship in the Vine. R4494:5, 5208:5, 4663:4, 1698:5

The present state of our membership is not final, but probationary.

There is a danger to those members of the Body who are failing to fill their office, of their being finally cut off from the Body, and others more worthy appointed in their place. R732:2

Everyone who becomes a branch in the true Vine obtains a possession without works, without merit of his own; but, having become a branch, it is required of him that he should bring forth fruit. R4494:4

Cease to be recognized in any sense of the word as branches. They may retain their freshness for a time, but eventually lose every evidence of fidelity, wither away. R2465:2

The husbandman with a trained eye discerns between buds which would bring forth grape clusters and buds which would only have leaves, "suckers," because they merely suck the juice and bring forth no fruitage. R3545:2

Under circumstances of unfaithfulness, the Lord not only permits us to leave him, his work and his Word, but, indeed, forces us to do so. R2287:1

Since Christ's character, the standard to be reached, is reached gradually, we must get busy developing this character, or sooner or later we shall become completely and forever separated from the Lord. R5901:4*

This conditional promise depends upon faithfulness to the end, patient endurance. R4911:1

Many, not only of the nominal church, but many members of the true Church, are weak and sickly, and many have gone asleep entirely, become dead to spiritual things, and, as dead branches, are cut off from the vine--the overcoming Church. R467:5

The Great Company, by their failure to carry out the contract of self-sacrifice, cut themselves off from the "Royal Priesthood," from membership in the Body of Christ. T69

Touching our high calling in Christ Jesus, to be his Bride, they become castaways. R140:2

Of course the husbandman would trim off dead branches, or rather, they would cut themselves off, representing those who commit the unpardonable sin. R140:3

Since fruit-bearing is the very object of coming into the Vine, not cultivating the fruits of the spirit is cutting yourself off, for your failure to bring forth the fruitage God is requiring. OV303:2

And every branch -- Every individual member of Christ. R4663:4

There are two classes, fruit-bearing and non-fruit-bearing branches. R2465:1

Both classes are developments; every branch begins as a very small shoot, develops leaves, has the same opportunities for sap from the same stem, Christ, and the same root of divine purpose and promise. R2465:2

That beareth fruit -- He does not expect to gather ripe grapes from the new vine-shoot when first it makes its appearance; rather, the great Husbandman (1 Cor. 3:9) waits for the gradual development of the fruit.

Nevertheless, manifestations of a coming fruitage of love are expected of the Lord quickly after our union with him. R3020:5

Be it ever so little. R67:4*

He purgeth it -- Cleanseth, pruneth. R4911:2, 5208:5, 3544:5; F401

The pruning is seen to be the trials and difficulties of life, but these are only for such as are branches in Christ. Q303:2; CR109:4

Cut us loose from all things contrary to his truth and to our best interests, and thus make us more faithful. R1302:2

He prunes away the earthly attachments and tendency to cling to earthly things. CR109:4; R4872:3

One peculiarity of the vine is that it seems to thrive the better in proportion as it is pruned. R2373:1

Aside from the suckers, there are branches which, while having fruit buds, would never bring forth fruit to ripe development. The wise husbandman pinches off the sprout of the vine beyond the bud to make it more fruitful. R3545:3; NS377:6

Vine-dressers tell us that they can very early discern the fruit-buds on the proper branches, and that the suckers lack these fruit-buds. R2465:2 Even fruit-bearing branches reach out and take hold of other things than those provided for their support by the husbandman. There is the same tendency among the consecrated to seek supports outside the Word of God and to lay hold upon the things of this world. R1302:1

As even the best branches in the vine require pruning, so even the most honest of the Lord's people require the Lord's discipline, otherwise they might soon run to woodmaking also. R2465:3; NS377:5

As it is proper enough that a vine should grow larger and larger, making new wood each year, so it is proper that the Lord's people should increase, spread and broaden year by year. NS377:5

But the important thing is the fruitage. Only so much growth can be allowed as will not interfere with the proper development of the fruit.

NS377:6

Our Heavenly Father sees the sprouts of our ambitions in various directions, and knows, as we do not, whereunto these might lead; by his providence he nips in the bud many of our propositions. R2465:3

There is wisdom in shaking off some of our plans and arrangements and efforts for which we have little talent, and concentrating our efforts upon those which we can best bring to perfection. R2466:2

Many of the tendrils which were catching hold of all the various attractions of earthly life are pruned off. R2287:4

So if we have the trimmings and purgings that he gives to the fruit-bearing branches, let us rejoice that we are in the good Husbandman's care and are in good condition. R5023:4; Q404:2

Sometimes by taking away earthly wealth, or by hindering cherished plans and schemes, or permitting persecutions or sickness; for some were too busy and were laid aside for a season. R3545:3

There is more or less pain in the prunings and testings of loyalty and obedience, but every manifestation of obedience helps to prepare us for membership in the Bride class. R5208:5

Amongst the vine-growers of Palestine it is customary to cut back the vine clear to the roots yearly, in order to get fresh sprouts therefrom. R2373:1
Not that in every little company there would be so thorough a purging that only the true branches remain. R3545:1

Bring forth more fruit -- We are on trial; and the trial is to prove our loyalty. If the trial time, or probation, is satisfactory, the membership is made permanent. R4911:4

John 15:3

Now -- The pruning work had already been done on them up to date. In the Lord's providences they had been purged of an unfaithful branch, Judas. R3545:4

It remains to be proved that there was any place or provision for washing in the typical Holy place. The laver was in the court and not in the sanctuary. R103:4*

Ye are clean -- Justified and accepted because of your faith, obedience and loyalty. R3545:4, 4436:4

Through the word -- Through the teaching. R2465:4

The apostles had been with our Lord and under his influence for three years, and been greatly blessed by "the washing of water through the word" spoken unto them. (Eph. 5:26) R2449:6

"Sanctify them through thy truth; thy word is truth." (John 17:17) May we never fall into the error of presuming that the sanctifying work can go on better without the truth than with it. R1628:5*

I have spoken -- As the Father's representative, Jesus had been keeping the first branches of the vine. He had purged or pruned by his reproofs or counsels. R2465:3

John 15:4

Abide in me -- The bearing of the fruit which the Father desires cannot be accomplished except as we are related to Christ and his fruit is born in us by our relationship to him and the power of his Spirit. R3545:5
Remain under the blood of sprinkling, abide in his love. R2456:4, 1008:2, 1007:2

Let the mind of Christ dwell in you richly, let his spirit control your mortal bodies and present them living sacrifices, partakers of his sufferings and death. R1008:6

As no man could join us to Christ but ourselves only, so no man could "pluck us out" or separate us from Christ but ourselves only. R1301:5

Bear fruit -- Many, misguided, think of earthly temples, orphanages, etc., as being the fruits; sometimes taken to be activities in the service of the truth. Not so! The fruits are still nobler, the fruits of the spirit. R3545:5

The name of all these fruits and graces of the spirit is expressed in the one word, love. R3546:1, 4663:4; OV123:1

I am the vine -- In the Scriptures, a vine is a figure used for the Church. R5383:1, 5505:4

"The cup of blessing" (1 Cor. 10:16) is the precious fruit of this vine, the development of which represents the sorrowful part of our experience. R5341:2

The Head. R140:1, 2373:2

Ye are the branches -- The vine is composed of branches, practically all branches, and this well illustrates our Lord's double declaration: first, that he is the Vine, and secondly, that this vine includes all his consecrated saints. NS374:2

The branches do not represent denominations and sects, but the individuals who are united to the Lord. R3544:5, 2465:5, 1573:3; CR68:4; OV234:2; NS374:2

The Christian is a branch from the moment of his consecration, and is a partaker of the sap from the root; yet it is not expected that he will instantly bear all the fruits of the Spirit. E206

The first evidences of the relationship to this Church-vine will be association with other branches, a connection with the root, and evidences of life. E206

Next will be tendrils, by which progress will be attained; next, the leaves or professions; next, the flower; and later, the fruit. The fruit is extremely small at first, and requires time to develop. E206

When our justification has progressed to the point of full consecration, we are recognized as begotten of the Spirit, and as branches in the Vine. R5023:3

Many illustrations of oneness: from the mineral kingdom, living stones built up into him; from the animal kingdom, a Shepherd and his sheep; from the family, true husband and true wife; again, the Creator as the Father, himself as the elder Son, and all we as brethren; from the human body, the Head over the Body. R3544:6, 30:3*; NS374:1

Illustrating oneness, and indivisibility. A82; R81:2*

The Vine and its branches have such a oneness that wherever we touch a branch we touch the Vine itself. It is one vine composed of branches, and so is the Body of Christ one body, composed of many members. R2465:6

Century after century these have been planted by baptism into death with their Master and have been bringing forth the peaceable fruits of righteousness. R5505:5

The body. R140:1

Abideth in me -- Only those who both eat his flesh, appropriate his merits, justification, and drink his blood, share with him in sacrifice, dwell in him as members of the "true vine." R1016:1

That a perfect knowledge constitutes one a member of the Body of Christ is an error. It is in the Vine, not separate from it, that the young and tender branch becomes a strong branch bearing abundant fruit. R118:3*, 67:4*

Without me -- That is, separate from me. R118:3*

A branch without connection with the vine is of no value. NS378:4

The divine power which operates through our Lord Jesus, through the Word of truth, through the followers of Jesus, can operate in the weakest member of the Body of Christ as well as in the strongest. R5942:4

To abide in Christ means to be subject to all the will of the great Husbandman, and gladly and meekly submit to all the prunings which his wisdom has seen best to permit. R2466:1

"In all thy ways acknowledge him and he shall direct thy paths." (Prov. 3:6) "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me." (Phil. 4:13) R4064:1

Each should more carefully watch for the leadings of divine providence and realize that only as he is a co-worker together with God can he accomplish anything. R2191:5

Ye can do nothing -- Even after exercising humility and coming to the Lord and being accepted of him, if the humility be lost our gracious standing in Christ is forfeited. R3842:6

Some imagine that they would become so perfect in the flesh that they would no longer need the robe of Christ's righteousness. This would be a serious mistake. R5902:2

John 15:6

If -- There is an "if," a contingency, upon which the scales of divine judgment as to our worthiness or unworthiness of the inheritance must turn. R2154:4

Abide not in me -- Even when drawn, by the opening of our mental eyes to the truth, under the unfavorable conditions of the present time, we are not compelled to follow; we may "go away." (John 6:66,67) R1056:2
All who come into Christ submit themselves to his will and voluntarily make it their law; and those who willingly violate this law thereby cease to "abide in him" and will be "cast forth" as dead branches. R1726:2
Willingly violate his law. R970:6

Is cast forth -- Not the worldly class, for they were never united to Christ, never were branches in the Vine; only those who have made a full consecration to the Lord. R3546:2 Not the household of faith, which, though believing in Jesus, never come to the point of becoming branches; nor the Great Company. R3546:3

As rejected branches "twice dead, plucked up by the roots." (Jude 12)
R1056:2

As a branch -- Burned as branches, destroyed as members of the company to which they originally were by covenant attached, but not necessarily destroyed individually to all eternity. R3546:3

And is withered -- The cut off branch (v. 2) is not the one which has withered. R140:3

The branches here mentioned as cut off are what vine-dressers call "suckers," and fitly picture many who make only professions, and never bear its fruit--self-sacrifice to death. R140:3

Cast them into the fire -- Seems to imply the second death, utter destruction of the class indicated. R3546:2

They are burned -- The fact that they were branches avails nothing after they cease to be branches, for the wood of the vine is of no practical value. They are burned, destroyed. R2465:2

Implying that as branches they are destroyed, so they could never be reingrafted if once cut off. NS378:2

"Delivered over to Satan for the destruction of the flesh that the spirit (life) may be saved in the day of the Lord Jesus." (1 Cor. 5:5) R140:3

John 15:7

If -- The conditions are two: abiding in Christ and his word abiding in us. R4983:3, 4913:2

Only one condition or limitation, that they give attention to the Lord's Word that they may ascertain what is his will and what they may ask according to his will. R3546:4

Even to those who have become sons of God, Jesus intimates a danger of losing the privilege of prayer. R5692:3, 1998:6

Ye -- It is limited to certain people under certain conditions. It does not say that anybody may ask what he will. OV400:2

Showing who may ask: ye believers, who are in me, whose wills are buried or immersed into the will of Christ Jesus. R1998:6

Abide in me -- Only those can abide in Christ who are in Christ. F679; R4983:3; OV400:2

More than this, he must continue to abide in Christ as a member of the Body, a member of the new creation. F680

We abide in him by continuing as we began. We suggest that every morning we make a fresh presentation of ourselves to the Lord, not as making a new sacrifice, but as confirming the one already made. OV403:7

Pointing out the necessity for our continuance under his care. F120

If we abide in him it will mean that we abide loyal to his will, and are desirous of having his will done in us, and not our own will. NS226:1 Entirely subject to my will and plan, even as I abide in the Father's love, and seek not to do my own will but the will of him that sent me. R1999:3

Those who abide in Christ must have gotten into him by faith, repentance and consecration. R3663:2, 5708:2

Our Lord Jesus kept the incense continually burning, so the under-priests will be heard always if they continually offer the incense of faith, love and obedience to God. T120

This means that the petitioner has turned from sin, has accepted Christ, and the terms of discipleship. R4913:2

Not only that they have entered into a consecrated relationship, but that they are remaining there, dwelling there; that they are members of the Body of Christ in good standing. R5311:2, 5708:2

To abide in him means that their faith will abide, their repentance for sin and opposition to it will abide, and their consecration to the Lord and his service will abide. R4983:3, 3663:2

That the Christ-character and life are definitely formed in us. R3251:6

The majority, holding intercourse with evil, only occasionally flee to the Lord in some trouble, and that without entering into any covenant with him or receiving recognition as sons, and without desiring this. R5692:3

My words abide in you -- My teachings. T120

If you remember and act upon my teaching. R5758:2

If he would have the wisdom necessary to ask, in harmony with the Lord's will, things which he would be pleased to grant. Otherwise, his prayers might go unanswered, because "amiss." F680; T120; NS225:6

The request must be in harmony with the divine will. Q774:3; R5219:6

If the Lord's words abide in us it will imply our love for them, and diligent study to know the words of the Lord, and the will of the Lord expressed in those words. NS226:1

Abiding in Christ implies that the will has been wholly swallowed up in the will of Christ; and if the suppliant's own will is gone, he surely would consult the words of Christ before framing a petition to the Father in Christ's name. R798:2

It is not only necessary that we seek divine grace, but it is equally proper that we avail ourselves of the divine revelation respecting what is the will of God our Father. R2466:3

We must study the Bible. This is the only way to know what God has said to us. OV404:2; R4984:1

They must search the Scriptures to know the will of the Lord; to know what he has promised and what he has not promised; to know what they may ask for and what they may not ask. R4983:3, 5311:2, 5480:5, 4913:2, 1999:3

In other words, petitions according to the Lord's will shall be answered, but those contrary to his will shall remain unanswered. R5202:6

Ask what ye will -- Only those who possess both qualifications may expect to approach the throne of heavenly grace with full assurance of faith that their petitions will be answered--in God's due time. F680; R5219:6

The intimation is that the asking of the Father is a means by which we may more and more receive of the sap of the Vine, the holy Spirit, and be enabled to develop the fruits of the Spirit. R2466:3

It might seem at first as though we might ask for anything. But it has very particular limitations. R5311:2

Those thus abiding in him will ask chiefly for spiritual blessings. OV404:3
Our wills being in harmony with the will of God. R2163:6*

The province of prayer is to ask for only such things as God has already declared himself well pleased to grant. R4983:2, 798:1

Whatever would be asked by one thus well-informed respecting the divine promises and fully submissive to the divine will, would be things which God would be well pleased to grant. R3663:2

We may ask anything that is guaranteed in God's Word; for his Word dwells in us richly, and we would not think of asking anything not authorized therein. R5708:2, 5758:2; CR421:4

There are many things for which we may pray, the answer to which would not involve any change in divine plans. We are not to understand that all the little incidents of life are foreordained and predestinated. R4913:4

Not by way of intimating that the Father would change his plans to yours, and do your will, but intimating that you can come so fully into sympathy with the Father that you will never be dissatisfied. R1999:3

When we pray, "Not my will, but thine, be done," our prayers are always answered; but in such a condition the prayers will be very modest. (Luke 22:42) R4983:4, 1999:4, 798:2; NS226:2

Not as a begging arrangement, nor for instructing the Lord as to our wills; but communion of heart with our Father in which we may relieve our burdened and perplexed hearts by realizing divine sympathy. R799:2, 4984:1, 4983:2

Prayer opportunity is not for us to instruct Jehovah how to arrange matters for the best, but that we may be prepared to listen for his answer and advice through his Word. R4983:1, 797:6

The object of prayer is to bring the heart and the mind of the child of God into closer contact with the heart of God. R4983:1, 797:6

The fully consecrated will not want anything which is not in fullest harmony with the will of him we so love and adore, and who is so worthy of our love and loyalty. R5480:5

We may not ask for riches and honor, nor for fine food and fine clothing. To pray for these is contrary to the spirit of the Master. But we may ask, "Give us this day our daily bread." (Matt. 6:11) R798:3

If the least disciple were assured, on good evidence, that the removal of a tree or mountain would be a part of the divine will, and that it was his duty to do the commanding, he should have equally strong faith in the results. R1967:3

Bear much fruit -- The Lord will be glorified the more in proportion as our fruit increases. It is a part of our covenant relationship that we will grow in grace. R3546:4

John 15:9

So have I loved -- Our Master has toward us the same kind of love that the Father has toward him. R3546:5, 2466:4

Continue ye -- Continue, and if possible, increase your consecration, and you shall have fresh evidences of his friendship by growing "in grace and in knowledge." R231:4

These words show that it is possible for us to forfeit the Lord's love and to become castaways. R2466:5 The sap which produces the fruit can only be obtained by continued union with the Vine and its root of promise. If ever separated, all hopes wither. R2465:4

Only those who prove the sincerity of their professions will be accepted as members of the Church glorified, symbolized by the golden vine of the Beautiful Gate of the Temple. R2466:4

John 15:10

If ye keep -- Love with an "if" in it means love that is conditional, or because of something. R1253:5

Next come the terms and conditions upon which we may continue in his love. R3546:5

The Lord expects obedience: full obedience so far as the heart or intention are concerned, and as complete obedience as possible so far as control of the flesh is concerned. R3020:3

Our Lord's continuance in the Father's love was because of his obedience to the Father's will. Following the same line, he must require that we be obedient if we would abide in his love. R2466:6

He must require that we should be obedient to him if we should abide in his love and share his throne and glory. R5082:6

As God's love shows itself in his works, so will our love show itself in our works. R21:4*

No mere outward formalistic obedience and piety. "I delight to do thy will, O God; yea, thy law is within my heart." (Psa. 40:8) R2649:1

How would it be if we disobeyed through ignorance? Carelessness respecting the word of the Lord is one evidence of the lack of love. R2466:6

My commandments -- Not the Ten Commandments. Our Lord's commandments are less in the sense of requirements on our flesh; they are more as respects the requirements on our hearts. R3546:6

While justice is the first feature of the commandment of love, it is not the end of its requirements. R3020:6

Briefly summed up, he tells us that his law is love with all our heart, mind, soul and strength to the Father and for our neighbor as ourselves. R3546:6

Our Lord's statement of these commandments briefly comprehends them all in one word, love. Dividing the matter, we find that it has two parts: love for God and love for our fellows. R3020:5

Whoever is not sufficiently in sympathy with the principles of righteousness expressed in the Lord's commandments, would not be a fit person to enforce the divine laws during the Millennial age. R3020:3

"For this is the love of God, that we keep his commandments: and his commandments are not grievous." (1 John 5:3) R3546:6, 3021:1

Ye shall abide -- Implying that previously he has come to a knowledge of God's grace in Christ, and has accepted his share in the same as one of the sons of God, begotten by the holy Spirit. R3020:2

It implies that getting into God's love is by no means the end of the Christian way, but merely the beginning. R3020:2

We may abide in his love at first under other conditions, feeling through our love the restraints of his commandment of love, but as we grow in knowledge we must grow in grace and outgrow these sentiments. R3021:3

In my love -- The love of Christ is as the love of a bridegroom, as typified by Isaac and Rebecca, Jacob and Rachel and prophetically told in the Song of Solomon. R139:6*

As I have kept -- By way of showing us that this is not an unreasonable proposition, our Lord declared that these are the same terms on which the Father deals with him. R3546:5

Our Lord's continuance in the Father's love, with all which this implies, was because of his obedience to the Father's will. R5082:6

As we look at the character of our Lord we perceive a love for the principles which lie back of the Father's commandments. He obeyed, not through restraint nor fear, but from a perfect love. R3021:3

In exercising mercy we but copy divine love; for our Heavenly Father not only deals with all his creatures according to justice, but going beyond the lines of justice he provided a Redeemer for sinners. R3020:6

John 15:11

Your joy -- "Enter thou into the joys of thy Lord." (Matt. 25:21) We enter now into these joys through faith and anticipation, but by and by we shall enter upon them in the actual sense. R3547:1

Those who give surest evidence of living nearest the Lord well know that obedience to the Lord's words is the greatest joy, a joy which wholly outweighs all the trifling pleasures the world has to offer. R5082:6

If our joys were dependent upon circumstances of this life merely, we should be without joy. F678

Blessings come through tears, sorrows and disappointments; the blessings of a realization of divine approval, a joy superior to that of the natural man, the joys of the Lord. F678

An increasing joy, which day by day and year by year becomes more nearly complete, a joy which will not be complete, however, until that which is perfect shall come. R3547:1

It is when hope has laid firm hold upon the promises of God that joys spring up as flowers in a desert. But the joy which springs into being through implanted hopes, must be nourished by prayer and activity. F678

Our Lord's instructions and commandments are not intended to terrify us, nor to deprive us of happiness. R2466:6

The Lord cares for our joy and comfort. He asks only what is for our good, "reasonable service," and yet he asks all--"your bodies a living sacrifice." (Rom. 12:1) Self-denial, under the Lord's direction, is the surest means of happiness. R21:4*

In harmony with this we find the Scriptures testifying that the followers of Jesus were always rejoicing, in everything giving thanks, even in trials, difficulties and persecutions. NS191:1

Might be full -- We are not to expect the full results of joy in doing the Father's will in the beginning of our experiences, nor are we to feel discouraged if in the beginning the motive be duty-love instead of a love for principles. R3021:6

My commandment -- The Law of God demands not only justice, but also love, love supreme to God, and love to our fellowman. It demands mercy, kindness. (Ex. 23:4,5; Prov. 25:21,22) R5643:6

If love so broad and so comprehensive as this is demanded by God's Law, and was obligatory upon natural Israel, to what degree should spiritual Israel possess and manifest this noble quality! R5643:6

Not that in order to prove ourselves worthy we shall not kill, nor steal, nor bear false witness; but that we follow after "the law of the spirit of life," (Rom. 8:2) the law of Love, to God and to neighbor. R1498:3

I command and direct that you love one another. Q180:4

Love one another -- All who belong to the Church have the spirit of love at the time of their spirit-begetting, If progress be made that spirit will increase. But how frequently brethren fail to provoke to love and good works. R5921:1

Brotherly love is the one important test of membership in the Body of Christ. R4267:2

The new law given to us is the law of sacrifice. R4850:2

The New Commandment of the Master given to those who would consecrate their lives with his, even unto death. R4540:6

Have this text in each room so that you will think continually upon brotherly love, assured that it is the final test of character in God's sight. R4540:6

As I have loved you -- I have loved you to the extent of laying down my life for you sacrificially. You must have the same spirit and cast in your lot with me in self-sacrifice or you cannot be my disciple, nor share my glory. R4549:2; Q180:4

The love of God and of Christ was a sacrificial love. Those who are invited to become members of Christ's Body are to have this same love. It is not merely the love demanded by God's perfect law, but more. R5644:1 Impossible at first, but as we become more and more filled with the spirit of the Lord, we approximate more nearly to this standard of perfect love. R3547:4

The love that would give up life itself for the brethren may certainly be expected to sacrifice smaller things in their interest. R4253:4

Love was not obligated to make provision for the redemption of fallen man. The act was purely of grace; and if redemption was of grace, it was not of justice. R5644:1

To do this would be far more than to do no injury to another. It would be laying down our lives for one another. This is far beyond any requirement of the Law. R4850:2

Justice could not say, "You must go over and clean the snow from your neighbor's pavement"; but justice would say, "You must not throw any snow upon your neighbor's pavement." Love says more than this. R4850:2

John 15:13

Greater love -- There is far more love displayed in God giving his only begotten Son up to death than there would have been in God dying himself, had that been possible. R1328:3

If the love and sufferings of Christ do not move people, no love and sufferings would. R770:5

Hath no man -- It is surely true that none of the Lord's people are more generous-hearted than the Lord himself. NS99:3

Lay down his life -- Greek, psuche, soul, being. E337

Jesus demonstrated his unselfishness as respecting earthly things. His laying down of his life not only proved his loyalty to righteousness and to the Father's will, but proved also his unselfishness. SM189:4

The laying down of our Lord's life was accomplished moment by moment, day by day, in teaching, in healing the sick, the deaf, the blind, and in instructing his disciples. R5375:5

This kind of unmerited, sacrificing love is wholly different from anything that is known to fallen humanity. R2648:3

The brethren could not demand this of us, nor we of them; but we should all do so gladly, as we have opportunity. R5644:4

Only with the few is God first. Only with the few is there the spirit of full consecration to do the divine will. Only with the few is there love of the brethren and a willingness to lay down life for one another. R4795:5

For his friends -- For another! R5430:4

Christ died only for his friends, those at heart the friends of righteousness, while in fact they were all, more or less, opposing righteousness, unintentional enemies, by reason of the weaknesses. R1176:1

But to lay down his life for his enemies is certainly a much higher type of love, unselfish, gracious, heavenly. R2648:3

It is a beautiful friendship which in stress forgets self and thinks only of the interests of the friend. Nevertheless, in the case of Jesus, it meant more than any earthly love or friendship; for "while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us." (Rom. 5:8) R5664:4, 1175:2

There are throughout the world today millions whom God regards as his "friends," though he has not yet revealed himself and his plan of salvation to them. R1180:3

This love will be manifested to all men in the incoming age, now very near at hand. R5439:4

John 15:14

Ye are my friends -- While the enemies of God are thus the enemies of God and his righteous laws and regulations, let us not make the mistake that the friends of God can all be easily recognized now. R1174:6

If we submit our wills completely to his will he reckons us as friends. We may judge whether he reckons us among this class of "special friends" if he reveals his works and plans to us. R231:4

At this time the disciples were not begotten of the Spirit, though they were justified by faith. R231:1

If ye do -- Following Jesus, in the best sense, means that we walk in his paths, strive to do as nearly as we are able what he would do today, taking our lessons from what he did and the instructions he left. R2418:1

John 15:15

Not servants -- Servants, or infants, under laws. (Gal. 4:1-6) R1735:1, 976:1

When the holy Spirit would come upon them it would be the spirit of adoption, of sonship, as no longer servants, but sons. R1416:1

Knoweth not -- Excuse may be made for those who lived and died before the dawning, but for those now in contact with present truth, what shall we conclude? If servants at all, they are not such as knoweth what the Lord doeth. R3120:4

What his Lord doeth -- His plans, etc. R231:1

Called you friends -- A term for those who obey him, thus obedience is important if we want the Lord's help to understand his plans. R85:4*

All things -- Though justified men, they must be begotten of the Spirit to comprehend things above the human plane. R231:2

Heard of my Father -- Brought forcibly to our attention in Rev. 1:1, "The Revelation of Jesus Christ which God gave unto him to show unto his servants things which must shortly come to pass." R2434:3

Made known -- Making known to them his future plans. R2599:1
He has been telling them things regarding their new and high privileges, their new relationship toward God. R231:1

One of the evidences of our relationship to God, our sonship, is that he is more and more revealing to us his plans. R740:2, 50:6*

If he is not making known his plans to us we cannot be his friends. R493:1*

While it was not possible for Abraham to fully comprehend, and Jesus at the first advent spake in parables to the nominal house of Israel, yet a certain few, consecrated to the Lord, were treated as "friends" and had much explained to them. R2208:4

First the Lord comes, is present; next comes the revealing of his presence. Until the revealing, none will know of it except his saints, to whom it is revealed by faith through the testimony of the Scripture. R764:6

Therefore he kindly gives us, through Paul, a clue as to how and when his promise will be fulfilled. Rom. 16:20 reads, "The God of peace shall bruise Satan under your feet shortly." R11:2

John 15:16

I have chosen you -- Out of the world, chosen and separated from the world by the divine call and spirit-begetting. R5760:5; F132

He who has begun the good work in us will complete it unto the day of our glorification. R5862:6

The few are not chosen merely because he purposed to call them, but he calls them for a purpose. He has an object in view, a use. The few are chosen for the good of the many. R25:1*

Ordained you -- Appointed you. (Revised Version) R5002:2

A different Greek word from that used in Acts 14:23; here it is the word tithemi, used in 1 Tim. 2:7, "I am ordained a preacher and an apostle." F276

Not applicable to all of the Church, but chiefly to the apostles. R2658:1

It was the Lord who appointed the apostles and recognized their work. F204

Every member of the anointed Body, the Church of Christ, is anointed to preach the Gospel. (Isa. 61:1-3) R2157:1*

Bring forth fruit -- The fruits of the spirit are manifest: meekness, gentleness, patience, long-suffering, brotherly kindness, love. (Gal. 5:22,23; 2 Pet. 1:5-11) R5760:5; CR444:1

The gifts of faith, hope and love which the Apostle declared would abide were not miraculous gifts but growths, "fruits" as he elsewhere describes them. E207

Grow in holiness. R5901:5*

That whatsoever ye shall ask -- The more we bear fruit the more successful we will be in prayer; the more we can serve the brethren by obtaining blessings and enlightenment and mercy for them through prayer.

R5901:5*

In my name -- This means more than merely by his authority. It means that the petitioner must realize his own actual unworthiness, and therefore he presents himself in the name and merit of Christ, his Redeemer. R1410:5

This excludes Jews, excludes Mohammedans, excludes the heathen, excludes all who have not a knowledge of Christ and a faith in him as the Redeemer.

R2252:3

John 15:18

The world -- Jesus referred to the religious world; and realizing this, we know that it will be the religious world that will hate us, his followers. R5872:1, 5642:6, 5545:3, 4326:2, 3776:6

Not Gentiles, all the peoples not in covenant relationship with God, but the present order of things, and therefore the people of the present order, those who had religious influence. R5676:1, 4488:5, 4607:2

Including the nominal church. NS135:5

Including the scribes, Pharisees and Doctors of Divinity of his day, so the Lord's people should expect their trials chiefly from the worldly-spirited amongst the professed people of God. NS604:2; R4488:5

Today, as in the days of our Lord's first advent, there is a religious system which is more or less mixed up with politics. R5676:4

Hate you -- Those who are faithful to the Lord are not only in a small minority, but are discredited with the majority and obliged to endure hardness as good soldiers. NS71:1

Opposition from the world we are to take as a matter of course, and not be surprised at the fiery trials which shall try us, but to consider that the Lord is wise in permitting such experiences. R3801:3

The world does not love those whom the Father loves, whom Jesus loves, whom the Apostle loves. R5737:6

Not because it is reasonable or proper, but because the Lord, wishing to test, prove and polish his people is willing to permit the evil to serve his cause in the preparation of his elect for a future work. R2415:3

Although the world disowns and despises this class, it recognizes, nevertheless, in them what it terms an impractical spirit, which does not bring prosperity and success at the present time. SM384:1

It is the Church, not the world, that is being tested at the present time.

The opposition of the world and all the powers of darkness serve to test us as new creatures, to test our loyalty to God and his truth. R4967:5

In proportion to their faithfulness as followers of the Lord Jesus, the Lord's people are hated and persecuted. R5676:3, 4488:1

The more faithful and capable the brother, the more nearly a copy of his Master, the more sure he will be to have as enemies, not Satan and his messengers only, but as many also as Satan can delude and mislead. F293
Their marks of sanctification may be discerned by the world, but they will consider these evidences of the holy Spirit as evidences of weakness and effeminacy. F132

It did not hate them originally. It might have ignored them, but it did not hate them. But they hated the light and the light-bearer and now these had become sharers in holding up the light. Q321:4; R2501:2

An ambassador of a hated government is more critically and unsympathetically watched than under other circumstances. Such should endeavor to be all the more careful respecting their every word and action. R3330:4; NS384:6

Through this Gospel age those who have been lights in the world have been hated and persecuted almost exclusively by those who had some light, but whose light was darkness in comparison with the light of the Spirit.

R4813:5

Counted as offscourings of all denominations: sometimes pitied, sometimes scorned. SM384:T

By the chief religionists, not because of evil, but because of faithfulness to God; because that faithfulness, as a light, rebuked, as darkness, the unfaithfulness of those who hated them. R2373:2

There is an outward religion today that is popular, just as there was an outward religion in our Lord's day that was popular. But true discipleship means alienation and separation. NS631:3

The depth of your message is not intended for the world, which is worshipping Mammon, but merely intended for the Elect. SM242:T

Does not fellowship with you. NS388:5

The friendship of the world can be bought only at the price of the sacrifice of truth. R5513:4

It is altogether a mistake, therefore, to suppose that the Lord's consecrated people, letting their light shine faithfully before men, could convert the world. Such was not God's intention. R4967:5

With spiritual Israel God's blessings and chastisements are spiritual, and do not extend to temporal affairs. R3223:2

The blessings from the Lord upon his faithful ones more than compensate for the losses of earthly friendships, wealth and fame, securable to them by their natural talents in other directions. NS104:2

But he also promised compensation for its hatred, even in this present life. R1346:2

The rewards of Christ's discipleship were not to be expected in the present life. All that we may now have in the way of compensation will be the peace and blessing of the Lord in our hearts, with glorious hopes for the future. NS602:4

The Great Teacher did not use the methods of modern revivalists. His methods were the very reverse. He set forth in plain terms the difficulties to be expected by all those who would espouse his cause. NS743:2

Ye know -- Consecrated ones, realizing the object of present trials, glory in tribulation brought upon them by faithfulness, realizing that their experiences are similar to those of the Master. R3281:4

It hated me -- He was hated chiefly by the most prominent amongst the people, the scribes specially, but also the Pharisees, chief priests and Sadducees. In time their hatred extended to the common people, for the lower classes are always led by the superior classes. R4813:2, 5676:1, 2415:2

Our Lord was not maltreated by either the Roman governor or the Roman soldiers of their own volition; for they were so totally blind as not to appreciate the light which he displayed. R4813:5, 2415:2

Our persecution may not go so far as unto death, as in the Lord's case, yet it will extend to every member in some manner, even if no more than that of mocking and speaking evil of them. R2778:5

Before it hated you -- Consequently, by the operation of a natural law, we might say, it follows that "all that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution." (2 Tim. 3:12) F628

"If they have called the Master of the house Beelzebub, how much more them of his household?" (Matt. 10:25) R1652:3

The same spirit prevails respecting all the Lord's followers. Those who are honored today were generally dishonored and spoken against in their own day. NS135:5

John 15:19

Of the world -- Sharing its sentiments, methods, policy, etc. R2002:5

Love his own -- Greek, filio, "Duty love." Frequently translated "kiss" in the New Testament. By implication the kiss belongs to the family and implies a love that is more or less respect--exclusive and not for everybody, more of an individual or family love. R3949:5

Phileo or duty love is exercised by the worldly parent and child and neighbor on the selfish basis--"his own." R2807:3

But because -- Because every effort made by these to cleanse themselves is a reproof to others who are not striving to cleanse themselves. R5737:6
Their standard is so different from that of the world, and their viewpoint of everything so different, that it breeds an antagonism, a conflict of interests. R5513:4

Our presentations are clear cut, Scriptural; and the Scriptures are thus shown to be opposed to all sects and parties of Christendom, and their creeds are shown to be out of accord with the Word of God. R3924:5
The darkness of sin and error is in direct antagonism to the light of truth. The effect upon the enlightened world is to awaken opposition and thus to disturb those in sympathy with darkness. R4813:3

Even those who have gotten out of the extreme darkness of moral pollution into a kind of twilight of civilized reformation and moral reform, cannot endure the clear, searching light of the Gospel. R4813:5

Not of the world -- It is because they are justified, reckoned free from Adamic guilt, that they are in any sense of the word like our Lord Jesus, "his brethren," on a similar footing of divine favor and separateness from the world. E109

We are separate and distinct from the rest of the world. Our life comes from the Father--"the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ."

(1Pet. 1:3) The world gets its life from Christ. R5108:4

The Spirit witnesses, through the Word of God, that those who are the Lord's people are separate from the world; their hopes, aims and general spirit are different. E235

Any pleasure, no matter what, must be sacrificed if it conflicts with his duty and covenants to the Lord. It is this that leads to sacrifice: the world being out of harmony with God, his will and with those who are in harmony with God. R2461:3

The Church, consecrated believers, have escaped the condemnation which is still on the world. But the world is still under condemnation. SM665:1; NS356:1, 475:6

It is a mistake to reason as though the Church were part of the world, and, therefore, that the trial of the Church means the trial of the world. SM153:1

Since none of the various denominations is the true Church, therefore the history of none of these gives her history. Containing not many wise, scattered among many creeds, she is wholly unknown to the world. SM124:1

There are two great principles in operation: right and wrong, light and darkness. All the children of God are children of light. The world's condition is not that of light, but of darkness. R5099:5

We hold that the mixing of religion and politics is wholly wrong. The idea of opening political conventions with prayer, and appointing chaplains to offer prayers in Congress is farcical and hypocritical. R995:3

I have chosen you -- He sent forth the twelve apostles as his special representatives in the establishment of the Church, a mission which entailed upon them special obligations and duties as well as special privileges and opportunities. SM629:1; NS591:5

Called, chosen, separated from the world. NS356:2; SM719:2

An especially called-out class. R5856:3

Out of the world -- Or, to be separate from the world. R995:3

The Greek word ecclesia, translated by our word "church," signifies "the called out assembly;" those believers in Christ called out of the world, separated from its spirit, aims and ambitions. NS388:4

The Church class were of the world until they got out of it through Christ. Noah's ark represented Christ. Whoever comes into Christ comes into safety and salvation, out of danger and destruction. SM341:3

Therefore -- The storms which come to the Church are specially peculiar and different in some respects from all that come to the world. They come to us because we are not of the world. SM744:T

The world hateth you -- Whoever is satisfactory to the Lord need not expect to be satisfactory to the world. R5738:1

Someone has truly said, "Whosoever does well and is faithful and true, while others are dishonest and false, must expect to be opposed and hated. Envy is sharper than a serpent's tooth." R2501:3

If we wholly follow the Lord and so walk apart from the world in all things, as in it but not of it, we can only expect to be misunderstood and disliked. R2002:5

Not as some say: that a Christian life will not cost earthly friendships; that it is an extreme view of what is required of a Christian; that a course which produces such results is an unreasonable one. R5441:5

The peace of God is not an outward peace, for the Lord's people, individually and collectively, have most distressing experiences. The Church has always been persecuted. R4818:3

Where shall we go to find the world today? The civilized world is called the Christian world today. R811:3

Notwithstanding the fact that heretic-roasting has become unpopular and intolerable to the world, there are methods of privately and symbolically roasting, slashing, wounding and killing practiced by those estranged from God. CR80:3

John 15:20

Persecute you -- These persecutions and oppositions from the world, the flesh and the devil are the hammer and chisel and polishing instruments of the Lord which he is using in the development of the New Creation. D628

An effect on the saints of Satan's reign. R492:2; OV343:2

If they have smitten and spit upon and buffeted the Master, none of his servants should be surprised or complain if they should have somewhat similar experiences. R2781:6

If we have no opposition we lack the evidence of acceptability with the Lord. R5512:5

John 15:22

They had not had sin -- The light of his teaching gave a greater responsibility to those who heard it than to those who had not heard it. Their sin was greater in proportion to the greater blessing. R4988:6, 1962:3

No cloke for their sin -- It was for envy that they delivered him up and called for his crucifixion, because his works were good and theirs were evil. R5215:2

John 15:24

Both seen and hated -- The Scriptures plainly declare that blindness in part is upon all the children of Adam through the fall, yet from these words we must conclude that the Pharisees were not totally blind. None except idiots and maniacs are totally blind. R723:6

If the people had such responsibility because of what they heard and saw, how much greater was the responsibility of the twelve chosen apostles. R4909:1, 1962:3

John 15:25

That is written -- Quoting Psalm 69:4, "They that hate me without a cause are more than the hairs of mine head." R5215:1

They -- In the case of Jesus and the early Church, the persecution came from their brethren according to the flesh, the Jews. Since then they have come from their brethren too, not Jews, but Christians. R5215:2

Without a cause -- That is to say, without a just cause; they had cause enough to hate him, from their own viewpoint. R5540:6, 5215:3

So let it be with us, so far as possible, that the hatred, malice, envy and murder which may be poured upon us may be wholly unmerited by us, that our lives may be as nearly pure as possible. R2881:1

John 15:26

I will send -- The holy Spirit is Christ's representative in his Church. R158:1*

It was expedient for them that he should go away, pay the ransom price, be raised from the dead and ascend to the Father to make atonement for their sins, else the Comforter could not come. R2225:4

Spirit of truth -- Not the letter only, but the very nature of truth, the truth itself, should be their guide. R526:6

The Spirit, in this sense of enlightening and anointing, is given only to the Body of Christ. R218:5; SM602:T

The holy Spirit is the spirit or power or influence which proceeds from the Father and from the Son, the influence or power with which we are anointed. SM602:T; R2818:2, 370:6

Proceedeth from the Father -- Neither might they doubt the truth of the Comforter's teachings, for it is the spirit of truth, and proceeds from the Father. R372:2

In contrast, the spirit or influence of evil proceeds from the "father of lies." R370:6

Testify of me -- Peter refers to prophetic testimony respecting the prophetic work; God himself more than once bore witness to his Son; Christ testified respecting it; and, on leaving the earth, spoke of other witnesses: the Comforter, the apostles, etc. R691:2*

From the beginning -- Witnesses upon whom the people could rely as having been with him from the beginning of his ministry, and therefore manifestly acquainted with his doctrine and purpose. R1521:6

John 16

John 16:2

They -- Those who had charge of the synagogues were not always bad people, but they were mistaken, as was Saul of Tarsus when he hauled men and women to prison. (Acts 8:3) The same conditions exist today. R5172:6, 5479:2

Put you out -- The faithful servants of the Lord will be ostracized by the world. Their attitude of full consecration to do the Father's will is not appreciated; for to the world it seems to be foolish. It is a reproof. R5173:6

The creeds of men have been barriers to keep out those who understood the Word of God. R5172:6, 5479:2

During the present life the Kingdom of Heaven, the true Church of Christ, suffereth violence. The meek have not yet inherited the earth; they seldom get even a good slice of it. CR493:4

This was so much different from what they had expected, in a kingdom of earthly glory, no wonder they were despondent and silent. R102:2*

The sufferings of Christ include physical persecution and other less direct persecutions, ostracisms. The latter is perhaps most especially the portion of the Lord's people at the present time. NS460:2

Those who hear the voice of present truth, and who obey the call to come out of Babylon, are usually subjected to persecution. R5479:1

Of the synagogues -- The Lord and the apostles could go into the synagogues and teach the people there for a time, but as they shunned not to declare the whole counsel of God, they soon found little and finally no such opportunity. R986:5, 356:5

As Cain slew his brother Abel, thus Jesus and the apostles received their persecution chiefly from Jewish brethren. Similarly Christians have suffered martyrdom at the hands of fellow Christians. PD13/23

Whosoever killeth you -- Not only the Lord, the great Light-bearer, was persecuted unto death, but similarly all the light-bearers who follow in his footsteps must be sharers also of his persecution and suffering. E294
Literally fulfilled when Michael Servetus' horrible death at the stake was brought about by John Calvin. R5172:6, 5479:2

To suffer persecution for righteousness' sake is not because it is either reasonable or proper, but to serve the Lord's cause in the preparation of his elect for a future work of service. R2415:3

They expected earthly glory, and instead of this, he whom they loved and trusted now spoke to them of suffering and death. R102:2*

John 16:3

Have not known -- Though the darkness recognizes the reproof of the presence of light, it comprehends it not. They have always persecuted the light-bringers because they knew not our Father, nor our Lord, nor his Body. R375:4

John 16:4

These things -- Not all that they might expect (verse 12). The same is true of all the Lord's disciples. They see a sufficiency for one step at a time. Future difficulties are withheld that they be not overwhelmed by them. R4164:3

Ye may remember them -- He sought not needlessly to make them mourn, but as the time drew near, he sought to prepare them for the ordeal. R102:2*
It was not merely the disappointment, but there must have been coupled with it a terrible fear that he had deceived them; that they had loved and trusted an impostor. R102:3*

John 16:5

None of you asketh -- They did not ask where, for they believed his word, that he had come forth from the Father and that he would return to the Father who sent him. R4165:3

John 16:6

Sorrow hath filled -- What would they do without the Lord! How could the promise of the Kingdom ever be fulfilled if he went away! Had they been following a delusion for three years? R4165:3
While his departure remained to them an unsolved mystery, is it any wonder that sorrow filled their hearts? R102:2*

John 16:7

It is expedient -- It really was to their advantage, in their interest, that he should go away. R4165:4
The Church is better off under the teachings and comforting influences of the holy Spirit than they could have been under the instructions, and enjoying the presence of Jesus in the flesh. R102:3*
He was limited, as a man in the flesh, to the ordinary means of travel, and could only be in one place at a time, but the Spirit can be everywhere, and with any number of people at once. R102:4*
Their loss of his presence and teaching was to be their gain. R102:3*
If it was expedient that he should go away, would the same law of expediency not require that he remain away? An unanswerable objection to those looking for the Lord the second time in the flesh. R102:5*

That I go away -- I, personally. R1820:6

Had he remained with the disciples, present but invisible, and appearing to them and to all of his followers occasionally throughout the Gospel age, of what special advantage would it have been? R2819:1
Jesus could not make any use of the ransom-price while still on earth. He could not even bring his disciples into fellowship with the Father. Eii; R4165:4

The Comforter -- As the influence to be exerted would be sustaining and comforting, the Lord denominated this Spirit or power a Comforter, a sustainer, a helper. R4164:6

Not another person. No other person could deal with them better than himself. It was a spirit, an influence, a power which he would send. R4164:6

The Spirit is a Comforter, because he is a teacher, as was Jesus himself. R102:3*

Not another Messiah, or a different teacher. B265

Will not come -- Hence it would not have been possible for them ever to be more than human beings, ever to become spirit beings or partakers of the divine nature, together with its glories and honors. R4165:4

If I depart -- It was necessary for Christ to ascend and present the merit of his sacrifice before we could be accepted and adopted, before we could receive the holy Spirit. R4165:4, 2819:2, 2225:4, 218:4

I will send him -- The Greek could with equal propriety be translated "it." Nevertheless, we have no objection whatever to urge against the use of the word "him," since the holy Spirit or influence is of or from him, the Father. R4165:5

Properly enough spoken of in the masculine, even as the Father and the Son are represented in the masculine. R4164:6

After forty days, invisibly present except on a few occasions, our Lord ascended, and after ten days the holy Spirit from the Father came, evidencing to them the fact that their sins had been forgiven. NS802:6

The disciples were not to take Jesus' words too literally, but they should look for the deeper meaning. Furthermore, they could not expect to get that deep meaning until after the Master's ascension. R5088:5

The holy Spirit is Christ's representative in his Church. R158:1*

When he -- The Spirit of truth. E291; R375:1

The masculine pronoun is applied to the Spirit of truth because it represents God, who is masculine. E291

The word "he" could with equal propriety, according to the Greek, be translated "it." R4165:5

Is come -- Upon the Church. R877:3

He will reprove -- Operating through the Church, by precept and example. R877:3

The Spirit of truth in us constitutes us the light of the world. It is the light which shines from the true Christian which reproves, or condemns and opposes, the darkness of this world. E293; R375:2

The light borne in the world by the true Church has borne witness to the civilized world of the difference between right and wrong, and of a coming time in which the one will be rewarded and the other punished. A308

How? All of the Church, begotten of the holy Spirit and thus enlightened, are to let their light so shine before men that it will reprove the world.

That which reproves the world is the holiness of the Church. R4165:6

Not with that attitude which proudly says, "I am holier than thou," but which, on the contrary, says, "I am no better than thou, except for the influences of divine grace, which are free to all who will accept them." R2099:3*

The testimony of a holy walk and conversation cannot fail to be to the glory of God, to the reproof of unrighteousness, and to the fact of a coming judgment in which righteousness shall surely triumph. R2099:5*

The seal of the spirit is a testimony of kinship with God, but also manifest to others--in its silent eloquence convincing the world of sin, of righteousness and of a coming judgment. R2065:4*

The world -- The holy Spirit does not operate at all in the hearts of the world. The power of God operates upon hearts that are fully consecrated, separating them from the spirit of the world and using them in divine service. R4165:6

It has always been the Church's mission to shine out truth and reprove evil. And its reproof has always been chiefly to nominal systems and professors. R375:4

Of sin -- Showing those who see it what sin is, in contrast with righteousness. E294

That is to say, it will make the world conscious of its sinful condition. R4166:1

By showing their present life to be contrary to the will of God. R877:3

And of righteousness -- By showing them, by word and example, what right is, what the will of God is. R877:3

It is not enough that the world be convicted of sin; it needs to understand something about righteousness, the opposite of sin; that a considerable measure of it is possible, only hindered by the fallen nature. R4166:2

No one can come into accord with the Father through any works of righteousness of his own; but forgiveness, the covering of sins through the merit of Christ's sacrifice, is necessary. R4166:2

And of judgment -- The present life is not all that there is. There is a trial purposed in God's arrangement for the whole world of mankind, a judgment, a test. R4166:2; E294

By informing them that, though punishment does not always follow sin now, yet there will be a day and age in which every deed, whether good or bad, will have a just reward. R877:3

God has provided a day of judgment in the future for the world.

Nevertheless their conduct in the present life has to do with that future judgment or trial. R4166:3

John 16:9

Of sin -- In Christ and his Church the Lord has established a new standard for the world. The Church, not only by its words but also by its actions, is to uphold these glorious standards. R4166:2 Because they believe not -- Because they do not believe in and accept of Christ and his meritorious sacrifice for sin. R4166:3

John 16:10

I go to my Father -- Imputed righteousness which has been secured by our Lord Jesus through his sacrifice, which he presented before the Father.
R4166:3

John 16:11

Prince of this world -- The kingdoms of this world which, while professing to be kingdoms of God, are really under control of the "prince of this world," Satan. R5917:2

Not that he had any divine commission, but by getting possession of mankind through ignorance and misrepresentation of false as true, he has so blinded the world that he held the position of "god of this world." (2 Cor. 4:4) E113

The "world that now is," or "present evil world" (Gal. 1:4), is the one over which Satan is the prince or ruler. Because he is ruler of this present order of things, this dispensation is termed an "evil world."
Q827:T

Satan is still the prince of this world. R4350:3

Is judged -- Our Lord has already redeemed the world, thus securing the legal right to dispossess Satan, the prince of the present order of evil.
R4166:3

John 16:12

Many things -- These were the deep things of God, which only the spirit-begotten, spirit-taught children of God can understand. R5536:6, 5088:2

Jesus brought life and immortality to light through the gospel. (2 Tim. 1:10) Since Jesus' day yet more light shines, as he foretold it would. A22
At Pentecost, man for the first time knew the real purpose of the coming of Jesus to earth, and the object of his death and resurrection. HG512:6
Spiritual truths, those relating to our "high calling" to a spiritual nature, have only been brought to light since Pentecost. R715:6*, 493:3*;
A80

Including the deeper meaning of the Memorial --that those who appreciate the sacrifice of Christ may present their bodies living sacrifices and thus have a part with the Lord Jesus in his sacrifice, as his Body. R5871:2

Including the fact that it would be a long time, from the human standpoint, between the suffering of the Head of the Body and the suffering of the last members of the Body. R3346:4, 2765:1

They did not then know of the full import of the word baptism, or the word cup. R5421:4

To say unto you -- The promise of the Comforter, though it was ultimately to reach the whole Church through the ministrations of the apostles, was specially given to them. R1525:3

The intimation is that our Lord could tell heavenly things, but was not disposed to do so, because they had difficulty receiving even earthly things. We are to tell the heavenly things, but not to the natural man. R5065:6; F632

Ye cannot bear them -- Our Lord told his disciples only part of the truth. R4116:1

They had necessarily crude ideas regarding the manner and time of their Master's exaltation, and of their promised exaltation with him. Nor was full knowledge then necessary. B110

There was a reason why: the natural man cannot receive the things of the Spirit of God. Hence it was best for our Lord to leave the deep spiritual subjects until after Pentecost. R5608:4, 4827:1, 4314:3, 4166:4, 1524:4

This explains why our Lord Jesus did not present as deep teachings along spiritual lines as did some of the apostles. It was not his inability, but those truths would have been meat out of season. R4166:4, 5941:2, 4314:4, 1722:2

Hence the deeper things of our Lord's teachings were stated in parabolic form, which would not hurt them at the time, and which later they would come to appreciate and understand. R4166:4, 5455:5

When asked questions by his enemies who sought to entrap him, he avoided answering them or gave them evasive answers. R3675:1

Many of the Lord's people need to learn the lesson of secretiveness, not to tell everything that they know. R3674:6

We may talk of the deep things of God to those who are advanced in knowledge and prepared in heart for them. We are not to choke babes in Christ with strong meat, but to give them the milk of the Word. R3780:4, 3675:1; CR491:5

If we have the opportunity to present the message of salvation to a hungry soul, we are to be very careful not to tell him more than he is able to grasp, lest we do him harm rather than good. CR491:5

We are to be wise enough to know that all the truth even should not be mentioned at once. The Lord's people are eager to do good, but in the way that will be most effective, that will not stumble others. R5462:1

It is not wrong to withhold a part of the truth, if it is withheld for the benefit of the hearer. If the whole truth would do injury, then it is the course of wisdom and love to withhold the injurious element. R4209:5

It was not only the wisest way, but the best in every sense of the word, for God to arrange his plan so that only those in heart harmony with him would be able to appreciate it in advance of its fulfillment. R3910:4

Now -- Until after his death and resurrection and the descent of the holy Spirit. R1525:4

The revelation of heavenly or spiritual things dates from Pentecost, after he was gone. R507:1

When the waiting Church were baptized with the Spirit, at once the things which the prophets had written and which they had hitherto been unable to understand, began to be made plain to them. R541:3*

John 16:13

The Spirit of truth -- Which is, the "spirit of a sound mind." NS563:5
We see that God is a spirit, not that God is spirit; but we do not speak of the holy Spirit as being separate, as though it were a person separate and distinct from the Father and from the Son. R4165:5

Is come -- At Pentecost the holy Spirit came upon the Church, enabling all such to hear the deep things with appreciation, and some to teach the same. R1722:2

He will guide you -- Gradually. R1951:3

The apostles first, and through them, the whole Church. R1524:6; F218
The Spirit often uses human agencies for communicating truth. R231:5
He has sent it through channels long-since prepared: through the prophetic and typical teachings of the past opened up to us through the inspired words of our Lord and his inspired apostles. E267

The prophets and apostles had inspiration to write, and the Church has the same Spirit's help to understand. R66:6*

Not only true with the apostles: each one, presenting his Body a living sacrifice, has been accepted by the great Advocate, and then the offerer has been begotten of the holy Spirit to be a new creature in Christ.

R5088:3

This he has done through the writings of the apostles and by believers all through the Gospel age. R4827:1, 368:3

Such as have full confidence in his wisdom and love, as well as in his power to make all things work out according to his prophetic promises. B262; R969:2

When we consecrate ourselves, we have a sufficiency of knowledge for that step. As we proceed, we are guided into the knowledge of the truth. So apparently the holy Spirit guided Jesus himself. R5156:3

Thus the pathway of the Church all the way down has been one of increasing light. R5055:4

They only who have the supernatural light of God's Word shall not be in darkness, these will be guided into an understanding of "things to come," not discernible from the worldly standpoint. R820:5

As each feature becomes due; in advance of the world's knowledge, and in advance of the facts themselves. R2973:6

Though the prophet's writing was held sacred as the Word of the Lord and reverently read by fleshly Israel, their understanding of it fell far short of its true significance until the holy Spirit was given. R3052:3

The prophets' words are valuable as showing many of the interests of the Jew, but except in types and shadows, discernible only by the Spirit's revelations through the apostles, they contain little spiritual food.

R442:5

Scriptures written after Pentecost were devoted largely to the expounding of the Old Testament, adding new elements to make their symbols luminous.

The New Testament thus becomes the key to the Old. R715:6*

Sin, punishable with the second death, could not possibly have been committed prior to the Gospel age, since not until Pentecost did the holy Spirit come as a teacher to guide the Church into the truth. R261:1, 137:5*

Into all truth -- Our object as truth-seekers should be to obtain the complete, harmonious whole of God's revealed plan; and this, as God's children, we have reason to expect. A11

That is, all truth due. R309:2*, 1416:1

The present generation of Christians knows more of prophecy and God's plan than any generation preceding. R67:2*

The apostolic inspiration was threefold: a guidance into all truth concerning the divine plan; a refreshment of memory to recall and reproduce the Lord's personal teaching; and special revelations of things to come. F218; R1525:3

We want to learn what our object as truth-seekers should be: what we should seek, and what God promises we shall find. R1868:4

The Spirit witnesses that if you are a child of God you will not be ignorant of his Word, and will not only be in the light, as to present truth, but should know something about "things to come." R374:5, 231:5

It is the privilege of all who are "sons" of God to be so led of the Spirit and Word of the Father as to understand his purposes and be enabled always to be workers together with God. R1948:1

Will he guide a part of the Church into truth and a part into error? No! R309:2*

The promised power to know and to understand times and seasons, and all things pertaining to a proper witnessing, applies to the whole Church, from first to last. B120

The work of calling spiritual Israelites was the work committed to the apostles, leaving to the future the work of guiding them into all truth under the ministration of the holy Spirit. R2924:4

To understand the "mysteries" of Jehovah's plan. R1177:3

Some of the mysteries of God were due to be understood at once, and some more gradually down through the age, but the great unfolding we are expressly told was reserved until the close of the age. (Rev. 10:7)

R2208:2, 368:3

God's Word is a great treasure house in which he has hid in past time all knowledge needful to his children in all ages. It is a great store house from which his servants may bring forth things both new and old. R318:2

We have the advantage of the aggregate progress of the past, besides the fulfillment of the prophecies which clearly indicate our position on the verge of the glory of the Kingdom. R67:2*

True love on our part will manifest itself in obedience. Should one ask, How would it be if we should disobey through ignorance? The answer is, that the Lord has made provision against our ignorance. R5082:5, 2466:6 To become a member of one of the earthly churches means to believe neither more nor less than is stated in their creed. This leaves no room for the spirit of truth to guide into all truth. R1067:3

The cry of "change the standards," from those of the popes and councils to that of the Bible only, or "progress in religious thought," was the battle-cry which shook the Church of Rome in the days of Luther. R780:5 Not speak of himself -- Greek, heautou. The same word is frequently properly translated "itself." In our Common Version it is rendered in the masculine, feminine, common, and neuter genders. E170

"From" himself. (See Diaglott, Revised Version, Rotherham, and Young) R614:2

To speak "from himself" would be to speak independently of the Scriptures and to render them of only secondary importance. R614:2

That is, he shall not teach independently and out of harmony with my teaching. E265; R372:2, 1524:6

You are not to expect a new teaching, subversive of my teaching, but rather a full development and instruction along the lines of my teaching. E266

It will be only a channel, and not an authority. R4166:4; E266

We have no intimation in the Scripture that the Spirit of God leads his children through any other medium than that of his Word. R614:2

Whatsoever he shall hear -- That is, the same things which I have taught, or which have been heard, he will elaborate and teach more fully. R372:2; E266

That is, he will be my messenger to you. R1524:6

Shew you -- Revelations through the holy Spirit by the apostles. R3486:6

Things to come -- The favor of seeing further into the future than the world could look. It is both a comfort and a strengthener of faith to see how Scripture is being gradually accomplished. R362:1, 820:5

As future things become due to be understood by you, this Spirit of my Father shall guide you step by step into the full understanding of everything necessary and proper for you to understand. E266

We see, with wonderful distinctness of vision, his wise policy for the blessing of all in the incoming Millennial age. B16

A mark, seal or evidence of sonship, led by the Spirit of God. B169; E239; R310:5, 231:5

The things to come, as well as things past and present, are of great importance to the Church, not merely to satisfy curiosity, but in order that we disciples may more fully conform to the divine mind. R1354:1

First, that we may not be overwhelmed with fear; second, that we may be co-workers together with God; and, third, in order to be fully prepared to enter new relationships and their duties and privileges. R1354:2

Seeing beyond the trials and tribulations of the present time, we see the glories that will follow the present time of suffering. OV177:5

Students of the greatest of all sciences, divine revelation, the Bible, are guided thereby to search for its promised "things to come"; and, as promised, they find them, and thus are permitted to anticipate history. R2369:1

Only such truth-seekers, rewarded with the knowledge of things to come and the relationship of things past and present with those yet future, ever come to see the beauty and harmony of divine truth as a system. R1354:1

However willing Paul might have been to be nothing, his duty to truth led him to reveal that to him more than all the others the Lord had revealed more of those things to come. R5941:6, 1525:3; OV6:1

Showing both the future and the past. R5156:6

If, as we believe, the last members of the Body of Christ are now living, "the feet of him" (Isa. 52:7), it is time that we understood passages which clearly refer to the feet. R303:6

John 16:14

He -- The Father's holy Spirit, influence or power. E266

Shall glorify me -- By showing to the Church during this age more and more of the coming glory and glorious work of Christ, and the depth of the riches of God's plans to be fulfilled in him. R372:2

Receive of mine -- Those things written in the Scriptures. R614:2

It will be my things that will be shown unto you. R4166:4

The new teacher will not turn your minds from me to himself; but all of the teachings of the coming Comforter will be in harmony with my teachings, and to show you more fully that I am the Messiah. R372:2

John 16:15

Are mine -- There is no conflict between us: his plan is my plan, and his way is my way. R1524:6; 372:2; E266

There was a recognized oneness of possessions clearly expressed by our Lord. The Apostle says, God hath appointed the son the "heir of all things." (Heb. 1:2) R3161:2, 4166:4

John 16:16

A little while -- That which has seemed to us so long a time, is not really a long while from God's standpoint. A thousand years with us are in his own sight as yesterday, but a watch in the night when it is passed. (Psa. 90:4) NS457:3

The entire period of his absence from the divine standpoint, as compared to eternity, would be but a little while. R4707:3

From God's standpoint only six great days of a thousand years each have elapsed since Father Adam's creation in Eden. NS457:4

Not see me -- The world saw him not after his resurrection; they did not see him ascend. R579:6

A little while -- Our Lord refers to the nearly nineteen hundred years of this Gospel age as "a little while." NS458:4

Ye shall see me -- You shall be changed from human nature to divine nature in the resurrection and see me and behold my glory. NS458:6

We shall "see him as he is" (1 John 3:2), not as he was in the flesh. NS459:1

The world will not see him thus, because it is not the divine provision that the world in its salvation shall be changed from earthly to heavenly nature. NS459:1

The seeing that is promised in the Millennial age will be the result of the opening of the blind eyes of understanding. NS459:2

John 16:20

Ye -- Not applying to the world, in the sense of embracing the whole human race. R526:3*

Weep and lament -- In one sense it meant a little while of trouble, trial and vexation to his disciples and a little while of rejoicing on the world's part. NS459:6

Those in Zion who mourn over and lament the mighty power of evil in the high places both of church and of state. R1493:6*

Disciples of Jesus look at the fallen condition of the world with the same sentiments of the Master. They proportionately become more and more sensible of the sorrows of the world and of grief for the world. NS190:4
At his absence. R526:3*

Turned into joy -- As faith perceives God's "little whiles" and takes the divine standpoint, hope reigns and counts the years that remain until their full completion. NS460:3

He had been with them a little while, he would be gone from them a little while. The more they could enter into his spirit the shorter would be that little while of his absence. NS459:6

Not only in the resurrection, but even now, anticipating that resurrection in their faith, in their hope, and passing from death unto life as risen with Christ and walking in newness of life. NS460:1

Though some earthly joys, once held very dear, are sacrificed one by one, in their places come heavenly joys that far more than compensate for the loss. F678

In harmony with this, we find the Scriptures testifying that the followers of Jesus were always rejoicing, in everything giving thanks--even in trials, difficulties and persecutions. NS191:1

John 16:21

But as soon -- The sooner they are able to accept the situation by faith the sooner they may with joy anticipate the coming blessings. NS459:6

Delivered -- Greek, gennao. When used figuratively respecting the beginning of the work of grace, it should be rendered begotten; and whenever to the completion of the work in the resurrection, it should be rendered born. NS100:4

For joy -- The mother's joy when her pangs are over, and the child is born into the world. R303:5*

John 16:22

I will see you again -- I will reveal myself to you. HG374:2

Your joy -- So we, like his disciples, rejoice not merely that our Lord died as our Redeemer, but that he rose again from the dead, that he reveals himself at the end of the age and is spiritually present through the age. HG374:2

As when he went away, he lifted up his hands and blessed them; so, when he comes again, it is that their joy may be full. B154

It causes no surprise to know that the saints will be "joyful in glory," but it may strike some as peculiar that the condition of imperfection in which we groan should be a condition in which joy prevails with us. R2231:6
This joy is a foretaste of the blessings to come, and earnest of our inheritance, inspired by confidence in him whom we have believed, that he is both able and willing to perfect the work that he has begun. R2232:1

John 16:23

Ask me nothing -- Not that Jesus should be no longer recognized in prayer, but that the time was coming when, with the same freedom and confidence they had in approaching him, they could approach the Father direct, in his name. R1580:6

The Father -- While accepting homage, reverence, as the Son of God, he taught his disciples to make their petitions to the Father. E74

The world may not call God Father, but we "have received the spirit of adoption whereby we cry Abba, Father." (Rom. 8:15) R520:6

In my name -- Meaning more than merely by his authority. It means that the petitioner must realize his own unworthiness to be received at the throne, and therefore he presents it in the merit of Christ, his Redeemer. R1410:4

This excludes Jews, Mohammedans, the heathen, all who have not a knowledge of Christ and a faith in him as the Redeemer. R2252:3

John 16:24

Ask -- Ask in my name. R2205:5

Not that we should pray for a Pentecostal blessing, but that we should ask for the spirit of the truth, of a sound mind, for the wisdom which comes from above. R5202:4

Whatever may be our natural inclinations as regards constancy and definiteness in prayer, we must take our instructions from the Word of God. R5836:1, 2005:5

That your joy -- "In thy presence is fullness of joy." (Psa. 16:11) It is because prayer brings the soul into the presence of the Lord that it prepares the way for divine blessing and superlative joys. F679

The cultivation of the spirit of praise, thanksgiving and loving appreciation of all the manifest goodness of God, is the Christian's secret of a happy life. R2031:5

May be full -- There is a special blessing to those who look for a fulfillment of our Lord's promise. R5202:3

John 16:27

The Father himself -- Thus new creatures need no mediator between them and the Father. R4516:5; 3916:1

There is no need of a mediator between the Father who loves his children and children who love their Father. SM720:2; NS356:4

The very presence of Christ in the glory of his enduring priesthood is the only appeal that is necessary on our behalf: for Jehovah himself loveth us. R1829:5

Puny indeed is the arm of flesh that is raised against the saints in defiance of the Almighty. The supreme Judge of the supreme court has acquitted, once forever, all that are in Christ. R1141:4

When we come to really know the God of the Bible we find him the very personification of love. (1 John 4:8) NS524:4

Loveth you -- A true son of a beloved and approving father naturally experiences the fervor of tender emotion. Especially is this so of a true son of God who recognizes in his heavenly Father the perfection of every grace. R1914:3

The Father's love for them was phileo, duty love. He could not love them for themselves but exercised a duty-love toward them merely because they had attained a duty-love toward Christ and had become his friends. R2807:3

First, God loves the world. Second, in a much higher sense, he loves those who have accepted Christ as Redeemer and have consecrated themselves to him. This love can be lost, in part, or, eventually wholly. R3033:6, 5724:6; CR461:1

God loves the world with a broad, sympathetic love; but he has a special love for his true Church, those who have consecrated themselves fully to him during this Gospel age. OV423:3; R5276:1

Jesus is preeminently beloved of the Father; and the Bride class, the Church, are to be the members of Christ, their Head--members of the Beloved. R5694:5

We can readily see why our Lord Jesus was greatly beloved, for he expressed and fully manifested the Father's love. But it astounds us to know that the same love is exercised by the Father toward us! R5082:6, 5724:6

Not because of our character likeness, but because we have his Spirit. CR323:2

For such as have the evidence that they are sons of God, taught of God. NS507:5

While the realization of the Father's care for our interests is humiliating, in that it forces conviction of our weakness, yet, it is refreshing and inspiring in that it proves our Father's love for us. R5117:5

No matter how fiercely the storms of life may assail us, we must never let go of our anchor and allow ourselves to drift, but always remember such promises as these. R4817:6; 3331:2

To many it must seem as though the Lord were asleep, to many as though he were heedless or careless of his own; but the Lord knoweth the end from the beginning and will yet make the wrath of man to praise him. NS662:1

But only as we are able to realize an obedient faith are we able to apply these gracious promises to ourselves, or to rest therein. R3944:5

As we read the loving words of counsel, encouragement and warning, and the fervent prayer of our Lord for these disciples, whom he was about to leave in the world, we are constrained to say, Behold how he loved them! R847:3* Seeing the philosophy of why God cut off fellowship for a moment from his Son should fill us with appreciation for the privilege of returning to the Father's fellowship and love. R4173:2

Illustrated by the peculiar love Jacob had for Joseph. R3971:3

Ye have loved me -- Greek, phileo, duty love; the highest form of love the disciples as a whole could as yet appreciate, not yet having received the holy Spirit and its agape, or highest disinterested love and its character. R2807:3

Shall be scattered -- Specially true in the Harvest when the sickle of truth is doing its work of separation: not only wheat from tares, but the ripe wheat is also to be separated from the unripe. R1069:3*

I am not alone -- In his last moments, treated exactly like the sinner whose ransom he was giving, mental communion with the Father was interrupted; and he felt for the moment alone, separated from the Father, cut off and condemned. R960:1

Ye might have peace -- In your hearts. R1652:3, 4818:4

Do any of the faithful in tribulation for Christ's sake yet lack the peace? It is because you lack faith to lay hold of the promises. R347:6
If you have peace without the suffering, while all men speak well of you, beware! That is the peace of a sleep in which one dreams that he is filled, and awakes to find himself empty. R348:1

In the world -- But "in me ye shall have peace," not peace outwardly, but the peace of God abounding in the heart, enabling one to endure the trials joyfully. R4818:4

Ye shall have tribulation -- We may have both tribulation and the peace at the same time. R347:6

Charmed with the prospects, these are not daunted by the trials and difficulties of the way. HG652:3

Sufferings in the present time, for the truth's sake, are part of our wages. All who think they are running for the prize should look for these wages as a proof that they are so running. R347:3, 4730:3

Because "the darkness hateth the light." Because we are being more and more transformed, hence we do not find the satisfaction in the world that we otherwise would and that others find. R4761:2

There is no suggestion that we can escape similar tribulation. Indeed, if we escape the sufferings of Christ, we will be denied a share in his coming glories. R4417:4

There is no other way to enter the kingdom than by self-sacrifice, mortifying the flesh. In proportion as the new creature grows, the old creature perishes, until the sacrifice is completed in death. R5118:2

If you do not suffer you have good cause for fear that you are not living up to your covenant, that you are not confessing him and his Word before men by word or act as you should do. R347:5

Do you have any tribulation? Make sure it does not arise from natural causes. R347:2

Do you experience little or no sufferings of Christ now? Do you begin to count the time of suffering over? That is a serious mistake. It is one of the devices of the Adversary to put to sleep the saints of God. R347:3

There was no deception in the Apostle's preaching in Derbe (Acts 14), no teaching that they would prosper in business interests by becoming disciples or that Christianity would lead to wealthy and refined social circles. R4369:6

Contrasted, under Satan's reign, with "I have seen the wicked in great power, and spreading himself like a green bay tree." (Psa. 37:35) R492:3

Be of good cheer -- Do not allow these tribulations to make you discouraged. The glories far outweigh any sacrifices you may endure. Think of the joys and honors and privileges which will be yours if you are faithful to the end. R4761:4

The Lord is represented as a refiner of silver, watching his children in the fire, and thus he will purify the sons of Levi. (Mal. 3:3) These trials are often severe, but they have their attending joys. R199:4*
He knew the imperfection of these disciples; he knew how they would all shortly forsake him through fear, and leave him alone to suffer and die; and yet he loved them, and declared that his Father also loved them. R847:3*

I have overcome -- And Paul adds, "In that he himself hath suffered being tempted, he is able to succour them that are tempted." (Heb. 2:18) R2073:5*

And is able to succor us in temptation's hour, and will do so if we but abide in his love and seek his protection. R4417:4, 4761:4, 2124:4*

Having overcome, he has long since entered into his glory; and it is the Father's good pleasure to permit those to share that glory with him who, when tried and proved, shall not be found wanting. R2124:4*

His perfection is imputed to us through faith. And now this is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith. (1 John 5:4) R847:6*

When our Lord Jesus was at Jordan he was an overcomer. Yet, while an overcomer at the moment of his consecration, he did not win the prize of the divine nature until the end of his race-course. R5082:1

The difficulties of this way are to act as a separating principle to sanctify and refine a "peculiar people" (1 Pet. 2:9) to be "heirs of God and joint-heirs with Jesus Christ." (Rom. 8:17) A214

As soldiers under our great Captain, we have enlisted in no uncertain struggle, unless our own faint-heartedness or unfaithfulness should make it so. R4817:3

The Lord, our great Deliverer, is on our part. We have laid hold upon one who is mighty to save; yea, more, he has laid hold upon us. Neither will he let us go so long as our hearts are loyal to him. R4100:5

Remember that I am the Captain of your salvation. I have gone before you; remember my degradation before obtaining a share in this Kingdom. R4761:4

As surely as God's hand upheld the Head, our Lord Jesus, so surely will he bear up the feet. R1801:6

John 17

John 17:1

These words -- All four evangelists heard this discourse, but it was left to John to describe it. R1047:1*

Spake Jesus -- Evidently a public prayer, or it could not have been recorded. R2023:3

By example commending praying in the church, and even calling attention to the propriety of praying in such a tone and voice as could be understood by others present. R3640:3, 2251:6

Our Lord's entire life furnishes an illustration of what the Apostle commends to all the Church in the words, "Pray without ceasing." (1 Thes. 5:17) R3551:2

Proportionately as we grow in his character-likeness we will similarly pray without ceasing and in everything give thanks. R3551:2

Our Lord's constant attitude of prayer without ceasing did not hinder his more particular devotions when he turned aside from the affairs of life to speak to the Father in secret. R3551:2

And said -- A lengthy example of what the prayer might have contained had it been uttered by a nominal Christian believer today. R3551:5

May glorify thee -- The Son's anxiety to glorify the Father is most marked when, realizing he was approaching his dying agony, he exclaimed, "Now is my soul troubled; and what shall I say? Father, save me from this hour? Father glorify thy name." (John 12:27,28) R3161:3

May God, now in the end of the age, glorify his dear Son, our Lord, and with him his elect, to the end that his own holy name may be glorified. R4120:3*

John 17:2

Give eternal life -- Lasting life. R1235:1

It is the divine nature which our Lord has that he has been privileged to give to his followers. R4155:1

The heavenly Father is declared to be the Life-giver to all who attain spiritual conditions. Jesus, more particularly on his own account, will give eternal life to the world during the Millennial age. R3154:3

The context does not particularly state that the elect Church only is referred to. Rather, the fourth verse indicates that the world is here referred to. R3154:2

Though it is promised as a gift, yet it is only to a certain class that he ever agreed to give it--to those who by patient continuance in well-doing seek for glory, honor and immortality. (Rom. 2:7) R279:3, 142:5

Thou hast given him -- To those whose God's truth and providence have the effect of drawing to Christ and to righteousness--to those whom the Father approves. R1235:1

John 17:3

This is life eternal -- This will lead to endless life. R1053:4*

To gain everlasting life we must become the Lord's "sheep" and follow the voice, the instructions, of the Shepherd. R1878:4

Only those who have the mind of God will be granted eternal life--whether of the Church now or of the world in the next age. R5686:3 Continuing to grow in knowledge and love and devotedness to God, be accepted as co-workers and co-heirs with Christ. R1128:4

That they -- Not every one, but only the special class referred to in verse 2, mentioned in contrast with "all flesh." R1234:6

Might know thee -- To know the Lord signifies that one has passed from death unto life, is in relationship with the Father and has eternal life. NS167:1

The word "know" has the thought of appreciate or understand. R1234:6
To know God means to have intimate acquaintance with him, to be like him in character, to be able to view matters as he views them. R5686:3, 5277:1, 5118:5, 2137:4

There is a peace that comes from an acquaintance with God. NS524:3
More than knowing something of his plan and character. It means personal acquaintance and intelligent appreciation of his character. This requires partaking of his spirit--of holiness and of love. R4837:1, 2202:3; SM448:1
If a workman is known by his product, so the Master Workman must be known by his finished work. NS763:6

Only such as attain to this knowledge may have eternal life. NS809:4
All who will be fit for the Kingdom may be expected to have considerable clearness of understanding respecting divine things. NS745:5

No one can be so in harmony with God as to be fit for eternal life, except as he has attained a correct knowledge of God. NS763:4

How shall we know God? By study of his character. This knowledge at the present time is a secret knowledge--a "hidden mystery." HG447:2

Know his goodness, love, power and justice; knowing of God's character as revealed by Christ. R1128:4

Let us begin to know our Creator, for such knowledge is a step towards love for him and hence toward life eternal for ourselves. NS645:4

God himself is the very personification of those glorious elements of character which he demands we shall emulate, copy, pattern after. HG434:5

This is the knowledge that does not puff up, the wisdom that cometh down from above. The beginning of this wisdom is indeed the reverence of the Lord. R1919:6

The fear or reverence of God is our first knowledge. If rightly exercised, the Lord will reveal himself more and more. The reverence of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom, but is not the end of it. R3862:1

It is the knowledge of the Lord that is to fill the whole earth ocean-deep--not the knowledge of mankind, not the knowledge of sin, not human philosophy. HG434:4

A distinction should be recognized between a full knowledge of the truth and a full knowledge of God. The first must in due time come to all; the latter, that deep and full appreciation of God's character, is possible only to the consecrated. R1235:4

The wealth of our relationship to the "Great Shepherd" and his Son increases in our appreciation in proportion as we grow in knowledge. R4279:2

Such knowledge is not obtained instantaneously, but is the result of growth in grace. We grow in grace as we grow in knowledge, and we grow in knowledge as we grow in grace--the two keeping pace, as our feet in walking. R2895:5

The more obedient we are as children, the more intimate is our acquaintance with him. R5118:5

Their intimate acquaintance with God will be one of the evidences that they are the friends of God to whom he has promised lasting life. R1235:1

It is only as we realize something of the greatness and perfection of the divine character that we are properly able to estimate our own littleness and imperfection. R2137:4

Those convinced of his mercy, and yet always fearful, do not know him.

They think of him as moved by like passions with themselves, more or less depraved, more or less controlled by animosity. R2895:5

There is a difference between knowing about God and knowing God. R3550:3; NS763:4, 809:5

God is not pleased to reveal himself to any except those who have his Spirit; therefore the very highest ambition any of us could have would be that we might know him--know more of his wonderful love and peace--because this draws us nearer to him. R5276:4

If eternal life consists in the knowledge of God and of Jesus Christ, then how can there be a trial for eternal life where Christ is not known?

R1082:1*; NS643:6

This being so, not many have yet eternal life, for only a few know God, a "little flock." (Luke 12:32) CR489:5; NS167:1, 643:6, 809:4

God's plan is one both of revelation and salvation. He reveals himself as a means of eternal life to man. R21:1*

Is it not reasonable that a God who is love and no respecter of persons, and a kind and loving father, should provide for the education of every individual who ever came into the world? R33:3*

The majority of worshipers of all various sects worship, partly under the impulse of fear, but without particular knowledge of whom they worship and without any particular desire to become acquainted with Jehovah. SM79:2

Not only the world perishes because of a lack of true knowledge of the Creator, but many of God's people are similarly hindered. "My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge." (Hos. 4:6) NS645:5

Only those of a contrite heart may now see, now understand, the real character of God, his real purposes toward man. OV230:4; NS588:2

And Jesus Christ -- To know God we must know his Son. He is the word, the mouth-piece or declaration of the Father. And as Christ reveals the Father, the written Word reveals him. R493:2*

Through whom they may come to a knowledge of the Father. R3848:4

Even in the flesh he was "God manifest." (1Tim. 3:16) From his character in its perfection we get our earliest and truest idea of God.

R82:6*

Jesus Christ is most emphatically the way of God's approach to us, the channel through which light and salvation flow within our reach--"the way, the truth and the life." (John 14:6) R21:1*

Whom thou hast sent -- On so important a question as the equality of the Father and the Son, we must not rely upon any man's testimony except that of the inspired writers of the Scriptures. R5747:6

John 17:4

I have finished -- The substitute, the corresponding price for the life of Adam and all who lost life through him was paid. The other side of the great work of atonement yet remains--the converting of the world to God. R931:5

The work -- The Sin-bearer's larger work in blessing all the families of the earth. R3154:2

John 17:5

Glorify thou me -- Our Lord does not deprecate looking at the prize. Not that we have a right to insist that our efforts be rewarded, but we should think of the blessing which God has promised as "exceeding great and precious." (2Pet. 1:4) R5082:3

He did the Father's will without any thought of compensation connected with it. So with us. R5066:4

This prayer is more than answered in his present exaltation to the highest form of spirit being, the divine nature. A203; R627:1

With the glory -- The glory of our blessed Lord is of the same kind as that of the Most High himself--not merely first in executive authority, but first in executive power also, to accomplish the divine purpose.

R1283:4*

How rich he was in honor and glory. "He who was rich, for our sakes became poor, that we through his poverty might become rich." (2 Cor. 8:9) E87

To know the Father's plan and his privilege of cooperation in its execution was to appreciate it and joyfully engage therein. Willingly he laid aside the glory of the higher nature which he had had. HG292:5

Which I had -- Not signifying that he had no knowledge of his prospective share in the divine nature. He had the assurance of the Scriptures. (Isa. 52:13, 53:12; Psa. 110:4) R5066:1

He knew of the Father's proposed exaltation of him as a reward, but he did not mention this. NS813:4

To assume that Jesus is a fleshly being in heaven, bearing wounds and scars, is to suppose that the Father never really exalted him to the glory which he had with God before the world was. R5416:2

In his humility, he asked no higher glory. R5748:2, 5066:4, 5025:5

With characteristic modesty, he did not refer to the great glory promised him and expected, but to be restored to his previous station, as though he esteemed it honor enough to be the Father's agent. F65; OV354:4; NS439:1, 813:5

He asked no more. But God, who is rich in mercy and rich in his rewards, would not be content to give back to the Redeemer merely the blessings he had previously enjoyed and laid aside to be our Savior. SM787:T

The purpose of his coming into the world was not a selfish one. While the Savior is now exalted to a position much higher than his previous one, it was not with the desire for exaltation that he came. R5375:5

By induction he told of a pre-human existence. If he had no previous existence, if he had not a special birth, how could we understand these words except as deceptive? R5767:5, 5157:1, 4964:2, 4804:2, 1682:5, 1673:3, 1161:5, 1125:5; OV328:5; Q371:4

The Son of God experienced existence in three different natures--first, a very high order of spirit nature; secondly, the human nature; and thirdly, the divine nature. R1263:2*, 626:6

The Logos could be transferred to a lower condition, the human, and yet could preserve a good recollection of his previous experiences, and did so. R2477:5, 1916:5

Because the two natures are separate and distinct, and yet the one a likeness of the other, therefore the same mental faculties (memory, et.) being common to both, Jesus could realize his former glory. A203

In bringing our Lord Jesus into his earthly condition, God stamped or impressed upon his brain the knowledge or recollection of his pre-human condition. Q364:3

My surmise is that when our Lord was begotten of the holy Spirit and the higher things were opened to him, that in some manner it gave him memory and recollection of the spirit things. Q371:4

Temptations did not overcome Jesus, as they did the perfect man Adam, because of the fullness of Jesus' consecration which was the result of his intimate knowledge of the Father and his unbounded confidence in him. HG292:6

Our Lord's present condition is the heavenly, the spirit condition, not only as high a condition as before he came into the world, but still higher. R5269:1

Different than the theory of incarnation. Our Lord left the glory which he had with the Father and was found in fashion as a man. R5064:3

Christ did not die twice. His becoming a man was not by laying down, as in death, his preexistent life. He gave up the glory, and afterward prayed, "Glorify thou me with the glory which I had with thee before the world was." R77:5*

Without dying, our Master underwent a change of nature. R4098:2

With thee -- Our Lord was not originally created in the way the angels were; for he was the direct creation of the Father, whereas the angels were the indirect creation of God, through the Son. R5748:2

Before the world was -- A long way back into the past. But Jesus goes further. He tells us that not only "the world was made by him," but "without him was not anything made that has been made." (John 1:3) R1063:4*

John 17:6

The men -- The apostles. F213; R1521:6

Thine they were -- The disciples were true, God-fearing, consecrated men before they came to Jesus. Had they not had the spirit of consecration, they never would have left their affairs to join with John in his ministry. R4117:2

The words -- The doctrine. F213; R1522:1

Which thou gavest me -- If we, as our Head, "are led by the Spirit of God" even unto death, we also become "the sons of God" who will also "work in us to will and to do of his good pleasure." (Rom. 8:14; Phil. 2:13) R418:4, 164:6

John 17:9

I pray for them -- For those who had received God's word, and whom he called his friends, specially and affectionately loved. R1254:4

So far from being concerned wholly with himself and his approaching crucifixion, he was specially thinking of and praying for his disciples.

R3551:1

The ones he evidently prayed for were the eleven apostles, but the context shows that this prayer includes his faithful followers all the way down the age. R5358:2, 5319:3; SM75:T

These words were uttered by our Lord on the night of his betrayal, supposedly while on the way from the "upper room," where the Memorial was observed, to the Garden of Gethsemane. R5358:2, 5319:3, 4707:2, 3554:1, 3365:4

After the Last Supper, about midnight, before Jesus and the eleven passed outside the gate of Jerusalem and crossed the little brook called Cedron.

R2467:1

Because they would be his special representatives in the world. His prayer included also all of the 500 brethren who up to that time had believed on him with sincere hearts. R3551:5; NS75:2

He prayed not for the world because the world's time for trial for life eternal had not yet come; he prayed for the Church, because its time of trial had already begun, therefore it needed the divine grace. R3915:1

In due time our Lord will pray for the world, and he will be heard. "Ask of me; and I shall give thee the heathen for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession." (Psa. 2:7-9) SM666:1

Not for the world -- For sinners. QB815:2; NS675:6

His prayer was not on behalf of the world, but on behalf of his disciples and those who would believe through their word. His prayer for the whole Church was that the world might afterward have the opportunity to believe, in the times of restitution. HG336:6

He was about to die for the world; but he did not pray for the world because the salvation of the world was not yet due in God's plan. R5725:4; CR474:1

Not a contradiction of the Apostle's declaration to pray for earthly rulers (1 Tim. 2:1-4), but should rather be interpreted to mean, I am not now praying for the world. R3600:4

In none of Jesus' prayers did he ever pray for Caesar, or Pilate, or Herod; nor did he make any special effort to reach these with the gospel message. R798:6

Similarly our prayers and appeals do not need to be put forth on behalf of the world in general, but in the interest of those who have the ear to hear and the heart to respond to the heavenly calling. NS644:1, 675:6

It is not the divine plan to save people by praying for them, but, as the Apostle declared, It pleased God that through the preaching of the cross of Christ believers should be saved. (1Cor. 1:21) NS675:6

He did not come, at his first advent, to save the world; for he was sent only to those under the Law. HG16:2

Because the Lord's time for dealing with the world had not yet come--would not come until after the selection of the Church. R3551:5; CR21:4; SM163:1
Those who are doing slum work have the thought in mind that God is dealing with mankind in general now. The Lord is not now dealing with the world, but only with the household of faith. SM637:2

The work of the present age is not the world's conversion, but the selecting of his "Body," "his Bride." R961:3

The ransom-price is for the sins of the whole world. But the world has not yet gotten its share of the benefit, for it still "lies in the wicked one." (1 John 5:19) R4832:2, 3998:4; CR490:6; SM665:1

Not until first he shall have finished dealing with his own servants at his second coming will the glorious Messiah begin to deal with the world, and especially with his enemies. R5493:3, 5054:5

The very next day after he offered this prayer, he died for all the world--"he tasted death for every man." (Heb. 2:9) CR490:6; SM665:2

Since he knew that it would be more than eighteen hundred years before that due time would come, he could not with propriety pray for something so far in the future. SM665:2

John 17:10

Thine are mine -- Christ could say this as the Father's representative. Though the natural seed belonged to God, yet of Christ it is said: "He came to his own and his own received him not." (John 1:11) He came as Bridegroom and was rejected. R51:5

In them -- Our Lord does not selfishly grasp all the glory. On the contrary, he marks the progress of his body-members as they develop in character-likeness to himself and would have them all bound up together in the Father's love. R5213:4

May be one -- Not a oneness of person, but a oneness of heart, of mind, of purpose. R2781:4, 5725:4; CR249:1; OV114:5; SM493:1

It is a oneness which results from having the same mind or spirit; it is the same oneness that should exist between a heart union of man and wife: they twain are one. R369:5

Christ is not disappointed that the outward organizations are not united. The real Church is composed of believers who are at one with the Father and the Son and with each other. R2538:5; OV122:2

How can the Church remain one in the midst of the conflicting voices and influences that will arise? (Article proceeds to answer this question in depth.) R1828:6

Christ's followers, when united to him, will be given immortality--being made one with him in the same sense that the Father and the Son are one. Thus will their lives harmonize and blend, yet the Father will be greater than all. R715:4*

Would not the union of heart bind all those freed from Babylon? Would not the union of head under the guide of the spirit of truth soon be perfect?

Would not the union of labor be a natural accomplishment? R694:2

We belong to no earthly organization, only to that heavenly organization.

All the saints belonged to our church organization. There is no other recognized by the Lord. Any earthly organization which interferes with this union of saints is contrary to the Lord's will. R584:3

The fact that men today argue that division, sectarianism, is an advantage, and to the advancement of the truth, is the equivalent of the thing framed saying to God, "Thou hast no understanding." (Isa. 29:16) CR111:1

As we are -- Not one in person, but one in harmony, because he did not his own will, but the will of the Father. OV114:5; R5358:3, 714:6*; SM493:1 "The man Christ Jesus" was the perfect representation of the heavenly Father, so that he who saw the Son (who was the express image of the Father's person) saw the Father also. R2781:4

As our heavenly Father and our Lord Jesus do not need to be bound together by fear or threats, so likewise the true Church will need no such bondage to make them one in spirit or in doctrine. R4878:5

A oneness already existing between himself and the Father, but so far as his disciples are concerned it was and still is only prospective, and its full accomplishment is our ideal goal. R3160:3

He and his Father are one, even as he and his Church are one. R1278:3

He could thus be called "Immanuel"--"God with us." (Matt. 1:23) R9:2*

Practically, if not as theologians teach, Christ's words are true: "I and my Father are one"--one in purpose and in work. R9:2*

John 17:12

I kept them -- So long as our Lord lived, the Adversary, Satan, found no opportunity for sowing the seeds of error amongst the seeds of truth.

R2276:5

Our Lord mentions himself as a comforter (John 14:16), and at the close of his ministry, says to his faithful ones, "I will not leave you comfortless"--orphans, bereaved of a caretaker. (John 14:18) R3434:3

Son of perdition -- Jesus was to be the judge. He said that it would have been better for that man if he had never been born. (Matt. 26:24) This would not be true if Judas were to have an opportunity during the Millennial age. R5683:3, 4909:3, 4906:6, 1800:6

Should Judas be granted eternal life under any circumstances or after any experience, his birth could not be considered a disadvantage to himself.

R1962:6

Son of destruction. This would tend to prove that Judas' case was a hopeless one. But we find that Jesus applies just as strong names to the scribes and Pharisees. R2283:3*

Judas was a minister of Christ before he became revealed as the "son of perdition." He was not an infidel, denying Christ, but an apostle confessing Christ to the very end. This is not atheism, but hypocrisy.

R639:2*

Strong evidence of the wilful intention which marked Judas' crime.

R4906:6, 1962:5, 1800:6

Implying that Judas had enjoyed a sufficiency of light and knowledge of righteousness to constitute a trial, and that his deliberate sin against such light and knowledge meant the second death. R4907:3

Whose place was subsequently filled, through the Lord's appointment, by the Apostle Paul. (Rom. 1:1) R2657:5

John 17:14

Thy word -- His teachings were of things he had already learned of the Father. E50

Hath hated them -- The blessings of the Lord upon his faithful ones more than compensate for the losses of earthly friendships and wealth and fame, securable to them by their natural talents in other directions. NS104:2

Not of the world -- The Church, consecrated believers, have escaped the condemnation which is still on the world. (2 Pet. 1:4; Rom. 8:1-4) SM665:1
The sons of God are not of the world, but chosen and separated from the world by the divine call and spirit-begetting. R5760:5, 4515:5, 4495:4
Therefore the world disrespects us, and offers us no places of public influence. R2695:5

Faithfulness to the Lord and to his Word and adherence to all the principles of righteousness are sure to bring the Lord's people more or less into a condition of separateness from the world. NS104:1

John 17:15

Shouldest take them -- In harmony with this prayer, he has not during the age separated his people from the world, merely separating them so far as the heart is concerned. R3552:1

Out of the world -- We are to be in it, not as citizens, but as aliens--but law-abiding aliens, rendering unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's, and unto God the things that are God's. (Matt. 22:21) R2002:4, 424:3

A wiser course than a man of wealth abandoning his superior opportunities to distribute his wealth to others and work as a day laborer. HG552:1

From the evil -- The evil that is in the world. HG552:2

Out of sympathy with it. The same is true today, and that these in the world but not of it are now, in the Harvest time, being called out of Babylon. R3552:2

The Psalmist (119:9) shows that the only way for a young man to keep his course of life clean is to take heed thereto according to the Word of the Lord. R2146:3*

They -- The exception, the very small minority, the Church. R2550:2

Not of the world -- The prayer points out two things: how the Lord's followers will be kept--by the power of the truth in their hearts; and, secondly, why--because they are not of the world. R3552:3; SM391:1

Therefore all our experiences must be regarded as Christian, for correction in righteousness and for educational purposes. R5117:6

It is because these are justified, reckonedly free from Adamic guilt, through the blood of Christ, that they are in any sense of the word like our Lord Jesus, on a similar footing of divine favor and separateness from the world. E109

Let us not be ashamed of the name "saints," if it present before our minds saintship, holiness, separation from the world. It will help us the better to live separate from the world. R2987:5

Those who fully consecrate their lives are counted as separate and distinct from the world. OV377:5

The Church must not resist the powers that be except in matters of conscience. God's army is now being marshalled and his Church should stand aloof from both the governments that be and their opposers. R362:5, 3607:5

The Lord's people occupy largely the position of spectators in respect to the course of this world--its policies, politics, conquests, its frantic efforts to carry out its selfish projects. R5706:2

Therefore their participation in elections is to cast their vote for Jesus. NS263:3

The world does not understand us--they do not know that we belong to a different kingdom; but we understand them. R5461:2

The losing of the clear line of distinction between the Church and the world has been a serious injury to true Christianity. R3551:3

The world does not approve the followers of our Lord because the darkness hateth the light, because the standard of the Royal Priesthood is higher than the standard of mankind in general. F133

A point very generally overlooked by professed Christians, who seem to think they should be part and parcel of the world and sharers in its aims, ambitions and self-imposed responsibilities--political, social and military. R2002:2

The promises for the world in general have no reference to the class being chosen out of the world during this Gospel age. The promises to these are all spiritual. They are called with a heavenly calling. R5575:1

It is along this line that many in the nominal churches justify themselves in respect to the worldly forms and customs introduced--fairs, theatricals, games, etc. Footstep followers of Jesus must reject any such compromise with the world. R3719:5

Therefore the Church is not included in the term "men" in 1 Tim. 2:5--"one Mediator between God and men." R4341:2

This distinction between the Church and the world is marked in the picture of the two animals offered on Israel's Day of Atonement. R4340:2

The Church class were of the world until they got out of it through Christ. As Noah and his family were saved from death by coming into the ark in obedience to God, so the Church of Christ are saved from Adamic death by obedience to God. SM341:3

Though they are not of the world, but separated from it, they are not to forget that this separation is not to cultivate in them a pride of aristocracy, but for the purpose of blessing the world. R2099:3

The salvation and reconciling of the Church is one thing, and the salvation and reconciling of the world is quite another thing. These are two different salvations. NS822:1

Because we of the Gospel Church "are not of the world," we are an exception to the rule. R1043:5*

The Church, selected from the world during this Gospel age, is not reckoned as a part of the world. This Gospel age has not been the world's day of trial or judgment, but the Church's only. R408:6

I am not of the world -- God never approved calling the kingdoms of the world by the name of Christ. Deceived by the church nominal, these nations are sailing under false colors, claiming to be what they are not. A269
Although the merit of Christ's sacrifice is ultimately to be applied for the cancellation of "the sins of the whole world," he did not in any sense or degree lay down his life in serving the world. R4492:3

John 17:17

Sanctify them -- The sanctification of the heart and the life produced by the truth. NS168:6; R4690:6

Sanctification does not mean perfection in every thought, word and act of life. It does mean perfection of intention. NS169:1

The end of this sanctification would be unity of heart, of mind, of purpose--very different indeed from the unity of the "Dark Ages," or of the unity of federation now proposed. NS375:6

With the under-priests the Father deals directly, yet through their Advocate. Their call is of God. (1 Pet. 2:9) Their justification is by the Father. (Rom. 8:33) Their sanctification is of God. (1Thes. 5:23)
R4528:6

The word sanctify has the significance of "set apart, made holy." There are two parts to this work. The first we do, we set ourselves apart; the second comes gradually, a deeper setting apart, done by God. R5319:3; CR437:3

Sanctification is of two parts--first a consecration, and second, the performance of that consecration in our daily life. R374:6

Sanctification has not only two parts, namely, man's part of entire consecration, and God's part of entire acceptance, but it has additionally an element of progression. F133

There is a sanctifying that takes place before the real sanctifying begins. The Lord said to the people of Israel, "Sanctify yourselves and I will sanctify you." (Lev. 20:7,8) R5320:1, 200:2

Sanctifying is a gradual work, lasting throughout the Christian's life.
R5320:6

The Lord's people are to be more and more sanctified through the truth. The word sanctify conveys the thought of making saintly, holy. Every day of our lives should make us more sanctified--more fit for God's service in the future. R5321:1

All thus sanctified are reckoned new creatures in Christ, and are addressed as "them that are sanctified in Christ." (1 Cor. 1:2) R375:1, E243

Separate them from the evil. R2146:3*

The only sanctification recognized in Scripture is a sanctification of the spirit (mind) through the belief of the truth. R377:4, 4690:6, 5507:1

A sanctified Church is composed of sanctified individuals, who are not called for their own sakes alone, but for a glorious purpose in God's plan; and sanctified, not because of their own merit, but because of their relationship to Christ. R69:2*

Seek to produce in others what you yourself have enjoyed of the sanctification which is of the truth and which affects and influences all the affairs of life. NS171:4

While we should not pray for the conversion of our families, neighbors and friends because the Lord chooses the Bride, we may tell them the good tidings and thus bring to bear upon them the sanctifying power of the truth. NS676:2

Through thy truth -- Greek, en, with the primary significance of "in," but also used to signify "through," "by," "with" and "under." R826:3

"In truth"--see Diaglott, Revised Version and Rotherham. R444:4*

The only way to possess the full harmony and union of the spirit is by possessing a knowledge of the truth. R694:1

The channel of sanctification. R5320:4

Fear may bring torments, but only the truth can sanctify and happify. NS620:2

To be forearmed with the truth is to be safeguarded against error. To be ignorant of the truth is to fall a prey to the error. NS862:3

While the spirit of the truth is to be sought, and not merely its letter, yet the careful study of the letter of God's word is needful, together with an honesty of heart that delights to know and do the will of God. HG328:4

God gives us in his Word counsel and admonition. As these enter our heart and impress themselves upon us, we are constrained to work out in ourselves the peaceable fruits of righteousness and holiness. R5877:4

The Spirit applies to our reason, and uses the Word of God as its agent. R200:4

How evident it is that God's people need more and more rely upon their Father's Word, and not upon feelings and impressions and "voices" which generally, if not always, deceive. HG328:4

The truth has a sanctifying power in the heart because it fills the longings of the heart. Our hearts need not only to be cleansed, through justification; but also to be filled with the Lord himself. R3552:5

Our hearts were filled at the beginning, but the capacity of our hearts was small. As they grow, as they enlarge, the sanctification must keep pace. F133

All of us should be studious to obey the truth, remembering the other statement of the Scriptures, "He that loveth or maketh a lie" is not of the Lord. (Rev. 21:27) HG119:6

The message of God received by faith is accepted to be the truth, to be true knowledge, and wherever it goes there must be a sanctifying, separating power. NS505:5 Let us not fall into the error of some, of presuming that the sanctifying work can go on better without the truth than with it. R1628:5; SM292:2; NS862:4

Error never sanctifies, but is always injurious. OV295:4; NS125:1, 440:1 For example, the error of death-bed repentance removes the incentive to become saintly. NS575:4

The general endeavor seems to produce sanctification by fear, superstition, etc., but this is a failure. NS168:6

In contrast to sanctification, the net result of the horrible doctrine of eternal torment is the vilification, misrepresentation and nullification of the power of God's Word. NS409:1

Truth is the mirror in which we behold--recognize--understand God, and we are sanctified through it. R493:5*

It is nowhere said that he was sanctified by the word of the prophets. For sanctifying power, Jesus pointed us forward to the truths to be revealed by the Spirit through the apostles. R442:4

Isaiah compares this sanctifying and life-giving draught to water, exhilarating wine and nourishing milk. (Isa. 55:1-13) R1363:3

Pictured by the laver in the Tabernacle. As water cleanses the natural, so truth cleanses the spiritual. As water is the life of the natural, so the truth of God develops the life spiritual. R117:5*

Thy word -- The source of all true knowledge. (Prov. 2:6; John 6:45) R3550:3

The Word of God is the treasure-house of our Father, in which he has stored truth to sanctify the Church in every age. R200:5

We cannot be sanctified without the Word of God. Nothing else can take its place. SM362:3

Let us all be students of the Bible, and let us be honest and loyal, not handling the Word of God deceitfully. OV399:1

The mistake of some people is to suppose that to have a Bible in their possession is to have the truth in their possession. The Bible is not the truth; it is merely the expression of the truth. The truth is the spirit of the word--its meaning, its intention, its real essence. NS169:4

It is not the truth of geometry or trigonometry or geology or astronomy or any other science that we are to be diligent to study and be grounded and built up in, but God's Word. R5558:5, 5320:1; NS169:2

Not truth in general, along different lines, but rather that they should have knowledge of the divine plan and purposes. R5319:6

The teachings of all the Lord's representatives should be along this same line--not human speculations and philosophies, but the Word of God. R3726:6

Our Lord prayed that the work of divine instruction might go on in them, as it is written: "They shall all be taught of God." (John 6:45) R5319:6

The strongest and most faithful Christians in every period of the world's history have been those who loved and revered the Bible, and who went to it when they desired counsel from the Most High. R2240:6

No contradiction of other Scriptural statements which say that we are sanctified by Christ, or by the holy Spirit. E243; Q124:3

The sanctification of the Church is accomplished by the Spirit of the Truth, imparted to the consecrated ones through the Word of God which he provided for this very purpose. E243

Our Lord Jesus is the one who applies the truth to the Church, which is his Body. This application of the truth--teaching us and leading us in the right way--is his way of sanctifying. Q124:2

The divine Spirit is the sanctifier, and the Word of Truth is the instrument. R197:3*

God has so much more to tell us than we have to tell him. Let him speak much and long and often through his Word. R597:6*, 317:1*

Is truth -- The Word of God is the only real authority of divine truth. Neither the Church collectively, nor church councils, nor individual members of it, except for the twelve, are any authorities. R1584:5

John 17:18

I also sent them -- Of course the apostles were specially sent, but all the Lord's followers are sent in a sense. We are not sent until we are separated from the world. Then he gives us a work in his name and for his cause. R3552:6

Every true follower of Christ, male or female, is authorized to teach and to baptize according to this general call to the ministry, commission and ordination. R1541:4

John 17:19

I sanctify myself -- He separated himself from that feature of the glory and dignity of the Father's reward that his followers might have a share in it. R3553:1

That they also -- Our Lord realized his disciples were to be developed to be sharers in his glory, joint-heirs. R3552:6

At first thought, such a sharing might appear to lessen the great glory of Jesus, just as the appointment of the seventy elders of Israel to be associates with Moses seemed to diminish his authority. R3552:6

John 17:20

For these alone -- Those then present with him. R3160:2, 1254:4
The apostles. F213; R5358:2, 1522:1; HG15:3; OV395:6

For them -- The entire previously marked-out "Church." R827:5
The entire Gospel Church--to the end of the age. R1522:1, 4965:5; F213;

CR367:5

Therefore giving divine authority to expound God's Word. (Isa. 61:1)

OV161:1

Which shall believe -- Five hundred had believed on his word. SM666:T

All who should believe on him so thoroughly, so sincerely, that their faith would separate them from the world to be his disciples. R3551:5; SM582:1

Nor need we suppose that the love for the twelve applied to them exclusively; rather, that he viewed the twelve as representatives of "them also which should believe on him through their word." R2449:2; F462
The first requirement of the New Testament of all who would share its blessings is faith--not a general faith, but a faith in God and in Christ Jesus. R2220:2

He ignored "sinners" completely. The reason why some good Christian brethren have not had their prayers answered is because they ask amiss. (Jas. 4:3) QB815:3; NS675:6

Through their word -- The testimony on which faith rests is not man's, it is God's own. Those who live the life of God, breathe his spirit, conform to his law, do his works and speak his words, are the agency for the extension of his testimony. R1329:1

The Lord honored the twelve and their words, and prayed a blessing upon us all through them. R4097:2

The "very elect" he directed to give the same message to others, not for the conversion of the world, but for the calling, instruction and edification of "the Church, which is the Body of Christ." SM44:4

John 17:21

May be one -- The true Church of Christ, although of many persons, is ultimately to be one--not one person, but one in faith, hope, knowledge and service. R1904:5

Exhorting his disciples to have the same mind, the same will, the same spirit, which actuated him--the holy Spirit, the mind or disposition to do the will of the Father in heaven. HG661:4, 592:6; R5725:5, 802:5; CR474:2

In heart and purpose and love. R1522:1; F213

Oneness of spirit, oneness of purpose. R5352:2

The one purpose which is common to both the Father and the Son is the Father's purpose, which was gradually revealed to the Son in due time and order. R3160:3

The spirit or disposition and purposes and aim being common to us all. R3162:4

A oneness of confidence, of sympathy, of love, of honor, of mutual possession. (The article elaborates on each of these aspects.) R3160:3
Fulfilled throughout the age. All who have been truly his have had a oneness of heart, of purpose, of spirit, with the Father and with the Son. R3553:3

Surely not that his disciples might become one person, but that they might be one in spirit, in mind. They become one in mind and purpose by each giving up his own will to do God's will. R5749:1, 5358:3

We are not speaking here of the mysterious doctrine of incarnation, but of the equally mysterious and important doctrine of exaltation. R30:6*

All who are thoroughly loyal would desire to do the Father's will, desire to lay down their lives in the Father's service. And this desire would make them one. R5358:6

If we can now recognize one true Gospel, we may all reunite in harmony with this prayer. SM121:T

The true Christian union is that in which each individual believer in the ransom for all is fully consecrated to the Lord; and all thus united to the Head and imbued by the truth with his spirit must be one. R1818:1

We find that, necessarily, because of the differences of our flesh, we cannot in everything see exactly alike. Now we can only see more or less obscurely. R5359:1

The marriage. HG15:3; R91:2*, 48:4*

The Church, made one with him as he is one with his Father, constitute the seed--"Heaven's conquering army." (Rev. 19:4) The work of the seed must follow the complete development of the seed. R22:6*

The oneness of the divine family is represented in the cover of the Ark of the Tabernacle--the "Mercy Seat" was the lid, and hence a part, the top or head of it. So is Christ the head of the Church, and the head of the entire Christ is God. T126

The tendency in church federation is toward the enforcement of their views upon others. However good their intention, the results of these efforts will not be advantageous or in harmony with this prayer. NS375:6

As thou -- Here the oneness of the Church is specifically stated to be exactly the same as the oneness between the Father and the Son. The oneness of the Church is oneness of mind and not a personal oneness. E75 Cannot mean one in person, but in fellowship. R30:6*

I in thee -- Jesus and the Father are one because Jesus surrendered his will to the Father's will, saying, "Not my will, but thine, be done." (Luke 22:42) R5749:1, E75

Thy Spirit, or disposition, and purposes and aim being common to us all. R5213:5, 694:2

Be one in us -- While such is the oneness between the heavenly Father and all his anointed sons, it is blessed also to mark the same oneness between Christ Jesus and his anointed brethren. R3161:6

These wait until their foreordained number is complete, to enter into the honors and joys of their Lord--to be "glorified together" with him. R828:2

That the world -- When the Church is made one. R555:6

This unity is shown to be not only the Christian's life and hope, but also the basis of the world's hope. Certain it is that the world cannot be saved until after the Church is glorified. R91:2*

The ultimate purpose of this selection, both of the apostles and of the entire Body of Christ. F213; R1522:1

The development and exaltation of the Church is of first importance in order that, under the future leading and government of the perfected and glorified Church, the world may believe. R1332:6

Christ prays that he be glorified, that believers also be glorified "that the world may know" that the Father hath sent him. When that prayer is answered, then will believers be "read and known of all men"--the epistle of Christ. (2Cor. 3:2) R1323:6*

May believe -- Then, in due season. R798:6, 3205:5; NS192:6

In the next dispensation. R555:6

When the Church is perfected in the divine nature. R442:3

Jesus and the apostles kept Church and world separate in their teachings.

Regarding sanctification, the two are alike, yet different. The Church consecrates first in the Gospel age, the world afterward in the Millennial age. R442:3

John 17:22

I have given them -- Instead of feeling jealous that any others should be exalted to the divine nature, this prayer declares his full acquiescence in the plan, his hearty cooperation and his joy to have it so. R3553:1

Even as they once bore the image of the earthly, human nature, they shall bear the image of the heavenly. A211

They may be one -- Were we to believe that God and Christ were one being, we would be shut in to the fact that all the members of the Body of Christ will ultimately lose all personal identity in Christ, and be in God. R802:6*

As we are one -- One of the best proofs the Lord and the Father are not one in person. He could not have prayed for all the Church to be one in person. R5358:3

The Head of the under-shepherds is Christ, the Good Shepherd, and the head of the Good Shepherd is the Great Shepherd, and the flock is one. R2431:4, 4754:2

John 17:23

Be made perfect -- The thought is that of completeness. He is referring to the end of the age, when the work will be completed, perfected, when they will all be one. R5358:6

The world may know -- As a result of the perfecting of that one Body, in due time. R827:5

But this statement can only be apprehended by becoming one with the Father and with the Son. R2431:4

Hast loved them -- We were sinners and had nothing in us worthy of his love. But we have been washed and cleansed, and however imperfect our earthen vessels may still be, our hearts are perfect in his sight. R3161:6

As thou hast loved me -- When the world shall come to understand the matter fully, they will all know the truth of the Lord's word, that the Father loves the Church as he loves the Lord Jesus. There is nothing selfish in our Lord. R5359:1

He did not say, "They will always be inferior to me. They will never have the glory that I shall have." R5359:1

If we follow in the exact footsteps of another, we always arrive at the same destination. R233:3*

John 17:24

I will -- This is not a petition, but a declaration of the Lord's will, as though he were saying, Father, I understand that this is thy will, and I will it also, acquiescing in this great and liberal arrangement. R3553:4

Whom thou hast given me -- Isaac chose not his own bride, but Abraham chose for him through his servant, illustrative of the fact that God, the Father, through his Spirit (the servant) is choosing the Bride of Christ. R161:2

Be with me -- He would have them with himself, beholding and sharing the glory which the Father has conferred upon him as a reward for his loyalty and obedience. R5213:4

The hope of the Church is that she may be like her Lord, "see him as he is" (1 John 3:2), and "be partaker of the divine nature" (2 Pet. 1:4), and share his glory as his joint-heir. R5822:2

Behold my glory -- It is written that "we shall see him as he is"--not as he was. (1 John 3:2) R1806:2, 1510:5

The glory of his mighty creative works, with all the other evidences of his Father's love. R3162:1

John 17:25

I have known thee -- The key to this wonderful knowledge of heavenly things is found in John 3:31,32: "He that is of the earth is earthy, and speaketh of the earth; he that cometh from heaven is above all, and what he hath seen and heard, he testifies." E91

He had been with the Father from the beginning and he knew his love and goodness; he had seen the manifestations of his power; he had marked his loving-kindness. So we have come to know and trust him. R5432:2

Considering the length of time of creation, we may have some idea of our Lord's long and intimate acquaintance with Jehovah. R1060:1, 446:2*

Thy name -- Thy character, thy greatness, thy goodness, thy love, thy benefactions. R3553:5

And will declare it -- Still further, as they are able to bear it, as they grow in knowledge of the truth. R3553:5

The love -- Christ's work is not to purchase the Father's love, but to manifest it. R9:2*

Which not only redeemed us, but since has called us to joint-heirship with our Lord. This love would chasten us rather than permit us to fall away into second death, and will finally deliver. R3553:6

Be in them -- In proportion as this love of God dwells in us, in that same proportion we will have a responsive love which will delight to do those things pleasing to our Father and acceptable to our Lord. R3553:6

John 18

John 18:1

When Jesus -- Implying a considerable tarrying in the upper room after the supper was ended, probably to near midnight. R2464:3, 2467:1 The brook Cedron -- The valley of Kidron is otherwise known as the Valley of Jehoshaphat, and is the symbol and reminder of God's promise of a resurrection. R1400:6

Where was a garden -- Gethsemane, the place of the oil-press. R4707:2 Our Lord probably went to the garden because it belonged to a friend and because in the open his disciples would have a better opportunity for escape from arrest. R4169:1, 4707:2, 3885:2

Perhaps a public garden, or possibly the property of someone friendly to our Lord. R2467:1

There are about six or eight very large olive trees in this garden at the present, giving evidence of being at least one thousand years old, but possibly much older. R2467:1, 3885:2

He entered -- Having first comforted, counseled, and prayed for and with his disciples, his next strong impulse was to seek a solitary place for prayer and communion with God. R1801:1

If the Lord needed often to seek retirement from the busy scenes of his active life to be alone with God, surely we need to do so. R1802:1

And his disciples -- Because he loved them, and knew they loved him, he permitted them to accompany him to the place of prayer, that they might watch and pray with him. R1801:2

John 18:2

Judas -- John's account omits the particulars of the betrayal given by the other evangelists. Possibly the loving disciple felt so much ashamed of the facts that he preferred not to mention them. R2468:1

Which betrayed him -- So with the members of the Body of Christ; it must needs be that offenses come, but this makes none the less sinful the conduct of those who have to do with such betrayals--especially if they be "false brethren." R2469:4

Knew the place -- It is presumed that, under the guidance of Judas, they went first to the upper room which our Lord and the apostles had left less than an hour before. R2468:1

Having received a band -- The guide of a band of temple guards, or temple policemen, and their followers. R4168:6

We must wholly disagree with the common thought that this "band" consisted of an army of three to six hundred Roman soldiers. R2467:6, 2779:1

To our understanding this band which apprehended Jesus was very similar to the one mentioned in John 7:32-46. R2467:6, 575:6

Lanterns and torches -- Needed for the searching of the foliage, although the moon was at its full. The midnight hour was best, because Jesus' arrest in the daytime might have led to a tumult. R4168:6, 2468:4

And weapons -- Sticks and swords, such as were common to the people in general. He does not mention spears, which would probably have been a part of the armament of a band of Roman soldiers. R2467:6

John 18:5

Judas also -- Judas had been doing some sowing of evil thoughts for a considerable time before his thoughts took outward shape in evil acts. R2468:2, 2779:2

Many amongst the Lord's disciples, in a less degree, commit a crime very similar to that of Judas, being willing to sell the Lord for salary, social position, honor amongst men, popularity and titles. R2779:3

John 18:6

Backward and fell -- Overpowered for a time by the majesty of his presence, though he rebuked them neither in word nor act. R575:6
Doubtless the result of a power our Lord exercised upon them, the power by which he might have resisted them entirely had he so desired. R4169:2, 2468:4

They were so overpowered with the grandeur and nobility of this wonderful man that they could not have taken him had he not voluntarily placed himself in their hand. R1801:6

Quite possibly some in the band of men and officers had previous knowledge of our Lord, and this may have been the reason for their manifestation of weakness in retreat and falling to the ground. R2468:4

Let these go -- So they might escape sharing in his persecutions. Through all the trial and mocking, and finally in the crucifixion, his courage and solicitude for the welfare of others never failed. R1801:6 Here again we find an exemplification of the Master's care for his disciples. His prayer (chapter 17) was chiefly in respect to their spiritual interests; this illustrated his care for their physical interests. R2468:5

At first glance it would appear that the disciples were very cowardly when they all forsook the Master at the time of his arrest. But this was our Lord's own suggestion. R3888:1

Having a sword -- He was merely following the Lord's counsel in taking the sword with him, and evidently carrying out the divine purpose in using it. We see here nothing to blame and everything to commend. R2468:6

Drew it -- Peter probably reasoned that if the Lord had directed the bringing of the swords, they were for use and not for ornament. R2778:6 Perhaps he remembered the Lord's words of a few hours previous, to the effect that his followers would all forsake him, and his own promise, "Although all shall be offended, yet will not I." (Mark 14:29) R2468:6

Smote -- That it might be manifested that he was not overpowered by the high priest's servants, but that he merely yielded himself to arrest. R2778:6, 2468:6

This incident was evidently of the Lord's intention to show that his surrender was not because of cowardice on the part of the disciples or himself. It also furnished the opportunity for healing an enemy. R4169:2, 2468:5

The high priest's servant -- Who evidently made the first assault upon Jesus. If Roman soldiers had been in charge, the high priest's servant no doubt would have been less officious. R2468:1

Cut off his right ear -- The blow was evidently intended for the head, but perhaps was providentially warded off so as to injure merely the ear. R2779:1

John 18:11

Put up thy sword -- While the excitement and activities of a battle inspire courage, to be compelled to stand idle and not be permitted to lift a hand in self-defense in the presence of an armed enemy is most discouraging. R2779:1

My followers are not to fight with carnal weapons. R4169:4, 2779:1, 2468:4
"Love your enemies." "Do good unto those who despitefully use you and persecute you." (Matt. 5:44) R2780:1, 2469:1

The cup -- The cup signifies experiences. R3362:3, 5599:5, 5654:5, 5538:4
Jesus' dying experiences, which were severe in the extreme. R5421:5
The shame and ignominy of arrest as a law-breaker; a public trial and conviction, and subsequent crucifixion as a malefactor. R2467:4, 5421:6, 5599:5; CR367:2

The cup symbolizes the means of our sanctification, by which we exchange our justified earthly rights for the heavenly inheritance and joint-heirship. R4547:4

The "cup of salvation." (Psa. 116:13) R5538:4, 5155:5; CR307:3

My Father hath -- He recognized the circumstances in which he found himself as being not those of his own making, nor yet those made for him by his enemies. Because the Father had so arranged it, it was his duty to drink it. R2780:2

The Father had poured for him a special cup of experiences, and had required of him a special baptism into death, as conditions precedent to his glory and Kingdom. R3362:3

It was his part to consecrate his life and not to hold it back. It was the Father's part so to arrange matters that the Jews might not take our Lord until the Father's hour for him had come. R5080:4

It was not the Jews that poured that cup for him; it was not the Pharisees, the Romans, the people, the hypocrites, nor the scribes; but it was the Father who provided the cup. R4602:5

Given me -- Poured for me. R5599:5, 5569:6, 5538:4, 2988:6
The cup which the Father gave to him of suffering and ignominy was a test to prove his faithfulness and loyalty. The same cup he has passed on to his followers, saying, "Drink ye all of it." (Matt. 26:27) R5180:4, 5654:5, 5599:6

Shall I not drink it? -- Shall I refuse to drink it? SM731:2

Jesus meekly accepted it. R5569:6

He does not boast that his course is a voluntary one, nor seek praise as a martyr! He declares the simple truth, that the Father required this of him as an evidence of his personal loyalty to him. R2468:6

As a man, born under the Law, he was obligated to keep the Law. As a new creature, who had entered into a covenant of sacrifice, he was obligated to willingly and obediently sacrifice his life. R5079:5, 4641:1; Q376:1

When trying experiences came to him, he did not consider them as being merely from the individual with whom they originated, but as being, on the other hand, under the supervision of the Father. R4802:3

Jesus would not stand for his earthly rights. His dying was not merely at Calvary. It was begun at Jordan three and a half years before. R5325:5
He accepted the cup at the beginning, but it had to be drunk day by day, and at the very end were the very heaviest dregs of the cup. CR307:3
He did not say, As far as I understand thy will, Father, I am willing to do it. No, his consecration was simply to the doing of the Father's will, whatever that will might prove to be. R1041:1

This was the strength of his victory--his will was fully submitted to the Father's will. R2469:1; CR323:2, 462:5

It has been a part of the divine will throughout this Gospel age to allow his faithful servants to suffer reproaches and losses. R5189:3

The human life-rights, Jesus had need for up to the moment he died. In dying, he committed them to the Father, according to the Father's arrangement. R4905:2; Q442:7

King David exemplified this spirit when, in flight from Absalom, although the street rabble cursed him and threw stones and dirt at him, he did not threaten the mob or return railing for railing, but gave instructions to his guard to do them no harm. R4277:2

If it was necessary for our Lord to drink of the brook of experience, gain wisdom and thereby demonstrate his confidence to God, it is equally necessary for all the members of the Body. R2936:1

So we should be well prepared for whatever cup of bitter experiences and ignominy the Lord may have for us. R5569:6

Let us, after consecrating our all to the Lord, and while using our consecrated all as wisely as we know how, accept whatever divine wisdom shall mete out to us. R2988:6

All of life's experiences are under divine supervision and will work out for a blessing. HG374:4; R5569:6; CR307:4

We are to remember that he does not pour into our cup of sorrow and trial any bitter experiences that are not needful to us and that will not work out for us a far more and exceeding weight of glory. R2469:1

While the Lord may provide a way of escape, we are to be sure that it is not of our own, but of the Lord's provision. If we run away from duty and trial in one place, it will be to merely fall into other trials and testings, perhaps severer, in another quarter. R2780:4, 5569:6

Then the band -- The band of men whom Judas led out for our Lord's arrest were not Roman soldiers, but merely under-officers and servants from the high priest's household, armed with such weapons as they could command. R2779:2

Took Jesus -- It would appear that the Jewish Sanhedrin exercised a certain amount of authority in respect to religious matters, and were permitted to make arrests, but not to execute criminals without Roman consent. R2467:6

Judas surely did succeed in expediting matters and in bringing about the installation of the embryo Kingdom of God; but not in the manner he expected, nor to any degree to his own honor or advantage. R2468:3

Bound him -- The binding of our Lord seems to have been entirely unnecessary, except as the band of men and officers might desire to make an exhibition of their prowess to those who had sent them. R2469:4

John 18:13

To Annas first -- Who doubtless had bargained with Judas, and no doubt it was at this time that the thirty pieces of silver were paid over, Judas having now shown a fulfillment of the contract. R2469:4

The sending of Jesus to Annas was evidently intended to secure his sanction to his arrest and trial, and the influence which that would imply. R2780:6

Annas had been the high priest for a number of years and had been followed in office by several of his sons; and now, his son-in-law, Caiaphas, filled the position. R4169:4, 5561:1, 3888:2, 2780:6

Although deposed by the Romans, he was the rightful high priest, the office being held for life; and he probably would be so regarded by the Jews, who therefore sought counsel of him first. R1809:2, 2470:1

His presentation before Annas was probably merely a matter of courtesy, as apparently it was Caiaphas who had caused his arrest. R3888:2

Jesus did not need to take his case before the courts, because his enemies did that--taking him before the chief priests and the Sanhedrin. They condemned him in the Jewish courts. R5782:6

John 18:14

It was expedient -- A great truth may be seen from two opposite standpoints. The prophecy of Caiaphas was strictly true. R2470:2, 2780:3 He was used as an agent of God to deliver a great lesson and prophecy only a few days before that system was cast off, but we have no Scriptural intimation to suppose that God used either that nation or its rulers after it was cast off. Likewise with Babylon. C181

It was indeed expedient not only for the Jews, but also for the whole world, that a ransom should be given for Adam and his race. But so far as Caiaphas was concerned, he was probably thinking only of human expediency. R2780:3

That one man should die -- It is not sufficient that we see certain facts. We must also be in heart-harmony with the Lord lest, like Caiaphas, we aid in fulfilling the Lord's plan, but, taking a wrong position, bring ourselves under a curse. R2470:2

Followed Jesus -- At a distance. Their deep interest in the Master would not permit them to go to their homes; they must keep him in sight, and note how things would go with him to the very last. R2469:2

Was known -- Thus John readily gained entrance, not only for himself, but for Peter. R2469:2

Went in with Jesus -- Peter's very courage led him into a trap placed before him by the Adversary, when he went into the courtyard of the palace and mingled with those who were there, even after having cut off the ear of one of the priest's servants. R5202:2

John 18:17

I am not -- Far better would it have been for poor Peter had he openly declared, "Yes, I am one of his disciples, and since I presume that none such are wanted here I will go out." R2469:2

So it is with some of the Lord's followers today --when by themselves or with others of the same faith, they are bold and courageous; but if they get into the palaces and amongst the servants of nominal Christianity, they are ashamed of the Master and fear to confess him. R2469:2

Then asked -- Annas questioned him but did not attempt a judicial investigation. R4169:4

The examination before Annas, the legal high priest, was wholly unofficial. R2470:2

John 18:20

I spake openly -- Refusing to make any specific explanations, he merely referred to his teachings, appealing thus to his rights as a Jew. R2469:6

I said nothing -- Jesus spoke very plainly about the condition of the Jewish church, and of a certain class, but seldom of any one individual in it. His condemnation was of corrupt principles and corrupt classes, and was in public. R591:1*

John 18:22

Struck Jesus -- Not that the officer was intentionally unjust. Rather, influenced by his desire to appear zealous in support of the high priest's judgment, this accentuated his mental unbalance as a fallen man and led him on. R2469:6

John 18:23

Jesus answered him -- Our Lord did not literally turn the other cheek to the man and ask him to smite that also, nor did he even receive the smiting in silence, unwilling that his good conduct be evil spoken of. R2469:6

In the light of this illustration, the Lord's people are to understand the command to turn the other cheek to mean simply that they are not to resist evil with evil. R2470:1

When before his judges, Jesus offered no resistance, in the sense of using his power either of eloquence or of divine energy, to resist their unjust decisions. R5782:6

If I have -- Merely pointing out that the cause for the arrest must be shown to have been something which preceded the arrest. R2469:6

Why smitest thou me? -- So, too, we may use any moral influence we may possess to escape from the power of our enemies, and be assured that we will have the divine care and protection until our lessons and experiences are completed. R3738:2

In appealing our case (the slander suit against The Eagle newspaper) we have followed the example of the Master, who inquired why he was smitten contrary to law. R5189:3

John 18:24

Sent him bound -- Annas thus saying by implication, I agree in your course that this man should be arrested and should be tried as a dangerous character--dangerous to our theories and institutions. R2780:6

Unto Caiaphas -- The acting high priest, appointed by the Romans. R1809:2
The official high priest of Roman appointment and, as such, the president of the Sanhedrin, whose court room was probably in the same palace, across the corridor. R2470:3, 5561:1, 4169:4, 2312:2

The preliminary trial before Caiaphas is supposed to have been held between two or three o'clock on Friday morning--the members of the Sanhedrin, or Jewish court, being summoned by messengers. R2470:3, 5561:1, 2781:1, 1809:2 Carefully excluded, evidently, were a few such men as Joseph of Arimathea, Nicodemus (John 19:38,39; 7:50,51) and probably a few others known to be favorably inclined toward the new teacher. R1809:2

This hearing was preliminary in the sense that it examined Jesus and formulated and decided upon the charge on which it would convict at the formal meeting at dawn, about five o'clock. For the Jewish law forbade a trial by night. R2470:4, 1809:2

The formal trial before the Sanhedrin at dawn was merely a ceremony, a farce. R2470:4

John 18:25

I am not -- One false step leads naturally to another. To have now declared for Jesus would have been a public testimony that he was a liar, in addition to leading to his own apprehension. R2469:3

John 18:27

Denied again -- Let us hope that if any of us should come so sadly short of our own privileges, that the Master would not only pray for us, as he did for Peter, but would turn upon us a glance of reproof, as well as one of sympathy and love. R4169:5

Peter's failure was along the very line of his strength. He was naturally courageous, had boasted of it, and yet failed for lack of courage. "When I am weak, then I am strong." (2 Cor. 12:10) R2469:5

John omits reference to Peter's cursing and swearing. His love for Brother Peter evidently influenced him to omit that portion of the narrative not absolutely necessary to confirm the Lord's prediction. R2469:5

The cock crew -- After he had noticed the cock crow, Peter remembered the Lord's words, "The cock shall not crow till thou hast denied me thrice." (John 13:38) R2469:3

Perhaps the Lord allowed that to happen to Peter for our sakes, that we might realize that we need to be careful to put our confidence in the Lord. CR307:5

John 18:28

Then led they Jesus -- It was in the interim between the 3 a.m. examination and the 5 a.m. formal conviction that he was subject for two hours to mockery and insults. (Matt. 26:67,78; Mark 14:65; Luke 22:63-65) R2470:5, 2781:5

There had been no intermission of the strain upon Jesus' nerves from the time that he ate the Passover with his disciples. R3553:3

Unto the hall of judgment -- He stood before the representative of the greatest empire in the world, greatly disadvantaged, yet remarkably calm and self-possessed. R3553:3

It is not sufficient that we go through a form or ceremony of justice. It is all-important that we have the spirit of righteousness, a love of righteousness, a sincere desire to know and to do God's will. R2470:5

It was early -- Probably eight o'clock or earlier. R3553:3

Before the people would be generally astir, before, therefore, there could be any general cooperation on the part of Jesus' friends, or by the people. R5570:2, 2470:4

Intent on getting him into the hands of the Roman soldiers for execution at the earliest possible moment, so that the multitude might realize his case as beyond the power of their intervention. R2470:6

The determination to kill Jesus, having been reached long before his arrest, was rushed through for two reasons: (a) they feared the common people would defend Jesus, and (b) they wanted to kill him before the Passover. R2470:4

Lest they should be defiled -- How inconsistent and hypocritical! They feared that Pilate's judgment hall, being under jurisdiction of Gentiles, might have in it some leaven (a symbol of sin) and realized not that the real leaven of sin had permeated their own hearts. R2471:1

Similarly, those who have the spirit of love for the brethren will be hindered from becoming in any manner their persecutors. Only such can properly eat of the antitypical Passover. R2471:1

How much of murder and meanness can be covered with a garment of light, with a claim of religious purity, professing to be seeking to know and to do God's will. R3554:2

Eat the passover -- Their solicitation was in respect to the Passover

Feast which would last the entire week, beginning that very day. R3554:2

The Jews thought more of the Feast week, while we as Christians center our interests specially in the Passover Supper, or rather, in the Memorial Supper instituted that evening to take the place of the Passover. R3554:3

There can be no doubt from the account that our Lord and his disciples ate the Passover Supper on the day preceding the one on which the Jews in general ate it. R2771:5

John 18:29

Pilate -- He had a reputation for cruelty. Philo speaks of his corruption. Thus they seem to have taken it for granted that if any prisoner were brought to him with a request for execution he would take pleasure in complying. R2470:6

Went out unto them -- Accommodating himself to their theory. R2471:2

What accusation -- It was an unusual thing for them to accuse one of their countrymen before a Roman governor. It was customary, on the contrary, for them to seek to hide their faults and to secure acquittal or leniency. R2785:2

From his previous custom they had expected that Pilate would receive any culprit that they would bring to him, and be satisfied that if they had condemned one of their own nation he must indeed be a bad man and worthy of execution. R3554:3

Bring ye against this man -- As though he would give the implication that Jesus rather had ground for making accusation against the Pharisees, which of course was the case. R2471:3

If he were not -- They answered evasively. R5570:2

A malefactor -- An evil-doer. R2471:2

We would not have delivered -- Do you suppose, Pilate, that we would be willing to place in your hands as the representative of Roman authority any of our citizens of good repute? R3554:3
They expected Pilate would condemn him without question as was customary. R3554:3

John 18:31

Take ye him -- Pilate's thrusting back the responsibility upon the Sanhedrin was very proper. R3554:4, 5570:2
He dismissed the matter as one of Jew against Jew, and not of Jew against Caesar. R2785:3
Saying in substance, This is some petty religious quarrel with which I care to have nothing to do. R2471:3, 5570:2

It is not lawful -- The Jewish Talmud states: "Forty years before the destruction of the Temple the judgment of capital crimes was taken away from Israel"--this would have been the very year the Lord was arraigned. R3554:4, 2785:3

The Jews never crucified anyone. Only because the authority to sentence a person to death had been taken from the Jews that year, was Jesus crucified Roman-style, instead of stoned to death Jewish-style. R3554:4
Pilate had in his hands the power of life and death. The Jewish Sanhedrin was permitted to govern the country in a religious way, but had no power to order public executions. Apparently they did have the power to stone, as in the case of Stephen, but failed to exercise it lest the people would resent the injustice. R2470:6

They may also have realized the wide influence already attained by his teachings, and desired to make his execution as public and disgraceful as possible, that his followers might be chagrined and humiliated. R2470:3

Put any man to death -- They revealed the depth of their wickedness--they had been deliberately plotting to have Pilate inflict the death penalty upon an innocent person. R5570:3

John 18:33

Entered into the judgment hall -- That he might have the better opportunity for thinking quietly, and also for hearing what Jesus would say in self-defense. R2471:3

Art thou the King -- The Jews had not made such a charge against Jesus; indeed, they were far from wishing to acknowledge the Galilean as King of the Jews. R2471:4

They well knew that their condemnation of Jesus for having said that he was a Son of God would be nothing in the estimation of Pilate. Hence they made a new charge before Pilate. R2785:3

A serious charge before the Roman governor, which he was bound to consider. R5570:3

This was a question our Lord could not properly evade. He was the King of the Jews. He could not deny the fact now before Pilate. At the same time he should plainly show Pilate by his answer that he was not seeking to wrest the government from Rome at this time. R3554:6

John 18:34

Of thyself -- We might paraphrase thus: "Are you asking this question from your own standpoint as a Roman, or are you asking from the standpoint of the hopes of the Jews as religionists?" R3554:6

Are you an interested inquirer after the truth on this subject, or are you merely calling up a matter of which you have heard? R2471:4

Did others tell -- It would seem therefore that Pilate had previously heard from some quarter about the riding of Jesus on the ass, and as being hailed by the people as the Son of David a few days previously. R2471:4

John 18:35

Am I a Jew? -- You are aware that I am not a Jew and do not enter sympathetically into the hopes of your nation. R3554:6

We are not inclined to blame Pilate seriously for the death of Jesus. He acted as he was expected to act. R5570:2

John 18:36

My kingdom -- While doing all we can for ourselves and our neighbors, let us remember that the work is not ours, but the Lord's. NS623:6

Not of this world -- Not a kingdom of the present order or arrangement. R3555:1, 5578:2, 5570:5, 5396:5, 3555:1, 2471:5

When it shall be established it will be a spiritual empire, against which flesh and blood will have no prevailing power. NS238:6

The Kingdom of Heaven is now at hand, not in its mere embryonic or incipient stage, as at our Lord's first advent (Matt. 3:2), but in the sense in which he declared it was yet to come--"in power and great glory." (Matt. 24:30) B14

As it was the mission of our Lord not to rule the world at his first advent, but to lay down his life for the world, so it is the mission of the Church not to rule the world but to "lay down our lives for the brethren." (1 John 3:16) R2415:3

This was as much as was necessary to be told under the circumstances, as much as Pilate could have understood--more probably would have confused him. R3555:1

Our Lord Jesus spoke of Satan as being the Prince of this world or age (John 12:31), and of himself as the Prince or Ruler of the coming age, the Millennial age. CR78:1; OV246:3; HG223:4; SM693:2; NS855:6

Under the seventh trumpet, when the saints are rewarded, the kingdoms of this world become the kingdoms of our Lord and of his Christ. Hence, until that time, they remain in possession of those who are opposed to Christ.

HG13:6

It is our business to render obedience to the laws insofar as these do not infringe upon our consciences; but this does not mean that we are to become partisans in political strifes amongst men. R3179:6

Instead of taking the place of Caesar as the Emperor of the world, and as King of the Jewish nation for the conquering of the world at his first advent, he endured the cross for the world's redemption. NS697:4

Jesus was not in conflict with Caesar's kingdom. This would account to Pilate the fact that neither Jesus nor his friends made any manifestation of rebellion against the civil government. R5570:5

My servants fight -- To call Pilate's attention to the fact that his followers were not fighting for him, not seeking to establish his Kingdom authority by force. R3555:1

But, because they are not of the world and are under my teachings, are opposed to wars, fightings, and are children of the "God of peace." R1757:4

But now is my kingdom -- The rejection of Jesus made it seem as though God's whole plan had been turned aside. Yet we see that the crucifixion of Messiah was the very thing necessary to the accomplishment of God's purpose. R5898:5

Not from hence -- Not yet due to come into power. He marks his Kingdom as beginning at his second advent. R3555:1

Our Lord's Kingdom was not established then and has not been established since, and hence his servants or followers are not in any sense qualified to fight for its maintenance. NS238:6

John 18:37

Art thou a king then? -- Do I understand you to mean that you are to be a King, but have not yet become a King, that your reign is in the distant future? R3555:1

Remarkably few of those who have heard of Jesus recognize that he is a King. Many can realize our Lord in the attitude of priest who fail to realize that he is also to be a King. R2471:5

The priest's office speaks of mercy and forgiveness; but the kingly office is no less essential. Men must be delivered from the bondage of sin and death, and must be ruled with an iron rod to fit them for life everlasting. R2471:6

Thou sayest -- That is, "Your statement is correct: I am a King." R2471:5, 2781:3

To this end -- To be a King, and reign in righteousness. R238:1*

For this cause -- If God had not purposed that there should be a kingdom, it would have been wholly unnecessary that our Lord should die. R5898:2

Bear witness -- We are indeed bearing witness to the truth--the same truth to which our Master bare witness even unto death--about the Kingdom, and that God is not a vicious or cruel God. R5898:6

It was his witness to the truth that cost him his life. Similarly, it is such a witness to the truth of God's character and plan that will cost all the followers of Jesus their lives. R2471:6

Unto the truth -- Not only was he speaking truthfully, but he was upholding the truth. R5898:2

This is the great truth--that Jehovah God has provided salvation for "all the families of the earth." (Gen. 28:14) The types of the Law foreshadowed it. The prophets testified to it. R5898:3

It seems rather remarkable to the Editor that without any effort on our part this word "truth," and the term, "truth people," are identified with ourselves. R5898:6

Heareth my voice -- Only such would be able to appreciate his testimony. R5570:6

John 18:38

What is truth? -- Without waiting for or expecting an answer, as though he would say, Yes, yes; we hear of truth, justice and equity, but what is it, and where is it to be found? Who shall determine what is the right? R2785:5, 2472:1

Nobody seems to know. R5570:6

What is it to be sincere? How true and how sincere should we be? These were questions beyond his depth. R3555:3

Our Lord's reference to truth, sincerity, honesty, seemed to touch a tender spot in Pilate's conscience. Few worldly people respect insincerity. R3555:2

Our Lord's reference to truth, sincerity, honesty, seemed to touch a tender spot in Pilate's conscience. Few worldly people respect insincerity. R3555:2

No fault at all -- In these words we have Pilate's verdict--not guilty. According to Roman law this was the proper ending of the case. R3555:4, 5570:6

There must have been something very striking in our Lord's personal appearance to have caused Pilate to consider for a moment the rejection of the demands of the Jewish Court. R2471:3

Pilate had made up his mind definitely that there was no danger whatever to the Roman Empire from the meek and lowly person he had interviewed--he was surely not an anarchist nor an insurrectionist. R2785:5

Pilate's position was in many respects a delicate one: he must please the government at Rome, and he must avoid unnecessary disputes with the local authorities. R2471:4

Pilate's decision has been the decision of all honorable, fair-minded people throughout the world from his day to the present, irrespective of religious prejudices. R2785:5

John 18:39

Ye have a custom -- Pilate thought this a favorable opportunity to dispose of Jesus and get him out of the hands of the chief priests and leaders of the people. R5571:1

Unto you -- It occurred to Pilate that one way to appease the Jews--to let them feel that they had not been utterly defeated--would be to allow the supposition that he was justly condemned and then to let him be the prisoner usually released at this season every year. R3555:5, 2786:2

Cried they all -- How untruthful is the proverb, "Vox populi, vox Dei."--The voice of the people is the voice of God. R3555:5

The Pharisees knew not what they did, as Peter says, "I wot that through ignorance ye did it, as did also your rulers." (Acts 3:17) R2471:1

They did not mention the charge on which they themselves had convicted Jesus falsely, namely, blasphemy; for this would have been no crime whatever in the eyes of the Roman governor. R2472:2

A robber -- And a dangerous person. R4713:2

A seditious person and a murderer, and probably the real ideal of many of those who were hounding Jesus at the instigation of the priests. R3555:5

John 19

John 19:1

Scourged him -- As a last resort. R2786:5

Thinking that by scourging him the clamor would cease. R104:1; PD68/81

Influenced more by considerations of policy than of principle. R1810:4

John 19:3

Smote him -- After such experiences it seems marvelous that any vitality remained for the ordeal of crucifixion. R1815:3

John 19:4

No fault -- No cause of death. Having proved himself entitled to life, "he gave himself a ransom for all." (1 Tim. 2:6) R105:5

According to Roman law this was the proper ending of the case. R3555:4

John 19:5

Behold the man! -- "Ecce Homo!" This exclamation of Pilate concerning Jesus seems to express his admiration of the perfect man. R104:1, 5571:2, 3561:2

Behold the countenance! None can have a really beautiful character without the inner beauty being reflected in the face. His face must have been one of marvelous beauty. R5291:4

Pilate evidently was impressed with our Lord's personality; never before had he seen so splendid a specimen of the human race. R2472:4

Not only the Jew above all other Jews, but the Man above all other men. E154

See the character of the man you are willing to crucify. Note that he has the most kingly features, such as none of your race possess. R4713:2

As though he would say, Do you really wish me to crucify such a noble sample of humanity, and of your race? R4171:4, 5571:2, 3561:2, 3369:2, 2786:5, 1394:3, 104:1; PD68/81

Not before Pilate only does he appear to tower above other men: as a child, he was a marvel; when a man, he had but to say, "Follow me" and his disciples obeyed; as a teacher, the common people heard him gladly. R104:2
Jesus was found in fashion as a man; not in the fashion of a sin-blighted man, but in fashion as a man such as God made Adam--a "very good," a perfect and upright man. R104:5

John 19:6

Crucify him -- A few days before, they gave him a royal welcome and hailed him with Hosannas; but their unstable and fickle minds were swayed by false teachers and unwilling to act upon conviction in face of opposition. R1795:2

To have stoned him to death as a blasphemer they feared would leave him a martyr, while to have him publicly executed as a criminal would, they hoped, brand Jesus, his teachings and his followers forever with infamy. R2473:1

We have a law -- Thus appealing to the Jews that he was a blasphemer, one whom God commanded them in the Law to destroy. R2786:6

They perverted the truth in their endeavor to uphold their course, for the Law did not prescribe death as a penalty for the claim of being the Son of God. R2472:5

The Son of God -- Had our Lord claimed to be the Father he would have come under the terms of the death sentence for blasphemy; but there was no such penalty, nor was it blasphemy, to call himself the Son of God. R2472:5

John 19:8

The more afraid -- The features of Jesus were impressive of themselves, but if one possessing such features made the claim of relationship to God there certainly was some ground for fear. R2472:5

John 19:11

No power at all -- So it is with all the footstep followers of the Master. Man is powerless to harm a hair of our heads, unless it is permitted by our Father in heaven for his glory and our own highest welfare. R5540:5

This is equally true of every member of the Body, from his begetting. We have every reason to believe that in some measure divine providence extends even beyond the new creation to those whose lives are closely linked to theirs. F646

God permits the wrath of men and of Satan, within certain limits, in connection with the world of mankind; but in respect to the elect Church it is different. Nothing that befalls them is of accident. F646

Our difficulty has been to some extent the same that our Lord mentioned to the Sadducees saying, "Ye do err, not knowing the Scriptures, nor the power of God." (Matt. 22:29) NS661:4

We need have no fear of the power of evil spirits against us as long as we are the Lord's and are walking in our daily life not after the will of the flesh, but after the Spirit. R4069:5

Thus Paul knew, on his return journey to Jerusalem, that all the powers of darkness would assail him in vain, except as the Lord should permit, and that the Lord would permit nothing that would not be to his real advantage. R3183:4

Except it were given thee -- When the door of opportunity for services shuts, we will consider it our duty to use all reasonable energy and maintain our legal rights to keep it open. When it shall close, in spite of our every endeavor, we will accept it as the result of being of divine providence. R3992:3

If the power for the suppression of the truth is given by our Lord, it will mean to us the good tidings that the Kingdom is very near at hand. R3532:4, 3992:4

From above -- Watching and praying will cultivate confidence and faith in God. God is still at the helm, and is still working all things according to the counsel of his own will. R4488:6

Permitted him by the heavenly Father. This was the secret of our Lord's composure. So should we be calm under most severe and trying ordeals, the peace of God passing all understanding ruling in our hearts. R3895:4

He hath delivered me -- Pilate could do no more; even Jesus himself assented, and claimed that it was in the divine order that he should die. Pilate signed the death sentence. R2786:6

Hath the greater sin -- We are not of those who condemn Pilate; he was a servant of the empire. Our Lord in no sense intimated guilt on the part of Pilate. R2472:6

John 19:12

Art not Caesar's friend -- Assuring Pilate that if he let the prisoner go, the Jewish leaders would report him to the Emperor. R4713:4, 2786:3
This was putting Pilate in an awkward position. R5571:4

Maketh himself a king -- The accusation brought before Pilate involved the charge of treason, a charge most likely to arouse the indignation and wrath of the Roman rulers. R1809:6

Speaketh against Caesar -- Intimating that if Pilate frustrated their designs and refused to crucify Jesus, they would report him to Caesar as an enemy of the empire, a succorer of seditious persons, a fosterer of rival kings in the empire. R2472:5

John 19:13

The Pavement -- In quite recent times excavations on the supposed site for Pilate's palace revealed, at a considerable depth, an extensive portion of a mosaic pavement of fine work, such as would be connected with a palace. R4171:4, 1394:3

John 19:14

Preparation of the passover -- There can be no doubt from the account that our Lord and his disciples ate the Passover Supper on the day preceding the one on which the Jews in general ate it. R2771:5
When the Lord and the apostles celebrated the Passover Supper for the last time together, they partook of it early on the fourteenth. R833:3
If the Passover fell on the weekly Sabbath, i.e., on Friday, they began an hour sooner, that they might dispatch their business by the time that the Sabbath began. Hence, they called it the preparation of the Passover. R2953:4*

About the sixth hour -- About noon. The time was the third hour, nine o'clock, according to Mark. Mark may have referred to the fact that the sentence was pronounced in the third hour, while John recorded the time Jesus was actually on the cross. R4172:2

Behold your King! -- Pilate exclaimed, when presenting the noble personage of Jesus before the people. R5571:4
Jesus was not the mob's ideal of a king. Had he been coarse, vulgar, a boaster, he would have been more nearly their ideal of a person likely to lift their nation from under the Roman yoke. Neither are the footstep followers of Jesus the world's ideals. PD68/81

John 19:15

Away with him -- Only when a riot was feared did Pilate consent that Jesus should be crucified, and gave the order therefore. R4171:3

We have no king but Caesar -- By this hypocritical course they had forced Pilate to crucify Jesus, on the claim that it was necessary to the protection of the throne of Caesar. R2316:2

John 19:16

They took -- It was customary to have four soldiers attend each prisoner to execution. R2473:5

Led him away -- The Via Dolorosa, or the "sorrowful way," is still pointed out, as well as a portion of the archway known as the Arch of Ecce Homo, reputed to be the place where Pilate said, "Behold the man!" R4171:3
Indeed a sorrowful way. Pilate felt uncomfortable. On the way, tender women, not disciples of Jesus, wept. We even credit that his accusers, out of conscience, were far from happy. R3561:2

John 19:17

His cross -- The cross of Christ (not the pieces of wood, but the sacrifice made thereon) is the very center of the great plan of salvation which God prepared for our race before sin entered the world. R4171:2

Place of a skull -- The supposed site is on a hill near Jerusalem, which in the distance has the general contours of a skull, with hollows corresponding to eye-sockets. Modern scholars are well agreed as to this site. R4171:5, 3560:3

The site answers well to the general requirements of the narrative--outside the city walls, nigh to the city, in a conspicuous position, near a frequented thoroughfare, and still called by the Jews the "place of stoning." R4171:5, 3562:1

Christian tradition from the fifth century fixes this as the place of the stoning of Stephen. R4171:5

Golgotha -- The Hebrew word signifying a skull; the Latin name for a skull being Calvary. R2473:3, 4171:5, 3560:3

Newman Hall suggests: "Golgotha! There is a legend that it was the very center of the earth's surface, the middle point of the habitable globe. We think nothing of the legend, but very much of the truth which it suggests, for the cross of Christ is the true center of the Church where all believers meet, of all tribes and nations." R4174:1

A description of the crucifixion process by Farrar. R2473:1

Another lengthy description of the crucifixion process. R3562:1

Calvary was the fulcrum, as it were, upon which divine love and justice operated for the rolling away of the curse resting upon humanity. R3560:3

John 19:18

They crucified him -- The death of the man Christ Jesus in any form would have been a sufficiency to offset the original sentence; but God was pleased to test our Redeemer's loyalty by arranging a particularly trying death. R4171:2

The death of the cross was intimated in the Scriptures as being the most ignominious--"Cursed is every one that hangeth on a tree." (Gal. 3:13) R4171:2

Crucifixion particulars are not given, and we may be glad of it, for the picture which suggests itself to the mind is horrible enough without any incidental details. R4172:4

Practiced only upon culprits--usually outlaws, brigands and seditionists.

Thus our Lord was, in harmony with the statement of the prophet, "numbered with the transgressors." (Isa. 53:12) R2787:4

Its severity was to intimidate and deter evil-doers, rather than as a gratification of cruel sentiments. R2473:1

A detailed description of death by crucifixion by Ian MacLaren. R4172:4

It was not so much the torture of death which gives us the feeling of sympathy and sorrow (for others went through the same), and not only that it was unmerited, but that it was in payment of our penalty. R3560:3

"There shall no evil befall thee." (Psa. 91:10) No evil befell him as a new creature. All the things that happened to him were necessary. Without these he could not have fulfilled the calling given him. R4767:2

Our Lord's followers have to some extent lost the esteem of friends and neighbors. They have been tested in every possible manner. These things were necessary for them; therefore, these experiences cannot be considered as evil befalling the follower of Jesus. R4767:2

So far as our Redeemer himself was concerned, this disgrace of the cross became to him a stepping stone to glory, honor and immortality, the divine nature. R4171:2

The crucifixion occurred at about 9 a.m., and ended in death at 3 p.m.

R1815:6, 3370:3

Two other -- Probably members of the band of Barabbas, and were probably considered by the people as more or less heroes. R4172:3

To himself it would mean the depths of humiliation. From the standpoint of his accusers, it was specially desirable; it would help to keep the people from thinking of him as a martyr. R3561:6

Fulfilling Isa. 53:12--"He was numbered with the transgressors." R1815:6

With the members of the Body of Christ also it has been true at times that the Father has permitted experiences to come to them in such a manner as might imply that they did not have his favor, and were really impostors.

R2474:2, 1816:1

John 19:19

On the cross -- It was customary to publish the crime for which the execution took place by a printed notice over the head of the victim.

R3562:2

KING OF THE JEWS -- Little did Pilate comprehend the great truth; few yet have realized the truth of this statement that Jesus is a King; comparatively few have yet rendered him allegiance, bowing the knee of their hearts in sincerity and truth. R2473:6

Thus in spite of his enemies, the crucified Jesus was proclaimed the Messiah. Yet how strange! A crucified Messiah! How different are God's ways and means of accomplishing an object from man's ways. R4172:3
Doubtless he worded it especially as a rebuke to them, for he perceived that for envy, malice, they had delivered Jesus to him for death. R4172:3
It was a title of shame and contempt, a brand of blasphemy to those who read it; and the multitude, going and coming from the city, jested him upon his title, and the failure of the fraud he tried to perpetrate.

R2787:4

John 19:20

Hebrew and Greek and Latin -- In three languages: in Hebrew, the language of the people; in Latin, the language of the government; and in Greek, the language of the educated at the time. R4172:3, 3370:3, 2787:4, 2473:5

The different wording by each of the evangelists may all be correct, for the notice was written in three languages. R3562:2, 2473:5

John 19:21

Write not -- The Jewish Doctors of Divinity were willing enough to have Jesus condemned as the king of the Jews, but were quite unwilling to have this sentence publicly recorded. R2473:6, 2316:2

John 19:22

I have written -- Pilate refused to alter it, doubtless as a rebuke to the Jews. R4172:3, 2316:2

His refusal to amend the charge was a just one; if there was enough merit in the claim to lead to Jesus' crucifixion, the matter should be plainly stated. R2474:1

His decision not to alter the writing was correct, and ultimately all the blind eyes of the world shall be opened to this great fact that Jesus was indeed divinely appointed to be the King of earth. R3562:2

John 19:23

Took his garments -- It was the custom to count the personal property of an executed person the perquisites of the soldiers performing the execution. R3370:3, 2474:1

Four parts -- His outer robe, his head dress, sandals and girdle--enough to give one piece to each. R3370:3, 3562:4, 2474:1

Coat was without seam -- An under garment which reached from the neck to the feet. R2474:1, 3562:4, 3370:3

The seamless robe appears to symbolize the righteousness of Christ which can be appropriated only as a whole. It is of one piece, and may not be marred. R2474:1

So beautifully represented our Lord's own personal perfection. R2316:1

Perhaps a symbol of the wedding garment. R2474:1

Probably a gift from one of the noble women mentioned as being amongst his friends. (Luke 8:3) R2316:1

The curtain of the Tabernacle court, being without seam, reminds us of the seamless linen robe that Jesus wore--a robe that cannot be put on by inches, and when it covers, covers completely. R100:3*

John 19:24

Cast lots -- Not by lot or accident or chance does this robe come to the Lord's people. It is obtained only through the exercise of faith, and held only by the obedience of faith. R2474:1

The Scripture -- Psalms 22:18. R2474:1

Parted my raiment -- Dividing it among the Roman soldiers. The grave clothes were left folded away in the sepulcher. Therefore the clothing in which he appeared on different occasions must have been specially created. B128; R5222:6

John 19:25

There stood by -- We are not to think too severely of the apparent lack of courage on the part of the others of Jesus' friends. R3562:5

And his mother's sister -- Her cousin. R3562:5

The three women might reasonably feel themselves free from danger of molestation notwithstanding their manifestation of interest in the suffering one. R3562:5

They were all sorrowful. They could not deny that apparently the claims of our Lord had been fraudulent. They could not understand how he could be so helpless. They could do naught else but love him and trust him. So it is at times with the Lord's followers since. R2787:5

Cleophas -- Who is supposed to have been a relative. R2474:2

The disciple -- John. R4172:6

John seems to have been of a very modest disposition, quite unwilling to make his own name prominent in his writings. R2571:3

We remember that John had a friend in the high priest's household. Quite probably he was present to give a report of the whole proceedings. John's courage may have been influenced by this. R3562:2

The choice of John was doubtless because of his loving, tender disposition, his zeal and courage in being near to his dying Master. R2474:3

Whom he loved -- Specially loved. R1254:5

He saith -- It is not to be expected that anyone under such conditions would have much to say. It is quite probable, therefore, that the recorded words or message of our Lord were the only ones he uttered. R4172:5

Behold thy son! -- Our Lord, so far from thinking of himself and his own anguish, was thinking of others. R4173:1, 3902:6, 2474:2

Thus exemplifying the teaching of Scripture that each should seek to make provision for his own dependent ones. "If any provide not for his own, and especially for those of his own house, he hath denied the faith and is worse than an unbeliever." (1 Tim. 5:8) R2474:3, 854:6

Behold thy mother! -- Jesus commended his mother to John, possibly because he had some means wherewith to care for her. R2095:3, 3257:2

Shall we suppose Jesus taught others to neglect their parents? R854:6

Had our Lord formed a community, he would doubtless have commended his mother to it instead of to John. D480; R1862:5

That disciple took her -- We cannot show our sympathy at Jesus' cross, but we can lend our presence and aid to dear "members of his Body" in their dark hours; and he will count it as done unto himself. R3562:5, 4173:1

Unto his own home -- It is far from the truth to claim that our Lord and his disciples dwelt together on communistic lines. He personally cared for his mother, Mary; and evidently John had separately a home and means of his own. R3257:2, 1862:5, 1421:5, 1390:5

While Peter may have been a very poor man (Acts 3:6), there is good reason for supposing that John had some property. R2095:2

John 19:28

Knowing that all things -- When all the work which had been given him to do had been accomplished, and not until then, might he refer to his own condition. R4173:2

The scripture -- Psalm 69:21. R4173:2, 3562:6, 2474:3

I thirst -- Exposed to the heat of the sun, with but slight covering and under nervous excitement and pain, thirst must have been one of the principal elements of torture to the crucified. R4173:2

Doubtless, with a fever raging such as would be induced by the crucifixion, he had been thirsting for quite a while. R3562:6, 3371:2
Our Lord hungered and thirsted that we, with all for whom he died, might have the water of life and the bread of life--might attain eternal life.
R4173:3

John 19:29

With vinegar -- Not ordinary vinegar, but more properly sour wine, the common, cheap drink of the soldiers. R2474:3

Not as an injury, but as a kindness. It was supposed that the mixture would assuage thirst to some degree. R3562:6, 2474:3

Upon hyssop -- A reed, probably two and one-third feet long. R4173:3

John 19:30

Had received -- Our Lord had refused the stupefying draught, but now accepted the refreshment given him from a sponge lifted to his lips.
R4173:3, 3562:6

He sucked some refreshing moisture, when his wounds must have developed a raging fever in his blood. R3371:2, 3562:6

It is finished -- The sixth word was one of triumph. He had finished the work which the Father had given him to do; he had been loyal from first to last. R4173:3, 5030:2, 2317:3, 1816:4

The giving of his life at thirty years in consecration was finished at Calvary. R4536:1, 5622:3, 5061:1, 4969:6, 4173:3; OV383:3

The laying down his life, surrendering it, sacrificing it, permitting it to be taken from him. Nothing more could be laid down than was there laid down--a ransom, a corresponding price, for Father Adam. Eii

Our Lord's last breath, with all his remaining strength, was exhausted in his effort to utter with a loud voice that last grand truth, "It is finished." R931:2

Our Lord's earthly mission had been accomplished. He came to die to redeem the death-condemned race of Adam. With his dying breath, expiring, he could say that he had finished the work. R2474:5, 2317:3

The Lord Jesus died, not as a convict, but as a sacrifice for the sin of the world. His was a sacrificial death, and began at Jordan when he presented himself in full consecration, and was finished when he died upon the cross three and one-half years later. Q764:4; R5847:2, 4657:5

He had "poured out his soul unto death," "made his soul an offering for sin," (Isa. 53:10, 12) and permitted his life to be taken from him. These things had all been prefigured in the type. R5085:3

The substitute, the corresponding or equivalent price for the life of Adam and all who lost life through him, was paid. R931:5

And thus "made an end of sin," (Dan. 9:24) made full and complete reconciliation toward God for the iniquity of men. B68

Just before his crucifixion he had said, "I have a baptism to be accomplished and how am I straitened until it be finished." (Luke 12:50) R4173:3; HG262:5; Q277:2

His baptism into death was finished. OV242:4; R5847:2, 5621:1, 5104:2
"I have finished the work which thou gavest me to do." (John 17:4) R931:3

This did not mean that our Lord had finished all the work of the Divine Plan, for both the work of calling out the Bride and presenting her blameless, and the work of the Millennial age were yet future. Q277:2

He had not finished the work of blessing the world, but merely his own personal sacrifice was finished. CR367:2; R931:5; Q177:T, 277:2

We are to recognize a difference between providing the ransom-price and giving, or appropriating, or delivering it. It was merely provided at the time when Jesus died. R5880:3

The other side of the great work of atonement yet remains, the converting of the world to God. R931:6

We rejoice that the great sacrifice has been finished (especially in view of the fact that the heavenly Father subsequently declared that it was finished acceptably) realizing that there is, therefore, now no condemnation to them who are in Christ Jesus. (Rom. 8:1) R2474:5

Jesus had finished the laying down of the ransom-price; he had fully provided the ransom-price. R5880:3, 4964:4, 2474:5, 1453:2, 931:5

In opposition to the view that our Lord is now making the ransom; that since his ascension he has been expiating the sins of the world in heaven, a work that will not be finished until the end of the Millennial age.

R1453:2; E429

Bowed his head -- Probably still under the cloud of separation from God, but with the realization of the meaning of the experience. R3563:1

Gave up the ghost -- Apparently he died by the actual bursting of his heart. It is the tendency of deep grief to interfere with the circulation of the blood and to cause a pressure upon the heart. R3563:4

John 19:33

He was dead already -- He died of a broken heart. R4173:5, 3563:4, 2316:6

John 19:34

Pierced his side -- Before regenerating the world, God has arranged that first from the wound in Christ's side, figuratively, an elect Church shall be formed to be his companion and joint-heir in his Kingdom--the second Eve. R5141:5, 90:1

Blood and water -- A positive proof that death, dissolution, had taken place. R2476:2

The separation of the watery portion of the blood gave proof that he was already dead, and had been dead for some time; for had he not been dead, the flow would have been red blood. R198:1*, 3903:2

John 19:36

Not be broken -- Provision was made that the Passover sacrifice was not to be divided. It was to be eaten whole. Not a bone was to be broken. It represented, not Christ and the Church, but Christ alone in his sacrifice.

(Ex. 12:46) SM559:2

One of many prophetic predictions of the Messiah. A58

John 19:37

Look on him -- It will not surprise us if, in the Kingdom, God shall show to the world the body of flesh, crucified for all in giving the ransom on their behalf--not permitted to corrupt, but preserved as an everlasting testimony of infinite love and perfect obedience. B130

John 19:38

Joseph of Arimathea -- From all accounts he must have been a noble character. Matthew says he was "a rich man;" Luke says, "a good man and a righteous; who was looking for the kingdom of God;" Mark says he was a "counselor of honorable estate," that is, a member of the Sanhedrin.

R4173:5, 3374:6

The solemnity of our Lord's dying moments seems to have given greater courage to some of his friends. R2788:6, 4173:6

When the last member of the Body of Christ has finished his sacrifice, there will doubtless be many of the rich and influential to come forward then, to honor the humble ones and to garnish their sepulchers. R2788:6

Evidently he, Nicodemus, and a few others favorable to Jesus, had been carefully excluded from the session of the Sanhedrin condemning Jesus. R1809:2, 5561:4, 3374:6

But secretly -- Had this Joseph of Arimathea not been a rich man he probably would have been fully a follower of Jesus. R4173:5

Much more to their credit and advantage would it be for such as these to come boldly forward in the time of sacrifice and bind their own sacrifices to the horns of the altar. (Psa. 118:27) R2789:1

Too careful of their reputations to avow their interest in Jesus previously, their dilatory acknowledgment of Jesus reminds us of the peculiar difficulties which hinders all persons of wealth and influence. R2788:6

We hope that ultimately he became a disciple and footstep follower in the fullest sense. R4173:6

Besought Pilate -- According to Mark, he went "boldly" to Pilate and asked for the body of Jesus. R4173:5

Took the body -- Geike remarks: "It was no light matter Joseph had undertaken; for to take part in a burial at any time would defile him for seven days and make everything unclean which he touched (Num. 19:11), and to do so now involved a seclusion through the whole Passover week." R4173:6

Also Nicodemus -- A member of the Sanhedrin; evidently friendly to Jesus. R3374:6

With pleasure we find Nicodemus, another wealthy and influential ruler of the Jews, associated with Joseph in caring for our Lord's body. R4173:6

This is the third time Nicodemus comes into the Gospel records: first, visiting Jesus by night (John 3); second, interposing on Jesus' behalf (John 7:44-52); and here, "improving one last opportunity for service." R4173:6

Myrrh and aloes -- Aromatic and preservative, supposedly used by the Jews in wrapping up the dead. R4174:1

We should bring our flowers to cheer and comfort in life and not wait until death has prevented an appreciation of these. R4174:1

An hundred pound -- A hundred Roman pounds, 67 pounds of our weight. R4174:1

John 19:40

To bury -- Apparently, Jesus' declaration that he would rise the third day was not appreciated by his followers. R2476:3

John 19:42

Preparation day -- The Jewish Sabbath begins just as the "Day of Preparation" closes, at 6:00 p.m. Friday night. R4212:5*

Nigh at hand -- The tomb in which it is supposed he was buried is within a stone's throw of the supposed location of the cross. R3374:6

John 20

John 20:1

The first day -- Sunday morning. This day is reckoned as the third day and night which Christ spent in the tomb. R4212:5*

After the "high day," on the morning of the third day. NS795:3

Cometh Mary Magdalene -- With her were Mary, the mother of James and Salome, and Joanna, the wife of Chuza, Herod's steward. R4176:3

Arising earlier than her companions, Mary went alone. R3564:4, 3375:6

Mary had an appointment with others of the Lord's friends to go to the tomb with spices to embalm his body, a proceeding which had been impossible because of the late hour of his crucifixion and the intervening Sabbath day. R3564:4, 4176:3, 2477:5

The women lived in various parts of the city, and did not all arrive at the same hour. Mary Magdalene arrived first. R2797:5, 2477:5

Woman had the honor of being the first to be made acquainted with our Lord's resurrection--perhaps because the feminine mind is more activated by intuitive faith, rather than analytical faith; or, perhaps, as a special recognition of woman's tender sympathy. R2317:3, 2802:3, 940:6

How great was the reward of these devoted women--last at the cross, and first at the sepulcher, anxious to bestow upon the lifeless remains of their beloved Lord the last tokens of their esteem and love. R1816:6

While never commissioned to take the chief and public place in the preaching of the Gospel, yet they have a good place in this service of the truth. R2318:1

Not the Mary, sister of Lazarus and Martha, neither Mary the "sinner," who washed our Lord's feet with her tears in the Pharisee's house. R3564:4

It is a mistake to suppose that she was an unchaste woman. R2797:4

Called Mary Magdalene, probably because her home town was Magdala, a town on the sea of Galilee. R2797:5, 3564:4

Not only had she come from Galilee to Judea, but she was near the cross at the time of his death. R2797:5

Who at one time was possessed by evil spirits, but who, being freed from their domination became a faithful and loyal follower of Jesus. R3564:4, 3375:6

Early -- Taking advantage of the very earliest opportunity for embalming before decomposition could set in. R3564:4

When it was yet dark -- In the dawn of the day. The same is true of the Church's resurrection in the great day-dawn, or transition between the Gospel age and the Millennium. R92:1*

Unto the sepulchre -- To complete the work of embalming our Lord. NS795:3

Our common word cemetery signifies a sleeping place and the thought conveyed is in full accord with the Scripture teachings on the subject.

Because of our faith in the resurrection, we speak of death as a sleep. R4174:6

The stone taken away -- In their eagerness they forgot the great obstacle of the stone. But the sweet incense of their devotion arose to heaven and God sent his angel to remove the obstacle. R1816:6

John 20:2

Then she runneth -- It seems that Mary Magdalene separated from the other women and ran to tell Peter and John, while the others went to tell the rest of the disciples. B112

To the other disciple -- Mary hastened to the home of John, with whom Peter was lodging. R4176:3

Taken away the Lord -- The method adopted by our Lord was, first, to make very distinct to their natural sense the fact of his resurrection by the removal of his body from the tomb. R4176:2, 1817:4

We incline to the opinion that the flesh which was man's ransom-price, will never see corruption, but that it will be preserved by divine power as an everlasting testimony throughout eternity. R2478:6

John 20:3

Peter therefore -- The majority of the disciples evidently regarded their story merely as superstitious excitement, but Peter and John said, We will go and see for ourselves. B112

Came to the sepulchre -- Apparently after the other women had been there and gone their way. R3375:6, 2797:5, 2477:6

After she left them, Jesus appeared to the other women on the way. (Matt. 28:9,10) B112

John 20:4

Did outrun Peter -- Being younger. R4176:3, 2477:6

John 20:5

Linen clothes lying -- As though they had been laid aside by one awakening from sleep. R4176:2

John 20:6

Went into the sepulchre -- Being still more courageous than John. R4176:3, 2477:6

The linen clothes lie -- The power manifested by our Lord to create and dissolve clothing, was just as superhuman as the creating and dissolving of his assumed human body. R5222:6, B127

The seamless robe and his other clothes were divided among the Roman soldiers, and the grave clothes left folded away in the sepulcher.

Therefore the clothing in which he appeared on different occasions must have been specially created. R5222:5

John 20:8

And believed -- Their belief was not that the Lord had risen, but that Mary's story was true, that his body had been removed. R4176:4

John 20:9

For as yet -- Now they began to think of the words which our Lord had spoken respecting his resurrection on the third day and John "believed"--yet no doubt with much confusion of thought at first. R2477:6

Must rise again -- While the death of Christ was the greatest event in history, his resurrection from death holds second place. The death of Christ without his resurrection would have left our race just as helpless and hopeless as before. R3563:1

The resurrection of our Lord is the assurance of the resurrection of mankind. R1816:2

Neither we nor the Scriptures speak of the resurrection of Christ Jesus as a man. All the evidence shows conclusively that our Lord was resurrected a spirit being. R2477:2

Justice might properly object to the re-creation of Jesus as a man, but would have no ground whatever for objecting to the creation of a new creature. R2477:4

To understand correctly our Redeemer's resurrection: (1) permits us to see how he arose without taking back our ransom price; (2) that he is not now hampered by the lower or fleshly organism; (3) that he does not bear in glory the scars of the thorns, spear and nails; and (4) that the Church will not to all eternity bear the marks of imperfection. R2479:1

If he still bears the ignominious scars of Calvary, then shall we also bear the scars that mar us; and every mutilated martyr will be disfigured to all eternity. R1817:5

Our Lord's resurrected being was a direct gift from the Father, and not something which our Redeemer held over from a previous existence: it was a re-creation on a higher plane of existence. R2477:3

John 20:11

Mary stood without -- Having returned for a second visit. R2797:5, 4176:4, 3375:6

Looked into the sepulchre -- As though to reassure herself that it was empty. R2797:6

John 20:12

And seeth two angels -- The angels had doubtless been there when she was there before, but she had not seen them, because of their not choosing to "appear." R2797:6, 2477:6

Doubtless holy angels had in charge not only our Lord's body, but also the interest of his bereaved followers. R2797:6

In white -- In contrast, our Lord did not appear in shining garments, but in ordinary apparel, assumed for the purpose, in order that he might have the better opportunity for giving instructions his followers needed. R2797:6

Why weepst thou? -- Calculated to assuage her grief, for they manifested no grief, and by their question implied that she had no ground for it. R2798:1, 4176:4

John 20:14

Turned herself back -- A noise, or perhaps a shadow, calling her attention backward. R4176:4

John 20:15

The gardener -- Whom she presumed to be a servant of Joseph of Arimathea, the owner of the garden. R2798:1

Nothing about this person indicated who he was. He probably had on gardener's clothing--his own clothing, we know, had been appropriated by the soldiers. R3564:5, 5579:1, 3376:3

Lest they should get the idea he was still a man, our Lord appeared in various forms: a gardener, a stranger traveling to Emmaus, a stranger on the shore of Galilee calling to the fishermen. R4176:2, 3904:1, 2478:1, 1817:1; B125

According well with all we know of angels: they come in sudden and unaccountable ways, vanish out of sight as mysteriously as they come, and assume any features or appearance they choose. R1817:1

I will take him away -- Her thought seeming to have been that Joseph was unwilling to have his tomb cumbered longer, and had therefore ordered that our Lord's body be removed, and that probably the gardener had attended to the matter. R2478:1

She considered herself a trespasser to some extent. R2798:1

John 20:16

Jesus saith -- All who know the Master truly know his voice, know his message, know his spirit. As he expressed it, My sheep hear my voice and they follow me, they recognize not the voice of strangers. (John 10:5) R4176:5

With us as with Mary, sorrow sometimes fills our hearts and we see not the streams of joy which the Lord has for us; not until we hear his voice, his words, do we appreciate the truth. R4176:5

Mary -- Calling her by name, probably in the old familiar voice.

R3564:5, 3376:3

On no single occasion was Jesus known by his features as on previous occasions, but always by his words, his voice, or his conduct. R1817:2

Rabboni -- With a woman's intuition, she stopped not to inquire why there were no marks of the nails in his hands and in his feet. R2478:2

Women seem to be able to exercise faith more readily than men; hence our Lord appeared first to Mary, and through her prepared the hearts of the others. R2802:3

John 20:17

Touch me not -- Greek, haptomai, embrace. Do not tarry for further demonstration of your affection. B113

More properly translated, Cling not to me. R2798:1, 2478:2

Professor Young's Lexicon shows that the word here rendered "touch" has the significance of "hold on." R2317:6

Her first impulse was to embrace him, and to tarry in his presence. B113

"Now that I have found you again I cannot let you go." R2478:2

As though fearful that you will never see me more; my time to ascend has not yet come. R2317:6, 2036:6

Her thought evidently was, This is a vision, this will pass away and I will see my Lord no more; I will hold him tightly; where he is I must be.

R4176:5

Her love, her devotion, her persistence, gained for Mary the great honor of being the first to whom the Lord revealed himself after his resurrection. R2478:2, 1816:6

Mary's touch could do him no harm, for others touched him subsequently.

But our Lord would lead her mind away from a mere clinging in the flesh to a higher relationship and intimacy of spirit. R2798:1, 2478:2

We are not to merely hug the truth to our own hearts, but are to remember that it is also for others, and to take pleasure in dispensing it to them.

R3375:6

Recognizing her Master, she clasped him by the feet as though afraid he would leave her. R4714:1, 2798:1, 2317:6

Can we suppose that Mary would have clasped him by the feet and not have noticed the great wounds made by the nails? R2478:4

I am not yet ascended -- I will be here a while yet before I ascend.

Your great opportunity for clinging to me will be after I have presented to the Father, and he has accepted, the great atonement for sins. R2798:1, 2478:2; B113

He would have her remember that he had already said, "It is expedient for you that I go away." (John 16:7) Why, then, should she detain him? R4176:5
He had not been to Paradise, for Paradise is not yet even in existence.
He had not been to heaven, for he had been dead. R5133:1, 4176:6, 506:6;
F670; HG645:4, 596:6; NS575:6, 689:4

To my Father -- Our Lord disclaims being the Father, and declares that the Father is in heaven, and was not on earth, except representatively. R3788:3

Go to my brethren -- The intimation is that she should rather have been thinking of such a service instead of holding him by the feet. R4176:5
She was neglecting a great privilege and a great duty, to be the first to announce to the disciples positively that the Lord was alive again. R2478:2
We, too, have heard of the death and resurrection of Jesus and additionally have learned of God's grace through him. It is our privilege to carry the message to all of the brethren wherever they may be. R4176:5, 3375:6, 2798:4

This is the second instance in which our Lord ever addressed his disciples as "brethren," with all the word implies of fellowship and of all being children of the one Father. (Matt. 12:48) R2798:4

According to Matthew's account (28:1,19) "the other Mary" must have been near by, and have come forward by this time, and received a commission with Mary Magdalene to tell the disciples. R2478:3

Say unto them -- Having knowledge of his resurrection, she should become the newsbearer to the disciples. R3564:5

I ascend -- Jesus could not make any use of the ransom-price while still on earth. He could not even bring his disciples into fellowship with the Father. Eii

And your Father -- Emphasizing their relationship as "brethren."
R2798:4, 2317:6

Jesus is not the everlasting Father (Isa. 9:6) to the Church. The Scriptures reveal him as our elder Brother, and again as our Bridegroom. R3912:5, 1359:6

Not only was Jesus begotten of God, but every member of the anointed body is thus begotten. R905:2, 369:6, 297:1; E143

We are not begotten of the Spirit by our Lord Jesus, but by the Heavenly Father. NS102:6

Jehovah is the only Father, or giver of the divine nature. R297:1

To my God -- Our Lord Jesus was a god (mighty one) before he came into the world. But he is not The God, he never was and never will be. R5748:3

John 20:18

Told the disciples -- Undoubtedly much happier in the delivery of the message than if she had been permitted to remain clinging to the Lord, enjoying her knowledge somewhat selfishly. R2798:4

John 20:19

The same day -- The third manifestation on the day of his resurrection (counting that of Matt. 28:9 and John 20:14 as the same, and that of Luke 24:15 and 34 as the same). R2802:3

Five of Jesus' post-resurrection appearances were on the first day, the resurrection day, the remaining six being scattered through the remaining thirty-nine days of our Lord's presence. R3905:4

The first day of the week -- Still the first day of the week, the day of the resurrection. R4182:2

The doors were shut -- Very explicit--not that the apostles did not see them open, but that they did not open at all. R5237:5

The Lord warned the disciples that they would suffer persecution for his sake. No wonder that, when they met in the upper room, the doors were shut, and we may safely conclude, barred, bolted and locked. R2802:3, 3376:4, B127

The material body and clothing could not have gone through the walls while the doors were shut; a spirit being, however, is not limited by doors or locks or walls. R4182:2, 5623:1, 5579:1, 817:2

The security which was felt from having the doors fastened, caused the disciples to feel the more terror when they beheld a stranger with them. R2802:3, 5579:1

The disciples could see that our Lord had a different power altogether from what he had had before he died. He appeared time and again, a few minutes at a time, to demonstrate that he was a spirit being, and had power to come and go like the wind. R5237:6, 5222:5

Demonstrating the double lesson: first, that he was risen; secondly, that he was changed and was no longer the man Christ Jesus. R4176:2, 5352:3, 5222:5, 4714:2, 2796:3

Convincing them he was no longer the fleshly Jesus. They knew about angels; Mary herself had seen two in the sepulcher. They knew that angels could appear and disappear. R3565:1

The apostles and the five hundred brethren, converts to our Lord's teachings at the time, were natural men and needed such proofs as would appeal to the natural man. R4175:6

During the forty days after his resurrection he appeared, probably, not more than three hours in all. R5222:5

Less than twelve hours, or one eightieth of the entire time. B125

He was present, but unseen, during most of the forty days, appearing, in all, perhaps not more than seven times. R262:3, 122:5

The world will not see the graves of the Church open. A spiritual body, coming out of the grave, will not make any more of a hole in the ground than Christ's spiritual body made in the door. R263:5

Traditionally the same "upper room" where the Passover was eaten. NS795:6

The disciples were assembled -- We may be sure that the disciples were discussing the great and momentous event and the news they had indirectly received of our Lord's resurrection. R4182:2

Discussing their own safety and also the reports of Mary and the other women at the sepulcher. R3565:1

Came Jesus -- Immediately transferred from Emmaus. R4182:1, 2802:3

Spirit beings are able to transport themselves from place to place independent of physical laws. HG29:3

Simon and Cleopas must have immediately returned to Jerusalem from Emmaus to tell the disciples their experiences. R2478:3; B115

Perhaps in clothing resembling that which the soldiers had divided among themselves. R3565:4

After his resurrection he had the power to appear as a man, but he was not a man, and was no longer controlled by human conditions, but could come and go like the wind, even when the doors were shut. A231

We do not think that the apostles saw the body of our Lord in the resurrection. But what they saw was proof that he was no longer a human being, but a spirit being. R5625:6

The body in which our Lord appeared was materialized. This was not a deception. It was intended, on the contrary, to keep the disciples from being deceived. R5237:6

To make a body suitable for the occasion was no more of a miracle than were any of the other things connected with the resurrection. R5625:6

To produce a body with the same convolutions of the brain, the same individuality, the same soul, is a miracle so great we cannot conceive of it. Yet it is the very thing which God purposes to do for the whole human family. R5612:4

While Jesus could have brought the body, he did not do so. If he had done this they would have been deceived, supposing that he had arisen in his body of flesh in which he had been crucified. R5237:6

Had this appearance been the first manifestation, we can readily suppose that it would not have produced the faith and joy it did produce. R2802:5

Peace be unto you -- His familiar salutation. R4182:2

"My peace I give unto you" (John 14:27) were the Lord's words on the night of his betrayal, and "Peace be unto you" were his words when he first met the disciples together after his resurrection. R2802:6

It is only those who realize in Jesus their Redeemer and Lord, and who have given themselves to him to be his disciples, who can really receive of his peace--"the peace of God which passeth all understanding." (Phil. 4:7) R2802:6

His hands -- Wishing to emphasize the identity of his risen self with the crucified one. R2478:5

Nothing in this implies of necessity that the flesh which they saw was the identical flesh which had hung on the cross. R2478:5

Some Christians regard the assumed body as his spirit body. Many others have the idea that it was the same body that was crucified. This would prove, first, that the resurrection body is not glorious; second, that we know what a spirit body is; and, third, that our ransom price was taken back. B128

To claim that his "glorious" body is ingloriously marred with the wounds of spear and spike, and that the flesh he gave as our ransom he took back, would render null and void the finished work of Calvary. R1817:4

The evidence, added to what they had already heard, was convincing to all who were present. R2802:3

The appearing in the flesh would remove their fear and enable them to hear the better what he had to say to them. R3565:4

Then were the disciples glad -- The perplexities were not all gone; but they were getting the lesson that their Master was triumphant over death. R4182:2

So are all glad who realize this great fact of our Lord's resurrection from the dead and who have any conception whatever of its weighty importance as connected with the divine plan of our salvation. R3565:1

John 20:21

As my Father -- Affirming the title, "Son of God," officially applied to the man Christ Jesus before his birth. (Luke 1:31-35) NS256:6

Hath sent me -- This subservience and dependence upon the Father not only was true of our Lord while he was in the flesh and before he was made flesh, but is distinctly asserted of him since his resurrection. R3861:5

The Father's commission to The Christ was all addressed to the Head, we having no standing with the Father except through him, and no other commission than his for our service. R2803:2

So send I you -- I commission you. R2803:1

Our Lord Jesus in all matters acts as the representative of the Father, Jehovah, in the work of salvation. E35

He was the Father's representative; we are the special representatives of our Lord and Head, though, of course, through him and in him representatives also of the Father. R3565:4

As God has but one Church, so he has but one ordination for all who are his ministers. Jesus is the Chief Minister. His ordination took place at his baptism. All coming into him share in his ordination. R5971:5

I have done the work the Father gave me to do; I now appoint to you a great work, which you are to do in my name, even as I worked in my Father's name. R4182:3

Implying that we as his disciples are to be engaged in the same work that he is engaged in. R2803:2

To "fill up that which is behind of the afflictions of Christ" (Col. 1:24), and then to share with him in his glory in the blessing of all the families of the earth. R2803:2

John 20:22

He breathed on them -- Evidently symbolical, an illustration of his words, "Receive ye the holy Spirit." R2803:3

A pantomime teaching. R4182:3; Q45:2

He would have them understand that the holy Spirit would not be a person, but the Father's spirit and his own spirit--the breath or spirit of God.

R3565:5

Receive ye the Holy Ghost -- Thus representing that he would put his spirit, his disposition upon them which would enable them to carry out their consecration, even as he was so enabled by receiving the Spirit at his own baptism. R4182:3

He would have the disciples anticipate the blessing that was to come to them. R3565:5

He did this as a sample of his spirit power, influence, or mind in them, by which they would cast out devils, heal the sick, etc., in his name.

Q45:2, 639:1

He had received the Spirit without measure. He used it in his healings. So he gave his disciples of this power and sent them forth as his representatives in his name. Q332:2

I fancy that while John recorded it here, the fact is that it was done some time before, at the beginning of his ministry, when he sent forth the disciples in his name. Q332:2

John 20:23

Ye remit -- The twelve apostles in particular, and less particularly all the Lord's true members while in the world, will be under the guidance of the holy Spirit to such an extent that they would know the terms and conditions on which it would be possible to forgive sins. R3565:6, 2803:4, 2658:1

The apostles did define sin and the terms of forgiveness, justification, reconciliation, in a manner entirely satisfactory, in a manner in which our Lord himself never explained these things. R2803:3

Whoever can know about his own sins, should know also how to direct and assist others in knowing of the cancellation of their sins. R3565:6

This privilege was not granted to all believers, but merely to the apostles. It is not true that this authority descended from them to others, the clergy. R4182:4, 2803:4

They are remitted -- We may assure anyone who gives evidence of contrition, restitution to the extent of ability, faith in Christ and obedient desire to walk according to his ways, that his sins are forgiven.

R3565:6

Not that we have the power to forgive sins, but we, being intimate with the Master and knowing his mind on the subject, can speak for him as his mouthpiece to declare the terms of reconciliation. R3565:6, 2803:3

Not that the Father or the Son gave over to the apostles the power of remitting sins. Indeed, sins could not be remitted by power, but only by the satisfaction of justice. R2803:3

While it is not granted to any but the apostles to fix the limitations upon which sins are forgiven, it is the province of all the Lord's mouthpieces to make known these limitations to the Church. R4182:5

While this "ministry of reconciliation" (2 Cor. 5:18) belongs in its fullest sense to the next age, when the Atonement sacrifices are completed, yet even now, we may say to those who believe and repent, "Thy sins are forgiven thee." T100

Was not with them -- It is quite probable that Thomas was not permitted to be present at the first interview for the very purpose that there might be that demonstration, that it might be easier for some of us to believe.

R5625:2

This would imply that he had disbelieved the stories told by the sisters respecting the message of the angels and the Lord's manifestations to Mary. R2803:5

John 20:25

Put my finger -- He would not even trust to the sight of his eyes, which might be deceived. R2803:5

I will not believe -- Thomas seems to have been of a rather skeptical turn of mind. R5236:3, 2803:5

Some of us would find it difficult to believe from any lips that a person whom he had three days before seen dead and laid in the tomb had manifested by his presence to others that he was again alive. R5624:6

From one standpoint, the person who is inclined to be somewhat critical is to be approved. We would naturally incline to disapprove those who are too easily credulous, too easily persuaded. R5237:1

Had none of the apostles never seemed to doubt the Lord's resurrection, they might have failed to bring out convincing proof of the fact. R5237:1

John 20:26

After eight days -- Again on the first day of the week, under similar circumstances. R5625:1, 3376:5

Sunday, "the eighth day," the Jewish method of counting including both days. R2803:6

Probably again in the evening, the beginning of the eighth day from the time of our Lord's resurrection. R4182:5

Our Lord instituted the observance of the first day of the week, not by command, but by example. R1942:3, 4176:3

Thereafter the first day of the week was made an occasion for special meetings of the Lord's followers in remembrance of his revelations of himself on the first and on the eighth days. R4182:6

It was made sacred by our Lord's resurrection; it became, therefore, to his followers the day of hope. R4176:3

No wonder the early Church, appreciating the value of our Lord's resurrection, and the fact that they were no longer under Jewish law, gradually changed the day of divine worship from the seventh day to the first day of the week. R4176:2; B115; Q608

These first-day-of-the-week gatherings were love-feasts, and never intended to take the place nor in any sense to represent our Lord's Memorial Supper. R2771:4, 1942:6, 1787:1, 840:1, 803:1

Thomas with them -- Although still skeptical, he had become sufficiently interested to want to be present. R2803:6

While he appeared to many other disciples, he was specially careful to very clearly establish the fact of his resurrection to the apostles, carefully looking up each one of them. R1522:4

The doors being shut -- See comments on verse 19.

Peace be unto you -- How beautiful and how blessed it would be if the Lord's people whenever they come together, to meet each other and to meet Jesus in spirit, would greet each other with this salutation from the heart. R2803:6

Uttered in the right spirit it would imply that their hearts were in a peaceable condition, seeking each other's peace and welfare and to avoid strife. R2804:1

Saith he to Thomas -- Immediately addressing Thomas, thus indicating his thorough knowledge of his doubts and fears. R2804:1

Our Lord, while dismissing the self-satisfied, fault-finding quibbles of the Pharisees with dark or evasive answers, took time and care in making truth clear and plain to the humble, earnest seekers. B27

Reach hither thy finger -- He thus showed that he knew what Thomas had said without being told. B116

The fact that the Lord gave to him the desired evidence was an indication that he did not disapprove of his demand for more convincing demonstration than the others. R5625:1, 5579:4

Behold my hands -- Not of the body crucified and buried in Joseph's tomb, but a materialized body, with the same facial expressions, the same hands, the same feet, that the human body of Jesus had. R5625:6, 3376:4 His appearance with the wounds to convince Thomas shows he was ready to give any demonstration that was necessary, because unless the disciples really believed they could not do the work before them. R5579:4, 5237:1, 4183:1, 1522:4, 941:2

Thrust it into my side -- Using Thomas' own language. R4183:1, 2804:1 We are not informed whether or not Thomas did put his finger into the nail prints and his hand into the Lord's side; it matters not, for at all events his mind was convinced. R4183:1 We presume Thomas did as he said, although the account does not mention it. R2804:1

Be not faithless -- We do not think that Jesus reproved Thomas for his doubts. Some minds require more proof than do others. Undoubtedly the whole Church has been blessed by Thomas' action at this time. R5625:5, 5237:1, 4182:5, 2803:6 Gently reproving him. B125; R2318:5

But believing -- Jesus helped those who were in the right attitude of heart to receive him; he assisted their faith and encouraged their confidence. R4117:5

John 20:28

My God -- Not only Lord and Master, but he recognized him as his God, as a mighty one, superior to all mankind, worthy to be called by the name God, which signifies "mighty one." R4183:1

Thus we also properly recognize the Lord Jesus as our God, a mighty one, in harmony with and one with the Father. R4183:4

Not that Thomas supposed our Lord Jesus to be the heavenly Father. R4183:4, 2804:1

Men should honor the Son as they honor the Father. R4183:4

The word God is applied not only to the Father and to the Son, but also to the holy angels and on one occasion to men, to the seventy elders of Israel, whom Moses appointed in the wilderness. R4183:4, 2804:2

John 20:29

Because thou hast seen -- Thomas lived in the Jewish age, not among spiritual children of God, but in the fleshly house (until Pentecost). He was used to seeing things after the flesh, and had not his eye of faith yet opened. Yet Jesus expected more of him. R123:2

All the doubting Thomases in due time have the more tangible evidences in store for them. But more blessed are they who can now walk by faith.

R1675:1

Blessed are they -- While not reproving Thomas, he did tell him of a more excellent way: that, while it is good to believe upon the basis of physical sight and physical touch, there is a still higher attainment of faith. R2804:2

Others who could believe without demanding the physical test, were the more blessed. R2318:5, 1450:5

Speaking of those of us who live subsequently, and not of the disciples.

We have testimonies and evidences that Thomas did not have. R5625:1

He was seen of some 500 at one time. (1 Cor. 15:6) Afterward the brethren were obliged to believe without seeing, merely on the testimony of others.

We are in this same category ourselves. R5237:2

That have not seen -- The stronger evidence was that which was not addressed to natural sight. B125

All the Christian Church throughout the Gospel age have believed without seeing the outward demonstration. Whether on this account the Lord would be specially pleased with us, we know not. But we think not. R5237:2, 2804:4

Yet have believed -- Following this appearance was a long interval apparently in which there was no appearance whatsoever, and the disciples, discouraged, resolved to go back to their homes in Galilee. R3905:4

Many other signs -- Greek, seemion, has the significance of proof or evidence. D598

In view of the importance of the resurrection of Jesus, we cannot wonder that the Scriptures lay great stress upon that fact, and deduce various proofs and demonstrations intended to establish our faith in it. R3564:1

It took several of these manifestations to attest the fact that he was a changed being. R5238:1

Manifesting himself occasionally, yet invisible to them the remainder of the period. He would have them learn gradually not to expect him again in the flesh. R3565:4

He must lead their minds step by step, and their thoughts link by link, from the cross and the tomb to an appreciation of his present exaltation as a spirit being. R2797:4

Our Lord purposed that these eleven should be thoroughly convinced. Unless they had absolute faith in him as the ascended Redeemer, they would not have been prepared to receive the holy Spirit at Pentecost. R5625:2

The necessity for these proofs lay in the fact that in the divine plan this Gospel age was marked out to be a faith age. But faith needs reasonable foundations upon which to build its superstructure. R2796:1

These forty days seem to be the most important part of our Lord's ministry; for on them depended all the success of the Gospel message which was to be launched by these very men to whom he appeared. R5625:3

John 20:31

These are written -- The Gospel narrative of the words and acts of our Lord, and also the words and acts of the apostles. R3521:6, 2220:5, 1046:6* Instead of using legions of angels to communicate with man, or instead of using a system of instant punishments and rewards, or instead of blazoning the message in letters of fire in the sky in all languages. R3521:3

"It has pleased God through the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe." (1 Cor. 1:2) R3521:3, 3580:2, 2220:5

That ye might believe -- The entire object and purpose of all of God's messages during this Gospel age, and hence the object and purpose of all the preaching done in his name and by his authority. R3521:2

The world thinks it strange that believers should be saved on account of their belief rather than from the standpoint of works. R3580:2

That Jesus -- The first prerequisite is a faith in the personality of God and in his willingness to be approached; second, a faith in Jesus, by whom alone we can approach the Father. R3580:4, 2220:2

Is the Christ -- More than a mere belief that Jesus lived and Jesus died, a man of Nazareth. The word Christ signifies Messiah and Messiah signifies God's appointed King. R3580:4

A further part of this hope of which Jesus, the Messiah, is the center, is that those who are now called, the obedient through faith, shall be joint-heirs with the Master in the great Kingdom. R3580:5

To believe anything less seems to be lacking the faith here enjoined; to believe all of this seems to be essential to discipleship. R3521:6

The Son of God -- Not the son of Joseph. R3521:6

That believing ye might have life -- No hope is here held out of life without believing, and no hope held out on a vague faith will be satisfactory. R3521:6

Faith marks every step of progress for those who are the called according to the divine purpose during this Gospel age. R3580:3

Believing is not only the precedent to the life to come, to be attained at the resurrection, but it is also a precedent to a proper life in the present time. R3580:6

Not that merely believing will bring the life, for "devils also believe and tremble" (James 2:19), but that believing brings them into that relationship with God where it is possible for them to become followers of Jesus. R4188:4

If of these early Christians it was required that their faith should bring a corresponding life, much more should this be true of us who have still greater knowledge of the divine plan. R3581:5

They are the oracles of God and the principles of his holy law by which every man must be judged as worthy or unworthy of eternal life. R2057:5
Life eternal through the merit of him who loved the world and bought it with his own precious blood. R3522:5

Few come under the conditions of this text. R3522:2

Through his name -- Through the power, through the authority of this Messiah--by virtue of the work which he has accomplished for them and the door of opportunity which he has opened to them. R3580:6

John 21

John 21:1

After these things -- The third manifestation to his disciples, presumably three or four weeks after the Master's resurrection. R5052:1, 4183:2, 3905:4, 2806:1

Five weeks after the crucifixion. R941:2

The sixth manifestation of his resurrection. R4183:2

Our Lord's fifth manifestation, some would say, seventh. R2806:1

The delay was evidently for the purpose of testing the faith of the apostles and of leading them to reach a conclusion respecting their future work, which Jesus wished to correct. R5052:1

During this interval we may be sure that our Lord was frequently with the apostles in spirit, watching over their interests. R4183:2

Jesus shewed himself again -- During the forty days it was his chief concern to gather them again and to reestablish their faith in him as the long-looked-for Messiah, by proving to them the fact of his resurrection. R940:6

Notice how our Lord gave his instructions--not all at once, hastily, but little by little, and in such manner as to make the deepest impressions. R940:6

At the sea of Tiberias -- The journey to Galilee and the resumption of business presumably took another week. R5052:1

John 21:2

Simon Peter -- The oldest of the disciples. R941:2, 3377:3

Nathanael -- He whom Jesus termed "an Israelite indeed, in whom there was no guile," (John 1:47) who, though not one of the apostles was one of the "brethren." R941:3

Commonly understood to be another name for Batholomew. R2572:1

The sons of Zebedee -- James and John, the youngest of the disciples, had formerly been partners with Peter in the fishing business. R941:2

Two other -- Probably Andrew and Philip. R941:3

John 21:3

I go a fishing -- At least two Sundays had passed without any further manifestation, and, giving up hope, they decided to return to the fishing business, and did so. R5052:1, 5670:1, 5588:6, 4183:2 They probably waited in expectation at Jerusalem over the third and possibly over the fourth Sunday. R2806:2

The death of our Lord was a great trial of faith to all the disciples. R3179:1

He wished the disciples to reach the extremity of thinking in order that they might be prepared to receive the instructions he had to give respecting their future course. R2806:3

The apostles became discouraged. They were about to leave the work of fishing for men. R5570:4, 5588:6, 4183:2

Some, who have been zealous for the colporteur work under much less favorable conditions than the present and the future, are going into worldly business. R5824:5

As active men, in the prime of life, they must be doing. R2806:2, B117

Go with thee -- Speedily the partnership revived. They returned to Palestine and took possession of the ships and fishing tackle which they had abandoned three years before. R4183:3, 3377:1

How foolish they thought it would seem for them to convince the people that a man, crucified as a malefactor, was indeed the Messiah! How foolish it would seem to tell of his resurrection! R5052:2, 941:3

How could they tell others of their hopes in a King who had been crucified, and whom they, although he was risen, could no longer see nor point out to others? R2806:2

They had left all to follow him, but now they could no longer follow him. Everything was changed when he was changed, so far as they could see. R2806:2

Probably the rest also turned again to their old employments. B117

They went forth -- Who can doubt that the Lord was among them often whilst they were preparing, and that he had all things arranged which would make this a valuable lesson. R941:3, B117

They caught nothing -- By miraculous power exercised in some manner unknown to us, he hindered fish from going into their nets that night. R2806:3

If they should have great success and become swallowed up with interest in the business, they would soon be unfit for the higher service, so the Lord taught them the lesson that the success or failure of our efforts in any direction he can control if he please. R941:3; B118

It looked indeed as though God was punishing them for the course they had taken in becoming disciples of Jesus. Everything was going wrong. R5052:2, 4183:3, 2806:4; NS197:3

We know not what is for our highest welfare. Sometimes those things which we crave and desire to grasp, considering them to be good, might really be to our disadvantage. R2806:4

John 21:4

Knew not -- He was in another form. R262:3, 3377:2; NS197:4

John 21:5

Jesus saith unto them -- He would demonstrate he had a mission for them to perform in connection with the fishing for men which they had not accomplished, and which his death and resurrection would not interfere with. R2806:3

Have ye any meat? -- Any fish for sale. R5052:2, 2806:4

John 21:6

On the right side -- They felt that such a change would be unavailing, because the boat was small anyway and continually turning, and what was one side now would be the other side shortly. NS197:5; R3377:2

To all who have a talent for teaching, and who see the truth clearly, we suggest you become fishers of men and women rather than of children; and fish for the consecrated in Christ Jesus. R534:1

They cast therefore -- So humbled were they by their disappointment that they did not stop to argue the question. R2806:5

The multitude of fishes -- A prophecy of their success as fishers of men. They were to catch multitudes. The prophecy has been amply verified in the long fishing season of the Gospel age. R1716:1

John 21:7

Disciple whom Jesus loved -- Specially loved. R1254:4

Jesus loved all mankind to the extent that he "tasted death for every man." (Heb. 2:9) But among men he had his special loves. R439:1, 1254:5
Quick and impressionable. B118; R941:4

It was the loving John who first realized that the miracle implied that the stranger on the shore was the Lord. R4183:3, 3377:5

It is the Lord -- John remembers the feeding of the multitudes, the strange days in which they were living, and that Jesus had appeared to them already. R262:3, 122:5; B118

Though, since his resurrection, we cannot recognize him by his appearance. He now appears in a variety of forms; but we know each time that it is he by some peculiar circumstance. B118

They knew instinctively that the unknown stranger was none other than their Master. They remembered a very similar experience at the time they were first called to leave their nets. R5052:3, 4714:1

Brethren, the Lord only could do this. Don't you remember that it was just so when he first called us--we had labored all night and caught nothing until he told us, "Let down your nets for a draught." (Luke 5:4-9) R941:4

Simon Peter -- Whose heart still burned as he remembered the Lord's words, and perhaps as he remembered also his own weaknesses. R2806:5

Cast himself into the sea -- Fearing that the Master would disappear, even before he could get to him. R5052:3, 3377:3, 2806:6

His impetuous, ardent temperament, while it yet overflowed with love for the Master, was constantly a great disadvantage to him. R628:5*

Peter evidently was timid when he reached the land and waited and helped to pull the net full of fish to the shore. R4183:5

John 21:8

Other disciples came -- They hastened to the shore, more anxious to meet him than to care for the fish they had caught. NS197:5

John 21:9

Fish laid thereon -- The Lord gave them evidences that all success depended on him, that without him they could do nothing. They toiled all night, but caught nothing. In the morning Jesus was on the shore with the fish already cooked. R5824:5

He had power not only to give them fish in the ordinary way, but to provide cooked fish by miraculous power if it better served his purpose to do so. R2806:6, 5589:1

Demonstrating in a most practical manner that the divine power by which he had hitherto provided for their necessities, and had at times fed multitudes, was still his. R2806:3

While we have no objection to those who claim they have better health as a result of a vegetable diet, we do object to the claim of special sanctity and acceptableness with God on account of this diet. R3098:3

Some say that animal foods are proper enough for common people, but not for believers who have entered "the resurrected life." Twice, at least, Jesus ate fish after his resurrection. (Luke 24:41-43) R1855:6

And bread -- They learned the lesson that, under his direction and care, they would not be left to starve. B119; R941:5

John 21:10

Jesus saith -- There is no indication that on this occasion our Lord appeared with marks in his hand or his feet or his side. R4183:5, 2806:6

John 21:12

Come and dine -- Our Lord, while dismissing the self-satisfied, fault-finding quibbles of the Pharisees with dark or evasive answers, took time and care in making truth clear and plain to the humble, earnest seekers. B27

Who art thou? -- They were so sure that it was he that they could not think of even seeking to question the fact by inquiry. R2806:6, 5052:3

Knowing -- Feeling sure from the miracle, for they saw not the print of the nails. R262:3, 5052:3, 2806:6, 122:5

For on this, as on other occasions, the eyes of their understanding being opened, they knew him though he had "another form," different from the one they had been used to seeing before he died. B119; R941:5, 262:3, 122:5

John 21:14

The third time -- His manifestations to the women on the morning of the resurrection, and later to the two as they went to Emmaus, are not counted--only counting his appearance in the upper room, and later to Thomas as well. R5052:1

John 21:15

When they had dined -- It was in connection with the eating of natural food that twice our Lord made himself known to the disciples. Probably both were on the first day of the week. Is it any wonder, then, that they formed the habit of gathering on "the first day of the week" to "break bread"? R1787:1, 1421:2, 1014:2, 840:1

It is not probable that they ate in silence, yet their conversation is not recorded, except that none of the disciples felt at liberty to inquire if it were the Lord, confident that it was he. R4183:5, 2806:6

Simon -- His old name; possibly an intimation that he had not manifested in the last few days the rock-like qualities implied in his surname, and was now inclined to leave the work for the Church for secular business. R2806:6

While the Lord addressed Peter specially, the instructions were for all the "eleven," and applicable, though not in the same degree, to all ministers of the truth today. R2808:2, 3377:3

More than these -- These boats and nets pertaining to the fishing business. R5052:3, 4183:6, 3377:3, 2806:6, 1824:1, 941:6; NS197:5 He may have meant more than these nets and boats, or more than these other disciples. R4183:6

Not the other disciples, but his fishing tackle and business prospects. R1823:6, 941:6

Once, in obedience to the Lord's call, he had left these to follow him, and then he went back to the old business. R1824:1

It was as though he had said, Are you willing again, Simon, in the face of all the public prejudice and hate, to leave your business and social prospects and go and preach the Kingdom? R1824:1

The same question is addressed to every consecrated follower of the Lord. Lovest thou me more than the business pursuits and prospects, social ties and pleasures, ease, fame, wealth, a good name, or any earthly good?

R1824:4, 4184:2, 2808:6

He will have in that select Little Flock only such as love him supremely--more than they love houses or lands, husbands or wives, or children, or any earthly thing. (Matt. 10:37) R2808:6, 942:1

It is necessary that we have more or less contact with the world, business, home duties and social amenities. The question is how to balance them with our duties toward the Lord. R2808:6

Many of the Lord's professed followers today fish for earthly things: for money, or influence, or a great name, or self-gratification, or some thing of the sort. R942:3

I love thee -- Our Lord used the word agapao for love, while Peter used a different word, phileo, supposed to signify a warm, personal affection.

R4183:6

I affectionately love thee. He used a word expressing fondness of love.

R5052:4

Peter thus states his personal attachment and devotion to the Lord, but refrains from claiming the highest love for which our Lord inquired.

R2807:2

This humility was an excellent sign, showing Peter had learned a needed lesson and had ceased to boast, but rather to fear his own weakness.

R2807:2

Feed my lambs -- The Lord used three different Greek words in his three exhortations: the first time he exhorts to feed the lambs; the second time to care for the sheep; the third to feed the weak or delicate sheep.

R2808:1

This gives us three views of the Lord's flocks: the young, the beginners, the lambs who need the "milk of the Word;" (1 Pet. 2:2) the more mature sheep who need guidance and direction; and the weak sheep, weak in faith, who are to be fed and cared for. R2808:1

These three classes of the Lord's flock are to be found today: the young, the advanced and strong, and the weak and delicate who need special assistance. R2808:2

The lambs and sheep make one flock, and there is but one Shepherd, who superintends and cares for all. "Feed my lambs!" "Feed my sheep!" Was this not saying: Neglect no part--Feed the flock? R118:3*

My little sheep. R4183:6, 2807:1

While the babes in Christ, because of their very feebleness and inexperience, have much special care bestowed upon them, it is not the will of God that they should always remain babes. R3622:1, 1568:1

The "lambs" should be fed until they become "sheep." R5052:5

A partial restoration of Peter to the work of ministry. R4183:6
Although not directly reproving Peter, intimating that by his mistake and denial he had forfeited his place as one of the apostles and indirectly implying that he might not be a full shepherd amongst the sheep. R4184:1
Two reasons have led to neglect of feeding with "the doctrines of Christ"--a misconception that now is the time for the world's conversion, and the error that eternal torture is the doom of the unconverted. R5052:6

John 21:16

Feed my sheep -- "Tend my sheep." R5052:4, 4184:1
Care for, serve, the sheep. R4184:1
The sheep should be tended, cared for, guided, instructed. R5052:5
Give your thought, attention and care to them, rather than to these fishing implements and boats. R2807:1
Not yet the full liberties of shepherding. R4184:1

John 21:17

The third time -- The third time must have sent the memory of Peter back to the scene in Caiaphas' Judgment Hall, when he denied his Master the third time, even with cursing. R5052:4, 4184:1, 2807:1, 941:5
Thrice had Peter denied the Lord, and now thrice would the Lord have him reaffirm his devotion to him, and receive three additional assurances of his ample reinstatement in his love and favor. R1823:3
The three inquiries our Lord made of Peter were the only rebukes ever given him as punishment for his denial of our Master. We might have felt it necessary to make him humbly apologize first. R5053:4, 2807:6
Let us learn well this lesson of reproving others very gently, by a hint rather than by a direct charge, by an enquiry respecting their present heart condition, rather than respecting a former condition, in which we know that they have erred. R2807:6
Lovest thou me? -- Are you sure that you have even the duty love, Peter? R2807:2
Here Jesus uses the same word that Peter had used, as though he questioned the affection and depth of Peter's love. R5052:4
It began to imply to poor Peter that the tendency with him was to love and serve business more than Christ. R941:5
When our Lord said "lovest" in the first two inquiries, he used the word agapas, which signified love in its most disinterested form. Now he uses phileis, duty love, obligatory love of relatives, even where the deeper love is lacking. R2807:1
Peter was grieved -- He felt remorse. R941:5
The one most praiseworthy trait in Peter's character was his perseverance inspired by his ardent love. If he made a misstep, he was just as quick to realize it and to retrace it. R628:5*

To feel that there was possibly a shadow of doubt between him and the Lord which his repentance had not fully removed. R1824:1

Thou knowest all things -- Thou knowest my weakness. He immediately threw himself upon the Lord's mercy. R941:5

I love thee -- I would not send thee on such an important mission did I not know thy love supreme for me and mine. And all thus sent I will endure with power from on high. R628:6*

Peter was sifted, and almost failed; but, being "clean," true at heart, he was enabled to come off victorious. C189

Feed my sheep -- Make that, not fishing, your business. R941:5

With this third confession our Lord restored him fully as a bishop or shepherd, authorized not only to feed the lambs and tend the sheep, but finally to feed the sheep also. R4184:1

Specially reaffirming Peter's commission. R1522:4

Peter: I called you once to be a fisher of men, and, knowing your heart to be still loyal and zealous, I renew your commission as a fisher of men.

B119

Had Peter continued in the fishing business and neglected the sheep, his actions would have contradicted his reply. This would have been loving in word, but not in deed and in truth. (1John 3:18) R941:6

The sheep should be fed with stronger meat than that which the lambs could appropriate. R5052:5

In harmony with these words, the chief work of his followers has been to minister to the needs of the spirit-begotten sheep. R5052:4, 5670:4

It is in the service of the Church, our fellow sheep, that we are to sacrifice present interests. As Christ laid down his life for us, we ought also to lay down our lives for the brethren. (1 John 3:16) R942:3

So he says to all his followers. Not that we can have the place of apostles, but that each of us may find opportunities for tending and assisting, feeding, nourishing the flock of God. R4184:3

It is proper, nevertheless, that each one for himself provide things decent and honest in the sight of all in a temporal way, and also give attention to his own spiritual feeding and refreshment. R4184:3

Paul, addressing the elders of Ephesus, counseled that they "feed the flock of God, which he had purchased with the blood of his own Son." (Acts 20:28) R5052:5

Whoever is heedless of the sheep should not in any sense of the word be recognized as an elder, a leader. R4184:3

Do not offer as an excuse for not feeding the sheep, that there are others more capable of feeding them. This is not the language of love. The loving servant inquires, Lord, how much can I do? R942:2

As for Peter and his denial, and as to offenses which may come to us, we may know that some corrective discipline always follows, but we are not to attempt to inflict these penalties, nor to impress a condemnation. R2808:1

Sending them forth with joy to prove their love by their works. R1824:4

Thou shalt be old -- Not a very bright prospect to hold out before Peter; it meant a further testing of his loyalty. R4184:4

There is a touching tenderness in the epistles of the aged Apostle Peter, showing that, while he realized that the time of his departure was drawing nigh, his solicitude for the growth and development of the Church was increasing. R3215:1

John 21:19

What death -- A violent death. R4184:5

John 21:21

What -- It seems to be a trait of human nature to think of companionship, even in trouble, and many, like Peter, have wondered why they should have trials different from those which come upon others of the Lord's flock. R2808:1

This man -- John, who in some measure or degree, represents the last living members of the "little flock." R4870:1, 4185:1, 2808:5, 980:2, 581:6, 528:6*, 473:5, 293:5

The things which happened to John are the things which have happened or will happen to the Church. R4185:1

John 21:22

That he tarry -- John did not tarry, but a class whom he in some respects illustrated has tarried, a class who see with the eyes of their understanding the visions and revelations that John saw in symbols, in a trance. R4870:1

What is that to thee? -- Our Lord's refusal to answer may be considered rather in the light of a reproof to Peter and a lesson to us all. R2808:4

Almost curt; amounting to, Mind your own business and you will have plenty to do, though it was stated in a more polite form. R4184:5

If we allow ourselves to wonder why some fellow-disciple is apparently not receiving the same amount of chastisements or trials, if we become judge of the Lord and his providences, the result will be disastrous to ourselves. R4184:5

Applying this lesson to ourselves, some are disposed to query as to how long they must wait for their resurrection change. Let us leave the entire matter to the Lord. R4185:1

If the harvest work is under the Lord's supervision at all, the Lord is responsible, and not we, and can be trusted to accomplish his own ends in his own best way. R4067:2

Follow thou me -- Referring not merely to a spiritual following, but he walked along the shore of the sea, the disciples following. R2808:4

John 21:23

Then went this saying -- The saying has gone abroad and has been generally received that this part of the Church will not die. R473:5, 293:5
Illustrating the dangers of oral tradition. R434:5*

Yet Jesus said not -- It was purely an inference on the part of the disciples. R2808:5

He shall not die -- The fact is that he outlived all the other apostles. R4185:1

Tarry till I come -- Neither Jesus nor the apostles said we should not die, but that we would tarry till the Master's presence and be changed in a moment and not sleep. R473:5, 293:5

John 21:25

And there are also -- This is one of the few verses in our common English Bible which is really not part of the Bible proper (from the apostles). This was added by unknown parties between the fifth and tenth centuries. R1536:6, 1314:3, 278:2, 207:1, 62:6; F202; Q325:T; CR245:6
What a whopper! Somebody who wanted to make it large, felt at liberty to add that verse without any authority. Q325:T
When copying by pen, the transcribers frequently made a parenthetical note of their thought upon the subject. These notes were mistaken by subsequent copyists for parts of the inspired texts. R62:6

Acts

General

St. Luke is the author of this, which some have described as the best of all Church histories. As the record closes abruptly, before the death of St. Paul, it is but reasonably supposed that the book was finished about AD 63. The first verse alludes to his previously written work, the Gospel by St. Luke, in which he set forth what Jesus began to do and to teach. There is a bare suggestion that the writer had in mind that his present treatise related to a continuation of our Lord's work by his holy Spirit through his apostles and followers. This standpoint of view given is a glorious sweep or vista and connects up the work which our Lord began at Jordan and finished at Calvary, and has since been carrying on by his Spirit and through his Church, and will continue to the consummation of the Church. "St. Luke, a poet, and more than a poet, tells us how the light of Christianity flashed from Jerusalem to Antioch--from Antioch to Ephesus, and to Troas, and to Philippi--from Philippi to Athens and Corinth, until at last it was kindled in the very palace and pretorium of the Caesars at imperial Rome." R4304:3,6

He takes up the narrative substantially where he left it in the Gospel of Luke--the ascension of Christ. It is reasonable to assume that since the Lord used Luke's abilities in connection with the work of recording the facts of that time, he was guided of the holy Spirit in the ascertainment of the facts, which his education and natural talents eminently qualified him to state succinctly. R2924:1

". . . the modest chronicler of the Acts of the Apostles has purposely withdrawn himself from the gaze of his readers. He never tells us who he was, nor asks for our sympathy or our praise for the many hardships which he and St. Paul bore, and the many heroisms they displayed together. He never even betrays his presence except by the use of the pronoun, we.' All we know for certain is that the beloved physician never failed his friend, but was alone with him when he made ready to be offered'." (From a biography of Luke in the "London Spectator," quoted on R3244)

Acts presents a valuable account of the doings of the apostles after their anointing with the holy Spirit, of the establishment of the Christian Church, and of the first preaching of the good news to the Gentiles. R1145:6 A careful review of its lessons is earnestly commended to all, that they may bring before the mind, connectedly, the noble self-denial, the unwavering confidence in God, the implicit obedience, the loyalty and faithfulness and untiring zeal of the Lord's chosen Apostle to the Gentiles, affording a most noble example for study and imitation. The book entitled, "The Acts of the Apostles" might be more properly captioned, The beginning and early history of the Christian Church; it is a volume well worthy of study and meditation. As we pursue the divinely guided course and mark the inspiration, zeal and faithfulness of the apostles, we come with deeper interest and with the profoundest reverence to the study of their inspired epistles. R1581:3,6

The apostles, although unlearned men, were evidently strong characters, and under the Lord's teaching their lack of worldly wisdom and education was more than compensated for in "the spirit of a sound mind." It is not strange, therefore, that these men were uniformly recognized by the early Church as guides in the way of the Lord--specially appointed instructors--"pillars in the Church," next in authority to the Lord himself. They are still preaching to us, still instructing the faithful, still encouraging, still admonishing, still reproving. Their death did not stop their ministry. They still speak, still witness, are still mouthpieces of the Lord to his faithful. F213-216

The former treatise -- The book of Luke. He takes up the narrative substantially where he left it in the Gospel. R2924:1, 1415:3, 2818:1, 4304:3, 5829:1

Finished about AD 63. R4304:3

Theophilus -- Supposed to have been a person of considerable dignity and influence inasmuch as he is elsewhere styled "most excellent," a title which implied a considerable social or political rank. R2924:1

That Jesus began -- His present treatise related to a continuation of our Lord's work finished at Calvary, and has since been carrying on by his Spirit and through his church. R4304:3, 4254:6

His ministry still continues in the person of the members of his body who are still on this side the veil. R2924:2, 2818:1

Jesus was the personal name of our Lord and Head, and Christ his official name. R2818:1

Acts 1:2

Until the day -- His eleventh appearance after his resurrection, although some of the instances recorded may be duplications. R3905:5, 2802:3

Probably seventh manifestation. R5589:3

Had given commandments -- Explaining things they needed to know, fully convincing all. R5589:2, 1522:4

The apostles -- Jesus selected only twelve. F211; R5829:1

Whom he had chosen -- As his mouthpieces. F211; R1523:3

Other orders of the clergy were not approved by the Lord. F203

Acts 1:3

He showed himself -- The flesh bodies in which he manifested himself appeared and disappeared miraculously; he came and went as the wind. R2455:3, 5416:2, 2081:6

He did not appear to them as a spirit being to strike them down with the glory of his presence, shining above the brightness of the sun, as he subsequently appeared to Saul of Tarsus. R5830:2

These bodies were materialized; and of course clothing was materialized at the same time, for he was not naked. R5830:2

Simply for the purpose of assuring them that he was no longer dead and that he was no longer controlled by human conditions. R2455:3

In a way to convince them he had been "changed" and was of a higher nature than before. R666:2

A peculiar expression implying his invisible presence before manifesting himself. R2082:2

Infallible proofs -- Of the resurrection of Christ. R1591:3, 2809:1, 3564:1, 2796:3

For the purpose of demonstrating unquestionably to his disciples the fact that he was no longer dead. R5830:2

The guarantee that all the redeemed shall have an awakening from death and an opportunity to attain a complete resurrection to all lost in the fall. R1591:3

Being seen of them -- Occasionally. These appearances were infrequent. R3564:1, 2081:3

Some ten or eleven times, mostly for a few moments each time. R5830:2

Forty days -- But probably not for over four hours in all that time. R2081:3

To provide a foundation for their faith. R2796:3

Kingdom of God -- Everything said and done, directly or indirectly, appertained to the Kingdom. R4305:2, 5829:2

That it was spiritual; and that he had to suffer as a prelude to the glory to follow. R2081:2

That before the earthly kingdom could be established a heavenly kingdom must be inaugurated and that they were eligible to a place in the heavenly. R2924:3

Of which his followers are to be members, sharing his throne. R5829:2

Not the kingdoms of this world, falsely called Christendom, as claimed by Catholics and Protestants. R5829:2

Explanatory of the opening work of the Gospel dispensation. R1415:3

Being assembled -- Eating together with them on the shore of Galilee. B119

Wait for the promise -- For the begetting of the spirit of God as sons and heirs. R1415:6, 4305:3, 5589:2; B120

While our Lord went to the Father to present the merit of his sacrifice on their behalf. R4306:2, 2926:4, 2082:4

While waiting they very properly spent the time in prayer and in searching of the Scriptures. R549:3, 2818:3, 4306:1; B121

Before participating in public witnessing. R2925:4

Implying their unfitness for the work as natural men. R2925:3, 4306:2

Of the Father -- They were already in faith relationship to God, permitted to pray to him as their Father. R4306:1

Ye -- Only the "you" class, members of the body of Christ. R2996:6, 2820:3

Baptized -- That to be baptized with the spirit, is to be filled with the spirit, seems clear by comparing the promise of Christ and the fulfillment. (Acts 2:4) R198:6*

With the Holy Ghost -- "Ghost" is old English for "spirit"--it is really obsolete, and misleading. R2818:3

The baptism of the holy Spirit at Pentecost. R1522:6, 2820:4, 2996:6, 5589:3

A very much more important baptism than John's. R2996:6, 5589:3

Jesus did not intimate that the holy Spirit would be himself, but a power or influence emanating from God and himself. R2088:2, 2818:2

Wholly different from any previous gift of the holy Spirit, except upon our Lord Jesus himself. R2082:4

Representing that Christ's merit had been offered on their behalf, and that they had been adopted into God's family. R4305:4

The outpouring of the holy Spirit did not represent Christ's second advent and the establishment of his kingdom. R2088:2

Not many days hence -- Was indefinite purposely so that they might be continually watching for it. R2818:3

A question close to their hearts was, Will the kingdom also come at the same time? R1416:1

Acts 1:6

Come together -- For the last time, at Jerusalem and at the Mount of Olives. B119; R3905:5

Wilt thou at this time -- The apostles expected one coming of Messiah to accomplish the ransom, restoring and blessing. But God had provided "some better thing for us." A93; OM223; HG342

Restore again the kingdom -- For which we long and for which you have taught us to pray and to watch. A275

They recognized no "lost" tribes, but a reunited Israel. R2085:2

Their previous idea had been of an earthly kingdom, but now they perceived a change. R2082:4

To Israel -- The kingdom had been taken away from Israel in the days of Zedekiah, king of Judah. (Ezek. 21:25-27) R5589:3

The disciples understood that the restoration of Israel would be incident to our Lord's taking dominion of earth. R4305:4

Not for you to know -- Yet. B120; R2924:5

He did not say it would not be proper for them to know some time; if prophecy was not designed to be understood, there could be no reasonable object in giving it. B18, 19; R1796:3, 5829:5, 5589:3, 5305:5

He implied that their conception of the prophecies was quite proper, but that the time for their fulfillment had not yet come. R2818:4, 4305:5, 2924:5; A80

He had not disclosed it to the angels, not even to the Logos. Nor did he discuss its time features fully with our Lord Jesus while he was in the flesh. R5943:1

Jesus did not pretend to tell the people how long or short the time would be before the establishment of his kingdom. He declared the matter fully in the divine care and not proper to be revealed to God's people then. R5829:5

His answer, though not explicit, did not contradict their hopes. A275
The times -- Greek, kairos, fixed times, as in "Times of the Gentiles." (Luke 21:24) B78

The seasons -- Time features of the divine plan. R5943:1, 530:3*

Not implying, however, that our Lord and his disciples and the angels would never know times and seasons. R4305:5, 5589:3; OM6

In due time each feature would be revealed as "meat in due season." (Matt. 24:45) R4305:5, 5829:5, 5589:4; B120

Put in his own power -- Authority. R4305:4

Grasp. R530:3*

Christ never claimed to be equal in power. E36

Acts 1:8

Shall receive power -- Ability to understand times and seasons and the deep things of God. R1416:1, 530:3*; B120

None were begotten of the holy Spirit until Pentecost. R5361:6

Is come upon you -- "When the spirit of truth is come it will guide you into all truth and show you things to come." (John 16:13) B120; R2818:2, 1416:1

"The holy spirit, whom the Father will send in my name, he shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance." (John 14:26) R2818:2
It qualified the disciples fully for the work of the ministry. R5589:4

Witnesses -- Martyrs, those who witness at a cost of suffering or death. R4305:6

Testifiers that Christ died and had risen from the dead. R3905:5

Representatives of his character, teachings and work. R2818:4

To call and make ready a people to receive him. B120

Witnessing to the truths which he had taught them. R1416:1

That he is to be King of the world; that God's promises to bless the world are true; that Messiah had died for the sins of the world; that believers should keep on praying, Thy Kingdom come; and that none of his words or promises were false. R1416:1

After receiving the blessing at Pentecost. R5829:2

In the strictest sense, applied to those specially chosen as public teachers and witnesses; the twelve apostles. R550:2

Only those anointed of the spirit are to be recognized as representatives of the Head. R2925:5

Indicating a full testimony would be given to all people prior to the establishment of the Kingdom. R5829:6,2

A further demonstration that the kingdom would not come in a few days or a few years, but would be long enough away to give opportunity for a full testimony of the Lord's favor to all nations. R5829:6

Unto me -- Not to themselves nor to human institutions. R2925:2

In Jerusalem -- With those who had knowledge of Jesus and his crucifixion. To those who had been witnesses and instigators of his ignominious death. R2924:6

Only Israelites indeed were appealed to, or incline to follow the cause of Jesus--defamed as a Nazarene and as a malefactor. R2925:1

Uttermost part of the earth -- The witnessing of the apostles still continues through their writings. F216; R4305:5, 2089:4, 1522:6, 550:2

Not to be understood as implying every quarter of the globe, but rather a term of that day corresponding in meaning to our present expression "everywhere." R2925:2, 1416:1

Demonstrating that the Kingdom would not come for a long time. R5829:6
America, for instance, could not be reached during the lifetime of the apostles. R1522:6

The apostles did not at first comprehend the scope of this commission; it required special instructions for Peter to preach to the Gentiles.
R3005:1, 550:6

Acts 1:9

He had spoken -- For their instruction, and to help natural men, not yet begotten of the holy spirit, to understand deep things. R2818:5, 2925:5
Our Lord's last words before his ascension. R550:2

They beheld -- The eleven were the chosen witnesses of the Lord's ascension; there is no evidence of any others being present. R1522:5, 3905:5, 4714:2

They would have no further expectation of his appearing to them again as a man. R2818:6, 5589:5

To lead them to understand that they would see the Master no more until he would come with power and glory. R5589:5

"What and if ye shall see the Son of Man ascend up where he was before?"
(John 6:62) R5589:5

He was taken up -- The Lord who came down from heaven had returned to the Father to prepare a place for them. B120

Acts 1:10

Two men -- Two angels. R2818:6, 2925:6, 4306:1, 5589:6, 2819:4, 1827:1, 700:1, 188:6

White apparel -- Garments which indicated they had only assumed the form of men for the occasion. R2918:4

Beholding them as men, yet knowing from their glistening garments, etc., that they were really spirit beings manifested in the flesh. R2925:6

Acts 1:11

Ye men of Galilee -- Signifies "the eleven," all of whom were Galileans. R1522:5, 2819:4

This same Jesus -- The same that was with the Father before the world was. R1952:5; B154

The same loving Jesus, who became a man--poor that we might be made rich, (2 Cor. 8:9) who died on Calvary and arose a quickening spirit. (1 Cor. 15:45) B154, 155; R1952:6

Who had experienced two changes of nature; first from spirit to human, and then from human to divine. His identity was preserved. B155

Whom none of the world saw, and was seen by the disciples only a few times during that forty days. R2082:5, 1952:6, 1873:5, 263:3; B155

The resurrected, divine Jesus, not the man Christ Jesus. R2082:5, 340:6*, 188:6; Q369:3

The new creature Jesus. Q369:3

From you into heaven -- Jesus took the earthly condition for the suffering of death, and would not need it afterward. R5830:1; B155

Shall so come -- With blessings upon his followers. B154

Not that they would see him coming as they saw him go, nor that any one would see him coming. R4306:1, 554:6*, 19:3; B154

Jesus' presence is a spiritual and personal presence, though invisible. R554:3*

In like manner -- The Greek term, hon tropon, rendered elsewhere "even as." R341:1*

Not "in like form." R5830:4, 2082:5, 1952:5, 1873:6, 188:6

"The Lord himself shall descend from heaven." (1 Thess. 4:16) F671; R579:6, 263:2, 19:3

Quietly, secretly, known only to his followers. R5830:4, 5589:6, 4306:4, 2798:5, 2082:5; B154; Q369:3

Being an unseen presence. R188:3

When he arrives it will be privately. R579:6, 263:3, 19:3

Only a few saintly believers, those who faithfully "watch" (Matt. 24:42), will know of the Lord's return. R5589:6, 2926:4, 2082:6, 1873:6, 123:1

Seen by the eye of faith. R2789:6

"As a thief in the night." (1 Thess. 5:2) R5830:4, 5589:6, 4306:4, 1416:5

Requiring close, attentive watching to apprehend and discern it. B144

Unknown to the world. R5830:4, 5589:6, 4956:4, 4306:4, 2926:4, 700:2, 123:1, 19:3

The world is to see Jesus no more. (John 14:19) B154; R5589:6, 579:6, 263:3, 123:1, 19:3

It was the Jesus born of the Spirit, who could go and come like the wind.
Q369:3

Generally taken to mean that Jesus would come a fleshly or human being.
R5829:6

When Jesus left the heavenly glory and was made flesh, it was not the divine intention that he should remain a fleshly being forever, but that he took this earthly condition for the suffering of death. R5830:1

As ye -- His faithful followers. B154

What the world will then see will be the trouble; and gradually they will come to understand that the great King is identified with the trouble.
R5830:5

Have seen him go -- Without splendor, demonstration, commotion or noise.
B154; R2926:4, 2082:6, 1416:5, 579:3

Acts 1:13

Upper room -- Their meetings were generally small; the usual meeting place being private dwellings or rented upper rooms; not at all like Babylon of today. R984:2, 2941:6

Acts 1:14

These all -- All of "the eleven," together with others. R2926:2, 1523:1

With one accord -- Waiting for the adoption and the endowment with spiritual understanding. B121; R1522:6

One hundred and twenty disciples in all. R2819:6, 2926:3

The Lord's people should be in agreement, or accord, respecting the things they are seeking and waiting for. R2926:3

In prayer -- In the public assembly of the saints. R3698:5

Doubtless offered audibly for the benefit of the whole company present.
R2251:6, 2023:3

Prayer is absolutely indispensable to Christian life. It means, not only a living faith, but a growing faith. R2692:1

And supplication -- In searching of the Scriptures--and in readiness to begin their mission. R549:3, 2819:3

With the women -- Women usually spoke only at the smaller gatherings, and not at public meetings. R227:3, 766:5*, 1076:5*

The Apostle's high regard for women is shown by his mention of several faithful co-laborers and helpers among them. R766:4*, 227:3

Acts 1:15

Were about an hundred and twenty -- Possibly these were all present at the time of the out-pouring of the holy Spirit. R2926:3, 4306:1, 2819:6

Acts 1:16

By the mouth of David -- Peter found that passage in David's prophecy which mentions the appointment of another. (Psa. 109:8) R549:3, 162:5

Judas -- He lost his relationship with God and with Christ; and all hope of a future life. R552:6

This man -- Judas. R552:6

Falling headlong -- Judas probably chose the branch of a tree overhanging a precipice to hang himself; the breaking of the rope causing the fall. R552:6

Acts 1:20

His bishoprick -- Office of bishop or apostle. R162:5

No man or congregation is competent to appoint or elect an apostle. That is a special or function which is of divine appointment solely. R5940:4

The Church of Rome, the Church of England and the Greek Church improperly claim to make Apostolic Bishops. R5940:4; F209; Q521:2

Let another take -- The Lord designed that Paul should be the twelfth apostle, taking the place of Judas. R5408:3, 5940:4, 1522:2, 162:5; F208; Q521:2

Acts 1:22

His resurrection -- Anastasis, the Greek article indicating the first or special resurrection. R1512:2

Acts 1:23

They appointed two -- They chose two and asked the Lord to indicate which of the two would be his choice. R1445:1, 550:1

They had no authority for so doing. R5002:5, 5830:3, 2823:2, 1445:1

But the Lord had his own choice--Paul, "a chosen vessel." (Acts 9:15) R2823:2, 1522:2, 1445:1, 550:1; F209

The Apostles were only those whom Jesus had especially selected to that office, St. Paul, by divine arrangement subsequently taking the place of Judas. R5829:1

Matthias -- Was probably a very excellent brother, but not an apostle. R1522:2

Acts 1:24

Prayed, and said -- Uttered audibly and in a language heard and understood by the worshipers. R2251:6

Acts 1:25

To his own place -- Was not heaven, was not restitution. His own place was the only place then open--the second death, oblivion. R5683:3, 5552:6, 3878:6

Acts 1:26

Lot fell upon Matthias -- The eleven exceeded their authority. They should have remembered that they had not as yet qualified as apostles themselves. R5002:3

A human error; an over-officiousness in attending to the Lord's business without his direction. R1522:2, 1445:1, 550:1, 162:5

He was with them at Pentecost; but his record ends there. R550:2, 5830:3

Acts 2

Acts 2:1

And when -- The wave of sheaf and its antitype, the resurrection of Christ, were "when the Sabbath was past"--the eighth day, or first day of the week (Lev. 23:11). The wave of loaf and its antitype, the descent of the holy Spirit, were on Pentecost, or the fiftieth day, and hence also on the first day of the week. R108:3*, 2819:3

Day of Pentecost -- Or Whitsuntide. R2819:3, 5223:3

Signifies fiftieth, as a jubilee day, followed a cycle of seven times seven days, from the time of the gathering of the sheaf of first-fruits.

This sheaf typified our Lord in his resurrection on the sixteenth of Nisan. R2819:3, 108:3*; NS201:1

The seventh day Sabbath found its fulfillment through its multiple in the fiftieth day--Pentecost. R5405:5

Fiftieth day in the harvest, after the gathering of the first ripe sheaf (Lev. 23:11,16) of which our Lord was the antitype. R5830:3

The fiftieth day after Jesus' resurrection, in harmony with the type. (Lev. 23:15-21) R5831:3

Pentecost came on the first day of the week. R543:4

When our Lord as the antitypical High Priest, laid his hand upon the "Lord's goat." (Lev. 16:9) R4397:6; T60

Since Pentecost, he has been offering the antitypical goat--the Church class. R5163:4

The Church class began its existence at Pentecost. R5224:1, 1416:3

The first day of the week which was honored as the memorial of our Lord's resurrection was again marked by divine favor at Pentecost, and became the memorial of the outpouring of the holy Spirit. R1942:6; 543:4

The anniversary of the Law covenant at Sinai. By contrast, a reminder of how Christ makes free all who approach the Father through him. R4307:2

As the antitype of the fiftieth day was fulfilled before those cycles passed away, we must look for an equally perfect fulfillment of the larger cycles. HG57:5

As the antitype of the jubilee year will usher the world into the glorious rest of Messiah's kingdom, so the antitype of the jubilee day ushered believers into a rest of faith at Pentecost. PD72/86; R5405:5

With one accord -- These ten days of fasting and prayer were necessary to prepare them for the reception of the holy Spirit. R4306:3, 2926:3

The same eleven apostles who witnessed our Lord's ascension were in the upper room complying with our Lord's injunction, waiting in an attitude of prayer and expectancy, and in readiness to begin their mission. R2819:3

All these were of one heart and one mind to know and serve the truth. R1201:4

Waiting for the adoption and their endowment with spiritual understanding. B121

Until Pentecost, they were still natural men, not fully begotten of the holy Spirit. R2981:2

One place -- Probably in one of the apartments connected with the temple, accounting for the subsequent quick gathering of three thousand people. R4307:1

They had presented themselves before God desiring to be accepted as sacrifices. R4998:2

Acts 2:2

Rushing mighty wind -- There was merely a sound which resembled that of a mighty wind. R4306:4, 2926:6

Representing the holy Spirit; "spirit" and "wind" are from the same Greek word; a wind is the best illustration because it is powerful and yet invisible. R2820:3, 2088:5

Filled all the house -- They were all immersed in the holy Spirit. R2088:6, 2927:1; SM572:2

Acts 2:3

Cloven tongues -- Tongues split off from a central luminous body, which emanated from one common center, and went to the heads of those for whom intended. R2927:1, 4306:4

An outward manifestation indicating they had been received into the body of Christ as sons of God. R5831:2, 2927:3

Representing illumination, the intelligence which comes through the holy Spirit. R2088:6

The influence God would use during the Gospel age as the agency of his spirit in accomplishing the work he designs to do. R2820:4

It is not necessary for us to have an outward demonstration today, but we do receive from God the same holy Spirit which they received. R5831:1, 5830:6, 2927:3

Like as of fire -- Having the appearance of fire. R2926:6

Representing divine power. R4419:4, 5830:6, 2820:3

Light; representing enlightenment, knowledge, intelligence, and illustrating God's purpose to use human tongues as his agencies in calling his elect out of the world. R2927:1,3, 2088:6

Not the holy Spirit, but merely a manifestation representing the invisible; a fit picture of the mission of the apostles as witnesses. E212

The light of truth and enlightenment of the mind, which comes through the begetting of the holy Spirit. R4307:2, 2820:5

Marking them as the Lord's mouthpieces; that their tongues should show forth his praise, to the blessing and enlightenment of the world. R2927:2; E212

Upon each of them -- Probably the eleven apostles only, designating them as the Lord's special representatives and the holy Spirit's mouthpieces.

E212; R4306:5, 4307:1, 2819:6

Might mean upon each of the eleven apostles, or it might mean upon each of the one hundred and twenty present. R2926:6, 2088:6

Convincing the apostles respecting their acceptance with him, and their identification as his ministers of the new dispensation, and to make manifest the nucleus of the Gospel Church to others. R2926:6, 2820:3

Without which their apostleship could not be recognized. R1523:1

That recognition was both their begetting and their anointing. R5228:1

We are begotten individually, but we were anointed collectively. R5228:1

In the picture of anointing the whole body is anointed. There will be no need for a repetition of the ceremony. All who will be members of that body come under that one anointing. R5228:2, 4307:5, 2820:2

Acts 2:4

They were filled -- Yet, because of weakness and imperfections of their organisms, they could only receive limited measures, in limited degree. (John 3:34) R2820:1

All the Church received the spirit of adoption, but some received the gifts of the spirit according to the character and natural ability of the person. R182:5

With the holy Ghost -- The Spirit of adoption as sons of God; this is the time and place where the adoption took place. E210, 268; R1416:3

They were transferred from the House of Servants to the House of Sons.
NS662:3

Begotten to sonship. R5830:6

Constituted their begetting of the Spirit to the new nature. R2820:1

The Pentecostal blessing was the beginning of the recognition of the followers of Jesus as the sons of God and heirs of God's promise. R5831:2

Demonstrating the personal glorification of Christ. R4398:1; NS4:2

Accomplishing the presentation of the Church before the Father; though it has required the entire Gospel age to complete the sacrifice. R4965:5

Indicating he had made satisfaction for their sins; that they had been accepted of the Father. Eiii, 209; R5392:4, 4965:6

Indicated the acceptance of the Redeemer to glory, and the application of the merit of his sacrifice on behalf of the "household of faith." NS662:3, 348:2 A testimony to them that Jesus' work was satisfactory to the Father. R5830:6

Signifying divine acceptance of the sin-offering which our Lord presented before the Father. R2820:1, 4965:5, 1416:3

Accepting the Church as joint-sacrificers with Christ. R4965:5

Our Lord's power, accepting their consecration. R4965:5, 4397:6

An unction or anointing. SM597:2

The anointing of the most holy of his followers to be members of his body. OV383:4

All who have been added to the body since have likewise come under the same anointing. R1715:3, 3280:4

Fulfillment of Luke 3:16: "He shall baptize you with the holy Spirit."
R5443:2; SM597:2

The spirit of holiness, the spirit of God, the spirit of Christ, the spirit of truth. R3280:4, 4306:6; SM597:2

The anointing came upon them from the Father through Christ. R5392:4, 1416:3

Pentecost brought merely the first fruits of the Spirit. R2926:3, 2088:2

With other tongues -- In unknown languages, so that the peoples of different countries were able to understand the message. Q768:T

A convincing power for the apostles, and a witness to the holy Jews gathered at Jerusalem from all nations of the world. R5831:4, 1416:6

For the purpose of qualifying them to bear witness to the truth to people of foreign lands. Q768:T

Those signs were for the convincing of the world and establishing the faith of the Church. They were very necessary at the time, but were not long continued. NS350:4

This gift expired when the apostles fell asleep because they alone could bestow it upon others. R5831:2,6

Being supplanted by the fruits of the Spirit, developed through knowledge, faith and obedience. R5831:6,2

Some who once used their tongues in blasphemy and misrepresentation of the divine character and plan now rejoice to praise God. R2928:4

A Satanic counterfeit of the gift of tongues is now deceiving Christendom.
R3941:4

As the Spirit -- A twofold operation of the holy Spirit. (1) It was the mind, disposition, Spirit of God, operating in the disciples, as the Spirit of adoption. (2) God's holy Spirit acted also upon them, conferring special miraculous gifts. E268; R1416:6

Gave them utterance -- Through the "gifts" here imparted spontaneously; not, as usual, by the laying on of hands. E225, 207

Acts 2:5

Devout men -- Now, as then, the holy Spirit is seeking the devout of every nation, "Israelites indeed." R2821:4

Out of every nation -- Annual gatherings directly commanded by God through Moses. R5831:4

Jerusalem had at this season of the year visitors from all the neighboring countries, speaking various languages. R2820:6; NS348:2

Sometimes two or three million pilgrims at this season of the year. R2927:5

"From a census taken in the time of Nero, more than 2,700,000 were gathered at the Passover, and still greater numbers came to Pentecost."

The larger numbers at Pentecost was doubtless because it was a Summer feast. R2089:1

Because of social, political and religious conditions, the work of the first advent was confined to Judea, just as the work now centers in the United States, though devout Israelites heard more or less of it. C85

Acts 2:6

Heard them speak -- The miracle was not in the hearing of the listeners, but in the speaking of the Apostles. R5831:4

In his own language -- So that the people of the countries represented by those languages understood clearly. R5831:4

The Spirit of God acted upon them, conferring special gifts, for a special purpose. R372:3

Quite possibly by this gift of tongues the Lord made up to his disciples the lack of larger education and fitted them for the work. R2820:6

Acts 2:7

These which speak -- The eleven apostles (all of whom were Galileans) were the public speakers. R1522:6, 2927:1, 2819:6, 2088:6; F214

Acts 2:8

In our own tongue -- The different apostles spoke different tongues.
R5831:4

These all heard the languages of the country in which they were born.
NS350:2

Foreigners recognized these tongues as bona fide and got a Gospel message from them. R3941:3; SM566:T; HG402:3

Not the gibberish uttered at meetings of so-called "holiness people" of today. SM565:1, 566:T; R3941:2

Acts 2:9

Parthians and Medes and Elamites -- Judaism was gaining favor with men of influence in the world. R964:4

Acts 2:10

Strangers of Rome -- Were all Jews, although their language differed because born in foreign parts. R2090:2

Who returned to Rome with the Gospel, began to live Christian lives and preach the truth to others. R1582:2

To whom, later, the Epistle to the Romans was sent. R1582:1

So the harvest message is now sent primarily to the "devout" of Christendom. R2090:4

Acts 2:11

Works of God -- Relating to our Lord's death and resurrection, and his commission to his apostles, which they were now carrying out. R2821:1

The wonderful features of the divine plan. R2821:2

Proper preaching today tells of God's wonderful plan for man's redemption, and does not tirade against the nominal Church. R2821:2

Acts 2:13

Others mocking -- Then, as now, God's people were traduced by "devout men." R2089:4

Full of new wine -- Attributed to an evil influence--intoxication. R2089:4

The only time the Greek word gleukos is used in the New Testament. It means grape juice or "new wine" and if used to excess, it would confuse the mind. R509:4

Acts 2:14

Peter -- Peter took the first, most prominent and initiatory part in this work of opening the door of the kingdom to Israel. R2657:6; E214; NS665:1, 185:4

Peter was given two "keys" (Matt. 16:19), one of which he used on the day of Pentecost when he opened the way for the Jews to enter into the Kingdom. The second was used 3-1/2 years later opening the way to the Gentiles. Q783:4, 795:4; SM465:3; HG737:4

He was the spokesman, using the "key" to open the door to the work of the new dispensation. R2657:6, 4307:3, 1525:2; E214

With the eleven -- With the others of the eleven. R2657:6

Lifted up his voice -- Thus changed the matter from private conversations by a number to a public discourse by himself; becoming the main spokesman. R2089:2

Acts 2:15

As ye suppose -- Peter protested, not indignantly, but mildly. R2089:2

But the third hour -- Would be what we term nine o'clock, a.m. R2089:2

Too early in the morning to suppose the apostles to be drunken. R2089:2

Acts 2:16

But this -- This outpouring of the Spirit of God which you see upon his servants and handmaids. R1411:6; NS802:1

Is that -- Is a part of that. E219; R1549:3

Peter identifies the prophecy as a whole. This does not mean, however, that the prophecy was fulfilled as a whole at Pentecost. R4467:2

Not, this is he. R4165:5

Spoken by the prophet Joel -- All that Joel had prophesied was not fulfilled before their eyes, but what they saw was all foretold by Joel and more too. R1411:6; NS664:3

This pouring out of the Spirit was a partial fulfillment of a prophecy made long before by the Prophet Joel. NS202:2

Acts 2:17

In the last days -- After the days mentioned in the next verse. E219; R226:6

In the seventh thousand year day, after the Gospel age, the fifth and sixth thousand years of the great week. NS202:5

After we have received the Spirit of adoption. E163

After the Day of Vengeance has humbled the arrogance of men. D518

After the world has witnessed the Lord's peculiar blessings on Israel in the Millennial dawn. D639

The order of the blessing is upon the servants and hand-maidens in those days, and upon all flesh after those days. NS802:1

Pour out of my Spirit -- "And the Spirit and the Bride say, Come." (Rev. 22:17) E165

There will yet be a second Pentecostal blessing. PD73/87

Upon all flesh -- No longer as now on the few special servants. E239
Upon the whole world of mankind. T88; E217, 220, 239; R5452:4
After the second coming of Christ. R4308:2
No general outpouring upon all flesh has yet occurred. NS348:5
Remains to be fulfilled after the glorification of the Church with Christ.
NS664:3,4
Under the New covenant; that they also may come back into sonship, into relationship with God. R2070:4, 5452:4
Enlightening them, helping them overcome inherited tendencies, and restoring them to perfection. E218
But it will be necessary, then as now, for those who would profit thereby, to consecrate themselves to God and eat the truth. E218
The ancient worthies lived prior to the time of the outpouring of the holy Spirit, therefore if they receive any measure of this blessing to come upon "all flesh," it must be in the future. R5074:1

Acts 2:18

On my servants -- Literally slaves; those bound to the Lord by a covenant. R226:6
The Church, begotten to sonship. R5452:4
The Pentecostal blessing came only upon the "servants and handmaids" of the Lord--only upon the consecrated. NS664:3, 348:2, 202:3
In those days -- During this Gospel age. R5452:4, 2930:3, 226:6; D639
Peter claimed there was at least a partial fulfillment on the day of Pentecost. R1549:3; NS202:2
They shall prophesy -- Sabbathai Levi, the false Christ of Smyrna, with his four hundred prophets, was one counterfeit, and other counterfeits have been witnessed in more modern religious revivals. D565

Acts 2:19

Wonders in heaven -- The ecclesiastical powers. D544
And signs -- "Fearful sights and great signs shall there be from heaven"
(Luke 21:11) in the time of trouble now at hand. R879:2
"There shall be signs in the sun and in the moon and in the stars. (Luke 21:25) D584
The Apostle Paul refers to the same thing in Hebrews 12:16-28. The manifestations at the establishment of the Law covenant at Mount Sinai were figurative of the still more wonderful shakings when the New covenant is about to go into effect. HG399:2
In the earth -- The present social order. D544
Blood -- Bloodshed; and claims that the typical sacrifices were "bloody" and barbaric. D592, 593
And fire -- The time of trouble. D527
Vapor of smoke -- Confusion; errors of present false systems. R498:1

Acts 2:20

The sun -- Symbolically the Gospel light; the Truth, and thus Christ Jesus. D590

Into darkness -- Literally, in the dark day of May 19, 1780, which extended over 320,000 square miles. D587

Symbolically, by denial that we were bought with the precious blood of Christ, and by substituting the theory of Evolution. D592

And the moon -- Symbolically, the light of the Mosaic Law. D590

Into blood -- By claims that the typical sacrifices were "bloody" and barbaric. D592, 593

Acts 2:21

Whosoever shall call -- In sincerity of heart. R5832:5

The name of the Lord -- Guaranteed by Jesus' death. R5832:5

Saved -- From sin and death; some to glory, honor and immortality; others to an opportunity for life everlasting in a world-wide Eden. R5832:5 2:22

Ye men of Israel -- Representing the whole twelve tribes. C252, 293; R1341:1

Jesus of Nazareth -- "Holy, harmless, undefiled and separate from sinners," (Heb. 7:26) "Who went about doing good," (Acts 10:38) and was abundant in "good works." (John 10:32) R2157:3*

Wonders and signs -- To teach an important lesson, and to convince his disciples of his divine recognition and authority. R1967:5

Acts 2:23

Him being delivered -- "He was delivered for our offenses." (Rom. 4:25) R2600:5

Determinate counsel -- A pre-arranged plan of salvation. R486:4*

Foreknowledge -- The things foretold in the Scriptures. R486:1*

Ye have taken -- You Jews. Peter charged it up to some of those who were present with him on the day of Pentecost. Q367:5

The apostles do not implicate either Pilate or the civil authorities, but hold responsible the Jews and their leaders. R2786:4

By wicked hands -- Inexcusable ignorance, or at least only partly excusable, because it was the result of prejudice, which in turn was the fruit of selfishness. R2786:3

Acts 2:24

God hath raised up -- He was dead and was raised the third day. Q784:2; SM90:T

By the Father's power; he could never have raised himself. R4174:6, 2795:2
To the divine plane, an exaltation never before given to any creature of
God. R5748:6

This was a re-creation of the same being first created, he is still the first and the last of the creation of God; the Only Begotten of the Father. (Rev. 1:11,17,18) R1005:5

The pains of death -- The bands of death. R2600:5

Because -- Having kept the divine law perfectly, given himself as man's ransom price and having thus attested his worthiness of high exaltation.
R2795:3

For the Word of Jehovah had previously declared his resurrection. R2600:5

It was not possible -- As illustrated in the apparent explosion at the mouth of the well in the Great Pyramid. C337

Holden of it -- The new creature was not resurrected until the third day, but it was there in the divine sight. R4657:6

Acts 2:25

Concerning him -- Personating or speaking for him. R2600:5, 5132:5

I foresaw the Lord -- I, Christ, foresaw Jehovah. R2600:5

Acts 2:26

My heart rejoice -- "At thy right hand are pleasures forevermore" (Psa.
16:11) even in the present life. This blessed joy lifts the soul above all the vicissitudes of the present life. R1949:1

Acts 2:27

Not leave my soul -- But will resurrect it. E377; R5017:2, 444:6; SM100:2
The prophecy of David which foretold the resurrection of Messiah (Psa.
16:10). R5832:1, 4994:4

Referring not to David but to Christ. R5109:1, 5132:5, 4994:4, 2795:1; NS663:4, 519:6, 478:1 David spoke this not respecting his own soul, but the soul of Jesus. NS585:3

This text most emphatically teaches that our Lord's soul went to hades, oblivion, and that it was delivered therefrom by a resurrection. E377

In hell -- Greek, hades, oblivion, not torment. R2600:4; E377; SM90:T, 25:2

Hebrew, sheol, oblivion, from Psa. 16:10. E362; R5832:1, 2600:4, 828:2;
SM29:2, 100:2, 526:1; HG511:2; PD30/42

Peter quotes Psa. 16:10, translating the Hebrew word sheol into the Greek word hades. He explains the meaning of both words as referring to our Lord's resurrection from the state of death. NS118:5, 783:4; OV168:3;
SM29:2

The tomb, grave. R5612:4, 4308:2, 2600:5; SM100:2; OV166:2

The state or condition of death. R4994:4, 3174:2, 3027:5, 2795:1, 667:1, 356:1; E348

All the good and the bad go down to the Bible hell. R5832:4, 356:1; SM27:2

Thou -- Jehovah. R2600:5

Made known to me -- Christ. R2600:5

The ways of life -- Divine promise of a resurrection, and the accomplishment of God's plan through him. R2600:5

Acts 2:29

Patriarch David -- All the prophets in the past knew that they were not getting their reward then, but must get it in the future. R4961:5

Dead and buried -- His soul still remains in hell, hades, sheol. E362, 377; R5132:1, 4994:4, 4308:2

He is still asleep; he will be satisfied when he awakes in the morning. HG121:6

And his sepulchre -- Supposed to be near where Peter preached this discourse. R1390:4

In the sense that he was still in it, that it still represented him. SM25:2

If any of the prophets had ascended to the heavenly plane, they could not be said to have any sepulchre on earth, for the very thought of the word sepulchre is that of a personality awaiting a resurrection. R5132:5

Unto this day -- So that this prophecy cannot have referred to himself personally. R2600:6

With an oath -- An unconditional covenant. R3108:3

The Apostle Peter, refers to the promise in Psalms 132:11, and definitely applies it to our Lord Jesus. R2372:6

Fruit of his loins -- Jesus, according to the flesh, was from the loins of David. R944:1*

On his throne -- God's throne. R3108:5

Authority and rulership; power and dignity of office. A92; R453:2

A throne is the seat of a priest or a king, and it is often used as the emblem, or symbol, of sacerdotal or regal authority. R1283:1

The throne of David is the emblem, or symbol, of David's reign, or kingdom; and David's reign, or kingdom, is a type, or figure, or shadow, of the reign, or kingdom, of David's Son and Lord. R1283:1

Because Jesus was the son of the man David, with whom Jehovah made an everlasting covenant, the throne and kingdom of Israel should belong to him and his seed forever. R944:1*

Seeing this before -- Prophetically. R2600:6, 4961:5

Providing one of the many proofs that the Bible is a divine revelation. A58

Of Christ -- Out of hades, to which he must go for our offenses. R2600:6

That his soul -- His own being. R3854:5, 277:1, 205:5; E362; CR290:3; HG228:1, 135:4

The Apostle is not pressing his argument as respecting a resurrection of the body, but as respects a resurrection of being, or soul. E349; R3854:5, 3027:5

"He poured out his soul unto death." (Isa. 53:12) E362; R3854:5

Was not left -- Except for parts of three days. E362; R3902:3, 2599:3

For God raised him up out of it. HG556:5, 735:1*

In hell -- Greek, hades, oblivion, the death-state. E377; R3902:3,

3174:2, 2795:1, 2600:6; SM30:T; CR290:3; HG511:2; NS320:6

Typified by Jonah who was in the belly of the great fish for three days.

(Jonah 1:17) OV362:2

Neither his flesh -- Possibly preserved somewhere as the grand memorial of God's love, Christ's obedience and our redemption, typified by the golden bowl of manna in the ark. (Exod. 16:33, Heb. 9:4) B129; R2478:5

Acts 2:32

Hath God raised up -- By the Father's power; he could never have raised himself. His resurrection was his coming to life. R4174:6, 2795:2

Because it was the soul that died, not merely the body. R2795:2

The Apostle's argument is that David's soul is still in hell, but that Christ's soul was delivered from hell, raised from the tomb, from the state of death. SM25:2

Whereof we all -- The eleven apostles. E212; R2089:3

Are witnesses -- The holy Spirit shed forth upon the witnessing disciples was from the Father and by the Son. R5363:1

Right hand of God -- Chief position. CR401:5

Exalted -- To the divine plane, an exaltation never before given to any creature of God. R5748:6

A Prince and mighty Savior. R4308:2

"God hath highly exalted him, and given him a name which is above every name." (Phil. 2:9) R1283:2

Of the Father -- The Pentecostal blessing was of the Father, but by the Son. R5537:1, 5424:5, 5363:1, 5228:3, 2803:3, 1416:3

The Father's recognition of the merit of the sin-offering. R1416:3

Promise of the holy Ghost -- The holy Spirit of the promise; of the "exceeding great and precious promises." (2 Pet. 1:4) E246

For the Church. R5537:1

As soon as he had ascended up on high and presented his sacrifice on our behalf, he sent the Comforter, the holy Spirit of adoption. R1829:5

When he appeared in the presence of God for the Church, he received authority to communicate the holy Spirit to all who had consecrated.

SM599:1

The gift could not be given to the disciples until after the Lord's ascension. R1829:6

A sign of God's acceptance of Jesus' sacrifice, and thus a sign of his acceptance of the Church. R3911:1, 5830:6, 5424:5, 2051:1; E209; NS201:3, 202:1

God fulfilled his promise to Jesus by granting him the holy Spirit to shed forth upon his disciples. R5424.5

He hath -- Having come fully into possession of spiritual power. R182:5

The holy Spirit proceeds from the Father and from the Son. SM602:T

Shed forth this -- Not this "ghost" but this miraculous power. E282

The Father did not directly recognize, authorize or ordain any to preach the Gospel message, until Pentecost. R5363.1

The Apostles did not get any spirit begetting until Pentecost, until Jesus himself poured out his divine blessing. CR254:3

By virtue of the atonement which he had accomplished by the sacrifice of himself. R2088:3

It marks the acceptance of the Church, and without it we would have no proof of the acceptance of our Lord's sacrifice and our justification. E211

This gift has continued with the Church ever since. R1829:6

As a witness of our sonship, as a guide into all truth. (John 16:13) R218:4

There is no intimation that this outpouring of the Spirit was the second coming of the Lord. R2088:3

Acts 2:34

David -- One of the Ancient Worthies. R3487:1, 5772:3, 5179:5

Is not ascended -- Not even David, the man after God's own heart, went to heaven. CR209:5

David could not have been speaking respecting himself (Psa. 16:10), in that he was dead and in his sepulcher; David had not risen. R2089:3

His soul was left in hades. SM25:2; CR21:2

He still awaits resurrection. R4308:2, 4994:4, 3027:6; SM100:2

"No man hath ascended into heaven." (John 3:13) F676; R5772:3, 5179:5, 4162:3, 3398:6, 2765:2, 2573:3, 2423:1, 2288:6, 1881:6, 1378:4; HG347:5, 194:3, 15:5; NS429:4

Implying that none of the prophets had gone to heaven. R5772:3, 2438:2, 2089:5, 1591:5

The first resurrection began with our Lord Jesus. The ancient worthies had not gone to heaven. R5179:5

They are in their graves, they are dead and will so remain until his power and authority shall call them forth again to being. R3487:1

"They without us should not be made perfect." (Heb. 11:40) R2659:6, 2089:5, 1761:2; HG15:5

The Lord -- Jehovah. E134; R379:5, 1411:1, 2089:5

Said unto my Lord -- Hebrew, adon, master, ruler, the resurrected Christ. E49, 134; R379:5, 1411:1

Directly applies to our Lord, (Psalms 110: 1), and our Lord applied the same to himself. (Matt. 22:44). R2935:2

On my right hand -- In the position of favor and power. A92; R2089:5

Acts 2:35

Thy footstool -- This implies that the heavenly Father has engaged to honor the Son and to bring all things into subjection to him. R2089:5

Acts 2:36

Let all the house -- The whole twelve tribes here represented. B207; C292, 300; R1341:1

That same Jesus -- The same identical being, yet more glorious, even "the express image of the Father's person." (Heb. 1:3) R2600:6
Who said, "I have the keys of hell and of death." (Rev. 1:18) R2600:6
Messiah, who had come, had suffered, and had been glorified; and was yet to be recognized Lord of all. R2089:6

Ye -- Men of Israel. R2085:3

Have crucified -- They saw themselves as murderers of the Messiah, for whom they had been looking for centuries. R4308:2, 2089:6

Lord and Christ -- Lord signifies master, ruler, governor. He is "Lord of both the dead and living." (Rom. 14:9) R61:1,2*

There could have been no reconciliation if Jesus had remained dead. R4994:4
It was by virtue of his obedience to death that he was made Lord at his resurrection. R810:1

Yet we see the importance of discriminating between the Father and the Son at the throne of grace. R468:6*

Acts 2:37

Pricked in their heart -- When realizing that as a nation they had crucified the son of God. R5295:5

Those Jews who were contrite of heart. R5964:4

"Cut to the heart." (Acts 7:54) by the words of truth. R4308:2, 2958:2, 2109:2

Conscience-smitten. R2930:6

Contrition and repentance must precede any thoroughgoing reformation of character. R4308:3

What shall we do? -- To escape the condemnation which was upon the whole people. R5964:4

How shall we, who are already condemned of God as unworthy of everlasting life, get free from that condition in which we were born and get back into that condition of perfection which God will approve. HG651:1

Is there no mercy for us? R2931:1

Acts 2:38

Repent -- Repent of sin, including the national sin of crucifying the Messiah. R3356:3, 2931:2

Turn again to God and to their covenant. R1421:1

A reformation of life, "the turning over of a new leaf." R2090:1

Only a few of the Jews were in the proper attitude to meet this condition. R5295:5

And be baptized -- Greek, baptizo, to dip, immerse or cover. R1541:1, 444:3; F427

To prepare them to accept the Messiah. R5964:4

To bring back the Jews into accord with Moses--the type of Christ--into whom they had already once been baptized. R5964:4, 4308:5; F432

Speaking to Israelites and not to Gentiles. R1969:3, 5964:5, 1421:1

In the name of Jesus Christ -- Consecrating themselves to him and to his service and outwardly and publicly acknowledging the same. R2090:1, 1420:6
Baptism "into Christ" into the name of the Lord Jesus was the thought, and was expressed in words. R1544:4

Remission of sins -- Of their sins. Q32:T

Not original sin, which could only be removed by the blood of Christ ("Without shedding of blood there is no remission"--Heb.9:22), but the national sin against the Law covenant, including the rejection of the Messiah. R2931:3, 5964:1, 4308:5

This baptism was for Jews only, who had already been baptized into Moses in the sea and the cloud. Sins thus figuratively washed away did not include original sin, but merely minor transgressions against the Mosaic law. R4308:5; F428; HG600:1,2

The baptism of Jews for the remission of sins after Pentecost was the same as practiced by John. R5964:4

This baptism continued until "the middle wall of partition" (Eph. 2:14) was broken down between Jew and Gentile, since then it is entirely wrong. R4308:5

Their sins were covered, but not blotted out. R4308:4

A Gospel of mercy, forgiveness and sympathy, even for those who had crucified the Lord. R4308:3

Acts 2:39

For the promise -- The high calling. R952:3

If they would keep the Law, they would inherit the privilege of blessing all people. R5836:2

A spiritual promise, belonged to the Jews, on condition they take certain steps. R5295:5

No one could come into the body of Christ until Jesus had first come to open up the way. R5836:2

Is unto you -- Until the full end of the seventy weeks of favor.

R2931:2, 5836:5, 5163:4

Belongs to you, as Israelites. R1541:6, 2931:2, 2090:1

And to all -- In any part of the world. R5549:6

Afar off -- Gentiles who needed not to be baptized for the remission of sins. Q32:1

Those not yet called. R942:3

Even as many as -- The Gospel call is intended not for everyone, but for only those who have ears to hear. R2424:5

Who have the eye of faith, the ear of appreciation and the heart of obedience. He calls no others than these. R4474:3

The household of faith. R4495:2

Our God shall call -- Not all mankind are called to be the bride of Christ. R2931:5, 2424:5, 1941:3

The whole world is not called to the Melchizedek Priesthood. SM141:T
With the calling and drawing of this present time there is a measure of election. (John 6:44) HG410:1

Only those drawn by the Father can now come unto the Son. (John 6:44)
R4308:6, 1941:3

Only those who have the eye of faith, the ear of appreciation and the heart of obedience. R4474:3, 4475:6

Those amenable to God's grace are drawn by the Father. R4475:6

Throughout the Gospel age this anointing has continued in the Church.
R5549:6, 4367:6

Since Pentecost the same Gospel call has gone forth. R5549:6

To attract some--"a peculiar people" (1 Pet. 2:9), not to attract and gather all. R2414:3

Restricted to an "elect" class. R2508:4

The grace of God is now recognized only by a limited class. NS406:6

Those who accept the terms and conditions come into the anointed company.
R5549:6

God did not promise that all Israel would be of the spiritual seed.

R5836:2 Each one who receives of the holy Spirit is a little light in the world. It is for the Lord to supervise the general interests of these lights, and to send them hither and thither as it may please him. R4141:4

Acts 2:40

He did testify -- Peter called those out of the given up Jewish church.

R189:6

Peter was merely the agent of the Lord, opening the door to the Jews.

R1525:2

Save yourselves -- Israelites indeed were appealed to. R805:4

Accept of Christ, and through him have God's favor. R1420:6

Do not wait to try to save Christendom. R4309:4

We must take prompt, energetic action. Our repentance must be full. Our turning from the wrong ways must be positive. R4309:4

Each will be held responsible in proportion as he transgressed against light; each will be offered a credit proportionate to the weaknesses he had sustained from the fall. R1702:1

Untoward generation -- "Be saved from this perverse generation."

(Rotherham) R1151:2*, 1138:5

"According to the course of this world, according to the prince of the power of the air." Eph.2:2 R1511:3*

Unfavorable to righteousness. R4309:1

Intimating the condemnation of the Jewish church and polity, and the trouble shortly to come upon them. R2821:2

As applicable now, in the harvest of the Gospel age, as they were in the harvest of the Jewish age. R1138:5, 4308:6

Acts 2:41

Then -- After Peter had thus unlocked the Jewish door. E214; R1760:5, 375:6

They that gladly received his word -- These were genuine conversions and not the result of excitement and impulse, for they continued in the Apostle's doctrine and gave evidence of a spirit of sacrifice. R550:4

His hearers were specially "devout men." (Acts 2:5) R2090:1

As it was in the beginning, so it must be now. R760:6

Baptized -- Greek, baptizo, to dip, immerse or cover. R1541:1, 444:3; F427

A rite practiced and enjoined upon all followers "even to the end of the world." (Matt. 28:19,20) R1539:3

About three thousand souls -- Beings, persons. R205:2

The work was cut short nationally, but it increased the opportunity of the Jews individually. R5163:3

One of the evidences of favor during the last half of the seventieth week. (Dan. 9:24) B70, 71

All Jews. During the 3 years following our Lord's death, God did not recognize the Gentiles. R5163:4; B70; F428

When we consider the class of hearers and the miraculous power resting on the speakers, it need not surprise us that so many were converted in so short a time. R2121:1

These Israelites were but a remnant as compared with the whole of Israel-- but a part as compared to the entire number predestinated of the Church. R2301:2

These Israelites indeed, were begotten of the holy Spirit and became the nucleus of the new nation, the holy people, the royal priesthood. NS642:3

Acts 2:42

Breaking of bread -- A meal, or love-feast. R803:1, 5642:2, 2932:1, 2771:4, 1014:1; NS77:2

It is a mistake to confound this with the Memorial Supper. R5642:2, 2932:1, 2771:4, 1421:2, 1014:1; F384

"And they told how he was made known in the breaking of bread." (Luke 24:35) F384

The early Church thus celebrated the resurrection of our Lord (not his death) every week, and the opening of their eyes to know him. R1014:2

Acts 2:43

And fear -- Reverence; an appreciation of the wonderful relationship to God to which they had been introduced. R2932:1

Acts 2:44

All things common -- After being illuminated with the holy Spirit, they desired to be in each other's company, to live together as one family.

R2090:4, 1421:4

Manifesting an unselfish, loving spirit. R2090:4

Selfishness gave place to love and general interest. R1861:2, 2090:4; D474

Such communities, if left to the rule of the majority, would sink to the level of the majority. R1861:6

And "There arose a murmuring," (Acts 6:1) as a result. D479

Experience proves the failure of communistic methods in the present time. R1862:1

The method of individualism, with its liberty and responsibility, is the best one for the development of intelligent beings. R1862:1

The Bible does not teach communism, but does teach loving considerate individualism. R1862:2

Each is to esteem himself a steward of God's favors, temporal and spiritual, and to use them, to manage his own affairs. R1421:5, 1862:5

It is still the work of God's people to shine as lights in the midst of the world, and not to shut themselves up in convents and cloisters or as communities. R1862:6

God did not intend that such a communism should continue throughout this Gospel age. R1421:4

God permitted a communistic arrangement in the primitive Church for the purpose of illustrating the unwisdom of the method. R1862:2

No doubt, after the Millennial Kingdom has brought the willing and obedient of mankind to perfection, there will be communism of some form. R2932:5, 1421:4

Their possessions -- Houses, etc. R1421:4

Acts 2:46

Breaking bread -- Not a commemoration of the Lord's death, but of his resurrection. F472, 384; R2771:4, 1382:4; NS77:2

An ordinary meal, or love-feast. R2771:4, 5642:2, 2932:1, 1382:4, 1014:1, 803:1; NS77:2

Never intended to take the place of nor in any sense to represent our Lord's Memorial Supper. R2771:4, 5642:2, 2932:1, 1421:2; F384

With gladness -- With thankfulness and joy. R1014:2

A considerable degree of holy joy and excitement manifested themselves amongst the believers. R4307:1

Acts 2:47

Having favor -- The Lord blessed the Church at that time with peace. R2090:5

Added to the church -- Not to some denomination, party or sect, but were additions to the one Church, the body of Christ. R2931:6

United to Christ, they had the only proper organization. R1420:3

As should be saved -- "As were being saved" (Revised Version). "Saved by hope." (Rom. 8:24) R2932:6

Saved from the blindness of the Jewish nation and the calamities impending upon it. R2090:4, 1421:5

Acts 3

Acts 3:1

Into the temple -- The one place where the soul might feel especially near to God. R5503:6

Expecting to find there some opportunity for testifying to the truth.

R1421:3, 5838:3

Ninth hour -- Three o'clock in the afternoon. R2933:1

Acts 3:2

A certain man lame -- At that time homes and hospitals for the afflicted were not thought of. R2095:2

Acts 3:3

Who -- The beggar knew Peter and John in advance of his healing. R2933:2

Asked an alms -- He looked at the apostles expecting to receive some money. R1998:2

In view of present arrangements for caring for the poor, it is as wrong to encourage public begging now as it was right to respond to it then. R2933:3

Acts 3:4

Look on us -- Thus directing his attention to the apostle John as well as himself. R2095:3

Peter and John did not pray with the man nor fix his attention on mind healers nor medicine. R1998:2

They were not exercising any hypnotic influence. R4313:2

Acts 3:5

He gave heed unto them -- The cure was effected as soon as the man made the effort to obey the command of the Lord Jesus through Peter. R1421:3

Acts 3:6

Then Peter said -- Two special gifts were exercised by Peter; the gift of faith and the gift of healing. R1422:5, 2095:3

Have I none -- None to give. The means which the Lord has put into our hands, he intends us to transform in the main into spiritual food and clothing and strength and help. R2933:3,4

As I have give I thee -- What the apostle gave was more valuable than money. R2933:3

So today; of the spiritual blessings we are willing to give liberally, without price. (Isa. 55:1) R2933:4

We can give a word of encouragement, a kindly look, a helping hand over difficulties. R2933:5

In the name of Jesus Christ -- As a means of calling the attention of the people to the fact of his resurrection and power. R1421:3

"Jesus" his personal name and "Christ" the Anointed, the official name, applicable to him as the Head, and to the whole Church, as his body.

R2818:1

It was Jesus, whose power had healed. R2933:5, 2095:3

These things were done by his authority. R61:6*

Rise up and walk -- Not a mental healing, not a faith cure, but a bona-fide miracle. R4316:2, 1422:4

Not a case of "prayer-cure" nor being anointed with oil. R2095:3, 1422:4

Perceived that the lame man had faith--he made an effort to obey because he had faith. R5838:3

The gift of healing, here illustrated, "Vanished away," as foretold. (1 Cor. 13:8) R1998:3

Acts 3:7

By the right hand -- Illustrating the propriety of permitting the influence of our faith to reach others in a natural and helpful manner. R2095:3

Received strength -- Not a prayer-cure, faith-cure, or mind-cure. R1422:4, 4216:2; 2095:3

A complete soundness of the lame ankle. R1422:5

Praising God -- The poor cripple was not an imposter. R2095:4

A living witness to the power of the risen Lord Jesus. R1421:6

Acts 3:9

All the people saw him -- The healings which were done were performed for signs for those about. R4314:5

Acts 3:11

Held Peter and John -- We are not to be ashamed of those whom the Lord may use in connection with our spiritual healing. R2933:6

People ran together -- Show that the miracle had the desired effect of drawing the attention of the people to the Apostle's teaching. R1421:6
When we obtain the attention of men, it is to be used for preaching the good tidings. R2934:1

Acts 3:12

He answered unto the people -- There is no disposition now for Peter to deny the Lord: he fearlessly stands before the people. R1421:6

Ye men of Israel -- The whole twelve tribes. C252, 293; R1341:1

As though by our own power -- The true messengers of God always seek to give the honor unto God, and decline it for themselves. R1634:6

We are merely the instruments of God, and this is a manifestation of God's mercy through Jesus. R5838:6

Acts 3:14

Desired a murderer -- "There was no sightliness that we should be desirous of him." (Isa. 53:2, Douay) We found not in him those qualities generally found in earthly conquerors. R574:3

Acts 3:15

And killed -- The nation of Israel were the real crucifiers of God's dear Son, even when a Roman governor found no fault in him and desired to set him at liberty. R2095:5

It was the Jews that killed Jesus. Peter did not mention the Roman soldiers at all. Q380:5, 368:T

The Prince of life -- The life-giving Prince, the One through whom everlasting life is to come. CR430:4; R2095:6

Messiah, Savior, life-giver. In the Syriac version the word "life-giver" is used where the English word "Saviour" occurs. R2095:6

"Ye shall die like men, and fall like one of the princes." (Psa. 82:7)

-- Prince Jesus. F724

Whom God hath raised -- By the Father's power. R4174:6

Jesus could never have raised himself, because it was the soul that died, not merely the body. R2795:2

As a reward for his obedience. Q433:2

He ascended on high (Eph. 4:8) and appeared in the presence of God. (Heb. 9:24) Q433:2

A re-creation of the same being; he is still the first and the last of the creation of God, the Only-begotten of the Father. (Rev. 1:11,17,18) R1005:5

From the dead -- This refers to our Lord's three days in the tomb. "Thou wilt not leave my soul in hell." (Psa. 16:10) R2599:3

Whereof we -- The eleven apostles. E212, 213

Acts 3:16

Faith in his name -- It was a miracle of Jesus, proving that Jesus was risen. R2095:6

Acts 3:17

Ignorance ye did it -- Unwittingly. F629, OV73:2; SM630:2

The Jews did not know whom they were crucifying, and were not a bit more to be blamed than was Paul for assisting in the killing of Stephen. Q368:T

The Pharisees knew not what they did. R2471:1; CR492:6

Conscientious conviction that they were doing right. R3052:1
We can suppose that some of the Scribes and Pharisees were murderers at heart and in deed. HG437:5
They were the blinded servants of Satan, though if their hearts had been true and humble, they would have been able to see. R5719:5, 5512:2, 5418:4, 4308:3, 1985:5
Without Satan's blinding influence the Jewish rulers would not have crucified our Lord. HG433:1
We are not to think those Jews as being specially wicked and reprehensible. OV43:1
Partly excusable ignorance, because it was the result of prejudice, which is a fruit of selfishness. R2786:3, 5577:6
We may entertain a measure of hope for some of the most violent opposers of the Truth, less in the case of those who have been enlightened by the Present Truth. F629
They saw the glories, not the sufferings. R4710:3
"Had they known it, they would not have crucified the Lord of glory." (1 Cor. 2:8) R5512:2, 5315:5, 5234:6, 5172:6, 5075:5, 4710:3, 4452:4, 4308:3; OV194:4; PT41:4; SM630:2
They merely fulfilled the divine intention. R5315:5, 5234:6
There would be divine forgiveness for the unintentional trespasses and transgressions which they have committed. R5751:4; HG147:6
In a measure extenuating their sin of crucifying the Messiah. R5964:5
Their national blinding was for a purpose, and is to be removed. (Rom. 11:25-27) R2116:5
The Jews who crucified Christ sinned against light and had great responsibility. R5452:2 If any begotten of the holy Spirit should join in any similar crime, the penalty would be the Second Death. R5452:2
The Lord kept secret from the Jews in general his identity. R4452:4
Intended to encourage any who began to realize their national sin, by showing that their sin might be forgiven. R1421:6
Ignorance and blindness of heart and mind is at the bottom of all the sufferings of Christ--both Head and body. R5872:2, 5642:6, 3895:2
This fact should not cause us to hate our opponents. R5872:2
So many of God's children who teach falsely, and thus exercise an injurious influence on the world, do it unintentionally. R1072:5, 5145:3
The majority of those who perpetrate evil do so because ignorant of the principles involved. R5260:4, 4607:6, 451:1*
When the church systems shall be raised up, all who stand for the plan of God will be evil spoken of, evil thought of and although offenders may be of the household of faith, we must feel kindly toward them. R5568:1
Also your rulers -- None of the chief rulers believed Jesus was the Messiah. R2745:6; SM750:2

Acts 3:18

That Christ should suffer -- In order to enter into his glory. Without such suffering he never could be the King of Glory, with power to bless and restore humanity. R5416:3

Acts 3:19

Repent ye therefore -- Repentance (change of mind) precedes conversion. R4246:2*; PT390:5,7

Of personal as well as national sins. R5839:1

There is not forgiving on God's part without repentance. R1694:5

A change of mind, conduct, or both. R4246:1

The first stage of justification. PT390:6*

A prerequisite of salvation. R1437:2

And be converted -- Turned around. R377:2, 5839:1, 4246:2

A radical change of thought or conduct. R2968:3

Indicating a progression in justification. PT390:7*

Receive now the covering of your sins through Christ, by faith, and have as a result the divine favor and instruction in righteousness. R2295:2, 5839:1

May be blotted out -- Completely and forever removed. R2194:5, 5839:1, 4272:5, 3322:2, 2195:3, 2028:3

Our original sin was not blotted out; only "covered." R2667:1

It is one thing to have our sins forgiven, and quite another to have them blotted out. CR186:6; R3261:1

So long as the believer is blemished physically, mentally and morally, his sins are not blotted out. R2970:5

Our sins will be blotted out when we receive our new perfect bodies.

R3314:6, 5839:1, 4659:1, 3802:4, 3261:2, 2970:5, 1654:2

For the Church, instantaneously: "In a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump." (1Cor. 15:52) R4659:5, 3729:6, 2970:5

In due time; at the second advent of Christ. F668, 116; R4272:5, 3802:4, 2970:5, 1654:2; NS475:4

With the glorious change of the first resurrection. (1 Cor. 15:43,44) R5839:1

Only believers have escaped from the condemnation that is still upon the world. R1229:4

When, at the close of this Christian Age, the work of election is consummated, then God's Free grace will be extended to all the remainder of mankind. Election now and Free Grace then. Q788:2

To the world this blotting out of sins will come gradually, during the Millennial age. R2970:6, 2028:3

Then sins will be actually blotted out, to be no more forever--no trace of them will longer remain. NS136:6 Full reconciliation of so many as will accept God's grace in Christ under the New Covenant. R2563:2, 3106:6, 2000:3; NS290:4

Because ransomed and bought from sin with the precious blood of Christ. R93:6; A162

Uplifting the world to all those glorious qualities of heart, mind and body which were Adam's when he was in the image of God. R4659:5; OV377:1, 346:3; NS182:1

Human weakness and imperfections, the marks of sin, will not be fully blotted out until toward the close of Messiah's reign. R1654:2; CR186:6
The return of favor to the Jews will be when God "shall take away their sins." (Rom. 11:27) B211

When the times -- Greek, kairos; fixed times, as in "Times of the Gentiles" (Luke 21:24) B78 Seasons. Q795:2

Years; or, thousand years. R5925:3, 412:6; SM152:T, 617:1; OV44:1
That fixes a definite time when the blessings of liberty from sin and death shall begin to be actually realized. R1494:5

Of refreshing -- Recovery of breath. NS136:5

Making new. R741:5, 1494:3

Greenness--springtime. R4996:6

Times, or years, of restitution. SM617:1; C125; R278:1, 3106:6, OV148:2

The Millennial age, in the which he will judge the world. (Acts 17:31) C125; HG187:2

Lifting up from sin and degradation back to human perfection. R4914:3; Q461:4; SM617:1

Of regenerating the world. R5141:5

All the dead in trespasses and sins will be revived. R3755:3

The rolling away of the curse during the thousand years of Christ's reign. A73, 222, 241; E360; R5141:5, 4776:4, 3755:3, 1248:5, 278:1, 271:5

Blessings upon all the families of the earth, including the ten scattered tribes. A154; C292; R1630:2, 4965:4; PT258:1; NS649:6

The return of favor to the Jews will be when God "Shall take away their sins." (Rom. 11:27) B211

The Jews will be first to participate in the blessings of the Messianic Kingdom. R4902:2

Under the New Covenant with Israel at the end of this Gospel age. R4659:2, 904:6; OV69:1

As a result of the second advent of Jesus, the Messiah. SM49:1; HG406:3, 436:5

Speedily to follow the great time of trouble. HG458:5

"He shall come down like rain upon the mown grass." (Psa. 72:6) R1414:6

Of blessing also the physical earth, the footstool of God. SM617:1

From the presence -- Greek, prosopon; out from the face of, as a mark of favor. B188; R1414:3

Of the Lord -- Jehovah; from his favor, as indicated by the figure of his face turned toward us. R1414:3, 4137:3, 2584:2; B188; NS90:6

Acts 3:20

And he shall send -- At this appointed due time of refreshing. R1414:3, 4103:3

Messiah--at the second advent. NS194:6, 541:3, 716:3; HG143:4, 186:2, 232:5; OV289:5, 295:1; SM263:2

The times of refreshing or restitution are due at his return. R1422:1; NS527:3

Jesus Christ -- Who will mediate between God and the world. Q451:7

He will then be the owner of the world and prepared to deal with them and effect restitution for as many as will obey him. R4555:1; PT243:2

The world's Prophet, Priest, King, Judge and Mediator. R4881:4, 4640:4, 4428:1, 3951:3; HG272:6

Which before -- Who before. A89

Acts 3:21

Must receive -- Must retain. R5517:4, 4996:6, 4623:1, 4137:3, 2295:2, 2096:1, 741:6; HG149:6, 187:2, 232:5; NS8:6, 35:1, 99:6, 111:6, 501:4, 541:3

For nearly two thousand years. E452

During all the intervening time from his ascension to the beginning of the times of restitution, or Millennial age. A94; HG342:5

Until the times -- Years. R5925:3, 5839:1, 542:4*, 541:2*, 412:6, 276:2, SM617:1, 49:1; OV214:3, 148:2, 109:2; NS342:2

Processes. NS482:2

The period of renewing of the earth and of mankind. R2425:4

Change of dispensation. R5760:4, 5378:2, 2550:6; HG14:3

The whole restitution age, which will be at least one thousand years.

HG55:3

Beginning the last 1,000 years of the 7,000-year Seventh Epoch-Day of Jehovah's "rest." (Gen. 2:2) F49, 50

At the end of the 6,000 years of the reign of evil; the antitypical Jubilee, a thousand years long in whose beginning we are now living.

R2992:3; F51; NS138:6

The thousand years of Christ's reign. R3409:3, 5839:1, 5171:4, 4776:4, 1618:6; CR121:1; HG651:4; SM667:T; NS452:3, 523:4

The Millennial day. R5378:2, 4594:4, 3701:5, 3202:6, 3013:5, 1337:1, 276:2; 253:2, 214:3; SM331:T; CR65:6; OV214:3; NS716:3, 769:2

The great thousand-year judgment day. R3140:1, 4594:4

The 6,000 years of the reign of sin and death are past, we are living in the dawn of Messiah's day--the Millennium. R5262:3; NS111:6

"If I go, I will come again." (John 14:3) HG341:3

At Christ's second advent. R5863:6, 5171:4, 4776:4, 4753:1, 3847:3, 2859:5, 2425:4, 2351:5, 2116:6, 2096:1, 1618:6, 1483:2, 1359:5, 1018:2*, 904:6, 412:6, 366:4, 278:1, 238:1; E23, 24; CR116:2, 228:4; SM263:2, 331:T; HG149:6, 232:5, 406:3; OV289:5, 295:1; NS166:3, 216:1, 312:2, 475:4, 541:3, 716:3

Will follow our Lord's Second Advent and will last a thousand years. OV377:4

The Kingdom is to be set up at the second advent of our Lord Jesus. HG335:6, 336:3

The Millennium, or Times of Restitution, would result from the second coming of the Lord. C172; HG432:1; NS8:5, 395:3

When, at his second advent, the great King of kings shall take the dominion of the world out of the hands of "the prince of this world." R1052:2

Beginning in 1874. B181, 182, 187, 188, 242

If restitution times chronologically began in October, 1874, the heavens no longer retain our Lord. This is an indirect way the Scriptures teach that the Lord became present in 1874. NS35:1, 8:6, 9:1; R123:6

By the jubilees, to have begun April 6th, 1875 and that he must have left the Holy Place on the tenth day of the seventh month, occurring October 22nd, 1874; or six months before the "times of restitution" began. HG60:3, 55:2

On the strength of this inspired statement alone, we have clear evidence of the fact that our Lord's second advent was due when the Times of Restitution were due to begin, viz., in October, A.D. 1874, as marked by the Jubilee arrangement. B188; NS8:6

The date marked by the Jubilee cycles as the beginning of the Times of Restitution, September 20th, 1874 was the year 6002 A.M. R1980:6

Hence we have already entered "the times of restitution of all things," at which time the return of Christ is due. HG58:5

At the close of the Gospel age, when the church shall have finished her course. R3310:3; NS395:3, 783:3

Following the manifestation of the sons of God (the saints). Rom. 8:19. R1881:5

"The whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together until now, waiting for the manifestation of the sons of God." (Rom. 8:22) HG334:1

When the Lord, at his second coming, shall have received his members to himself on the plane of glory. R5392:1, 5273:4

When the second Adam and the second Eve become one. R257:3

Following the "marriage supper of the Lamb." Then is when "the Spirit and the Bride shall say, Come." (Rev. 22:17) HG522:6

The second coming of our Lord and the association of His church with Himself in the kingdom, power and authority and rule, will begin the great blessing of the world. NS99:6

The period of the reign of the glorified Christ (Head and body). R2397:5; HG753:1; OV216:5

It should be noted that when the Lord occupies his throne, the Church reigns with him. (Matt. 25:31-46) HG336:5; NS184:5

When he whose right the dominion is, shall take his great power and reign. R683:3

Following the expiration of the "seven times" of Lev. 26:18,21,24,28 (2520 years). R4867:5

Following the great time of trouble. HG458:5; NS614:5, 781:3

Beginning when the new dispensation, represented by the river of the water of life, is made available to men. R3571:2

That future time, when the earth shall be filled with the glory of the Lord. R4137:3

All these things are in the future. They all belong to the millennial age. NS141:4

Of restitution -- Restitution signifies to restore, to put back again into a proper condition. NS139:3

Restoration. R5636:4, 4594:4, 904:6, 741:6, 632:5*, 351:1; HG315:5

The "times of restitution" are the same as the times of "regeneration" in Matt. 19:27,28 R4556:2; PT247:5

Of refreshment, reinvigoration, upbuilding. SM152:T

The only "good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people." (Luke 2:10) R1961:4; SM174:2

The "balm of Gilead." (Jer. 8:22) R3033:4, 1693:4 When "the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord" (Hab. 2:14) causing "wars to cease unto the end of the earth." (Psa. 46:9) R544:2, 257:4, 6:2; CR270:3; OV384:1

Christ's Mediatorial kingdom. R4640:4, 4903:1; NS836:4

The actual deliverance of the redeemed race in God's due time and order.

One of the foundation doctrines of the Word of God. R3621:6

A lifting up of the poor and needy, and a humbling of the great. R3015:3

Out of degradation, the mire of sin, the horrible pit of iniquity and death. R2706:5; NS182:1

The world's release from the bonds of sin and death. R3961:6, 5872:2, 5643:1, 3999:1; B177; NS680:5

When mankind has been lifted up out of weaknesses and death to full perfection, Adamic death will be destroyed. R4999:5

A return to primeval conditions. R2397:5, 3202:6

Restoring mankind to original perfection, plus knowledge. R4557:6, 5925:3, 5063:6, 3495:5, 1166:6; NS429:5

Foreshadowed by Jesus' miracles of healing, etc. R5068:5; HG547:5

A return to God's likeness. R4673:6, 4553:1, 2397:5; CR270:2; OV377:4; NS342:2

Giving them also the opportunity of becoming sons of God on the earthly plane. R4942:2, 376:4; HG309:1, 316:2

A new start, a new trial, a fresh opportunity of deciding for God, for righteousness. NS726:5

The key which unlocks God's goodness, love, mercy, and justice, and discloses "the exceeding riches of his grace." (Eph. 2:7) R130:1
The great hope for the world. SM134:1; E23; R5822:2; NS138:3
Man will see and feel the restitution work in themselves and in their fellows. R1771:6
Of resurrection for the world. R5167:2, 3106:6, 875:3*, 258:4; HG441:4; NS639:4
The restoration of the world to their "former estate" (life on earth). R541:2*; NS90:6
Man was not redeemed to a spiritual state, but earthly. R2841:1; OV236:5, 359:2; NS69:5
If the evolution theory be true then there were no sinners to be redeemed and restored. R2836:2, 3298:5, 3256:6, 2639:6; SM134:1; HG610:1, 707:3; NS428:4, 429:2
If man did not fall a ransom would be absurd, and a restitution would be a most undesirable thing. R1610:4, 1794:2, 1784:6, 1718:1, 1240:5
Life restored by the Second Adam. R258:4, 257:3, 6:1; HG12:3
The curse will be rolled away. The restitution work is the bringing back from the curse. R5760:3, 3409:3, 1457:2; Q850:3
When "thy dead men shall live." (Isa. 26:19) R1868:3
Evidenced by the awakening of Lazarus from death. R4335:6
Typed by Job's restoration to favor and his after-blessing. (Job 42:12,13) R1507:1, 584:1, 194:3
Out of the various degrees of death (represented by sickness and imperfection) up to lasting life as Adam enjoyed it before his disobedience. E393, R376:4
There never could be a Millennial age, "times of restitution," so long as the original sentence stood against the race. NS189:5
The lifting of the "curse" (Gen. 3:17) from the ground. R2076:2
There are evidences of the beginning of restitution in the Holy Land in the revival of the vineyards. R4666:1
Great changes in the climate of the earth; Satan will no longer be "the prince of the power of the air." (Eph. 2:2) R1771:6
"Then shall the earth yield her increase." (Psa. 67:6) R5058:1, 4768:2, 2775:6; OV384:1

No one shall continue except those who are in accord with God. SM230:2

Acts 3:25

Covenant -- Back to his covenant relationship established on a better basis. R952:4
Christ will mediate for Israel the New Covenant as a substitute for their old one. R4555:1
A covenant includes promises, but implies an agreement. PT359:2*
In thy seed shall -- A glimmer of promise that God would at some future time do something for mankind. R5768:3
Jews were in darkness in respect to the meaning of this promise. R5769:5
Be blessed -- This seed of Abraham, The Christ, will roll away the curse, and roll in instead God's blessings upon humanity. CR366:3;
R5769:5, 4557:3; NS778:6
This is the "Everlasting Gospel." (Rev. 14:6) R345:1

Acts 3:26

Unto you first -- To Israel first was the Gospel of the new dispensation preached-- "To the Jew first, and afterward to the Gentile." (Luke 24:46-47, Acts 13:46, Rom. 2:9-10) R1846:2, 1795:1, 1422:2; Q380:1

As the natural seed of Abraham, God offered to them first the special favor of high exaltation to bless the world. R1422:2

According to God's covenant with their fathers. R1795:1

"For the promise is unto you, and unto your children." Acts 2:39 R1541:6

Until the seventy weeks of favor ended. C169; Q380:1

Raised up -- And since has been raising up the Church. R5928:2; PT120:2

Jesus -- The Messenger of a New Covenant. R1958:3

Acts 4

Acts 4:1

Sadducees -- They were practically unbelievers, because they were of the wealthier and therefore more respectable class. R4986:3

They denied the resurrection of the dead and the existence of spirit beings. R2939:5, 1424:2

Acts 4:2

Being grieved -- The Sanhedrin wished to arraign the apostles, not for the good deed of healing the lame man, but rather for their preaching of Jesus. R5839:3

The Sadducees were the policy men of that time. The preaching of the resurrection of Jesus would be an aggravation, because it was in direct conflict with their belief and teachings. R2939:5

Through jealousy; as are the clergy at the present time. OV264:4; R4060:1, 2940:2, 2096:2; HG712:1*

The Sadducees specially resented this new doctrine, which antagonized their views and to some extent supported their religious opponents, the Pharisees. R2939:6

They preferred to have the people in ignorance. HG383:1 The news was so new and so good that the religious teachers could not believe it to be true. R241:3

Those who were first invited, but rejected. (Luke 14:16-22) R342:6

They -- The apostles. R3189:5

Taught the people -- The apostles were really imparting to the people some knowledge of spiritual things, without being ordained by man, and on subjects about which the recognized doctors of divinity and theology knew nothing. R2096:2 Without money and without price. R4060:1

The people were giving more interested attention to these "laymen" than they gave to the religious rulers. R2096:1

Preached through Jesus -- Because of the ransom he had paid. R241:3

The value of his death as our redemption price. R95:1

The resurrection -- A re-vitalizing or re-creation from the dead. R1642:5

A judgment-resurrection. R1512:2

By provision of the ransom. R875:3*

That was the hope. Without Jesus and the ransom sacrifice there could be no hope of a resurrection. HG136:4

No other doctrine is so prominent in the New Testament as the resurrection; except the second coming of our Lord. R1508:6

Acts 4:3

Put them in hold -- In prison; not as felons, but for trial. R2939:2, 1424:2

Over night, for the meeting of the Sanhedrin next day. R4316:2, 2939:2

Acts 4:4

Was about five thousand -- One of the evidences of favor in the last half of the seventieth week. B70, 71

These Israelites, after Pentecost, were but a remnant as compared with the whole of Israel. R2301:2

Annas and Caiaphas -- Annas, the High Priest, and Caiaphas, his son, about two months previously had both presided in the trial of the Master himself. R2939:3

Caiaphas was the very one who condemned Jesus. R4316:3

Annas was subsequently dragged through the streets and murdered. R3369:3

Acts 4:6

Were gathered together -- Met as a court to hear, to overawe, to browbeat and to condemn Peter and John for their temerity in attempting to teach the people. R2096:5

Acts 4:7

By what power -- The power of God. R4316:6

The object of the trial evidently was to condemn the apostles for having practiced necromancy, sorcery, the black art. R2939:6, 4316:5

Acts 4:8

With the Holy Ghost -- Peter, as spokesman for the three, was supernaturally assisted. R2939:5

The holy Spirit, of meekness, patience, gentleness, long-suffering, brotherly-kindness. R2940:1

Said unto them -- An address which is beautiful, for its simplicity, directness, and meek-boldness. R2940:1

Acts 4:9

He is made whole -- A bona-fide miracle, straightening the ankle bones and giving to the ligaments strength never before possessed. R4316:2

Acts 4:10

Be it known unto you all -- How courageous indeed were the Apostle's words. To have evaded the point would have shown fear; and failed to make a proper impression on the Sanhedrin. R5839:3, 2940:1

People of Israel -- The whole twelve tribes. C293; R1341:1

Evidently the apostles knew nothing about any "lost ten tribes." R2085:3

The name of Jesus Christ -- By the authority and power of. R2940:1

Whom ye crucified -- Declaring that the Sanhedrin murdered Messiah. R5839:3, 2940:1

He charged straight home the responsibility of his death upon them. R4316:6, 2096:5

He states the matter without bitterness or acrimony. R2940:1, 2096:5

Whom God raised -- Christ could never have raised himself; it was his soul that died, and not merely his body. R2795:2

A re-creation of the same being; he is still the first and the last, the Only Begotten of the Father. (Rev. 1:11, 17, 18) R1005:5

Even by him -- He credited the miracle wholly to Jesus; a lesson to all the Lord's ambassadors. R5839:3

Acts 4:11

This is the stone -- Christ as the foundation stone in the spiritual temple of God. R1760:3, 2096:5, 2940:1

The Apostle quoted to them from the prophecy of David. (Psalm 118:22) R5839:6, 2940:1

The precious corner-stone, (Isa. 28:16) the head-stone of God's building, (Psa. 118:22) model of the whole; stone of stumbling and rock of offence to both the houses of Israel. (Isa. 8:14) C329, 330

The chief corner stone in the divine plan of the ages. R1424:3

The one and only foundation of his people's salvation. R2012:5

Which was set at nought -- Nevertheless God had highly exalted him to be the head over the Church, the spiritual temple. R2096:5

Acts 4:12

Salvation -- Life. R611:4

For which the Jews had been waiting--a national salvation and an individual salvation in the Kingdom of God. R2940:2

"Thou hast redeemed us to God by thy blood." (Rev. 5:9) E446

Jesus' death and resurrection opened up a new way to life. R5549:3

Faith in him and in his blood is the only condition of reconciliation with God. HG117:4

Having accepted Christ as the ransom, God "is faithful and just to forgive us our sins." (1 John 1:9) HG299:2

In any other -- Buddha, Confucius, ignorance or what-not. D192, 193; R2940:4, 1647:5

Not by the Law covenant, nor by heathen ignorance. R3399:4; NS808:4

There was no hope of salvation in Moses and in the Law, any more than in the heathen systems of theology. R2096:6

No man can be saved by works of the law, works of righteousness. Our justification and salvation are through faith in the blood of Christ.

NS539:5, 766:5

Anyone attempting to climb into the family of God otherwise "the same is a thief and a robber." (John 10:1; Rom. 5:1,2) R3020:2, 1647:5

None other name -- Than the name of Jesus. R5614:6, 858:4, 544:3, 392:2, 257:6, 6:4

By faith in Christ comes the blessing of God. R1425:1, 5840:2; E472

The channel of all of God's mercy in Christ Jesus. R5179:3

Christ Jesus is the only Savior. CR19:6

"The way, the truth, and the life." (John 14:6) NS766:5

Knowledge of, and faith in, and obedience to Christ was the only God appointed way of salvation. R2096:6; NS643:6

None but those who accept Christ and form character are fit for the Kingdom. HG145:6

Nowhere in the Scriptures is eternal life promised to any except on conditions of faith in Christ the Redeemer, and repentance. R1437:2, 5871:4, 5071:1; HG699:6, 700:1; NS411:5

The one way of approaching God is by and through the Great Advocate. R4786:4, 5840:1, 5105:5, 4629:1, 761:4

Only one way of escape from condemnation has been provided. HG293:5

"No man cometh unto the Father, but by me." (John 14:6) R2454:5; CR420:5

No one was saved before Jesus came. R5179:4, 5774:6; SM43:3

Only a comparatively small portion of the human family have ever heard of his name. R3701:3; HG316:1; NS279:5, 833:3

The dead of humanity will hear that name in the resurrection, during the thousand years. (John 1:9) SM197:1; R3025:6

Mohammedans are heathen in the sense of not recognizing Christ. R4140:5

The benighted heathen shall not be left in ignorance of that name. In due time this true light shall lighten every man. R3788:5

This would be a difficult lesson for his hearers to receive. R2940:2

Must be saved -- From death. R611:4, 1126:2

From our condition of condemnation, and be brought back into the family of God. HG694:6

Either in this age or in any other. NS803:5

The Kingdom will give to every son and daughter of Adam one full, fair, righteous opportunity to come to a knowledge of the truth that they may be saved. NS822:2, 705:6; SM780:2

Whereby members of Adam's race may be reconciled to God. NS225:2

Come into heart relationship with God. R5444:5

Whereby they can be saved, and all who will come unto him through Christ will be accepted. R4629:1

May have life, with full recognition of the efficacy of the ransom. R401:5

Through the blood once shed as the ransom-price for the whole world.

R5871:4, 1231:2, 709:3

He paid the penalty which was the full satisfaction of justice. E461

Justification by faith is the underlying principle of the whole system of Christianity. A100 Faith in Jesus was the only way of salvation. R761:4, 544:3

Cornelius was not "saved" until Peter told him the way. R800:6

Having purchased the race, it is necessary that the Great Physician heal them. E473

In the Millennium. R3025:6

"In that day" the Sodomites will be given an opportunity to believe in the "only name." HG336:2

Neither innocence nor ignorance, nor any other natural condition will save. R1043:6

Acts 4:13

When they -- The Sanhedrin. R5840:1

Boldness -- Courage. R4460:2, 4316:6; NS666:5

The Sanhedrin were perplexed as they perceived that the disciples had so strong a case. R5840:2

Peter and John -- The Pentecostal blessing qualified them for the ministry. R5589:4

They were unlearned -- The humbler walks of life, led them to strength of character. F210, 211; R5563:1, 2925:3, 2820:6

Lacking the polish or education which people expected in religious teachers. R4969:2, 748:1

Not theologians, but of the "common people," addressed them meekly, simply, yet with holy boldness. R2096:5

An example of the honesty of the Bible. PD43/53; OV11:6

Had they more learning, the probabilities are that they would have been proportionately less ready for the Lord and his message. NS562:2

The Gospel message takes hold chiefly upon those less favored in the present life. R4460:2

Not many great, not many learned, not many rich, not many noble. SM750:2

The Lord is now using agencies, messengers, that are not acceptable to many. R5258:4

They marvelled -- Even the multitude perceived that they were unlearned and ignorant. R5941:6 As with Jesus, the people said, "Whence hath this man this wisdom?" (Matt. 13:54) R646:5

Their zeal and earnestness was astonishing to their fellowmen. HG416:1
Whoever the Lord may use as his mouthpiece will be endowed with the necessary ability. R4316:6

No eloquence of error can stand before the logic of their deductions from the Law and the Prophets and the teachings of the Lord. R1525:5

Knowledge of them -- Having learned in the school of Christ, these were transformed men. NS666:5

Our conduct should be a credit to the great and noble cause with which we are identified. R5840:6

Let our moderation and our joy in the Lord be manifest to all. R3753:6

Had been with Jesus -- Learned his doctrine and copied his spirit. F219; R4988:4, 1789:5, 1525:5

They were his disciples, learners in his school. R4460:3, 4988:4

The Spirit of Christ endowed them with eloquence and courage to fully defend and voice the truth. R4316:3

All intimately associated with the members of the body of Christ, should recognize the largeness and grandeur of character. R4746:6

All with who we come in contact should be able to see by our sweetness of spirit, our patience, that we have been with Jesus and learned of him. R5980:2, 4746:6, 4662:5

One of the remarkable things about "present truth" is its transforming effect upon those who receive it. R4460:2

Acts 4:17

Spread no further -- Because of their blindness and prejudice to the light of the new dispensation. D164

Acts 4:18

They -- The prejudice-blinded rejecters of God's truth. R1424:5

Not to speak at all -- Charging them, threatening them, not to preach any more. R5840:2

Probably indicating similar persecutions in the end of the Gospel harvest. B263; R969:1

Acts 4:19

Whether it be right -- While we are to be subject to earthly powers (Rom. 13:1), as respects earthly things, we have a still higher responsibility in respect to the spiritual, the heavenly things. R4317:4, 5840:4

It is the right and proper course to believe God rather than men. R1425:3
More than unto God -- They courageously withstood this illegal restraint upon their liberties and rights. R2878:5

Wherever it is a question of pleasing God or pleasing man, we will not do anything contrary to the divine will. (Dan. 2:17-18) R5540:4

Offer no resistance to any established law, except where they conflict with God's laws. A266

We should remember not to violate conscience in order to please anyone. R1553:1

Judge ye -- For yourselves. R2928:1

Whether to obey God or man may be a question in your minds. OV159:2

While obedient to every earthly law, let us feel perfectly free to do the Lord's will in every matter. R4317:5, 5840:4

Acts 4:20

We cannot but speak -- We cannot help but speak. R942:5

They spoke modestly, courteously, but very boldly. R4317:4

God had commanded the disciples, through Jesus, to be his mouthpieces. R5840:4

We cannot refrain from telling the good tidings and praising the Lord. R4589:1

It is our duty to make known the Gospel message to hearing ears. R5840:4

We would be in distress and woe, if we could not tell the joyful message. R671:1

"Woe is unto me if I preach not the Gospel." (1 Cor. 9:16) R3616:6

To keep the message secret would mean our own failure to progress. R4317:4

"The people that do know their God shall be valiant and do exploits."

(Dan. 11:32) R2570:1

The things -- The message of Jesus' death being efficacious for the cancellation of sin, and the opportunity to become his followers. R5840:4

Seen and heard -- The basis of their confidence was not superstition, but a knowledge of the truth. R1425:2

It is only those who have heard something and seen something who have any testimony to give. R3616:6

Acts 4:21

Punish -- Greek, Kolasin, To cut off, to restrain, to chastise. R2608:2, 1040:2

Because of the people -- So strong was the truth that the people disregarded the opposition of the clergy; unable to deny the testimony they were obliged to let the apostles go. R1425:3

Acts 4:23

Their own company -- Shows the beautiful bond of sympathy that existed in the early Church. R1425:3

Acts 4:24

Their voice -- Prayer of thankful acknowledgment of the favor of God in the deliverance of these two faithful witnesses. R1425:4

Lord -- Greek, Despot, sovereign. E70

Thou art God -- They did not attribute their success to their own power but to the favor and blessing of God. R1425:4

Acts 4:25

David hath said -- A partial application, the fullness belonging to the time of the second advent. R1384:6, 1425:5, B263

The heathen rage -- Refers to the commotion and discontent already prevailing. R1385:1

Acts 4:26

Kings of the earth -- Religious, financial and political. R1385:1

Against the Lord -- Take counsel together against the principles of truth and righteousness. R1425:5

Acts 4:27

Thou hast anointed -- Not with literal oil, but with the holy Spirit. R4715:2

The people of Israel -- The whole twelve tribes. C293; R1341:1, 2085:3

With all boldness -- Regardless of the consequences to themselves. R1425:6

Speak thy word -- Declare thy plan, purpose, or intention (Greek: logos). R338:1, 421:2

Acts 4:31

Word of God -- The Scriptures do claim to be the Word of God. R1584:3

With boldness -- As a consequence of the release from prison of Peter and John. R5840:5

Acts 4:32

One heart...one soul -- The oneness of thought, mind and action required of the Church of God. R1130:6*; Q837:2

All things common -- The wealthier sold their possessions and turned in the money to the Lord's treasury. R5850:1

And "There arose a murmuring," (Acts 6:1) as a result. D479; R4318:1, 1862:3

The Bible does not teach communism; neither did the Lord or the apostles. R1862:2, 2102:3, 1390:5; D478

Experience proves the failure of communistic methods in the present time. R1862:1, 5850:1, 4318:1, 2102:1; D478

The community principle will prosper wonderfully in the Kingdom. R5850:1

With great power -- Not made secondary to politics, social questions, evolution, etc. R4391:1

Witness of -- The apostles witnessed by their words, logical presentations and their lives. R4391:4

Resurrection -- Greek, anastasis, with the Greek article, indicating the first or special resurrection. R1512:2

All this witnessing was to the point that Christ died; that his death was not for his own sins, but as man's Redeemer. R4390:6

Proving he was approved of God, the Messiah, and that now there could be a high-calling to joint-heirship. R2102:1

That his death was the great sin-offering, the ransom price for the whole world. R2102:1

A dead Redeemer would be powerless to become the Messiah and to establish the divine law amongst those whom he had purchased with his blood. R4390:6

The apostles hung the entire weight of their testimony upon this one matter. R2102:2

The general theme of the early Church. R4391:1

Should be a prominent theme in our witnessing. R4391:1

Acts 4:34

That lacked -- The true spirit of Christ is indicated by the fact that the needy were not suffered to lack while others had plenty. (1 John 3:17) R2102:2

Acts 4:35

As he had need -- Controlled by love, the well-to-do felt that they would like all the poorer brethren to have just as good as themselves.

R5849:6

Shows what should be the spirit of all who love the Lord. R4317:6

See also comments on 4:32.

Acts 4:36

Joses -- Uncle of John Mark; he was generous and helpful in the Church, and was given a new name, Barnabas. R4318:2, 5850:1, 2943:2

Barnabas -- Sample of the spirit of proper fellowship and brotherhood in the early Church. R4318:3

Son of consolation -- Comfort and helpfulness. R2943:2, 3434:1

He had a beautiful spirit. R5850:1

Sympathetic, loving, kind, helpful. R4318:2, 3435:6, 2943:2

Our commission is "to comfort all that mourn" (Isa. 61:2); among the Church now, then all the world in the Kingdom. R5537:1, 3436:1, 3434:3, 2665:4

The more we possess of the spirit of holiness, devotion to God, the more may we be sons of consolation. R4318:2

A Levite -- Being a Levite, he was trained as a teacher. Tradition says he became acquainted with Saul of Tarsus, in the Gamaliel school. R4318:2

Acts 5

Acts 5:1

Ananias with Sapphira -- Our thought is that these two culprits had never received the begetting of the holy Spirit. R5850:3, 4318:5, 2943:6

Examples of false brethren. R4317:2

A deceitful, hypocritical spirit, displeasing to God. R4318:4

They were made an illustration of a principle of deception. They served as ensamples for the instruction of the Church. R2943:6, 4318:4, 2102:4

Sold a possession -- Merely desiring an approbation of the brethren.

R5453:4, 2943:3

Acts 5:2

Kept back -- Desirous of the approval of the Church, yet deficient in the real spirit of sacrifice. R2943:3

Attempting to cheat the others by getting a share of their alls without giving their own all. R1862:3; D479

It is not feasible to have communism amongst those who are imperfect.
R4318:1, 5850:1, 5851:6

Part of the price -- They agreed together that they would retain part of the sale-money for future contingencies, yet would pass as sacrificers to the full amount. R2943:3

The nominal church teems and overflows with just this class of people. The greatest sin, even amongst consecrated believers, is dishonesty. R2944:1, 5453:6

It is a very serious matter to make vows and afterward reconsider, or attempt to take back that which we have consecrated to the Lord. R2102:6

Let us see to it that, having made the contract, we pay over the price in full. R1657:4

Acts 5:3

But Peter -- Possessing the gift of discerning the spirits. R4318:4, 2943:6, 372:4; E269

Acting in the capacity of one of the twelve chosen apostles of the Lord. F412; R435:3

It required the exercise of those special powers conferred upon the apostles, to keep the community from being imposed on by such selfish characters. R1421:4

Filled thine heart to lie -- By his spirit or influence. E269

With his spirit of covetousness. R372:4

To the holy Ghost -- Lying to God, lying to the holy Spirit of God, whose agent and representative Peter was. E269; R372:4

It was an unpardonable sin, but it is not for us to determine the degree of wilfulness. R5453:3

Keep back part -- They should have been honest. If they wished to give a tenth, a half, no one would have had the right to criticize. The wrong consisted in the deception practiced. R5453:4

Acts 5:4

Whiles it -- Thy possessions. R2102:6

Was it not thine own? -- Remember that you consecrated your all before you were anointed, and now you cannot be an overcomer and keep back part of the price. R241:4, 2102:6

"Better is it that thou shouldest not vow, than that thou shouldest vow and not pay." (Eccl. 5:5) R2154:5

Not lied unto men, -- The greatest sin in the church, even amongst consecrated believers, is that of dishonesty. R2944:1, 5453:6

Water immersion was not necessarily an endorsement of such by the apostles and the church. R1544:2

They had a perfect right to keep part of the price, but not to lie about it. R4318:4, 5850:2, 2943:3

But unto God -- God's holy Spirit, in the apostles. E269; R5453:5, 372:4

Acts 5:5

Gave up the ghost -- A lesson to the Church that they were dealing, not with flesh and blood, but with Jehovah God. R5850:3, 4318:5, 2943:6
It may be that they were merely cut off from the present life and will have some future opportunity. R5453:3

The only case in the church on record where the penalty of wilful violation of a covenant with God met with summary punishment. R1426:1

Great fear -- Reverence for God, and the apostles. R5453:5, 4318:5, 2943:3

Acts 5:9

Have agreed together -- The submission of a wife to her husband "in everything" (Eph. 5:24) does not apply to everything unholy, impure and selfish. R1552:6

Spirit of the Lord -- By which the Apostle probably meant the Lord Jesus. E270; R372:4

Acts 5:10

Buried her -- Without the holy Spirit, they had not sinned unto death, and will be resurrected. R5850:4, 5453:3

Acts 5:11

Great fear -- The designed effect was realized. R5850:4
Reverence for God, and for the apostles. R2943:3, 5850:5, 5453:5, 4318:5
The lesson to the church is that it is impossible to deceive God who discerns the thoughts and intents of the heart. R2102:5

A warning of God's righteous indignation against all hypocrisy and deceit. R1426:2, 5850:6, 4318:4

The lesson for the whole church is the solemn obligation involved in our covenant with him of entire consecration to his service. R1426:1

Acts 5:14

Added to the Lord -- This period of gathering the ripe wheat, and establishing them, was a very necessary prelude to the period of persecution and suffering which followed. R2108:2

Acts 5:17

Rose up -- Was aroused. R2103:2, 2947:2

Sect -- A part cut off. R537:3

Heresy. R1130:6*

Sadducees -- Agnostics, Higher Critics and skeptics. R4325:2, 2103:1
Practically unbelievers; of the wealthier, more respectable class. R4986:3
Might be termed to some extent agnostic--their faith considerably resembling that of the "Reformed Jews" of today. Did not believe in the resurrection, nor in spirit beings. R2103:1, 4325:2

With indignation -- Jealousy. (Revised Version) Hot with indignation.
R4325:3

The officials were in consternation. R2103:2

Envy; the spirit of sectarianism against the truth often manifested in our day. R2947:2

Acts 5:18

Laid their hands -- Permitted by the Jewish Sanhedrin to make arrests in respect to religious matters. R2467:6

Such persecution would furnish in the harvest of this age a parallel to the harvest of the Jewish age, and give a wider a deeper typical illustration of Elijah's whirlwind and John the Baptist's imprisonment and beheading. R969:4; B264, 265

Prison -- For daring to preach without permission of the Chief Priests.
R992:6

Acts 5:19

But the angel -- The Lord sent his angel and delivered his faithful servants. R5851:4

Opened the prison -- Yet left the prison doors unmolested. R265:3

Spiritual beings possess powers greater and higher than humanity. R265:2

And said -- All such indirect, non-personal instructions are properly described as from or by the Lord's holy Spirit. E277

Acts 5:20

This life -- Life from the dead, secured through the Redeemer. We who believe do now, by faith, enter into this newness of life. R4325:4

Acts 5:21

Entered into the temple -- The apostles went early to the temple, and began, as before, to explain the Old Testament Scriptures and types.
R4325:4

Called the council -- The Sanhedrin. R2947:6
For the purpose of condemning the apostles. R2103:2

They felt compelled to make another attempt to head off what they considered the heresy of the Nazarene. R2103:1

Children of Israel -- The whole twelve tribes. C293; R2085:4, 1341:1

Acts 5:25

Put in prison -- The Sanhedrin was permitted to make arrests, but not to execute criminals without the consent of the Roman governor. R2467:6

Teaching the people -- The apostles exhorted the people to prepare for the kingdom and to accept the invitation to become members of the bride class. R5851:1

Acts 5:27

High priest -- They were cast into prison for daring to preach without permission of the Chief Priests. R992:6

Acts 5:28

Doctrine -- Teachings. R5851:5, 4325:5, 2948:1, 2947:6

Man's blood upon us -- Christ's blood shed. R1336:1

To make the people think we are responsible for his death. R2103:4, 5851:5, 4325:5

Thus the chief priests, Scribes and Pharisees of today fear for not only their various denominational structures, but also for their own standing. R2948:1 5:29

Then Peter and the other apostles answered -- Thus another opportunity was afforded God's servants to testify, and to the chief priests and rulers to hear a strictly gospel sermon. R2947:6

The answer of the apostles shows that they were courageous men. R2103:4

God rather than men -- Where they conflicted with God's laws. A266

We have merely followed divine instructions. R2103:4

Divine authority must be recognized as supreme. R4325:6

Remember not to violate conscience in order to please any one. R1553:1

If we come into conflict with the religious rulers, we are to be bold for truth, but moderate and humble in manner and language. R2103:5

Acts 5:30

Raised up -- Greek, egeiro; to awaken, arouse, stir. R1512:2

Acts 5:31

Hath God exalted -- To the highest plane of being, the divine nature.

E120

He would have all men "honor the Son, even as they honor the Father."
(John 5:23) HG297:2

By delivering to him the scroll of wisdom, and the power and authority to execute all of its provisions. R2156:2

Abundant proof that Jesus' sacrifice was acceptable and well pleasing to
God. R387:3

Our Lord Jesus in all matters acts as the representative of the Father. E35

To be a Prince -- Master, or Lord. R745:4

The world in general dies like Prince Adam, but the faithful with Prince
Jesus. "One of the princes." (Psa. 82:7) F724

And a Saviour -- That he may be able to recover from death and grant judgment to all whom he purchased. A142

Life-giver. R4963:5

His title, The Mighty God, or Mighty, Mighty One, will be recognized then, on earth, as well as in heaven. R5136:2

To Israel -- The whole twelve tribes. C293; R1341:1

Forgiveness of sins -- This was never preached before, because, until then, our ransom price had not been paid. R387:3

Acts 5:32

And we -- The eleven apostles. E212

And so is also the Holy Ghost -- As the cloven tongues fitly represented the mission of the apostles to be, under the Holy Spirit, to testify as "witnesses." E213

Acts 5:33

Cut to the heart -- They were grieved that the people were taught.

R5851:1

By the "sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God." (Eph. 6:17) R5496:1

The lance of truth. SM440:1

Angered, embittered. R2947:6

Acts 5:34

Named Gamaliel -- The instructor of Saul of Tarsus, a worldly-wise but noble-minded man. R2948:2, 2085:4

Ye men of Israel -- The whole twelve tribes. C252, 293; R1341:1

Not, "Ye men of Judah." If Israel was lost, Gamaliel did not know of it.

R2085:4, C252

Take heed to yourselves -- Gamaliel gave evidence of his wisdom. R4033:1
5:36

Theudas, boasting himself -- "All that ever come before me are thieves and robbers." (John 10:8) Who attempted fraudulently to palm themselves off on the Jewish people as their leader. R4732:6
History tells us of several others who deceived quite a few Jews. D565

Acts 5:39

Cannot overthrow it -- Nearly one-fourth of the clergy joined in a campaign of slander against Pastor Russell, but others refused, after the manner of Gamaliel. CR351:2; HG557:3

Fight against God -- Satan desires to get us to do just this. R4803:5
Many imagine they are serving God while they are really serving the adversary. R4033:5

A strong character affected by a measure of pride is apt to take a wrong course from which it is almost impossible for him to recede. R4033:6
We should never forget the Lord in our personal affairs and very careful respecting every step we take. R4198:4

Acts 5:40

And beaten them -- With thirteen strokes of a three-tailed whip, "Forty stripes save one." (2 Cor. 11:24) R2948:3

Furnishes in the end or harvest of this age, another parallel to the harvest of the Jewish age. B263; R969:4

Acts 5:41

Rejoicing -- The Lord blessed them in their hearts with his peace and grace, while he did not shield them from the scourging. R4326:1
They did not threaten the Scribes and Pharisees, nor did they bemoan their fate. R2948:4

Such sufferings are accompanied with joy and peace which make them to appear but "light afflictions" and "but for a moment." (2 Cor. 4:17)
R1699:6

We must let none of these things move us. R1575:6
We would be in distress and woe, if we could not tell the joyful message.
R671:1

Acts 5:42

In every house -- The congregations of the primitive Church were small and usually met in private houses. R2941:6

Ceased not to teach -- The threatenings of the Sanhedrin were powerless to stop them from declaring the good tidings. R2948:5

Acts 6

Acts 6:1

Arose a murmuring -- Favoritism was claimed in the distribution of the necessities. R5851:6

Showing that Communism is not the Lord's arrangement. D479

Widows were neglected -- Apparently unintentional and possibly arose from the fact that the apostles, native-born, appreciated more keenly the needs of the native widows than of the foreign-born. R2951:3

Acts 6:2

Then the twelve called -- The apostles turned the matter over to the believers, the Church. F254

Pursuing the proper course to throw the responsibility upon the whole congregation R2951:5

Acts 6:3

Look ye out -- Choose out from amongst you suitable men for this service. F254

This incident suggests the loose organization of the early church. It had not cast-iron rules and laws. The necessities of each case seem to have guided. R5951:2

Seven men -- They elected such deacons as were considered necessary under the circumstances. Q242:4

May appoint -- They appointed seven Deacons to attend to the charities. R5851:6

Probably a vote of the church. R1891:3

You are choosing servants (ministers) and not rulers or masters. R1891:3, 1523:5, 2951:2

Some of those chosen for the serving of tables were representative of the Grecian brethren who, knowing the peculiarities of the Grecian customs, would be the better able to see to the welfare of the Grecian widows. R2951:6

Acts 6:4

Continually to prayer -- Take time to pray. R5379:3*

To the ministry -- To spiritual oversight of the early church. R1432:2

Rather than to managing a community along earthly lines, they decided to give themselves entirely to the Gospel work. R5851:6

Acts 6:5

Chose Stephen -- A deacon--minister or servant--for the temporal interests of the Church. R2108:3, 1523:5, 1432:2

Philip -- One of those whom the persecution drove out of Jerusalem. R2960:2

He attended not only to the distribution of the natural food, but by feeding of his own heart upon the spiritual food prepared himself for further service of a more spiritual kind. R2960:2

Acts 6:6

Their hands on them -- In the early church the laying on of hands was used to indicate consent, denoted representation. R1957:4

Not as authority to preach, but as a mark of apostolic approval and blessing. F283, 284; R812:3*

Acts 6:7

Disciples multiplied -- Many gladly received the word and were baptized. These were genuine conversions, and gave evidence of a spirit of sacrifice. R550:4

This gathering and establishing them in the doctrines of Christ was a necessary prelude to the persecution which shortly followed. R2108:2

Obedient to the faith -- Of one mind and full of hope and joy. R550:4

Full of faith -- Faith working by love had produced zeal for the Lord and his cause. Oldest manuscripts read, "Full of grace." R2108:3
Stephen, faithful in the service of tables, was blessed of the Lord and granted opportunities for the exercise of his zeal and talents in a more public manner in preaching the Gospel. F254

Acts 6:9

The synagogue -- It is supposed that Stephen was attached to one of these synagogues and urged upon his associates the message that Jesus was the Messiah. R5858:1

Of them of Cilicia -- Possibly including Saul of Tarsus. R2952:3, 5858:1

Disputing -- The disputants represented advanced philosophies of that day, combined with Judaism. R2108:5

Acts 6:10

Not able to resist -- As a religious logician he met with the learned men of his time, including Saul. R2108:5

"I will give you a mouth and wisdom which all your adversaries shall not be able to gainsay nor resist." (Luke 21:15) R2952:2

The same principle is illustrated today, when the Lord's humble ones are more than a match for their adversaries. R2952:2

Wisdom and the spirit -- All of their philosophy could not cope with the wisdom and spirit of the truth. R2108:5

Those chosen for service today should be the best and wisest, and possessing a holy, meek and quiet spirit. R2951:6

By which he spake -- Stephen had the truth, the right side of the controversy, and God was with him. R2952:2 The Lord recognized Stephen as an Elder before the brethren discovered his ability; but he could not have taught in the Church unless so chosen by the Church. F254; R2951:6

Suborned men -- Procured witnesses. R5208:6

They bribed certain men to make false charges. R5858:2, 4328:5, 2108:6

Acts 6:12

Stirred up -- Being unable to resist the wisdom by which he spoke, they were the more infuriated against him. R1432:3

The elders, and the scribes -- The official representatives of the Sanhedrin. R2108:6

Many have supposed that Stephen met his death at the hands of a mob. But this is incorrect. R2108:6

Caught him -- As though caught in the very act of blasphemy. R2108:6

To the council -- Or place of trial. R4328:5

The Sanhedrin, of which it is supposed Saul of Tarsus was a member. R2952:4, 5858:4, 2958:4, 2109:2, 1432:3

Acts 6:13

False witnesses -- Misrepresenting the words and arguments of Stephen. R2108:6, 5858:2

Blasphemous words -- Blasphemy in that day was the worst of crimes. R4328:5

This holy place -- The temple. R1432:2, 2952:4

Jerusalem, and especially its holy Temple, which sanctified it. R2957:3

Acts 6:15

Saw his face -- As he mentally remarked the correspondence between the charges against him, and those upon which his Master was convicted. R2952:4

The face -- Serene, calm, unperturbed. R2502:6

The peace and joy of his heart shone from his eyes and so illuminated his whole countenance. R1432:3 His face was so wonderfully lit up with the indwelling of joy. R2952:5

Beaming with love, kindness, interest in their welfare, desire to do them good, purity, holiness of motive. R2109:1

There is an inspiration of the heart and an illumination of the features which accommodates the presentation of the truth. R4328:6

Of an angel -- Messenger of the good tidings, servant of the truth.

R4328:6, 2958:2

His heart was so provoked to love and good works that his face shone with an angelic beauty. R4078:4

Radiant, beautiful, lovelit, happy, aglow, angelic. E161, 162; R4328:6, 2958:2

Acts 7

Acts 7:1

Are these things so? -- The Sanhedrin, with a show of fairness, permitted Stephen to reply in his own defense. R5858:2

Acts 7:2

And he said -- A defence of the truth, rather than of himself. R2957:2

His lesson was that, as Moses was at first rejected by Israel, so Jesus, "like unto Moses," was first rejected; but as Moses subsequently became their leader, commander and deliverer, Jesus would become the great deliverer of his people at his second advent. R2957:6

Appeared -- Greek, optomai, recognized. God give Abraham instruction in such a manner that he recognized his instruction as the God of Glory. "No man hath seen God at any time." (John 1:18; 1 John 4:12) R141:1

Father Abraham -- The name (changed from Abram), signifies father of a multitude. R5169:3

The promises of God made to Abraham constitutes the foundation for all the theology of the New Testament. R5169:3

Acts 7:3

Get thee out -- God called him out of evil surroundings to be the founder of a new nation that would be holy and obedient to God. R5169:5

Acts 7:4

When his father was dead -- Abraham remained in Haran, until his father Terah's death. Then he removed to the land of Canaan. R5169:4, 1980:2
At his death Terah's age was two hundred and five years. Abraham was seventy five years old. (Gen. 11:32) R5177:2, 2855:1, 1595:2

Into this land -- The covenant was made just after he entered the land (Gen. 12:5-7), immediately following Terah's death. B46

The covenant was made as soon as Abraham had fully complied with the conditions on which he was to receive it: that was, as soon as he had entered Canaan. B45; HG44:1

Acts 7:5

None inheritance -- Abraham was a pilgrim and a stranger; a sojourner and not an owner to the day of his death. R2849:4

Although owned by others, it was not fenced but free to the users. The patriarch roamed at will through the land of the Canaanites for nearly two centuries. D427

The only portion that he ever owned was the cave of Machpelah, where he buried his wife Sarah; and that cave did not come as a gift from God, but was purchased for money. NS82:1

In it -- In the land. A293

To set his foot on -- Abraham never owned a foot, but he died in confident hope. R1373:6, 361:6

"These all died in faith, not having received the promises." (Heb. 11:13)
R1617:2, 1562:1, 607:1, 361:6

Yet he promised -- The promise made to Abraham was an earthly promise and must be fulfilled in the future. A293; C265; R5203:3, 2849:4, 2230:6, 1617:1, 607:1; OV109:T

Abraham believing that when he should be awakened from death in due time the promise would be verified. (Heb. 11:8-10) R4071:3, 220:2

Abraham must have a resurrection in order for God's Word to come true. R5291:2, 3084:3

This promise was not only the covenant as you see, but it was the covenant confirmed of God in Christ. (Gal. 3:16-17) HG44:1

Give it to him -- Abraham is to have a grand portion--the land of Palestine. R3945:3

In the morning of the resurrection. R1652:4, 2849:4, 607:1

Then Abraham will realize the reward of his faith. R1652:4

"God having provided some better thing for us." (Heb. 11:40) R3084:3, 361:6; A293, B246

For a possession -- An everlasting possession. (Gen.17:8) C265; R4071:3, 1652:4

To his seed -- The likeness of his seed to the stars of heaven and to the sands of the sea were two different figures. The natural seed could not inherit all the great promises. R2854:5, 3945:4

The natural seed of Abraham as its earthly representatives. R2176:2, 220:2
Every student of prophecy watches the events bearing upon the promised land and the covenant people. R2176:2

After him -- He implied that Abraham will yet receive that land and afterward leave it to his posterity. R5182:5

The thought would seem to be implied that the Ancient Worthies will pass to the spirit nature. R5182:5

Acts 7:6

Sojourn -- This pilgrimage and sojourn as strangers, while waiting for possession of the promised land. R2230:6

Acts 7:7

Judge -- Greek, krino, to distinguish, decide, try. (Strong) R2426:4

Acts 7:8

Of circumcision -- Symbolizing a cutting off, a separation from the flesh, its aims, hopes and desires. R3022:3

Twelve patriarchs -- Corresponds to the twelve apostles. B246

Acts 7:9

Moved with envy -- Their course was not inspired by God, but by their own envy. R1779:4

Jacob probably did not realize to what extent his partiality was cultivating in his other sons a feeling of enmity and envy. R2880:2

No ground here for charging the crime of Joseph's brethren upon the Almighty. R1271:1

Those who can plan murder, with envy, malice and hatred, will not hesitate to support their evil way by fraud, deception, lying. R2880:6

Acts 7:14

Threescore and fifteen souls -- Beings, persons. R205:2

Acts 7:16

In the sepulchre -- Israel hoped for a resurrection from the tomb, but not fully realizing God's power, they were particular in caring for the corpses of their dead. R2601:6

Acts 7:20

Exceeding fair -- Refined, elegant. Josephus says Moses was so beautiful that those who passed him on the street stood still to gaze at him. R2903:5, 3987:6

Acts 7:22

Moses was learned -- Educated at the University of Heliopolis, where he had access to 20,000 books. R3988:3, 2903:6

He learned arithmetic, geometry, astronomy, medicine and music. R2904:1

His long experience in the Egyptian court gave him insight into the affairs of government. R5418:3 God's providence prepared this suitable person as the prototype of Messiah. R5251:4, 181:5*

In words and in deeds -- Tradition says that he was also an able general in the Egyptian army. R5418:3

Having defeated with great slaughter the Ethiopian army which invaded Egypt in his early manhood. R3988:4

A great and powerful genius, an organizing, constructing mind. R3987:2

He invented boats, engines for building, instruments for war, hydraulics, hieroglyphics, division of lands. R2904:1

A lawmaker, organizer, general, historian, poet, orator, and a saint who walked with God. R3987:2

The laws given through him have been the foundation for the laws of all civilized nations. R737:3; A164

Acts 7:23

Full forty years old -- Typifying the 1845 years of the Jewish dispensation. R2909:6, 181:5*

Acts 7:25

They understood not -- Typifying that Christ "Came to his own and his own received him not." (John 1:11) R2909:6

Acts 7:27

Thrust him away -- As a type of Christ who was rejected by his brethren. R181:5*

Acts 7:28

As thou didst -- Greek, hon tropon; in like manner. R341:1*

Acts 7:30

And when forty years -- Typifying the 1845 years of the Christian dispensation. R2909:6

In a flame -- Moses did not see an angel but a flame. R140:6

Acts 7:31

The sight -- Greek, horama. Signifies a vision, not reality. R4142:4*

Acts 7:35

Ruler and a deliverer -- A type of Christ. R181:5*

Acts 7:36

Wilderness forty years -- (Joshua 14:7,10) It was forty-five years from the spying of the land to its division, and a little over a year from the exodus to the sending of the spies. The first forty years of this period were passed in the wilderness. B48

So because of a lack of faith in our Lord's first advent they were made to wander to gain further experiences during the past nineteen centuries.

R3079:3

Acts 7:37

Moses -- Was merely the type of Jesus the head and the Church his body, the greater Prophet, and the Law Covenant which Moses mediated was a type of the greater Law Covenant of the Millennial age. Fi

The Law led to Christ HG582:4

Like unto me -- But greater than Moses--Christ. HG582:5

As Moses was rejected at his first offering to the Israelites, so the antitype had been rejected, in the person of Jesus. R2957:6

Him shall ye hear. -- It could be no disloyalty to Moses now to accept that greater Prophet. R5858:6

Acts 7:38

Church -- Greek, ekklesia, congregation; here applied to fleshly Israel, an exception to general usage. R93:5

Acts 7:40

Make us gods -- Greek, theos, a mighty one, is used to refer to others than the one supreme being. B274

Acts 7:42

Written in the book -- In the prophecies and types of the Law. R5078:6

Acts 7:43

Moloch -- We have today in nominal Christendom a Moloch on a much larger scale--a much worse misrepresentation of the only true God. R3464:6, 2360:1
Star of your god -- Greek, theos, a mighty one, is used to refer to others than the one supreme being. B274

Acts 7:44

Tabernacle of witness -- We are now in the Tabernacle condition. CR420:3
7:47

Built him an house -- It was no disrespect to the Tabernacle for them to believe in the Temple that Solomon built. R5858:3

Seems to be a type of the spiritual Temple. R180:6*

The pictures presented in the Tabernacle belong to the present time; those of the Temple to the future. CR420:3

Acts 7:48

Not...made with hands -- Showing the difference between the material Temple and the glorious Temple which God was about to build. R1432:5
God had now provided that a still higher Temple should take the place of the building made with hands, the spiritual one, to be composed of the people of God. R5858:3

"Ye are the temple of the living God." (2 Cor. 6:16) "How amiable are thy tabernacles." (Psa. 84:1) R1401:6

Acts 7:49

Is my footstool -- "I will make the place of my feet glorious." (Isa. 60:13) "His feet shall stand in that day upon the Mount of Olives." (Zech. 14:4) D647

Place of my rest -- Residence. R286:1

Acts 7:51

Ye stiffnecked -- A figure drawn from the stiffness of neck of an unruly yoke of bullocks-- unmanageable, self-willed. R3464:1
Apparently some manifestation of impatience on the part of the Court caused Stephen to hasten to his conclusions abruptly. R2958:1
Verses 51-53 were probably spoken above the clamor of many excited and angry voices. R1432:5
Ye do always resist -- Generally the people resisted what of the holy Spirit they came in contact with, as the majority do today. R2070:3

Acts 7:52

Your fathers persecuted -- The shameful handling of those worthy servants of the Lord. (Mark 12:3-5) R1796:1

Acts 7:53

Disposition of angels -- Through the agency of God's messengers. R1432:5
Under the old covenant, Moses received the law from God through angels. In this dispensation Christ controls the angels, they are ministering spirits. R61:1*

Acts 7:54

Cut to the heart -- With the lance of truth, or words of truth. SM440:1; R4329:1, 2502:6, 2109:2
Not in a penitent sense, but with a realization that their cause was coming out second best. R5858:4
Not like those who were "pricked in their heart," (Acts 2:37). Much will depend upon what is in the heart when it is pricked. These men were in a wicked condition of heart. R2958:2, 2109:2
They gnashed on him -- Were angry, vexed, chagrined. "There shall be wailing and gnashing of teeth." (Matt. 13:49-50) R920:4
Chagrin, disappointment, savage animosity. R4329:1, 920:4; Q732:2; NS317:3
With a wicked condition of heart; the words of Stephen were to them stings, rebukes, arousing their hatred to a pitch of frenzy. R2958:2

Acts 7:55

Of the holy Ghost -- Full of a holy enthusiasm for the Lord and the truth. R1432:6
The victory was with the Lord's servant. R2502:6
Looked up -- A prayerful look heavenward for grace to help in this time of need. R1432:6

Into heaven -- Toward heaven; just when the storm was about to burst in its fury. R1432:6

Saw the glory of God -- Was granted a vision of heavenly glory for the strengthening of his faith. R2109:2, 2958:3, 932:6*

To the same effect is the testimony of the highly favored Seer of Patmos. (Rev. 1:10-18) R1283:4

Not in reality, but a revelation; "No man hath seen God at any time."

(John 1:18, 1 John 4:12) R2958:3

On the right hand -- Chief place of power and dominion. R1432:6; A92

Acts 7:56

I see -- He saw it just as we see it today, in his mental vision, by the eye of faith. R1432:6

The heavens opened -- His mind was carried forward to the glorious Millennial reign of Christ --the new heavens and the new earth. R1432:6

His declaration of the vision he saw capped the climax of their indignation. R2109:3

Furnished the excuse they had been waiting for. R4329:2

This was the signal for the Sanhedrin to raise a cry of blasphemy and rush upon God's messenger. R5858:4

Acts 7:57

Stopped their ears -- As though to convince one another that to willingly hear anything more would be a participation in the blasphemy.

R4329:2

Ran upon him with one accord -- They construed the vision to be additional blasphemy. Using this as a pretext, they terminated the trial and executed the sentence of stoning. R2109:3

Acts 7:58

Out of the city -- No execution was allowed on the inside of their gates. R5858:5

Stoned him -- Seemingly in violation of Roman law. R2958:4, 4329:6
Stoning to death for blasphemy was the divinely instituted punishment, according to the law. R4329:6, 2958:4, 2470:3, 2109:4

A young man's feet -- Indicating that Saul was a leader in the prosecution, and influential in the Sanhedrin. R2109:4

Saul was probably a member of the Sanhedrin, and surely one who consented to his death. R2958:5

Saul gave his sanction by taking charge of the outer garments of those who stoned Stephen to death. R4329:2,4, 5858:5

Whose name was Saul -- Some who today assault us, may yet be amongst those who will penitently acknowledge the error of their ways. R2958:5

Acts 7:59

They stoned Stephen -- The second Christian martyr--Jesus being first.
R2951:2, 220:1

Hating and despising his love-lit countenance. E161

The beginning of the general persecution which has continued ever since, and must continue until the last members of the body of Christ shall have proven faithful. R2108:3

This was the punishment for blasphemy according to Jewish Law, and in the absence of Pilate, they carried it out themselves. R4329:6

God -- The Lord. (Revised Version) R700:1*

Lord Jesus, receive -- Steven meant to express his confidence, his trust, in a future life through a resurrection. R2958:6, 2109:5, 1880:6; E344, HG331:5

My spirit -- My spirit of life or breath of life. E344; R5858:5, 2958:5, 700:5

The only life which Stephen could commend to God was the reckoned life received by faith through Jesus. R2788:5

Acts 7:60

Kneeled down -- Prayed for his murderers. R4078:4

Lay not this sin -- He had no desire that they should be punished, but was not attempting to direct the arm of the Infinite. R4329:4, 5259:2,6

To their charge -- He had only love for his enemies. R4329:3

This was Stephen's climax of victory, faithfulness unto death. R5858:5

His prayer was answered, for Saul was shortly raised up to be a most efficient and devoted servant of the truth. R1433:1

He fell asleep -- The first Christian martyr stoned to death. SM38:2; E162; HG194:2; NS837:1

In the midst of his prayer, he died. R2959:1

Death is pictured as a sleep. R5166:4, 4329:4, 3027:6, 2959:1, 2617:5, 1881:1; NS429:4

This thought respecting the sleep of the dead prevails throughout the Bible. Mankind are waiting for Messiah's kingdom and the morning of awakening. R5059:6, 4729:3, 2959:1, 2617:5, 2197:6; E345

Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, etc., good and bad slept with their fathers. R3027:6

"Sleep in Jesus." (1 Thess. 4:14) R4794:2, 4329:4, 2617:2

This does not mean that the dead go to sleep in either heaven, purgatory or hell. R4588:6

The gracious hopeful word "sleep" implies elements of rest, waking and continued life. R2959:1; E345; HG332:1

"Many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake." (Dan. 12:2) R4588:6

There is no record that they put a holy candle in his hand, said prayers over his body or buried him in consecrated ground. F203

Acts 8

Acts 8:1

And Saul -- An energetic man, on whichever side of a question he stood. God seems to be specially on the lookout for just such earnest characters. R2110:1

One of the chief persecutors of the Church. R4329:5, 1433:1

Probably had attended the same synagogue as Stephen. R5858:1

Was consenting -- Was doing an evil work, but did not realize this. R5357:1

A great persecution -- Served to test and sift those who had named the name of Christ and became the Lord's means of spreading the truth in every direction. R2959:3

Corresponding to a persecution which may shortly be expected in this harvest season. R2959:6

Jerusalem -- The principal city of Palestine and the resort of pious Jews from all quarters of the world. R2959:3

The death of Stephen marked the beginning of an epoch of persecution, especially in Jerusalem where for some years the Gospel found considerable root. R4329:5

Scattered abroad -- Except the apostles. D480

"When they persecute you in this city, flee ye into another." (Matt. 10:23) R2960:3

Each believer is exhorted to be a burning and shining light before the world in general. Hence the Lord broke up the commune, and scattered the believers, to preach the Gospel to every creature. R1862:5

There is a disposition to be together and have the comfort and support of fellow travelers in the narrow way. But this does not seem to be God's plan; we are scattered, so that we may let our light shine. R367:3; D480

A commune of believers is opposed to the purpose of the Gospel age. The Lord broke it up, and scattered the believers everywhere. D480; R1862:5,6

Acts 8:2

And devout men -- Who were not afraid or ashamed to be counted among the friends and brethren of the faithful martyr. R1432:6

Acts 8:3

Havock of the church -- The same conditions exist today. R5172:6

Into every house -- Armed with the necessary legal authority. R4329:5

Committed them to prison -- Those who had charge of the synagogues were not always bad people, but they were mistaken, as was Saul. R5172:6

Acts 8:4

Scattered abroad -- Because they openly declared the truth. R942:5
Jerusalem having had its full period of favor, the church having been rooted and established, the divine plan let on to a wider work. R2109:6
The persecution caused all except the apostles to leave Jerusalem. It actually helped to spread the truth. R1433:1

So that everywhere the truth was preached. R4337:4

Communism is not the Lord's arrangement. D480; R1862:5,6

Went every where -- The work done in Judea following our Lord's crucifixion was a harvesting work to that nation. That harvest extended beyond Palestine, but even then it always applied "to the Jew first," until A.D. 70. R4337:1

Preaching the Word -- Teach publicly. R984:4

They all preached. R942:5, 984:4, 670:2

Greek, euaggelizo (evangelize), to tell good news or tidings. R670:3

Not preaching ourselves, nor human theories and traditions. R4336:6

No mention is made of fairs, festivals, suppers or shows, to raise money for salaries or for church erection. R4336:3

Greek, logos; intention, plan, purpose or expression. R421:2, 338:1

Instead of money, titles and respect, they got stripes, imprisonments and revilings--driven from their homes. R670:5

There was no division into clergy and laity. All the early church were preachers, and if persecuted they went everywhere, preaching the word. R2110:1, 984:4

Acts 8:5

Then Philip -- Deacon Philip was not the Apostle Philip. R4329:6, 2960:2, 2110:2, 1433:2

The evangelist. E207; R1957:2

The city of Samaria -- Samaria was the capital of a district called Samaria, whose people were of mixed blood, Jewish and Gentile. R2960:3
This incident occurred at least 3 years after our Lord's death, after the close of the seventieth symbolical week, and the full end of Israel's special favor. R2960:4, 4330:2, 2964:6

This preaching at Samaria was probably three years after the conversion of Cornelius. R4330:2 The dispensational change had occurred. The middle wall of partition between Jews and Gentiles had been broken down. (Eph. 2:14) R4330:2

Acts 8:6

Gave heed -- The work of grace flourished amongst the Samaritans very promptly after the door of opportunity swung open to them. R4132:3

Miracles which he did -- Attested that Philip was a servant of God, and drew attention to the message he delivered. R4329:3

Acts 8:9

Called Simon -- Had long been a spirit medium. R4329:6, 266:1

Used sorcery -- Simon Magus practiced some of Satan's wily arts, known at that time as "Black Art." R2960:5

Today the great deceiver variously presents himself as a Higher Critic, Evolutionist or Christian Scientist. R2960:5

Acts 8:10

Great power -- Thus did Satan use his power to delude the people. R266:1, 2961:1

To whom they all gave heed -- God warns people not to believe any one whose teachings are contrary to the Word, no matter what powers they may exercise. (Isa. 8:19) R266:1

Acts 8:12

Concerning the kingdom -- He explained that the kingdom would be spiritual; he preached the second coming of Messiah, and consecration. R2110:4

Baptized -- Greek, dipping; immersion. R444:3, 1541:2

For a time after Pentecost, the apostles preached repentance of sins and used immersion as a token or sign of putting away of sin. R444:3

Both men and women -- But not children. F448; NS54:3

Baptism was the custom of all the apostles--not merely with the Jews, but also with the Gentiles. F448; NS54:3

Acts 8:13

Then Simon himself -- There are many of the Simon Magus class in the nominal churches, and even amongst those who have received present truth, who have never discerned the real spirit of the Gospel; but who look at it from a mercenary point of view. R2961:4, 1433:5

Believed also -- Cast in his lot with the believers. R2961:4

Was baptized -- The admission into the Church, on profession of faith in Christ and by baptism, of one who was not a true convert to Christianity and who was not really consecrated. R1433:2

The expression "Believe and be baptized," implies a mental development beyond that which infants possess. CR75:3

The real baptism is that which cannot be seen, except in ones conduct.

R1544:2

Water immersion, though a public profession of Christ by the one immersed, was not necessarily an endorsement of such by the apostles and the church.

R1544:2

He continued -- Even in those days there was a nominal church which comprised both the wheat and the tare element. R1433:2

Acts 8:14

The word of God -- The Scriptures do claim to be the Word of God. R1584:3

Sent Peter and John -- So our colporteur evangelists, after stirring up the pure minds, introduce the "Studies in the Scriptures." F257

Before Pentecost, John was one who had desired to bring down fire out of heaven to destroy these very people and their city. (Luke 9:54) How much change the Gospel of Christ had wrought in this good man! R2961:1

Acts 8:15

The Holy Ghost -- The "gifts" were conferred by the laying on of the hands of the apostles. E207

Many who possessed those miraculous "gifts" lacked the seal and witness of the Spirit. (1 Cor. 13:1-3) E247

Acts 8:16

Name of the Lord -- Into the name of the Lord Jesus, immersion into Christ's death. R1544:4

Acts 8:17

Their hands on them -- The hands of the apostles. F284

Not to give them authority to preach, but to impart the gifts of the Spirit. F284; R1957:4

The object of those gifts was the establishment of the early church. R2764:5, 4330:1

Only an apostle could convey the gifts of the holy Spirit. R3152:5, 2764:4, 1433:3, 376:2

Those who received the gifts from their hands could not re-communicate those gifts to others. R376:2, 2764:4, 1433:3

Received the Holy Ghost -- With an outward manifestation of their acceptance with God in the receiving of the gifts then conferred upon members of the Church. R1433:3

The begetting of the holy Spirit in the early church was indicated by certain miraculous gifts. R4872:2

The gifts of the Spirit might be imparted instantaneously; but the fruits of the Spirit could only be had by growth. R2961:2

Acts 8:18

The apostle's hands -- When those who received the gifts died, the gifts themselves ceased. R4872:3, 2961:1; E207 Philip, although possessed of the holy Spirit, did not possess the power to communicate such gifts to others. R2110:2, 1998:3, 1957:2; E207

Offered them money -- It was the apostolic privilege of bestowing these gifts upon others, which Simon wanted to purchase with money. R1998:3 Implied that he was not begotten of the holy Spirit. R4330:4
A spiritual gift is not to be used to procure temporal comforts. R2567:2

Acts 8:20

Thy money perish -- It took the Apostle's sharp word to awaken him to a realization that he was now dealing with God and holy things. R4330:4

The gift -- The possession of these gifts did not always indicate saintship. R1433:5; E247

Acts 8:21

Neither part nor lot -- Up to this time Simon has passed for a thoroughly converted man. Now Peter tells him with great plainness that he is still unregenerate--merely a spectator and not a participator in the spiritual things. R2110:5

It required the exercise of special powers conferred upon the apostles to keep the community from being imposed on by such selfish characters. R1421:5

Heart is not right -- Peter's rebuke to Simon was a severe one, indicating death as the reward for hypocrisy, if persisted in. R1433:5

Acts 8:22

Repent therefore -- Peter was not uncharitable; he kindly urged the sinner to repentance. He at least saved the church of Samaria from the imposition of one whom otherwise they would have esteemed as a brother. R1433:6

Acts 8:23

In the gall of bitterness -- We must distinguish as between the flesh and the spirit, however outwardly respectable they may be. NS403:5

Many professed Christians are indulging in false hopes, in thinking they are the Lord's people. NS410:4

Acts 8:24

Pray ye...for me -- Indicates some measure of repentance, due only to Peter's plain rebuke. R1433:6

Acts 8:26

Spake unto Philip -- Possibly by a vision or a dream. R1438:2

Acts 8:27

He arose and went -- This occurrence must have taken place after the full end of the seventy weeks of favor upon fleshly Israel. R2964:6

A man of Ethiopia -- Was unquestionably a black man. (Jer. 13:23) R3043:1; HG508:3

The Bible shows that God has manifested His favor toward the negro. HG508:3
A Jewish proselyte. R3616:4

Through him possibly introducing the good tidings into Africa. R2964:3

He belonged to the Kingdom of Meroe, on the Nile river. R2964:6

An eunuch -- Not a Jew in the fullest sense, eunuchs not being fully accepted as proselytes, nor granted the privileges of the congregation. (Deut. 23:1) R2964:6

Of great authority -- In high station under Candace. R4332:3

Acts 8:28

Read Esaias -- Aloud, after the custom of the time. R4332:6

Which he had probably purchased at Jerusalem at considerable cost. R4332:6, 2965:1

His manuscript was written in the Greek language, indicated by the word Esaias, which is the Greek form Isaiah. R2965:1

Acts 8:29

The Spirit said -- The Lord, by his Spirit, influence, power, directed and instructed Philip to approach the chariot. E273; R372:5

In what way the Lord's Spirit prompted him we are not informed. R4333:2, 372:5

Go near -- The chariot probably overtook and passed Philip in the road, the eunuch driving leisurely, in order that he might read. R2965:2

Acts 8:30

Heard him read -- It was one of the Jewish rules that the faithful, in traveling, should read if they had no companionship. R2965:3

Understandeth thou -- This was a test question, so to speak. R2965:4
So much depends upon a word in season, and the right word. R4333:2
Many of the Lord's people use too much tact in their presentation of the Gospel. R2965:4

Acts 8:31

How can I -- The same spirit of meekness that led the eunuch to desire a knowledge of God's Word, prompted him also to confess his ignorance of the meaning when asked. R1438:3, 4333:2

Not afraid nor ashamed to receive whatever assistance the Lord may provide. R2965:5, 1438:3

A heart in the right condition towards God and the truth. R4333:3

This Ethiopian evidently had a cleaner heart than the majority of the chief men in Israel. R3616:4

Many of our day are hindered from receiving the truth because lacking meekness, humbleness, teachableness. R4333:3

Our instruction is, "Preach the Gospel to the meek." (Isa. 61:1) R2965:6

He desired Philip -- God sends his specially qualified representative to expound the Word. R1438:5

Acts 8:32

To the slaughter -- Divine providence was manifested in the choice of Scripture reading so that Philip might begin at the very foundation principle--how that Christ died for our sins. R1438:5

Justice could not demand sacrifice, but he laid it down in accordance with the Father's will. R4591:2

Opened he not his mouth -- So Jesus did not resist. R5054:1

No man took from him his life; he laid it down himself, voluntarily. R4591:2

Acts 8:33

His generation -- Though in the dawn and vigor of his manhood he was cut off from life without any posterity to perpetuate his name, yet he is to have a numerous posterity. R1438:5

The Lord's posterity will be Adam's children on the earthly plane. R4333:4

Acts 8:34

And the eunuch answered -- Without inquiring whether he was an ordained preacher, or what sect he belonged to. R2965:5

Acts 8:35

The same scripture -- Showing God's usual method: he uses his inspired Word as the text, and sends specially qualified representatives to expound it. R1438:5

Preached unto him Jesus -- Showing how his sacrifice was the propitiation for the sins of the whole world. R1438:5

He was ready to preach the Gospel to him and to accept him as a brother in Christ upon his confession of faith. 3043:1, 2966:2; HG508:4

Philip preached the Gospel in its simplicity, and the eunuch received it in like manner. R2966:4

Acts 8:36

What doth hinder me -- It did not take the eunuch long to decide what his course should be. His readiness of heart is indicated by his promptness to be baptized. R2966:2, 4333:6

Baptized -- Which our Lord and his apostles practiced and enjoined upon all followers. R1539:3

Acts 8:37

And Philip -- The verse does not occur in any of the three oldest and most reliable Greek manuscripts. R1438:6, 4333:6

Acts 8:38

Both into the water -- Philip did not say to the eunuch, "I will go yonder and fetch a little water in the palm of my hand and sprinkle it on your forehead." R2111:4

Baptized -- Greek, dipping; immersion. R444:3, 4333:6, 1541:2,3

The Eunuch caught the force of baptism to such an extent that he embraced the first opportunity to be planted in the likeness of Christ's death. R760:2

Acts 8:39

The Spirit -- Power. E273

Caught away Philip -- A miraculous transportation which Philip himself did not understand. R1438:6, 4334:1, 2111:4

Gave assurance of the Lord's supervision to Philip; and gave additional faith to the eunuch, that God was with Philip. R4334:1

Acts 9

Acts 9:1

And Saul -- Of Jewish parentage he was named after Israel's first King, Saul; but his father was a Roman citizen, and as such received the special name Paul. After his ministry reached foreign lands he used his Roman citizenship name exclusively. R4355:1, 2968:6

He had received a special course in theology at Jerusalem, under Gamaliel, one of the greatest teachers of that time. R2117:3, 4355:1

A bitter enemy of the Lord Jesus and his followers; yet he was an honest, sincere, good man, loyal to the Lord. R2968:3, 5034:5, 2117:3; NS673:1

An early tradition describes him small in size, bald, bandy-legged, well built, with eyebrows meeting, long nosed, with a winning manner and graceful motion. A later likeness indicates his fine appearance, with a beard and a fine countenance. R2969:1

Against the disciples -- Experience confirms that an earnest, conscientious opponent is more to be respected than a cold, indifferent professed friend. R2117:3

High priest -- The priesthood was granted and exercised considerable power under the arrangements of the Roman government, to make arrests. R2117:3

Acts 9:2

Desired of him letters -- Armed with authority for the apprehension of the Lord's followers. R2823:6

Bring them bound -- His latest move was to get orders from the high priest to bring the Christians of Damascus to Jerusalem to be tried before the Sanhedrin, rather than be tried in their local synagogue. R4355:5

Nearly all persecutions have been sanctioned by some human law; we should regulate ourselves by the divine code. R2117:5

Acts 9:3

As he journeyed -- The account here given is that of Luke, doubtless received directly from the Apostle Paul himself. R2117:5

A light from heaven -- Evidently a supernatural one. R2969:4

A vision of the Son of God in glory. R4355:5, 5035:2, 2117:6

A representation of Jesus' glory. R2824:6, 1873:6

A "heavenly vision." (Acts:26:19) R1323:2

We need not suppose that he saw our Lord's spiritual body in its wonderful glory, for he is now the express image of the Father's person. (Heb. 1:3)
R2824:5

He saw some of the light from his glorious presence, sufficient to give him absolute assurance that Jesus was the resurrected, glorified, heavenly Lord, a quickening Spirit. R2824:6

A demonstration or proof that God had raised Jesus from the dead and had bestowed upon him the glory, honor and immortality of the divine nature.
R5034:4

"Last of all he was seen of me also, as of one born before the due time."
(1 Cor. 15:8) B134; R1523:1

Acts 9:4

Fell to the earth -- Seeing him unveiled, Jesus in his glory, Saul was smitten to the earth and seriously blinded. R5299:2, 3904:2; B133
Being stunned or in a faint condition, Saul seems to have been fully possessed of his senses. R2824:1

Not only literally, but crest-fallen in his mind and self esteem. R4355:6

A voice -- Only Saul could distinguish the words which were meant for him alone. R2117:6

The voice spoke in the Hebrew tongue, whereas those who were with Saul probably spoke in the Syriac or the Greek language. R2969:5, 4355:5

Persecutest thou me -- Saul never saw Jesus personally in the flesh to persecute him, but whatsoever is done to the least of his disciples was done to Jesus. R5180:5

Jesus recognizes his followers as his members. SM75:2; R5053:3, 4433:2;
OV280:T

Because we have been adopted by Christ, Saul was not persecuting the flesh of ordinary people, but Jesus. CR327:6

The persecution of the church in the flesh was a persecution of himself.

What the church suffers is a part of the sufferings of Christ. R5394:2, 5192:6

Christ has been suffering in the flesh all down the age. SM361:T; R5053:6;
CR327:4, 348:4

How close is the relationship between the Church and her Lord, as members of one sacrifice. R4433:2

This did not constitute Saul an antichrist in the Scripture use of the term, which applies to one "against" in the sense of misrepresenting, counterfeiting, taking the place of the true Christ. B281

Acts 9:5

Who art thou Lord -- This lack of knowledge of the Son implies a lack of correct knowledge of the Father. R2969:5

He recognized that the one who had power to arrest him in his journey was a lordly one, a powerful one. R2824:1

Saul needed something to arouse him thoroughly, to realize that the Lord is not a man, but "that Spirit." OV355:3

And the Lord said -- Jesus personally; non-personal instructions are properly described as from or by the Lord's holy Spirit. E277

I am Jesus -- It was necessary that all the twelve apostles should be able to bear witness to the fact that Jesus had risen from the dead. R5579:2; F215

It was this same Jesus, no longer flesh and bones but "a quickening spirit." R1416:4

Whom thou persecutest -- Because persecuting a member of the Body of Christ is persecuting the Head of the Church. NS673:3

The flesh of these consecrated ones having been counted as the flesh of Jesus. SM360:3, 75:2

Saul was not persecuting the glorified Savior directly, but he was persecuting the followers of Jesus. R5173:4, 5394:2, 5180:5, 5053:6; CR348:4

A surprise and shock to Saul. R2824:1

No member can be in ill condition without the knowledge and sympathy of the Head member, Christ. R5213:4

Whoever is a faultfinder and busybody in the affairs of the brethren is doing this against the flesh of Jesus. R5274:3

It is hard... -- These words and down to the word "Arise" in verse 6 are not found in the old manuscripts. R2969:6, 4355:6

Against the pricks -- Of facts, evidence, conscience. R2968:6

Acts 9:6

Have me to do -- Meant full surrender. R2824:3

We see the loyalty of the man. NS159:2

An earnest desire to be active in the service of God to the extent of his ability. R1444:6, 934:3*

I am anxious to undo my mistakes, to be your servant, obey your orders. R2824:3, 2118:1

It is this class that the Lord is seeking during this Gospel age. SM762:1

We are not to consider Paul's conversion as of the heart from opposition to harmony with God, but a turning about, through a better understanding of the truth. (1 Tim. 1:13) R1444:5

Arise and go -- Paul says: "Immediately I conferred not with flesh and blood." (Gal. 1:16) R900:6

Acts 9:7

The men -- Possibly zealots like Saul, or commissioned servants, a sort of police squad. R4355:5

Stood speechless -- Afterward, no doubt, kneeling reverently about their leader. R2117:6

Hearing a voice -- But not being able to distinguish the words, which were intended for Saul alone. R2117:6, 4355:5, 2969:5, 2824:3

But seeing no man -- The miracle by which a natural man can behold a spirit being was wrought upon Saul. A183; R579:1, 262:1, 18:4
The Lord was seen of Saul alone. R579:1, 262:1

Acts 9:8

He saw no man -- He got a glimpse of the glory of a spirit being, and cost him his sight. R1416:4

The wonderful light which flashed upon his eyes destroyed his sight. R2824:5

He never fully recovered his eyesight. Of his imperfect vision, his "thorn in the flesh" (2 Cor. 12:7-9), the Lord assured him that in compensation he should have the more of divine grace. R5952:3,4, 5416:6, 2825:1, 2118:2; F651

Acts 9:9

Three days -- In some sense of the word a figure, likeness, or type of Israel, whose blinding took place in the fifth (1,000 year) day, and is to have its eyes opened on the seventh (1,000 year) day. R2118:5

Were days of prayer and reflection, comparing the Law and the prophets with what he knew of the Nazarene. R2118:1, 2969:6, 2824:5

Neither did eat -- Because so overwhelmed. R4356:1

What a humiliation to think that he had fought against the truth, and a time of good resolution as respected the future. R2969:6

Acts 9:10

Named Ananias -- Not an apostle, an elder or a deacon, but a plain, humble, obedient disciple. R2970:1, 2118:1

Any whom the Lord chooses would be good, devout, pious--not frivolous, worldly immoral. R2824:6

An illustration of divine methods, that the Lord is both able and willing to use the humble ones who are ready and waiting. R2118:2

Acts 9:11

Called Straight -- A most aristocratic street, really straight, 100 feet wide. R4356:1

Saul -- An Israelite indeed, a Pharisee of the Pharisees. R5002:5, 5963:2

Of Tarsus -- One of the most notable cities of that date. R2117:2

Behold, he prayeth -- We may be sure that those who similarly, humbly address the Almighty are in no injurious mood. R4356:1
Private prayer may be considered a sure index to an honest, contrite heart. R4356:2
Saul of Tarsus is a changed man; he is no longer the self-confident one. NS673:4

Acts 9:12

In a vision -- Greek, horama; signifies a vision, not reality. The man seen by the blind Saul was obviously not a reality but a vision. R4142:4*
Ananias -- The name Ananias signifies, "Jah is gracious." R2118:5
Receive his sight -- When the time shall come for the opening of Israel's eyes, the Lord will send some Ananias whose touch and blessing under divine favor will bring sight. R2118:5

Acts 9:13

Saints -- Ananias is the first one to use the word "saints" signifying holy ones, sanctified ones. R4356:2
Shows how intimately he stands related with all who are truly his; those who touch his saints touch him. 2824:2

Acts 9:15

He is -- Peculiarly fitted by birth, education, and temperament. R4356:2, 5941:6, 4385:3
Saul was an acute logician. R1565:6
A chosen vessel -- To take Judas' place. F215; R2925:3, 2823:2, 2141:1; PD74/88
As one of the chosen twelve. R1523:2; PD74/88
The testimony which indicates his apostleship. F216
This choice did not interfere with his free agency. R4356:3
He had full proof of his apostleship. R5941:6
God had chosen him for a special service. (Gal. 1:15) R5002:5, 5400:1, 4356:3, 2832:2, 550:3
Though misled by error, he was a very noble, worthy vessel to be used in his service. CR467:5
Such language could not be used by the Lord in connection with one whose heart was not already fully consecrated to the divine will and service, however ignorantly it had been misused. 2824:5
Saul did not see Jesus in the flesh after his resurrection, but this was no barrier to God's plan. R550:3
To bear my name -- To present divine truth to us with all the power and force of logical deduction. R1565:3
And to be for salvation to the ends of the earth. R25:1*

As a woman bears her husband's name, we are to bear the name of Jesus Christ, as "the bride, the Lamb's wife." (Rev. 21:9) R5594:2

Before -- Unto. R5400:1

The Gentiles -- Paul's missionary efforts were first directed of the Lord to the Gentiles. R4385:3

And kings -- Before Felix, Agrippa, Festus, and possibly Emperor Nero. R4356:3, 4385:3

Children of Israel -- Through his epistle to the Hebrews, he helped "Israelites indeed" to discern between the shadows in the types of the Law Covenant and the eternal verities antityped in Christ, Head and Body. R4385:3,5

Acts 9:16

He must suffer -- Paul was not long in proving the truth of this prediction, but he rejoiced in the privilege of testifying his love to the Lord. R1884:6

He was put through disciplinary experiences because he was a favored child of God. R5147:4

To be chosen to suffer much implies qualification for the higher glory hereafter. R2825:4

May the Lord show us how much more it is our privilege to suffer for his sake. R581:3

The Lord does not call his disciples under any misapprehension of the facts. R4356:4

For my name's sake -- Not for wrong-doing, anger, malice, hatred, strife, evil-speaking, etc. R3012:5

Includes everything connected with the divine plan, of which Jesus is the center. R4356:4

Acts 9:17

Putting his hands on him -- The manner of imparting the Holy Ghost used to be by the laying on of hands. R183:1

Said, Brother Saul -- In full confidence of faith he addressed Saul in the most kindly terms. R4356:5

He was glad to forget that he had been a persecutor of the church; he did not upbraid him, he made no unkind allusion to the past. R2970:2

All the Church were similarly greeted--as brothers and sisters in Christ. R1523:5; F230

Acts 9:18

Scales -- Seems to indicate that a certain portion of the eye had been thoroughly destroyed by the great light; and the healing may be said to have been in a natural way by the removal of the injured cornea. R2118:2, 4356:5

He received sight -- A miracle was required for his recovery of sight. R5416:6; B133

His eyes were never restored to their former strength. R2825:1, 5963:2, 1540:4

Because of his serious affection of the eyes, he was ignominiously styled "The blar-eyed Jew." R1540:4

This remnant of his eye trouble would ever keep him in remembrance of his zeal without knowledge and of the Lord's mercy to him. R4356:6

But how much greater was the spiritual sight--the illumination of his heart and mind. R2970:4

After his eyes of understanding had been opened, St. Paul manifested a wonderful insight into the things divine. R5941:5

Some today, who had been blinded with misconceptions of God's character and plan, opposing the truth, have been as Saul, "called out of darkness into his marvelous light." (1 Pet. 2:9) to God's service. R2824:4

Baptized -- By the first of God's children he met. R769:2

With John's baptism, for the remission of sins. (Acts 22:16) R5963:1

Thus symbolizing his allegiance to the Crucified One. R4356:6
Greek, dipping; immersion. R444:3, 1541:2,3

Acts 9:19

With the disciples -- Days of communion with those whom he had come to persecute. R2118:5

Acts 9:20

He preached Christ -- Publicly using the opportunities afforded in the Jewish Synagogues. R2118:5

Calling upon all to repent and turn to God and do works meet for repentance. R1445:1

And so with us. But first the eye of appreciation and faith must be opened, and the ear of understanding unstopped. R2825:3

Paul was here preaching previous to his indorsement for the missionary work. (Acts 13:1-3) F285

In the synagogues -- The Lord and the apostles did not call believers out of the Jewish synagogues. They could teach the people there for a time, but soon found little and finally no opportunity to teach in the synagogues. R986:5

Acts 9:27

Brought him to the apostles -- When Paul first visited Jerusalem, he needed a personal introduction. R1720:2

Acts 9:30

Caesarea -- Philip made it his headquarters. R2222:3

Tarsus -- His native city. R2998:3

Acts 9:31

Then -- A.D. 41 when Caligula was murdered. 2986:3

Rest -- It is not surprising that such outside persecution and interference with their own religious rites and liberties caused the Jews to relax their persecution of the Christians. R2986:3

Opportunity for spiritual edification, comfort, growth in grace and knowledge. R4335:2, 2986:2

And were edified -- This was a time of upbuilding amongst the little groups of the Lord's people. The church was growing in numbers and growing in grace. R2986:5

The work of grace flourished amongst the Samaritans very promptly after the door of opportunity opened to them. R4132:3

Fear -- Reverence. R3435:1, 4335:3

And in the comfort -- United, cemented or strengthened together. R2987:1

Of the Holy Ghost -- The spirit, mind or disposition of God. The use of the word "ghost" for the Greek pneuma is unfortunate, and confusing. It should be "spirit." R2987:1; E173

Which comforts us by enabling us to see matters not only from the divine standpoint but also can appreciate and feel from the same standpoint.

R3435:1

Acts 9:32

To the saints -- Holy ones, set apart, sanctified believers in Christ.

R2987:3, 4335:3, 2126:2

The name is not adopted by many professed Christians who feel unworthy of its implications; also because of opposition to the Catholic custom to "canonize" such selected persons centuries after life. R2987:3, 2126:2

The word "saint" certainly approves itself to us. It does not signify actual perfection, but those reckoned holy through our Lord. R2987:4

Dwelt at Lydda -- The chief city of the plain of Sharon (Saron), midway between Jerusalem and Joppa, ten miles from each. R2987:3, 2126:2

Where one of the early Christian churches was founded. R1381:4

Acts 9:33

A certain man -- We are not told that he was one of the saints, but possibly he was the friend of some of them. R2987:5, 4335:5
Miracles of healing were seldom, if ever, performed upon believers. R4335:5

Acts 9:34

Christ Jesus -- These things were done by his authority and power. R61:3*

Maketh thee whole -- The healing was a miracle. R2987:5
Was used of the Lord to advertise the truth, after a manner not necessary at the present time. R4335:5, 2126:5

He arose immediately -- The power of conferring those gifts was vested in the apostles, and did "vanish away" when the apostles died. (1 Cor. 12:28, 13:8) R1998:3, 2987:6

Acts 9:35

Saron -- The valley of Sharon, very fertile, thickly settled. R2126:2

Acts 9:36

Tabitha -- In the Syrian language, then and there prevalent; signifies beautiful. R4335:6, 2987:6

In the Aramaic language, signifies Gazelle. R2126:3,5

Is called Dorcas -- In Greek language carries thought of beauty, signifying gazelle; the timidity and the bright, sparkling eye of the gazelle. 4335:6, 2126:3,5

Full of good works -- She sought to relieve the temporal necessities of the needy poor. R1451:4

Beautiful of heart and character. R4336:1, 2987:6

A noble Christian woman. R2126:5

She was a burning and shining light for the Lord in that vicinity. She served the Lord, his brethren and all needing help according to the best opportunities afforded her. R2987:6

Acts 9:38

Desiring him -- With no thought of such a miracle, but rather that Peter could give them some consolation at this time. R2988:4

Acts 9:39

Widows -- The widows of olden times had a peculiarly hard lot; hence the frequent reference to them in the Scriptures as objects of charity. R4336:2

Weeping, and shewing the coats -- Such mourners give eloquent testimony to saintship: "She hath done what she could." (Mark 14:8) R4336:1

Acts 9:40

She opened her eyes -- One whom all the creeds of "Christendom" would send to heaven, yet when she was awakened to life she had no wonderful experiences or mysterious visions to relate. R1450:6

Acts 9:41

Alive -- Evidence of divine power and an evidence of Restitution times. R4335:6

Acts 9:42

Many believed -- The Lord's agency was recognized by the people. R61:6*
The object was to establish the authority of the apostles' teaching, and endorsing them. R1450:2

Acts 10

Acts 10:1

Cesarea -- Became a Church of considerable size. R2222:3

Called Cornelius -- The first Gentile convert. R5048:6, 3755:4, 3440:4, 2620:6, 2222:3, 1451:2, 5454:2, 1526:1

About October 1st, 36 AD, at the end of Israel's seventy weeks of favor. B71, 214; R5048:3, 4344:2, 3440:4, 2620:6, 2132:3

Not a Jew, no part of the covenant of Israel. R3440:4, 4344:3, 2989:1, 2620:2

Who sought harmony with God. R5200:6

Was accepted into fellowship without becoming a Jewish proselyte. R1451:2, 5454:2

Converted to God and to righteousness years prior to this incident. R2988:6

A centurion -- Probably the one whose servant Christ healed. (Luke 7:2-10) R1922:6, 2620:6, 2132:3

The mention of three centurions in the Scriptures may be three different ones. R3755:4

All evidently reverential. (Matt. 27:54; Luke 7:1-17) It is not probable that under the Romans soldiers of Palestine there were two centurions of such similarly exceptional character. R1922:6

Acts 10:2

A devout man -- A just, reverential, benevolent man, every way prepared to be a Christian. R4344:3, 5834:5, 5776:1, 5101:1; CR318:6

It was said of probably the same centurion, in Luke 7:4,5: "He was worthy; for he loveth our nation, and he hath built us a synagogue." R2620:2, 1922:3, 2071:3, Q600:T

A fine character; but a Gentile and could not come in under the call. R5776:1; CR318:6; HG117:4

That feared God -- With all the good he did before, such a man, upon receiving the Gospel, would become ten-fold more zealous. R2222:3

Gave much alms -- His endeavor to overcome selfishness and to copy divine benevolence. R2133:1

Prayed to God alway -- Implied faith in God and a desire for harmony with him. Later his prayers would be heard. R2133:1, 5321:2, 5200:6. 2989:1
Because he was a Gentile, God did not accept him until the due time for him to receive the truth. R5321:2, 5833:1, 5021:5, 5048:6; Q600:T

Acts 10:3

A vision evidently -- In a vision openly, not in a dream. He talked with an angel. R4344:5, 4142:4*

Coming in to him -- It was just like the Lord to send the Gospel to him first. R1923:1

Acts 10:4

Thy prayers -- Could not be accepted until the seventy symbolic weeks ended. R5832:6, 4344:2; Q174:1

Thine alms -- Now received of the Lord because the due time had come. R4344:5

His alms and prayers had not saved him. We may be sure that the alms of other Gentiles had been heard. His was for a special lesson. R4344:5

For a memorial -- Of his piety. R2989:1

Ascended up as incense to the Lord. R4344:5, 5832:6; Q600:T

They had been noted before, but God could not receive them until now. R5776:1, 5833:1, 5200:6; CR319:1

If prayers cannot be answered immediately they are not forgotten, but are kept as memorials until the right time comes for their answer. R1945:5

Any who pray to God sincerely now, not knowing the appointed way, God takes note of their prayers, to be rewarded now or later. R5834:6

Acts 10:5

And now -- Exactly 3 years after our Lord's crucifixion. R4344:2, 5834:6, 5379:1, 5200:6; Q600:T

Call for one Simon -- Peter had the key to open the door to the Gentiles. R2657:6, 376:1

Acts 10:6

Whose house -- Pastor Russell visited in 1892. R1381:1

He shall tell thee -- These words were necessary directions; but they did not bring Cornelius into covenant relationship with God. R5776:1, 4344:6

God has placed the promulgation of the Gospel in the hands of men, not angels. R2989:1

Essential to further progress. R2989:2

Now, by reason of the art of printing the message reaches many otherwise--by printed words. R4345:1

These words of life were the simple story of the cross. R4345:1

Acts 10:8

Declared all these things -- Prepared to cooperate with God. His light pervaded his household as should ours. R2989:2

Acts 10:9

Sixth hour -- Noon-time. R4344:6

Acts 10:15

God hath cleansed -- Replacing the blood of bulls and goats, the antitypical cleansing through the blood of Christ had been confined for a time to Israel only. R4345:4

Now the time had come for dealing with such Gentiles as were in proper condition of heart. R4344:3

Common -- While God calls "the mean things," he does not leave them thus, but justifies them by faith in Christ, and sanctifies them by the truth. R4493:3

Acts 10:17

Now while -- About, during. R1980:3; B49

Acts 10:19

The Spirit said -- God, by his power, in some manner made his will known to Peter. E274; R372:5

Acts 10:20

I have sent them -- It was God's due time for dealing with such Gentiles as were in proper condition of heart. R4344:3

Acts 10:21

Peter -- Chosen for this work because of his impetuous disposition and zeal to follow the Lord's directions quickly and heartily; and being the oldest of the apostles, and in many respects the most influential one. R2989:3

A just, reverential and benevolent man, in every way prepared to be a follower of Jesus. R4344:3, 5101:1

The first Gentile received into the Gospel privileges. R5004:6, 2620:6, 1455:1

God honors and uses his faithful ones as his mouthpieces. R4345:1

Acts 10:22

Hear words of thee -- God attaches great importance to the words or message of his grace. R4344:6, 2989:2, 3550:6

No one can receive the holy Spirit except he has received the truth. R5550:1

The only way to know the glad tidings. "Faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the Word of God." (Rom. 10:17) R4345:1

Acts 10:23

Certain brethren -- Six men, probably as witnesses. R4344:6

Acts 10:24

Called together -- To hear the apostle Peter. The spirit of devotion, light and truth should pervade every family. R5394:1, 2989:3

Acts 10:25

Fell down -- Feelings of reverence to a representative of the Lord. R2989:4

Acts 10:26

But Peter -- Not acting as a Pope would have done under such circumstances, he refused to receive unauthorized homage. R2989:5
Even heavenly beings are not to be worshipped. "Worship God." Rev. 19:10
R144:5

Acts 10:28

God hath shewed me -- Yet he afterward so far forgot it that Paul was obliged to publicly rebuke him. (Gal. 2:11-14) A26, 27
The "Lazarus" class received into favor. R1087:1

Acts 10:29

Without gainsaying -- Because evidently the Lord was leading him in the matter. R2989:3
Intent -- Greek, logos; intention, plan, purpose, expression. R338:1, 421:2

Acts 10:30

Cornelius -- The first adopted son of God from amongst the Gentiles. R2132:2, 5379:2
Was fasting -- The centurion's heart had been troubled. R4345:1
The heart thus would be brought nearer to God. NS153:2,4

Acts 10:31

Cornelius -- The first Gentile convert. R2090:4, 1760:5, 1526:1, 376:1, 189:5
Also see comments on verse 1.
Thy prayer is heard -- The first Gentile whose prayers were received. R5379:1, 5776:1

Acts 10:32

Speak unto thee -- The knowledge was indispensable; there can be no justification in ignorance. R5776:1
Speak to those that have some knowledge of God. R1451:5

Acts 10:33

Present before God -- Proper respect for the servant of God. R2133:2

Acts 10:34

Opened his mouth -- Used the second "key" to the Kingdom, the time having come for the Gospel to go to the Gentiles. R4345:4, 2996:3, 1455:1, 1760:5; NS803:5

No respecter of persons -- The message was open for all. R2990:3
But is a respecter of character. R2988:3 Yet God's favor was given first to the Jews and then to the Gentiles. R5168:3, 4345:4, 2133:2
We must recognize the consecrated Church of Christ as does the Head of the Church, irrespective of denomination. OV187:3,4
God is equally as willing to forgive the repentant sins of the world as the sins of the Church. R5531:1; SM207
Does this not suggest that all shall come to a knowledge of the truth.
HG336:2
Every man shall stand equal before the law of God. HG514:3
No denomination can be conceded the right to appropriate the name which our Lord gave to all truly his disciples. CR79:5
"Of one blood God created all the families of the earth." NS63:6
Expresses a general truth. R1180:3

Acts 10:35

In every nation -- Now, henceforth, the righteous, God-fearing in every nation were to be acceptable. R4345:4, 2458:1
Peter now realized the meaning of his house-top vision (verse 15), and that the Lord "hath made both one, and hath broken down the middle wall of partition." (Eph. 2:14) R4345:4, 5504:1, 1472:1, 586:6, 503:1
The "Lazarus" class died, or ceased from their former condition, and were received into favor of God. R1087:1
Feareth him -- Perfect love casts out slavish but not reverential fear.
(1 John 4:18) R2986:6, 2289:6
Is -- Now. R2133:2
Accepted with him -- Through the merit of the sacrifice given. R2133:2, 2989:6

Acts 10:36

The word -- Is kindly disposed toward us. R3059:1
Preaching peace -- No suggestion of eternal torment, but full of mercy and grace. R4308:4
The old, old story. R2989:6
He is Lord of all -- Having purchased all mankind. R1068:2
By reason of the great work of Atonement. (Rom. 14:9) E134
Not the pre-human Logos, nor yet the man Jesus, but the resurrected
Messiah. "The King of Kings and the Lord of Lords." (Rev. 19:16) E136 Partaker of the divine nature, "that all men should honor the Son, even as they honor the Father." (John 5:23) R1278:5
"The Father judgeth no man, but hath committed all judgement unto the Son." (John 5:22) R587:1, 710:4

Acts 10:37

That word -- The good news. R240:5

In harmony with what the Prophets had witnessed. R1451:6

Ye know -- Probably having heard Christ himself preach it at the time the servant was healed. R1922:5

After the baptism -- Jesus was not the Messiah, the Anointed, the Christ, until after his baptism, at thirty years of age. B66; A224

Acts 10:38

How God anointed -- At thirty years of age. R289:4

The word "Christ" means "anointed." A81; R270:2, 240:5

The evidence that Our Lord was set apart for a very high office. R5227:6

"The Lord hath anointed me to preach good tidings." (Isa. 61:1; Luke 4:18) R240:5

The Jewish age harvest started at the beginning of Jesus' ministry when he was anointed. It is proper to say that the Gospel age began with the anointing of Jesus. A223, 224; R271:6, 273:1

Thirty years from the babe Jesus until he stood in Jordan's and was anointed. R289:4

Jesus of Nazareth -- The Royal Priesthood began with him; although justified believers had lived long before that time, just as the tribe of Levi existed long before the Jewish priesthood was formed. T27

With the Holy Ghost -- Thus beginning the Gospel age or spirit dispensation. A224; R273:1

And with power -- "God gave not the Spirit by measure unto him." (John 3:34). T37; R370:1

Doing good -- Teaching, healing the sick, the deaf, the blind, and instructing his disciples. R5375:6

Abundant in good works. And to preach the gospel. R2157:3*, 84:5*

Some get the erroneous view that our Lord's chief work amongst men was to heal their sicknesses. This was incidental to his preaching. R4137:2

Our Lord's wrought thirty-six miracles during his ministry. R4137:2

The Christ is not commissioned merely to negative goodness but to positive. R2157:3*

Healing -- Greek, iaomai, as in "Pray one for another, that ye may be (morally or spiritually) healed" (Jas. 5:16), and as in "Lest they should be converted and I should (morally or spiritually) heal them." (John 12:40) R4099:5*

Oppressed of the devil -- Through sickness, etc.; traceable, either directly or indirectly, to sin and the author of sin, Satan. R2133:3, 423:6

Acts 10:39

And we -- The apostles chosen for the purpose. E213; F211; R1522:5
Are witnesses -- To behold his works, to hear his message; and to be the specific witnesses of his resurrection. F211, 214, 215; E213

Acts 10:40

Him God raised up -- Christ could never have raised himself. R2795:2
He was raised up from death a glorious divine being. R4964:5, 2133:4
As "Lord of all." (verse 36) E136

Acts 10:41

Not to all the people -- The people in general did not see the Lord Jesus after his resurrection. R2133:4, 773:2; B124
Even to us -- The apostles. E213

Acts 10:42

He commanded us -- The apostles. F215; R2990:1
To testify that -- Of the resurrected Jesus. B124; R2989:6, 2133:4
God to be the Judge -- "God hath appointed a day in the which he will judge the world in righteousness by that man whom he hath ordained." (Acts 17:31) R2990:3
Of quick -- The angels who kept not their first estate. (Jude 6) R2133:4
The living. B124
And dead -- In the sense that all are under the sentence of death. "Dead in trespasses and sins." (Eph. 2:1) R2133:4

Acts 10:43

Through his name -- "There is none other name under heaven." (Acts 4:12)
R2997:4
Believeth in him -- Faith in Jesus' blood, and in no others. R4476:1, 2997:4
Remission of sins -- There is no other means of approach to God.
R2997:4; E461
Abraham did need a Redeemer, and so do we. PT267

Acts 10:44

Spake these words -- He proceeded to tell them the true story of Jesus: his death, his resurrection, the call of the Church class--proving their worthiness by loyalty and faithfulness unto death. PD75/89

Cornelius had to believe what everybody must believe in order to become a Christian. HG117:6; NS803:4

The Holy Ghost fell -- Without the laying on of hands as it was bestowed at Pentecost. Peter was not ready to lay his hands upon him. Peter quickly learned the lesson. R2990:5

The baptism of the holy Spirit comes upon the Church collectively. Indicating that the Gentiles also may become members of the Anointed. R5394:1, 1523:1

And has continued with all the consecrated and faithful ever since. R1523:1

The promised favor to Israel were fulfilled. B71.

The third baptism of the holy Spirit. Peter, used the second key to open the door for the Gentiles. E214; R375:5; Q75, 783; HG737:5; NS803:5, 213:2; SM465,466

Them which heard -- Those who appreciated, not infants. F448

The Church at Ceasarea was of considerable size; Philip made it his headquarters, Paul visited it three times. R2222:3

Acts 10:45

Were astonished -- Yet they were not envious. R2990:5

Shows that the Gospel had not been preached to any Gentiles for some time after Pentecost. R189:5

On the Gentiles -- At the end of Fleshly Israel's seventieth week of favor. A223; R5832:6, 4344:2, 271:6

The gifts -- Differed from "the fruits" of the Spirit. Conferred by laying on of the hands of the apostles. E207

Acts 10:46

Magnify God -- Praising him, and rejoicing in their acceptance. R2990:5

Peter was merely the agent chosen. R1525:2

Acts 10:47

Can any man forbid water -- Appropriate and proper symbol. R1545:5

Baptized -- Water immersion, symbolic of the immersion into Christ's death which he had already experienced. R4345:4, 2990:5, 760:3 10:48

Commanded -- Directed. Similarly the Lord directs all of his people. R2990:6

In their consecration vow and in water. The custom of all the apostles. F448

In "fulfilling all righteousness," it is a joy and privilege. R760:6

Baptized -- As a symbol of death and burial with Christ, and of a resurrection to newness of life. Our Lord's request and the Apostle's command. R2990:5, 937:4

Greek, dipping; immersion. R444:3, 5394:1, 4333:6, 1541:2,3, 760:3

It is certain that our Lord and his apostles practiced and enjoined upon all followers the rite of water baptism. R1539:3, 1540:4; NS54:4
Different from John's baptism. R445:4

Acts 11

Acts 11:1

And the apostles -- Though prejudiced as Jews, they were enabled to see that while their nation would be blessed, all the families of the earth should be blessed also. A59

They had different degrees of insight into God's plan. A26, 27

The chief representatives of the Church still resided at Jerusalem. R1455:2

The writings of the Apostles were divinely inspired. R1584:4

Gentiles had also received -- The New Testament writers realized the fulfillment of the prophecies. A59

They realized that a change of dispensation was upon them. R2996:1

Word of God -- The Scriptures do claim to be the Word of God. R1584:3

Acts 11:2

Peter -- The eldest, and in some respects the strongest, of the apostles. R2995:3

Jerusalem -- The church at Jerusalem was the first local New Testament church. R1087:2*

Contended with him -- Doing their duty, to make sure that no liberty was taken with the Lord's direction, to circumvent his arrangements. R2996:1
Not that he had recognized Cornelius as a Christian, but had eaten bread with him. R2996:2

Believers unprepared for this great change in the operation of divine favor. HG354:5

Acts 11:3

Didst eat with them -- Contrary to Jewish custom. R2996:2

Acts 11:4

Rehearsed the matter -- He considered the evidence which had convinced him. R2996:3

Acts 11:5

I saw a vision -- Greek, horama, not real but a vision. R4142:4*

Acts 11:8

I said, Not so, Lord -- He told them of his surprise when the Lord manifested his favor toward the Gentiles. R2996:6

Acts 11:9

Answered me again -- It was some time before the apostles had a clear understanding of the work being done, and the blessings which were to go to the Gentiles. A59, 80, 81

Acts 11:12

Six brethren -- Peter took with him the six of the Joppa brethren who had accompanied him to the house of Cornelius. R2995:3

Acts 11:13

Peter -- In some respects the eldest and strongest of the apostles, guided in judgment in taking with him six other brethren. R2995:3 11:14

Tell thee words -- That he might be brought to a condition of harmony and sonship. F680, 681

Words of life. R4345:1

Necessary instructions; that God had provided a great sin-offering, Jesus, who had tasted death for every man; and that for the blessing of the world a Little Flock was being selected to reign with Christ. R5833:1, 2989:6

"The old, old story." R2989:6

The blessing could not come to him except through a knowledge of the truth. R4344:6

Faith cometh by hearing and hearing by the word of God--the simple story of the cross. R4345:1

He obeyed, he heard the words of eternal life, "the truth"; he was sealed with the spirit of adoption. R2071:4

Peter explained facts in harmony with the prophets. R1451:6

He used the "key" which introduced the Gentiles to the Pentecostal blessings. NS803:5

Cornelius, as well as every other one who experiences the great blessing of this age, must first of all be justified. HG354:6

Shall be saved -- Brought into covenant relationship with God. R5833:1

Delivered from condemnation and alienation. F681; R2989:6, 1451:6

Not permitted to have communion with God in the full proper sense, even though he led a righteous life. F680, 681

It is a false idea that "lost" means condemned to eternal torment, and "saved" means released from such a calamity. R1451:5

Acts 11:15

The Holy Ghost fell on them -- From both Jews and Gentiles, found worthy to be made joint-heirs. A59

They received the gifts of the holy Spirit, similar to Jewish believers.

R2996:6

All with Peter were "astonished." (Acts 10:45) R199:1

Acts 11:16

With the Holy Ghost -- He understood clearly that the holy Spirit baptism was of much greater importance than the water baptism. R2996:6

Acts 11:17

I could withstand God -- He understood that in the Lord's estimation Gentiles must be reckoned as members of the Body of Christ. R2996:6

Acts 11:18

Heard these things -- Because of their prejudices, it was slow for them to grasp the recognition of Gentiles. Peter had to be taught by a special vision. R1727:6, 1728:1; 972:1

Were glad to learn of the good works, took steps to help the new believers by sending Barnabas. R1455:2

Glorified God -- Their difficulty was not due to meanness of heart, but to conscientious conviction respecting the divine program. R2996:4

Also to the Gentiles -- To be heirs of the Abrahamic promise. R919:4, 658:2, 414:2

Repentance unto life -- Granted unto the Gentiles as well as to the Jews. R2997:1

Acts 11:19

Scattered abroad -- Scattered the believers everywhere, to preach the Gospel. D480

The divine purpose, that thus messengers of the Gospel might be in every quarter. R4357:2

They did not put their lights under a bushel (Matt. 5:15) but "showed forth the praises (virtue, glories) of him who had called them out of darkness." (1 Pet. 2:9) R2133:3

Communism is not the Lord's arrangement now. D478, 480; R2102:3, 1862:2, 1390:5

The persecution -- The persecution scattered the light instead of extinguishing it. R1455:1, 1862:6

Should persecution come again, let all continue to preach, on authority of the Lord. R992:6

Another parallel to the harvest of the Jewish age. B263

Resulted from the persecution at the time of Stephen's death. R2997:2

And Antioch -- A city of 500,000 population, 300 miles north of Jerusalem, at that time the third largest city in the world, and the first city outside of Palestine in which a church was formed. R2997:2, 4357:1, 2133:3, 1455:1

It was the capital of the province of Syria. R2133:3

Preaching the word -- All the brethren were to exhort one another and stir up each other's pure minds in remembrance. R984:4

Acts 11:20

Men of Cyprus and Cyrene -- Jews, converts to Christianity, more familiar with the Greek and less familiar with the Hebrew. R4357:2

Acts 11:21

Hand of the Lord -- The true secret of all successful Christian work. R4357:2

Hand signifies power and direction. Each individual Christian is a finger of the Lord. (Luke 11:20) R4357:2

We see how the Lord led others to preach the Gospel. R1455:1

A great number believed -- A testimony to their efficient work. R2134:1

We are not to gauge the success of our endeavors by the "great numbers." R4357:3

And turned -- Believing is one thing, and "turning" every sentiment, hope, ambition and desire to the Lord is quite another. R2134:1

Acts 11:22

Ears of the church -- The apostles at Jerusalem were on the lookout to help, encourage, assist in forwarding the Gospel in every quarter. R4357:3

God uses human means so far as possible. R4357:4

Sent forth -- To forewarn them of dangers and to assist to a clearer knowledge of the divine plan. R4357:4

That he might see and judge of the true condition of things. R2997:6

Barnabas -- Chief representatives residing at Jerusalem, glad to learn of the good work being done, took steps to send Barnabas. R1455:2

A faithful servant. With a loving and kind disposition. R2134:3

A native of Cyprus, an island in the Mediterranean, near Antioch. He was a Levite, well learned in the Law, "a son of consolation," a "helper."

R2998:1

Acts 11:23

The grace of God -- Manifested in faith and conduct. R2997:6

Was glad -- He himself received a blessing. R4357:6

Quickly discerned the cleansing and sanctifying power of the truth amongst the believers at Antioch. R2997:6

Exhorted -- That they should abide, separated from further affiliations and bound unto the Lord. They had already separated themselves from heathenism and Judaism and had been joined unto the Lord. R4357:6

In Greek, signifies comfort, stimulation, assistance. R2998:1

They would cleave -- The word signifies to glue, to adhere. To see that their consecration was complete. R2998:2

Acts 11:24

He was a good man -- Moral, upright, reverential, full of faith and the holy Spirit. R2998:3

What more could be said to the credit of any child of God? R4357:6

Of the Holy Ghost -- The holy Spirit guiding all his efforts. R2998:3

Much people was added -- The work was one of proclaiming Christ and turning the hearts of men from sin to righteousness. R4358:1

Acts 11:25

For to seek Saul -- The time had come for Saul to be introduced into the Gospel work. Again God used an instrumentality. R4358:1

Went to see him personally, to urge upon him activities in the Lord's service. R4358:1

To his introduction as the great "Apostle to the Gentiles," (Rom. 11:13) to take the place of Judas. R1455:2

The Lord had allowed Saul to rest in quietness for the development of humility, faith and obedience. R4358:1

Barnabas apparently discerned that they needed instruction as well as exhortation, and immediately he thought of Paul. R2134:3

His ideas were extremely broad in respect to the Gospel. The brethren would be profited. R2998:4

Thirteen years after returning from Arabia, Paul was chosen an elder of Antioch. Q697:4

Acts 11:26

Unto Antioch -- The first church in which Gentiles seemed to predominate in numbers. PD76/90

Taught much people -- Without waiting for anybody to "lay hands" on them. F285

Disciples -- Pupils, learners. R2998:5

Called Christians -- This was the name which believers adopted for themselves, by which they would be known to outsiders. R2134:4
They were first called it by others, but not by the Jews. R4358:2
Signifies a believer in and a follower of Jesus Christ, and is applicable only to the new creation. F494; R4358:2, 2998:5, 2134:6, 1455:4
One who trusts in Christ as the Messiah, the Redeemer. R2998:5
Implies he is our Head; our present share with him in the anointed sacrificing priesthood, and our association with him as anointed kings and joint-heirs in the Kingdom. R2134:6
The only ones who properly take Christ's name are those who really become his disciples--take up their cross, give up their life, surrender their will. R5404:6
It would be far better if many professed Christians did not take the name at all. R5404:6
The name Christian is borne by many as a heavenly livery to appease their own consciences and increase their opportunity for selfishness. R4988:2
The name that will stand will be Christians. R4358:4
By what name may the Church be called? By the name of its founder. The "Church of Christ" or "Church of God." R5848:3

Acts 11:27

Jerusalem -- The center of influence in Palestine. The head-center of the Christian work, so to speak. R2997:2,5

Acts 11:28

Agabus -- Spoke as a mouthpiece of the holy Spirit. R2223:4
Possessed of the spirit of prophecy, after the manner of the ancient prophets, so that he foretold future events. R4467:4
Be great dearth -- A famine. R4526:1, 4358:5, 1455:5

Acts 11:29

To send relief -- The only appeal for money recorded in the Bible, for the poor at Jerusalem, sorely pressed by the famine. R4526:1
When an opportunity comes to us for doing good, it should not be slighted, but reasonably investigated. R4358:5
The love of God shed abroad in our hearts overcomes much of our natural selfishness. R4358:5
It was a noble return in temporal matters for spiritual favors they had received. R1455:5
The blessing to the giver is far greater. R2999:1

Acts 12

Acts 12:1

About that time -- Supposed to date about twelve years after our Lord's crucifixion. R4346:2

Herod -- A descendant of Esau. R3003:1

Herod Agrippa I, grandson of the Herod who murdered the babes in Bethlehem. Herod was a family name. R3002:3, 4346:2, 2139:3

Nephew of Herod Antipas who murdered John the Baptist. R2139:3, 4346:2, 3002:3

The king -- Of Judea. R4346:2

Vex certain of the church -- Imprisoned the King's messengers. R2301:3

The eleven bravely stood their ground, knowing others would look to them for encouragement. F230; R1523:6

Acts 12:2

He killed James -- Not all of God's servants will be miraculously delivered. R1455:2

In the majority of cases the Church's experiences are far more like James' than like Peter's. R3004:2

He was a leader amongst the apostles and was beheaded. The Lord could accomplish more by his death, than by keeping him alive. R4347:4, 2139:5, 3003:1

Acts 12:3

Pleased the Jews -- The same spirit of murder. R2139:6

Even at cost of principle. R4346:3, 3896:1

To take Peter also -- Who would not flee, because he knew at this trying time the Church abroad would look to them at Jerusalem for encouragement and help. F230, 231

Unleavened bread -- According to Jewish custom no one could be put to death during that week. R2139:5

Trusting to the sacredness of the Passover season, Peter ventured forth. R4346:3

Each Memorial season is a time for special trial and testing. We recommend alertness be exercised during the forty days preceding the Memorial Supper. R4346:5,6

Acts 12:4

Apprehended him -- The Greek implies that his arrest was after searching. R4346:3, 3003:2

The time of his arrest was too close to the festival to permit his execution. R3003:3

In prison -- Probably the Castle of Antonio; possibly where Jesus was arraigned before Pilate, and where Paul was later taken. R4346:6, 3003:5, 2140:1

Four quaternions -- Four shifts of four soldiers each; two chained to the prisoner, the third was outside the door and the fourth in the passage leading to the outer iron gate. R3003:2, 4347:1, 2140:1

Easter -- Should be rendered "Passover." Estera, from which Easter comes, was a Saxon goddess of the East. The name was adopted from the heathen. F479, 482; R5191:6, 3003:3, 2271:3, 1631:3, 1290:1

Acts 12:5

Without ceasing -- Lesson of importunity; examples given in the Scriptures fully warranted the all-night prayer meeting. R4347:2

Of the church -- Frequent mention is made of the Church gathering for prayer. R2023:3

For him -- It was not proper for him to pray for deliverance for himself; he had consecrated his life unto death. His friends were praying for him. R4347:1, 3003:3

Acts 12:6

Peter was sleeping -- He trusted in divine wisdom, power and love. R2140:2

The power of divine grace helping in time of need (Heb. 4:16) gave him peace. R4347:1

His heart filled with the peace of God which passeth all understanding. (Phil. 4:7) And, "He giveth his beloved sleep." Psa. 127:2 R3003:4

Acts 12:7

Behold, the angel -- Appeared personally; non-personal instructions are properly described as from or by the Lord's holy Spirit. E277; R265:3 "Ministering spirits sent forth to minister." (Heb. 1:10) R3004:2

Angels are not permitted to materialize now. R4347:5

Of the Lord -- A lesson of God's power to help his servants. R1455:2

A light shined -- So that the Apostle might know that his deliverer, with radiant features, was a holy being. R4347:5

Chains fell off -- God sometimes grants his "new creatures" special favors of an earthly sort, even though they do not ask for them. R2009:2

Acts 12:8

Gird thyself -- Whatever he could do, he was required to do; the angel did only what Peter could not do. R4347:5, 3003:5
Similarly today, it is ours to do everything within our power. R4347:6

Acts 12:9

He went out -- Between three and six in the morning; he was not missed until sunrise, when the guards were changed. R4347:5, 2139:6, 3003:6
Thought he saw a vision -- Expecting that he would awaken shortly to find himself still bound. R3003:5

Acts 12:10

His own accord -- What is contrary to physical law, is called miraculous; but may be in accordance with the laws of spiritual life. HG29:5; R265:2
Angel departed -- Having accomplished his mission. R2140:3
Having simply done for Peter what he could not have done for himself. R303:5, 2009:2

Acts 12:11

Come to himself -- Realized the facts of the case, that he was free. R4347:6
Hath delivered me -- The Lord preserved Peter because he had a special work for him to do. R4347:4

Acts 12:12

The house of Mary -- An intimation that this piece of property was not put into the common fund. R2932:3
The congregations of the primitive Church were small and usually met in private houses. R2941:6, 3003:3
In the public assembly of the saints. R3698:5
John -- The writer of the Gospel of Mark, cousin of Barnabas, and son of one of the Marys at Jerusalem. R3006:3, 3003:6, 4347:2
Nephew of Barnabas. R2141:2
Surname was Mark -- Latin, Marcus. R3003:6
Gathered together -- A great blessing and strengthening of their faith. Q542:1
Praying -- They were kept up all night, evidently for the entire week of Peter's imprisonment. R2139:6, 4347:2; Q541:3
The Lord intended a deliverance for St. Peter, but allowed it to come about as a reward of faith of those praying for him. R4347:3

Is indispensable to Christian life; it means a living and a growing faith.
R2692:1

Acts 12:13

Door of the gate -- Implying that it was a better class house. R4347:6
Rhoda -- Little rose. R4347:6, 3003:6

Acts 12:14

Knew Peter's voice -- It was customary to make inquiries before opening the door. R3003:6
Opened not the gate -- Neglected to open the door. R3003:6, 4347:6

Acts 12:15

It is his angel -- His representative, come in answer to our prayers to God for consolation; one of the "ministering spirits sent forth to minister to those who shall be heirs of salvation." (Heb. 1:14) R3004:2, 4348:1, 2140:5
They might of thought this was an impersonation. Q20:2

Acts 12:16

And saw him -- The answer to their prayers. R2140:4, 3004:2
They were astonished -- Were surprised at the Lord's answer to their petitions. R4348:1

Acts 12:17

Beckoning unto them -- There was an outburst of excitement and questions which the Apostle was obliged to silence by the shaking of his hands. R4348:1
Unto James -- The Lord's brother or second cousin. R3004:3, 4348:1, 2140:4
And to the brethren -- The leaders of the cause in the city. R2140:4
He departed -- Left the city, in accordance with the Lord's instructions to flee when persecuted. (Matt. 10:23) R3004:3, 2140:4
Into another place -- Whether to another city or another house, we do not know. R4348:1

Acts 12:21

Upon a set day -- Feast of Tabernacles, 41 AD. R3002:3
Made an oration -- Read the whole Book of Deuteronomy. R3002:3

Acts 12:23

Eaten of worms -- Disease of intestinal worms. Within a month he died. R4348:1, 3002:6

Acts 12:24

The word of God grew -- This chapter shows the power of Satan, the power of God, and the power of prayer. R4348:5

Acts 12:25

Barnabas -- A disciple named Joseph. Name change to Barnabas. R4357:1
John whose surname was Mark -- The writer of the Gospel of Mark, cousin of Barnabas, and son of one of the Marys at Jerusalem. R3006:3, 3003:6
Nephew of Barnabas. R2141:2

Acts 13

Acts 13:1

Church that was at Antioch -- The first Church of believers outside of Palestine. The first of the Gentiles. R3005:1; PD76/90
The occasion of this lesson was probably about a year after the famine in Jerusalem. They had grown prosperous under the teaching of Barnabas and Saul. R1461:1

Certain prophets -- Probably also possessing the gift of prophecy. E275
The Greek word rendered "prophet" signifies a "forth-teller." Generally used in the sense of standing up before the people in declaration of the Lord's message. R3005:2

More public speakers than was needed at Antioch; besides Paul and Barnabas. R4360:2, 3005:4

And teachers -- Those possessing talent as instructors, but not necessarily in a public or oratorical manner. R3005:3
Every ecclesia should be like the Church at Antioch, a theological seminary from which efficient teachers would constantly be going forth to wider fields of service. F281, 288

Manaen -- Foster-brother to Herod Antipas. R3005:6

Acts 13:2

Ministered to the Lord -- The Society gets its authority from the Lord. It is acting in the same way as did the Church at Antioch. R5808:2; Q515:6

Fasted -- Disciplined the body by abstaining from delicacies and relishes. R3659:5

A very plain diet, or total abstinence from food, are occasionally desirable to many of the Lord's people who are impulsive and full-blooded. R2260:5

The fastings of the Jewish age typified the self-denials of the Gospel age. R2592:2

All the various desires of the flesh need restraining. Our thoughts, words and conduct. R3006:2

There is an efficacy in prayer as well as fasting. NS153:2

The Holy Ghost -- God made known his will by the exercise of his power, probably through "certain prophets." E274

Separate me -- Whenever the number of public speakers and teachers is greater than needed, all should recognize the facts and separate some to special missionary effort. R4360:2; PD76/90

It is probable that they were "called" and "set apart" in much the same manner that all the true ministers of God are now called. Special ability is recognized as a special call of the holy Spirit. R372:5,6, 3005:5

The holy Spirit indicated, either by miracle, or by consensus of opinion. By class vote. R1461:2, 3006:5

Barnabas and Saul -- Barnabas is mentioned first; older than Paul in spiritual things, perhaps also older in years, and it had not yet been fully manifested that Paul was the Lord's choice. R2141:1

For the work -- To do a special missionary work. Q515:6; R4360:2

Acts 13:3

Fasted and prayed -- Some may be inclined to pay too little heed to the incidentals of this kind. R3005:6

Their hands on them -- As an endorsement of the projected missionary enterprise. F285; R5940:4, 1461:2

As the Priests laid their hands upon the animals which were to represent them (Lev. 8:14, 18), so did the Church, indicating these as representatives. R4360:4, 1957:4, 1461:4

They would represent the Antioch Church, and the Church would bear their expenses. Q317:2; R5808:2, 4360:4, 3006:1, 2141:1, 2022:5, 1461:2, 1720:2

There was no apostolic succession indicated in this simple ceremony; nor did it impart to them any spiritual power, or authority to preach, which they already had. R1461:4, 4360:3, 2141:1, 812:3*

Quite common in the early Church. At times special gifts were imparted in the early Church. This was not necessary for authority to preach the Gospel--all the Anointed had this privilege. R812:3, 1720:2

Sent them away -- On what is termed the first missionary tour. R2140:3

Acts 13:4

Seleucia -- Eighteen miles from Antioch. R3006:3

Cyprus -- Home country of Barnabas. R3006:3, 4360:4

Acts 13:5

In the synagogues -- The Lord and the Apostles began their teaching in the synagogues but soon found little opportunity to teach there. The nominal church offers no advantages for the Truth. R986:5, 3006:4, 2141:2, 1461:4

They had also John -- John Mark. R3006:3, 2141:2

See also comments on Acts 12:12

To their minister -- As their attendant servant. Brethren are not on an equality in every matter. R3006:3, 2141:2

Acts 13:6

Paphos -- Mark as the companion and servant of the two missionaries discontinued his service at Paphos and returned to Jerusalem. R3009:2

A certain sorcerer -- Under the control of the fallen angels. R2173:2, 4360:6

Acts 13:7

Deputy of the country -- Proconsul of Rome. R3007:4, 4360:6

Sergius Paulus -- A man of good judgment, the governor of the Island, and representative of the Roman Senate. He had a hearing ear before the apostles got there. R3006:6

Acts 13:8

Elymas -- A Jew. R4360:4

Sorcerer -- A magician. R4360:4, 3006:6

Acts 13:9

Filled with the Holy Ghost -- Already a recipient of "gifts" of the holy Spirit, Paul was now specially imbued with divine power. R2141:5

Acts 13:10

And said -- The power to cast out devils was conferred upon the apostles. R2173:2, 2141:4

True love was the cause of the anger; love for the truth, for God, for the people who were being deceived. R439:2, 3007:4

Child of the devil -- Satan-like, seeking their own exaltation, A willful evildoer. R1175:6, 266:1
Enemies serve a purpose in testing and sifting the true children of God. R1461:6
We read in the New Testament a great deal about persons possessed by devils (obsession). R2173:2
The Apostle was a firm believer in a personal devil. R3165:6

Acts 13:11

Hand of the Lord -- The judgment of the Lord. R3007:1
It was necessary to restrain the Adversary while the Church was developing. R1461:5
Thou shalt be blind -- It is our duty to act for the good of the truth; that impressions inimical to the truth may be stopped. R5260:1
It is not for us to emulate Paul's course. He was specially empowered. R4360:5

Acts 13:12

Astonished at the doctrine -- We should leave astonishment in every heart, not in our ability or oratory, but at the teaching of the Lord's Word. R4360:6
Not that it converted the proconsul. R3007:4

Acts 13:13

Paul and his company -- Previously the narrative was respecting Barnabas and Paul. Barnabas was still loved and approved of the Lord, but Paul was his "chosen vessel" (Acts 9:15) to help, encourage, and comfort. R4364:1
Perga -- Means "very earthy." R359:1
John departing -- Possibly because of faintness of heart, lack of faith and courage; Paul did not accept his company on a future missionary tour. (Acts 15:37, 38) Let us not look back. (Luke 9:62) R4364:2, 3009:2
He learned a valuable lesson, and eventually was restored to the Apostle's favor. (Col. 4:10; 2 Tim. 4:11) R4364:2, 2141:3
No one knows how much he may have lost of spiritual blessings by his failure. R2141:3

Acts 13:14

Antioch in Pisidia -- A great city, but not the same as Antioch in 13:1; there were 16 Antiochs. R4364:3, 3009:1
One hundred miles inland from Perga. R2149:2
Into the synagogue -- The usual custom was followed, of going first to the Jews. R3009:3, 4364:3, 1465:2

They sought the prepared soil to sow the Gospel seed. R2149:2
Because the Jews who had been waiting for the fulfillment of the Messianic prophecies were the best prepared soil for the Gospel message; at least so far as their heads were concerned. R4364:3, 2149:2
And sat down -- They did not force themselves forward or in any way seek to violate the customs of the synagogue. R1465:2
Saying, as our attitude should be, "Lord, here am I, use me." (Isa. 6:8)
R1465:3

Acts 13:15

Reading of the law -- By the elder of the congregation, styled the "angel of the synagogue". R4364:3
It has been presumed by some that, as Paul's discourse seems to make reference to Deut. 1:31 and Isa. 55:3, these scriptures had probably been portions of the daily reading lesson, and the Apostle used them for his discourse. R2149:2
Sent unto them -- Recognizing them as intelligent and cultured men, and pleased to have them use the liberty of the synagogue. R4364:3, 3009:3, 2149:2, 2085:4
Say on -- A liberality existing in the Jewish synagogue that does not exist in the nominal church. R1465:3

Acts 13:16

Paul stood up -- In his place, not going to the public stand, or rostrum. R4364:3, 2149:2
Beckoning -- Saluting. R4364:3
Men of Israel -- Representatives of the whole twelve tribes. C252, 293; R2085:4, 1341:1
Ye -- Gentiles. R2149:3, 2085:4
That fear God -- Who reverence God. R4364:3
Give audience -- A discourse similar to Stephen's which Paul had heard and rejected. R4364:3

Acts 13:17

Chose our fathers -- God chose the nation of Israel as a channel for the blessing of mankind. R4364:3

The time of forty years -- Typifying the period of Jewish disfavor.
R3079:3

Acts 13:19

He -- God. R1980:3

Acts 13:20

Unto them judges -- Not elected to the position, but raised to it providentially; divinely appointed. R5645:2

Of whom Joshua was first. PD38/48; R5645:2

About the space of -- Greek, hos; during the space of. B49; R1980:3

Four hundred and fifty years -- They had judges off and on during that space of time. R1980:4; HG105:1, 46:1, 44:6; PD38/48

Link No. 23 in the true Bible chronology. B49

Paul's inspired testimony thus corrects a transcriber's error made in 1 Kings 6:1, which should read 580 years (less 130 = 450). B53; R1980:3

Samuel -- The last of the Judges. R1980:4

Acts 13:21

Space of forty years -- Link No. 24 in the true Bible chronology. B50

Saul's 40 year reign ended 3049 Anno Mundi, year of the world, from Adam's creation. R1980:4,1

Possibly typifying the harvest of the Jewish age. R4018:1*

Acts 13:22

David -- Gods' choice of a special family through whom Messiah would come. R4364:4

After mine own heart -- In spite of all his weaknesses, David's heart was loyal to God, and his desire was at all times to do God's service.

Q199:6; PD40/50

Repentant when wrong; his heart was right. PD40/50

The definition of an ideal life. R2694:6*

True greatness does not consist in what we possess, but in what we are.

R1709:1*

Acts 13:23

This man's seed -- David's seed. R1465:5

A Saviour, Jesus -- The Messiahship of Jesus had already been recognized to a considerable extent. R4364:4

Acts 13:24

John -- The Baptist. R2085:4

Before his coming -- The manifestation to Israel. R2085:4

"That he should be made manifest to Israel, therefore am I come baptizing with water." (John 1:31) R60:4*

"There cometh one after me." (Mark 1:7) R1465:6, 114:4*, 60:4*

Baptism of repentance -- This relates to Jews, either natural born or proselyted. If they would acknowledge Christ, their sins would be forgiven. R1421:1, 2149:3

The Harvest begins with Christ's personal presence. HG71:1

People of Israel -- The whole twelve tribes. C293; R1341:1

Acts 13:26

Feareth -- Reverences. R1465:6

The word as used here, signifies to be in apprehension of evil, to be afraid. Those conscious of their inability to keep the whole Law. R352:1*

To you -- Paul intimated that the message which he bore to them was one of special favor. R2149:3, 327:5

To "Israelites indeed" which includes also the worthy of the Gentiles. R1465:6

Word of this salvation -- Peculiar words, spoken at a peculiar time, and under peculiar circumstances. R352:1*

Acts 13:27

Rulers -- The chief priests. R2149:5

Knew him not -- Did not recognize or honor him. R1466:1

Of the prophets -- Heedless of the testimony of the prophets. R4364:4, 2149:5, 1466:1

Read every sabbath day -- The Lord endorsed the teachings of Moses. R1793:6

Acts 13:28

No cause of death -- Ignoring Jesus' manifest purity. R4364:4

Acts 13:29

That was written -- The sinful act of crucifying Jesus. R1466:1, 2149:3

Acts 13:30

But God raised him -- Christ could never have raised himself. R2795:2 Proving his Messiahship in accordance with prophecies and attested by witnesses. R4364:4, 2149:5

The promise made to the fathers beginning to be fulfilled. R352:2*

Acts 13:31

His witnesses -- The apostles were special witnesses, although seen by others. E213; F214; R1522:5, 1466:2

Acts 13:32

Glad tidings -- Of the fulfillment of prophecy in the resurrection of Jesus. R1466:2, 2149:5

Only to the meek, who reverence God and who have respect unto his promises. R1465:6

Not bad tidings of damnation and eternal misery of any. R2593:6, 2596:1, 2557:1, 670:3

How that the promise -- Of a Messiah. R4364:4, 2149:5, 1466:2

Begotten thee -- Borne thee; delivered thee from death by a resurrection. R2149:6, 1466:2, 1385:4

The Common Version has beclouded the thought by using the word begotten, instead of born, here and in Heb. 1:5; 5:5. NS101:3

Greek, gennao. When associated with God this word should always be rendered beget or begotten. R837:1

Acts 13:34

He raised him up -- Jesus did not raise himself. R2795:2

Give you the sure -- I will make them sure to thee forever. R2149:6

Or holy things promised to. R1466:2

Mercies of David -- David signifies "beloved." R1364:2

The dominion, power and glory of the Kingdom of God on earth promised to David's heir, "the Messiah" and those of the Gospel age who are invited to share. (Psa. 80:20-37) R1466:2, 4364:1, 1364:1

Acts 13:35

To see corruption -- God specially promised the resurrection of Messiah, indicating his death and temporary subjection almost to corruption. R2149:6

Acts 13:36

His own generation -- Greek, genea; people living contemporaneously, as in "This generation shall not pass." (Matt. 24:34) D603

Fell on sleep -- In death, awaiting the resurrection morning. The apostles frequently used this expression. E345; R3027:6, 2197:6, 1881:1; HG194:3

Acts 13:37

Saw no corruption -- Paul argues that the prophecy has not reference to David but to Christ, whom David typified. R1466:2

Acts 13:38

Through this man -- "The man Christ Jesus." (1 Tim. 2:5) R2150:1, 3009:1, 2220:5

"For since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead." (1 Cor. 15:21) R2150:1

Because he paid the penalty. E461; R387:3

Unto you -- Even you, who in your ignorance and folly despised and slew him. R1466:4

Forgiveness of sins -- Christ abolished the enmity or opposition of the Jewish Law Covenant that they might receive forgiveness of sins through faith in his blood. R1231:2

Cancellation of the legal condemnation, and recovery of the sinner from his imperfection. CR413:6

The essence of the Gospel. R3009:4, 2150:1

The test of the right preaching of the Gospel. R4364:5

The first step. R2150:4

All that believe -- Such, and such only. R2150:4, 199:3

Faith and repentance are the prerequisites to salvation. R1437:2

Are justified -- May enter the School of Christ. R4364:5

Reckoned right, just, pure and perfect. That we may have communion with God and do works acceptable. R2150:4, 391:1, 216:1, 199:3

There are three steps to reach the prize, justification is the first. R199:2

The sufferings of Christ are not part of the price of our ransom. R17:5

From all things -- All inherited blemishes and uncontrollable weaknesses, traceable directly or indirectly, to the original sin of Adam. R2150:4, 4364:5

Because of Jesus' death, we can come to God as sinless, and recognize him as Father. R364:1, 216:1

The sins of the "Church of the first-born" (Heb. 12:23) are passed over, not imputed. R253:5, 17:4

By the law of Moses -- The Jews were justified only for a year; and "The law made nothing perfect." (Heb. 7:19) R4364:5, 4388:6

"By the works of the law shall no flesh be justified." (Gal. 2:16) E444; R5774:3

The Ancient Worthies were not justified by a covenant nor by a mediator; neither were we. R4388:5

The Jewish Law really justified none. HG307:3

Acts 13:40

Beware therefore, lest that -- Spiritual blindness. The spirit which despises the instruction of the Lord, when God raises up some human instrumentality. R1488:6, 1466:4

Acts 13:41

Ye despisers -- Of God's plan. Despisers of the truth must fail to enter into the reward of the faithful overcomers of this age. R1488:6; NS632:3
Who say "All things continue as they were from the beginning." (2 Pet. 3:4) R1488:5

Wonder, and perish -- They indeed wondered at the progress and power of the truth, but they were left in their unjustified condition. R1466:4
Not eternal torment. God knows, not we, how many will perish, having sinned against a sufficiency of light. R4364:5

I work a work -- "The day of his preparation." (Nahum 2:3) R1487:6
Applicable to both harvests and all the attendant features of a change of dispensation. "His work, his strange work." (Isa. 28:21) R1487:3
Children of God are permitted to view "the strange work" from a superior vantage ground. R1488:1, 1997:3
The selection of the Church. R1466:5
If you do not take "the Vow" at least do not set your heart or tongue against it. R4238:5

Acts 13:42

Jews were gone out -- This reads differently in the older manuscripts and indicates that the apostles did not stop to answer questions. R4364:6
The next sabbath -- Or, during the week. R4364:6

Acts 13:43

Many -- The devout ones, as usual, were interested in the truth. R4365:1
Jews -- The common name of all Israelites today. R2085:4

Acts 13:44

The whole city -- May be understood hyperbolically as signifying a large concourse, or that all classes and conditions of citizens were well represented. R3010:1, 4365:1, 2150:3, 1466:3
Probably the majority coming merely out of curiosity, to see the difference between the doctrines of these and of the regular Jewish teachers. R3010:1

Word of God -- The Scriptures do claim to be the Word of God. Not the product of the church. R1584:3

Acts 13:45

Filled with envy -- The spirit of pride. Then as now the great mass prove themselves unworthy. R1466:3

How the truth is a searcher of the heart! It draws some and repels others.

It leads the natural man to anger, malice, hatred and strife. R4365:1

Because their own preaching had never drawn such crowds, and this message claimed to offer something better than Judaism could. R4365:1

And blaspheming -- Misrepresenting the characters and motives of Paul and Barnabas. R3010:1

Blaspheming the Messiah whom he preached. R2150:5

Acts 13:46

Then Paul -- Preached first to the Jews. R5445:4

Waxed bold -- Had avoided arousing prejudice, but now they spoke plainly, showing them where they stood. R4365:2

It was necessary -- Because they were the natural heirs of the Abrahamic Covenant. Also, to fulfill the promises of God to their fathers. R1466:6, 4357:1, 1846:2

A part of God's arrangement. R935:4*

The word of God -- The Gospel. R5396:3, 5445:4

First have been spoken to you -- The first opportunity to hear of this grace of God. R5455:4, 5048:6, 4365:2, 3010:2, 1846:1

The first opportunity for membership in the Kingdom class was granted to the Jewish people. R5396:2

For a number of years following the crucifixion, the Gospel went again to Israel, "beginning at Jerusalem." (Luke 24:47) R2301:1

"To the Jew first, and afterward to the Gentiles." (Rom. 2:10) R1846:2, 3010:2

The test upon all Israelites was the same. R5445:4

Ye put it from you -- They rejected God's favor, to their own injury, because at heart unworthy. R3010:2, 5396:3, 4365:2, 2702:4

Judge yourselves -- Greek, krino; trial, testing, criticism. R2430:2

"If we would [krino] judge ourselves, we should not be judged." (1 Cor. 11:31) R2430:5

Unworthy -- Now, as then, the few are gathered out and the great mass prove themselves unworthy. R1466:6

We turn -- Does Paul speak of himself as an Israelite, or of Christ as prophesied of as the light of the Gentiles? Perhaps both are included. R751:3*

To the Gentiles -- "To take out of them a people for his name." (Acts 15:14) R2702:3

Accounted the seed of Abraham according to the Spirit, having the faith of Abraham. R1795:1

Acts 13:47

Thee -- Christ. R1466:6, 2150:5

Light of the Gentiles -- To partake of the great feast with the remnant of Israel. R2702:3

Acts 13:48

They were glad -- That they had been accounted worthy to hear. R5594:3
The rightly disposed among the Gentiles. R2150:5

Glorified the word -- What an honor it is that God has asked us to hear his message. R5594:3

As were ordained -- Disposed. R3010:5, 2150:6, 607:1, 4365:5

To ordain means "to set in order" to arrange according to rule." R606:6

To eternal life -- So many of them as were of the class and character which God proposed should have eternal life. R4365:5

Those with a disposition of meekness, and desire to be in harmony with God and do his will, shall receive eternal life. R1467:1, 4365:5, 2150:6

Partly our work and partly God's. R607:1

"He that hath the Son hath life." R142:3

Believed -- Became obedient to the faith. R3010:5

Acts 13:49

Was published -- Making the opponents more angry. R3010:4

Not only by the preaching of Paul and Barnabas, but by all who then received the truth. R1467:2

Acts 13:50

The Jews stirred up -- What they could not oppose with argument or logic they did oppose with prejudice and superstition, arousing these sentiments by misrepresentation. R3010:4, 4368:3

Wherever our Lord and the apostles went and their message there was a division. R1633:3

Honourable women -- Greek proselytes to the Jewish religion. R4368:3

Chief men of the city -- Influenced by the women. R4368:3

Persecution -- The immediate reward of the Lord's faithful witnesses, to strengthen and develop them until Christ's reign brings in everlasting righteousness. R1467:4

Out of their coasts -- Wherever the true Gospel goes its effect is to cause uproar and confusion in the Kingdom of the prince of darkness.

R1633:3

Acts 13:51

Shook off the dust -- Figurative; meaning, we took our departure. R3010:6
"When they persecute you in this city, flee ye into another." (Matt. 10:23) R2150:6, 4368:6, 3011:2, 1467:4

Filled with joy -- Those that obey the gospel. R199:1*

Acts 14

Acts 14:1

Iconium -- About 75 miles southeast of Antioch of Pisidia, on the border of Galatia. R4368:3, 3011:2, 3009:1

Great multitude -- A large congregation of interested hearers. R1467:4

Of the Greeks -- Jewish proselytes. R4368:3

Believed -- Conversions to Christianity. R1467:4

Acts 14:2

Minds -- Greek, psuche; souls, beings. E335

Acts 14:3

Long time -- Several months, because the many converts needed instruction. R4368:3, 1467:5

And granted signs -- Greek, seemion; proofs or evidences. Recognized by Israelites indeed. D598

Endorsing their testimony by special miraculous gifts, probably healing mainly. R1467:5

Acts 14:5

Gentiles -- Influenced by the chief Jews of the synagogue. R4368:6
Jews with their rulers -- Represents the Lord's professed followers, who slander and misrepresent true followers. R4368:6

Acts 14:6

And fled -- "When they persecute you in this city, flee ye into another." (Matt. 10:23) R3011:2, 4368:6, 2150:6, 1467:5

Lystra -- About 20 miles southeast of Iconium. R4368:6
Capital of Wolfland. Its people were less civilized than other places visited. No synagogue was there and preaching was in the forum. R4369:1
The scene of an old traditional mythological event, perpetrated by a statue of Jupiter at the gate. R3011:3, 4369:2

Acts 14:9

Faith to be healed -- This miracle corresponded closely to the one wrought through Peter and John recorded in Acts 3:7,8. R1471:3

Acts 14:10

Stand upright -- A thing he had never done before. R3011:3
Leaped and walked -- The Lord witnessed to the teaching of Paul and Barnabas by a miracle, thus confirming their testimony, that the people might know they were his messengers. R1471:3
The gift of healing here illustrated vanished away, as foretold. (1 Cor. 13:8) R1998:2

Acts 14:11

Speech of Lycaonia -- Not in Greek, which the missionaries did not understand. R4369:1
Gods are come down -- The effect of the miracle upon the people was electrical. R3011:3
According to their traditions, Jupiter and Mercury once visited them and were refused, and the city punished. R4369:2, 3011:3

Acts 14:12

Barnabas, Jupiter -- The elder and more venerable looking of the two. R2150:6
Paul, Mercurius -- In their tradition, Mercury was the orator, the speaker. R3011:3, 2150:6
Impliedly complimenting Paul's general brilliancy and vigor of manner or both. R4355:3

Acts 14:13

Done sacrifice -- Worshipping the messengers of the truth instead of its divine author. R1471:3
A temptation to the missionaries to receive homage for services. This is apt to come to all. If sacrifices were accepted it would of been a hypocrisy. R4369:2

Acts 14:14

Rent their clothes -- A token of extreme disapproval. R1471:6

Crying out -- Thereby setting a good example to the Lord's people when they are offered undue deference because of the truth. R3011:6

Barnabas and Paul did no more than their duty in resisting the homage as they did. R2151:1

Acts 14:15

Why do ye these things? -- They were prompt and emphatic in discouraging it. R1471:3, 2150:6

Peter reproved Cornelius from such worship. (Acts 10:26) R144:3*

Of like passions -- They were not infallible. Their weaknesses were not permitted to mar their work. R1526:3; F224

Imperfect, but keeping the "body under" (1 Cor. 9:27), in subjection to the new mind. (Rom. 7:23) R2221:5, 3011:5, 1884:6

The apostolic office was not conferred because of human perfection. F224

Let us take to heart the lesson of promptness in resisting the devil's baits for our weak points. R2151:1

Some of the Church naturally are more fallen than others. SM11:3

The term saint does not signify perfection. R2987:4

From these vanities -- Public teachers need especially to cultivate the grace of humility. R1471:6 They did not quote Scriptures, but spoke what the people could understand. R4369:3

Own ways -- Untaught, unrestrained. R4369:4

Their opportunity will come afterwards. R33:5*

Acts 14:17

Witness -- The Apostle made use of this experience for a discourse. R2151:12

Evidences of his constant care, giving occasion for the gladness and appreciation of life. R4369:4

God has witnesses when needed. R781:4*

Acts 14:18

With these sayings -- Of a great dispensational change having occurred; the Jewish age closing and the Gospel age opening. R1472:1

Only a brief extract of the discourse is given. R4369:4, 1472:1

Acts 14:19

Certain Jews -- Zealous as Paul had been in opposition to the message.

R4369:5

Persuaded the people -- That the missionaries were impostors, the Jews probably aided by the priest of Jupiter who could easily lead the ignorant people in any wrong course, either to make gods of men, or in an opposite direction. R3012:3

Having stoned Paul -- Who doubtless then remembered Stephen. R3012:4

The Lord will grant sufficient grace for us. R4369:6

Drew him out -- Dragged him out of the city. R4369:5, 3012:3

Acts 14:20

Disciples -- Some followers were made. R4369:5

Those that did hear and believe were very precious. R1472:1

He rose up -- Miraculously revived. R2151:2, 4369:5

God gives special favors in the hour of need. R2009:2

The Lord raised Paul up, that he might yet further bear witness to the truth. R1472:1

Such a man with such a spirit was a force for good wherever he went.

R4369:5

So with us; faith, courage, zeal, and determination will effect our ability to stand and withstand the difficulties of life, by the Lord's grace. R4369:6

God sometimes grants his "new creatures" special favors of an earthly sort in time of need, even though they do not ask for them. R2009:2, 3012:6

Came into the city -- In a very quiet manner, so as not to re-arouse the mob. R3012:6

He departed -- They did not stay to tantalize their persecutors and to invite a second stoning. (Matt. 10:23) R1472:4

To Derbe -- A distance of 35 miles. R3012:6

Paul wisely determined to do no more public work at Lystra, which would only bring needless persecution upon disciples new in the faith. R4369:5

Acts 14:21

Preached -- Paul's indomitable will, plus some supernatural strength, enabled his quick recovery. R4369:5

Had taught many -- Made many disciples. R4369:6

Returned again -- Braving the dangers of return by the same way they went, to encourage the disciples. R4369:6, 3013:2, 2151:2, 781:5

Acts 14:22

Confirming the souls -- In the faith and hope of the gospel, establishing them in the doctrine of Christ; to warn them against error and encourage them to steadfastness in persecution which would surely come. R1472:4

A necessary work for those called to holiness. R781:5

Much tribulation -- Willingly endured for the sake of the truth. R4637:1, 2151:5; Q718:1

"Worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory." (2 Cor. 4:17) R5696:4

Not that they would prosper in business and enter social circles, but "In the world ye shall have tribulation." (John 16:33) R4369:6, 5118:2, 5712:3, 199:4*

Because the world is traveling in the opposite direction to righteousness. R5218:2

The new nature can be developed, educated, crystallized, only through tests and fiery trials. R4326:1, 5817:6; CR215:5, 153:4; Q821:3

The way to glory must be a narrow way; and there must be something permitted to make it so. R4488:2, 5214:1, 5118:2

He that is not willing to have the Kingdom at such a cost is not worthy of the Kingdom. R4637:1

"All that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution." (2 Tim. 3:12) R5218:2, 5118:2

The painstaking "fine needlework" of Psalm 45:14. SM256:3

Well illustrated by the story of the emperor moth: saving from struggle is sometimes a mistaken kindness. F192

The difference between those who will get into the Kingdom through much tribulation and those of the Great Company who come through great tribulation, will be the way in which they have received the tribulation. CR153:4, 365:1, 52:6

If we have no trials we should learn patience in waiting for trials. Q715:4

Not all tribulation comes as part of the embroidery. SM256:3

Acts 14:23

They had ordained -- Greek, kirotoneo; elected by stretching out the hand. No brother should assume public duties in the Church, as leader, without being thus elected. F276, 278; R5940:1, 5807:6; Q515:1

Appointed or authorized. R5940:1, 1890:3

One who serves, distributes, dispenses the truth of God's Word. Q519:3

The Church at Antioch had ordained Paul and Barnabas as their representatives and paid their expense. R5940:4; Q521:3

The leading churches all claim for their bishops apostolic authority to appoint elders without stretching the hand. Q811:2

Elders -- Those older and more advanced in the knowledge of the truth who took general oversight of local congregations. R1523:5
Whose duty it was to take the oversight of the Lord's flock in their vicinity, to feed them with the truth, and guard them against the wolves in sheep's clothing. (Matt. 7:15) R1890:3, 1523:5
Includes evangelists, pastors, teachers, and prophets; public exponents. R5807:6; Q515:3
The Scriptural method of ordaining elders in all the churches is by congregational election, by hand vote. R5808:1

Acts 14:26

For the work -- The Antioch church did not ordain the Apostle Paul to be an Apostle, but to be their missionary; and he rendered reports to them. R5940:4; Q521:5
He traveled under auspices of Antioch Church with a letter of authorizations. R1720:2, 4369:6

Acts 14:27

Gathered the church -- Gave them a report of the work done as their representatives. R1957:4

Acts 15

Acts 15:1

Certain men -- Hebrews by birth. R4374:1
Certain Jews who attempted to Judaize the erstwhile Gentiles who chiefly constituted the Antioch church. R2158:2
From Judea -- Jerusalem, the headquarters of the Church. R4374:1
Taught the brethren -- That Gentiles, upon accepting Christ, should accept Judaism and the Mosaic Law. R3018:2
Except ye -- Gentile Christians. R4374:1
Be circumcised -- This Church at Antioch regarded this as contrary to the teachings of Barnabas and Paul, and as an infringement upon their Christian liberty. R1087:3*
Given to Abraham and his posterity as a sign by which they attested faith in the divine promises; obligatory upon every Jew who would maintain his relationship to the promises, and still obligatory upon that nation. R2158:1
A mark in the flesh observed for over eighteen centuries. R2158:1

Cannot be saved -- Claiming that circumcision would not save without Christ, neither would Christ's salvation be operative without circumcision. R4374:1

Acts 15:2

When therefore -- This was the same visit mentioned in Gal. 2:1. R1472:3
No small dissension -- Respecting the propriety of circumcision and the general observance of the Mosaic law on the part of those who were not Israelites by birth. R2158:2,3,6, 3018:2

A split in the Church seemed probable. R4374:1

Go up to Jerusalem -- A distance of about 300 miles. R1472:3

It was nearly twenty years after the day of Pentecost that the conference took place. R3018:1

Using "the spirit of a sound mind," (2 Tim. 1:17) they sent Paul and Barnabas as a committee. R4374:1

The Antioch brethren sent their two leading representatives to present before the Jerusalem Council the views which seemed to be the correct ones. R3018:2

To lay the matter before them and to bring back a report. R1728:1, 972:2

Apostles -- "Whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth shall be bound in heaven; and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven." (Matt. 16:19) R2374:1, 2158:5

Today, as we cannot refer questions to the living apostles, we must refer them to the recorded teaching of our Lord, and the apostles, seeking assistance in this amongst brethren who have the best knowledge and insight. R3018:3

About this question -- The question was a vital one; the error struck right at the foundation doctrine--the efficacy of the precious blood of Christ for salvation to all them that believe, whether Jews or Gentiles. R1472:2

That the church was in good spiritual health is evidenced by the fact that they were anxious to have the truth, whatever it might be. R2158:2

Acts 15:3

By the church -- Probably at the expense of the Church at Antioch. R1472:3, 1957:4

The congregation at Antioch sent forth two as their representatives. Paul and Barnabas returned and gave them a report of the work. R1957:4

Great joy -- They had the true Christian spirit, having largely lost the Jewish prejudice. R3018:4

The contention for the Mosaic Law and ceremonies implied no opposition to the Gentiles themselves. R3018:4

Acts 15:4

Were received -- Greek, "heartily welcomed." R3018:4, 2158:2

Acts 15:5

Sect -- Greek, airesis; Heresy. R1130:6

To circumcise -- This opened up the question at once, and led to the announcement that the settlement of this question was the very object of their visit. R2158:3

Law of Moses -- Our Lord gave no instructions regarding any of the commands of the Mosaic Law. R2158:3

Acts 15:6

Elders -- See comments under Acts 14:23

For to consider -- Greek, eidon; know or understand. A278; R837:3
The truth has nothing to lose by fairness, openness, and a reasonable moderation and the turning on of all light obtainable. R3018:3
The apostles and elders heard all that was to be said on the subject. R3018:6

Acts 15:7

Much disputing -- Among the Apostles there were differences. We should contend earnestly, at the same time striving to maintain unity of spirit in the bonds of peace, yet never sacrificing truth for either unity or peace. R937:2

When the question is an important one, as in this case, dispute, with force and yet with kindness, love and gentleness of word and manner, is most appropriate. R3018:6, 3019:1

A great examination of the question on all sides followed. R972:2

There was fullest liberty granted for as much dispute or debate, in a proper manner, as was necessary. R3018:6

Let us accord others differing from us the same reasonable liberty that we would like to have them accord to us. R3019:2

Peter -- One of the oldest of the disciples, and a man of strong character. R2158:3

A good while ago -- At the time the Lord promised me he would give me "The keys of the Kingdom of Heaven". (Matt. 16:19) R2657:4,6

Acts 15:9

Put no difference -- Peter called to their attention how God had taught him through the vision of clean and unclean beasts that he was not henceforth to call the Gentiles common or unclean. (Acts 10:28) R1472:6

Acts 15:10

To put a yoke -- Moses' Law R1728:2, 4373:3, 2158:3, 972:2
The Law condemned all who sought justification under it. R1872:2
Some insisted that all Gentile converts must be circumcised and thus become Jewish proselytes before becoming Christians. R1472:2
Why should they put it upon brethren to whom the Lord had never given it?
R4374:3

Acts 15:11

We -- Jews R1472:6, 4374:3
Even as they -- The Gentiles R1472:6
Faith in Christ the Redeemer was all that was necessary for justification, either for Jew or Gentile. R551:3
In some respects the Gentiles, free from the Law, held the superior position. R4374:3

Acts 15:13

James -- Our Lord's brother, the chairman of the meeting. R2158:4, 1472:6
James was our Lord's second cousin. R3003:2

Acts 15:14

Simeon -- Simon Peter, as recorded in verse 7. R1472:6
At the first -- This honor went first to the Jews and selected a "remnant," but when that nation proved unworthy of this "honor" it was turned to the Gentiles." R2377:1; SM90:1
Did visit -- Made a beginning to visit. R2124:3
The Gentiles -- Greek, ethnon; nations. R33:5*, 3732:3
After the expiration of the seventy weeks of years set apart for Israel. R5163:4
Since there was not a sufficient number in Israel ready to complete the predestinated number to be adopted. E177
As Moses married a Gentile wife, so in the interval between Christ's first and second advents he selects a wife from among the Gentiles--The Gospel Church. R1651:6, 181:5*
The reception of the Gentiles was not to make them Jews. R2158:4
To take out of them -- To gather out of them. R2377:1
The Church are a people called out from among the nations. R3732:3
During the Gospel age he has been selecting a household of sons to be joint-heirs with Jesus Christ. R1710:5; SM90:1
The real object of this Gospel Age is to preach the Gospel for a witness (Matt 24:14) and to prepare a Little Flock for the Kingdom. (Luke 12:32)
D169; R5586:5, 3130:6, 2861:4, 2798:3, 107:3*; OV222:6

The Gospel was not intended to convert the world, but to gather out of the world a "little flock." R3130:6, 3013:2, 2861:4, 1685:5; OV296:4; HG12:2, 188:3; NS190:2, 860:1

"A kind of first-fruits of his creatures." (James 1:18) R1324:4*

The saints are to be the judges with Christ. R5776:2

A people -- A peculiar people, a holy nation. R2377:1, 4213:5; NS321:5

Called the "fullness of the Gentiles." (Rom. 11:25) CR209:4

The overcoming Church, the Bride. A81, 92; R1685:5, 237:6*; OV223:1, 296:4; Q800:2

The kings and priests to reign with Christ. R107:3*

Which God has been calling and selecting from among mankind during this age for a purpose. R2538:6

For his name -- To bear the name of Christ. R4213:5, 3586:4, 2377:1, 107:3*

To be adopted into the divine family. NS268:2

To be joint-heirs with Jesus in the Kingdom--to be members of the seed of Abraham. R3937:3, 2157:3*, 2151:4; E177

To be united to Christ at his second advent and to receive his name. A92; 5594:2, 5185:2, 3586:4

The name of the Bridegroom, henceforth to be ours. R1820:6

The "Lamb's wife." (Rev. 21:9) R3937:3, 5594:2, 1685:5

"This is the name whereby he shall be called, the Lord our Righteousness;"

"And this is the name which she shall be called, the Lord our Righteousness." (Jer. 23:6; 33:16) HG275:4

The Church, members of the Body of Christ, the seed. R11:6, 4512:2

His bride, the elect church. NS111:3, 128:2

To complete the predestinated number of the elect 144,000. R3586:4, 4969:1

For the glorious purpose of making them his agents for the blessing of all mankind. R2538:6, 961:3, 827:6; NS321:6

God has a great work to be done, and is seeking a people who will do it. R5185:2

Who will confess their sins, will acknowledge that they themselves are not great. R5595:1

Acts 15:15

To this agree -- This is in harmony with prophecy. R11:6

Of the prophets -- James quotes the next two verses from Amos 9:11-12. R2357:6; HG161:3, 336:4

The apostles judged the mind of the Lord as read in his Word and providential leadings in harmony with his Word. R3251:3, 11:6; E276

Acts 15:16

After this -- After this people from the Gentiles has been taken out.

A81; R11:6

After spiritual Israel has been developed as the true seed of Abraham.
R2357:6; HG39:2

After the selection of "The Bride, the Lamb's wife," (Rev. 21:) he will come forth to bless all the families of the earth. HG342:3; OV223:1
After the gathering of his elect Church is accomplished in the harvest of the Gospel Age. B86; R1651:6, 384:5, 237:6*, 11:6

After the completion of this "Body" the Lord's favor would return to natural Israel. R4512:2; PT76:1

At the close of this Christian Age, the work of election is consummated, then God's free grace will be extended to all the remainder of mankind, through the selected class. Q788:2

This is a description of what will take place during the Millennium, and not of what we see about us today. R4321:6; PT32:T

We are living at the time when this prophecy is about to be fulfilled.
R3425:4

I will return -- After the completion of this "body" the Lord's favor will return to natural Israel. R4512:2, 2358:1, 384:5

During the presence of Jesus. R238:1*

Will build again -- Permanent establishment. C257

During the Gospel age Israel as a nation has borne no fruit, but when the Bride is taken out from the Gentiles they will receive favor. R127:3*

The Tabernacle -- The house, royalty or dominion. C257; A81; R384:5
The earthly dominion. A81

Restore the Jews to their own land. Q750:T

Jerusalem will become the capital city of the world. Q790:2

The reestablishment of God's kingdom in the world. R3425:4

Of David -- Of David's posterity, the Christ. C257

The recovery of natural Israel is about to take place under the re-establishment of God's Kingdom in the world--typically represented in King David, but to be actually established in the greater David--the "Beloved One." R3425:4

The ruins thereof -- The ruins of fleshly Israel. B86

The formerly temporary house or tabernacle of David, which was overthrown, and for many centuries has lain in the dust. A257

The restoration of the Jew to the Canaan land of promise is only a beginning of the work of restoring all nations and all things. (Zech. 12:7) R384:5

I will set it up -- After the establishment of Messiah's Kingdom. R5817:5
"And so all Israel shall be saved." (Rom. 11:26) B217

Acts 15:17

The residue of men -- All mankind, including the Gentiles. R3425:4

This blessing is to be brought to Israel in order that the rest of "men might seek after the Lord." HG336:4

This is why God will rebuild Israel. R384:5

Might -- During the Millennial Age. R33:2*, 3425:4

Seek after the Lord -- And have assistance rendered to them if they will. HG713:6

To be taught at the hands of the Heavenly Bridegroom and Bride, until "all shall know him from the least unto the greatest." (Jer 31:34) HG732:4

All the Gentiles -- Nations. R107:3* My name is called -- Who heartily and sincerely desire to come back into harmony with God as members of Christ's family. R5776:4

During the Millennium, the opportunity will be given to all to come into harmony with the Lord, of devoting themselves to his service. R5776:4

Doeth all these things -- During this Gospel age, selecting some to be joint-heirs with Jesus in the Kingdom. R3937:3

Acts 15:18

Known unto God -- All that has occurred since creation was foreknown to the Father and provided for. R4451:1

God has a due time for every feature of His plan, nothing is gone astray. NS458:3

Are all his works -- All creation is His charge, while saints are His peculiar care. NS458:4

All his purposes shall be accomplished (Isa. 55:11). "I change not." (Mal.3:6) R1267:4,5; E35; OV33:1; Q799:3

Every feature of God's plan was premeditated, forearranged; his fixed rules and principles are unchangeable. R4451:1

Acts 15:19

My sentence -- Through searching the Scriptures in the light of divine providence. E276

We trouble not them -- Gentiles received the spirit of adoption in uncircumcision, showing that faith in Christ is the only requisite to salvation. R1473:1

Acts 15:20

We write unto them -- Paul taught that for Gentile converts to practice Jewish Law ceremonies and rites would imply that they were trusting in those symbols for their salvation. F229; R1527:4

From things strangled -- To prevent becoming stumbling blocks to their Jewish brethren. R1473:1

The Jews did not eat anything strangled, because blood was a type or symbol of life. The apostles advised this, even though they stated there was nothing in the Law that was binding on the Gentiles (I Cor. 8:9) Q431:1

The eating of blood was forbidden, not only by the Jewish Law, but also before the Law was given. The same command was given to Noah. (Deut. 12:23; Gen. 9:4) R1473:1

Acts 15:21

For Moses -- Moses was the mediator of the Law Covenant between God and that nation. R5046:6, 1725:4

Whose writings were read. R1793:6

In every city -- James intimates that Judaism and the Law Covenant were very generally known throughout the world at that time. R1473:1

Acts 15:22

Chosen men -- The men were not a separate class from the brethren. R1087:5*

Judas and Silas -- That they might have the matter in written and in oral testimony. R4374:4, 3019:3, 1473:4

Acts 15:23

They wrote letters -- The result of the conference was expressed by letter to the various churches. R551:3

The council decided and sent a written message to the confused Gentile believers. R1728:2, 972:3

That they might have the matter in written and in oral testimony. R4374:4

Apostles -- Are represented as a class apart from others of the Church, indicating the distinctness of their office. R1473:4

All were subject to the same regulations instituted by the apostles. Their earnest endeavor was to keep "the unity of the faith in the bonds of peace." (Eph. 4:3) R1895:4

Elders -- Those of largest experience and development. R1473:4

Whose duty it was to take the oversight of the Lord's flock in their vicinity, to feed them with the truth, to guard against the wolves in sheep's clothing. (Matt. 7:15) R1890:3, 1523:5

See also comments under Acts 14:23.

Brethren -- Indicating Christian fellowship. R1473:4

Send greeting -- It is a pleasant observation that, even with their limited means of communication, whenever there was opportunity the Churches in one place were prompt to send Christian greetings and benedictions to those in other places. R1895:4

Acts 15:24

Went out from us -- From here. R1728:2, 972:3

Subverting -- Turned from the truth by error. R276:6

Destroying your faith. R1728:2, 972:3

Your souls -- Beings, persons. R205:3, 276:6

No such commandment -- The disquieting teachings had not been authorized by the apostles at Jerusalem. R4374:4, 2158:5, 1087:3*

Acts 15:26

Hazarded their lives -- Greek, psuche; souls, beings. E337

Acts 15:28

To the holy Ghost -- Their decision was the mind of the Lord, the Spirit of the Lord, ascertained through searching the Scriptures in the light of divine providence. E275, 276; R372:6

The apostles had special gifts of the Spirit which guided them in the understanding of the Lord's will. R2158:5

And to us -- The decision found a hearty response in the hearts of the apostles and elders. R3019:3

Their decision was absolutely right. HG7326:5 No greater burden -- They determined not to put upon them the yoke of the Law which they as Jews had been unable to keep. R1732:1, 974:1

That they had never been under the Jewish Law Covenant. F229

They rejoiced that the holy Spirit had not put the bondage of the law upon the Gentile convert. R2158:5

Necessary things -- The apostles understood which things of the Jewish Law were binding upon the Church and which not binding. HG736:5; SM463:T
Even these suggestions were given as advice, and not so much of the Mosaic Law. R1728:2, 4374:4, 972:3; Q431:T

Acts 15:29

That ye abstain -- The answer ignored every feature of the law, except four points. R2158:6

Even though not under the Jewish Law Covenant. R1527:4

Meats -- Sacrifices. R4374:4, 2158:6

Offered to idols -- Which might appear to be giving sanction to idol worship, which at that time had a great deal of sensuality connected with it. R3019:4, 4374:4

Not a prohibition against animal food. R3098:3

From blood -- The eating of blood was forbidden, not only by Jewish Law, but also before the Law was given. (Gen. 9:4) R1473:1, 3019:4

"The life is in the blood." (Lev. 17:14) R2159:4

A symbol of life. R4374:5, 3019:4

For the Jew to partake would imply responsibility for the life taken; the blood typically representing the sin-offering. R4374:5

The Jewish method of bleeding animals to death, extracted the blood.
R2159:1

The use of blood was more common then than now. R3019:4

Abstinence has probably also a sanitary reason. R2159:1, 4374:5

Things strangled -- In which the blood would remain, which would imply the eating of blood. R3019:4, 2159:1, 2158:6

Animals taken in traps whose blood was not drained. R4374:5

By eating such things they might become stumbling blocks to their Jewish brethren. (1 Cor. 8:9) R1473:1

Fornication -- Very common at that time amongst the Gentiles, sometimes even a part of their religious service. R2159:4

Greek signifying "harlotry." R4374:6

All the requirements of the Law are included in the one law of love of the new creation. R4374:6

Ye shall do well -- You will find these recommendations profitable to you as followers of the Lord. R4374:4

The apostles did not say a word about the ten commandments. It was evidently taken for granted that the law of love was sufficient. R1473:4

It was not intimated that abstinence from these things would make them Christians. R4374:4

Acts 15:31

They rejoiced -- This wise course brought its good results; harmony, unity of spirit prevailed. R4375:1

Similarly today, where honesty of heart prevails, schisms, divisions, should be unknown. R4375:1

We should not carry disputes on matters not fundamental, to the length of rupture. R3019:5

For the consolation -- They accepted the apostolic rulings as inspired and authoritative. R2276:5

With peace and joy. R3019:5

Acts 15:32

Being prophets -- Public speakers. F246; R3019:5

Acts 15:35

Teaching -- Accomplished in a more private manner--in a Bible class or in private conversation. F256

And preaching -- Discoursing in public. Public work prospers best when it is ably supplemented by the more private expounding of the deep things of God, to a smaller company. F256

Acts 15:36

Go again -- Confirming the souls of the disciples and confirming the Churches. R781:5

Acts 15:37

And Barnabas -- Who should have recognized the apostleship of Paul and showed great deference to his judgment. R1546:1

Determined -- Whether Paul approved or not. R1546:1

He placed himself as the superior and director. R1546:1

Barnabas was rather the loser by not acquiescing with the Apostle Paul's view of the matter. R2175:3

He lost his opportunity, which, seemingly, he failed to appreciate because pride raised up a little root of bitterness. R1546:2

John...Mark -- Cousin of Barnabas and writer of the Gospel of Mark. R2175:3

Nephew to Barnabas. R4399:1

Acts 15:38

Paul thought not good -- Mark forsook the service of the ministering brethren in their first tour, and Paul evidently thought that up to this time Mark had not properly recognized his misconduct. R2175:3

Acts 15:39

Contention was so sharp -- Both were positive in their mental decisions on the subject. R1546:1

They did not have a quarrel. It was a sharp discussion in which each had a right to act according to his own judgment of the Lord's will. R2175:3

They departed asunder -- Paul had to part from the man to whom he owed more than to any other; and Barnabas was separated from the grandest spirit of the age. They never met again. R2175:4

Paul's conduct was not the result of any unkind feeling toward either Barnabas or Mark. Subsequently he mentions Barnabas most kindly; and farther on we find Mark one of Paul's associates in the work. R2175:3

Acts 15:40

Silas -- Sylvanus. R4399:1, 2175:5

Acts 15:41

Confirming the churches -- That had been previously established. R1545:3

Acts 16

Acts 16:1

He -- "He" at the beginning of Paul's journey; "they" after Silas and Timothy joined him at Lystra; and "we" after Luke, the historian, also joined the company at Troas. R3022:1

Timotheus -- Timothy, about 21 years of age. R3022:1

Well trained in the Scriptures by his mother and grandmother. (2 Tim. 1:5) R4399:2

Timothy was a Jew, because his mother was a Jewess. F226; R1526:4

A certain woman -- According to the Greek text, apparently a widow. R3022:1

Acts 16:2

Was well reported -- Respecting character, ability, etc. R1720:3

Acts 16:3

And circumcised him -- Any Jew not circumcised forfeited his rights in the Abrahamic promise. R2175:5

This was not necessary to Timothy's salvation, but was advisable, that he might have more influence among the Jews; and it was proper because his mother was a Jewess. F226, 227; R3022:3, 2175:5

A national custom amongst the Jews which began before the Law of Moses, and was continued after Christ made an end of the Law, nailing it to his cross. (Col. 2:14) R1526:4, 3022:2, 2175:5; F226

A Jew, trusting in Christ, could properly enough conform to this national custom, established before the Law. R2175:5 "For in Jesus Christ neither circumcision availeth anything, nor uncircumcision; but faith which worketh by love." (Gal. 5:6) R3022:2

Were forbidden -- How this was communicated we are not informed. R2175:6, 373:1; E276

Possibly by unfavorable circumstances, or a vision. R373:1, E276

Of the Holy Ghost -- Was not the divine will at that time. R1545:3, 3022:4

The holy influence or power by which the will of the Father and the Son are brought to the attention of the consecrated. E276

This text in no way indicates that the holy Spirit is a person. R373:1; E276

In Asia -- Lesser Asia, the region in which subsequently the "seven churches of Asia" were located. (Rev. 1:4,11) R3022:4

Acts 16:7

Bithynia -- A province of Asia Minor. R1545:3

Suffered them not -- Again hindered their proposed plans, indicating the Lord's very particular supervision over his work. R3022:5, 4399:2, 2397:1*
Paul's moment of uncertainty was the Lord's opportunity for directing him. R4399:2

Acts 16:9

A vision appeared -- Greek, horama; occurs twelve times in the New Testament, and on every occasion the context shows that the thing seen is not real, but is a vision. R1442:5*

God specially directed him in a dream. R2691:3

More than a mere mental impression E276

One of the Spirit's way of leading them. R373:1

Paul's course was one that was being specially directed, guided and supervised by the Lord. R1546:1

Into Macedonia -- Lies just north of Greece. R2176:1, 1545:3

Instead of sending it northward and eastward to Asiatic Russia, India and China, or southward to Egypt and all Africa, the Lord specially guided his truth northwestward into Europe, and eventually to America. R2175:6, 3043:6
The most enlightened and cultured people of the then civilized world. R2691:3, 4399:3, 2176:1, 1545:6

The intermingling of peoples, produced mental activity and acuteness favorable to the consideration and appreciation of the Gospel. R1545:5

Paul accepted this as of divine leading, and promptly began the journey which took him into Europe. R4399:2

There beginning the preaching of the Gospel in Europe. R2397:1*, 3043:6

Acts 16:10

Into Macedonia -- It is supposed that about this time Luke, the physician, became attached to Paul's company. R4399:3

To the Greeks, who were recognized as foremost in the world in literature and the arts. R4399:3

Assuredly gathering -- These various dealings show us the methods by which God taught and led in those days. E277

Called us for to preach -- There is a due time connected with every feature of the divine plan. R4399:2

An evidence of God's supervision of all the interests of his church. R4399:2

Philippi -- One of the chief cities of Macedonia. R4399:3

Appears to have been the first place in Greece for preaching of the good tidings in Europe. R4399:3, 5810:1, 3122:2, 2069:4

Chief city -- Greek, protos; signifies best. R331:6

Acts 16:13

Out of the city -- There was no synagogue in Philippi. R4399:4, 3022:6
Until a few years ago it was necessary for all Protestants in Rome to meet outside the city. R3122:2

By a river side -- Probably in a temporary shed, the numbers being insufficient to erect a synagogue. R3022:6

Prayer -- They prayed audibly. It is not reasonable to suppose that they gathered for prayer and that each then prayed privately and secretly. R2023:3

Is absolutely indispensable to Christian life. It means, not only a living faith, but a growing faith. R2692:1

Was wont to be made -- It was a prayer meeting principally, and place of divine fellowship. R4399:4, 2176:4

Not having the facilities of a synagogue they probably had not Scripture parchments, and hence no reading of the Law, but merely prayer and worship. R4399:4

It was the wisdom from above, the holy Spirit, which guided the Apostle Paul to seek out those assembled at such a place. E688

And spake unto -- The apostle and companions sought for some who worshipped God, who hoped for the Kingdom. R4399:3

Acts 16:14

Lydia -- It is presumed that Lydia was well-to-do in this world's goods, as well as rich toward God in faith. R3023:2, 4399:5

Her house became the center of Christian work in the city of Philippi. R1556:2

A seller of purple -- Dyes were much more expensive in olden times than now and the secret knowledge of how to make them was turned to profit. R4399:5, 3023:2

Of Thyatira -- Of the very district (Asia Minor) into which the Apostle was not permitted to enter and preach. R3023:2

The Lord opened -- One whose heart was in the right condition to receive the message. R4399:5

"Then opened he their understanding, that they might understand the Scriptures." (Luke 24:45) R1322:4

None are ready for the truth unless the Lord has prepared their hearts. R3023:4

Which were spoken -- The good tidings of the sacrifice of Jesus, his death, resurrection and second coming in power and great glory and the invitation to joint-heirship with him. R4399:5

The hopes of Israel and the fulfillment in Jesus the Messiah. R2176:4

Acts 16:15

She was baptized -- Prompt to obey in full consecration and prompt to symbolize that consecration in water baptism. R4399:5

Baptism was the custom of all the apostles, not merely with the Jews, but also with the Gentiles. F448; R1539:3; NS54:3

And her household -- Implies that Lydia had adult children. R4399:6

Lydia was possibly a widow, since her husband is not mentioned. R4399:6

It is not always that religious parents have religiously inclined children. R4399:5

To the Lord -- And thus worthy to entertain his ministers. R1546:4, 3023:4, 2176:4

Come into my house -- As she was a widow, it was her right, without conference with anybody, to invite the Apostle and his companions to share the hospitality of her home. R4399:6

She seems to have realized that instead of honoring them, she was honoring herself and her home by having such guests. R4399:6

Her sole desire was to serve the Lord, and she saw the opportunity for this in rendering service to his representatives. R3023:5

Constrained us -- Implies that the Apostle was not ready to force himself upon anybody. R4399:6

Gradually drawn or led to accept her invitation. R4400:1

Acts 16:16

A certain damsel -- Known in Philippi as a Pythoness, or Sibyl--a fortune teller. She was a slave girl possessed by an evil spirit. R5907:3, 4400:1, 3122:3

Possessed -- Obsessed. R4400:1, 2173:2

With a spirit -- Greek, pneuma; invisible power through fellowship with fallen spirit beings. E313

It was a spirit which possessed and used her body, an evil spirit unfit to be tolerated there. R2171:5, 5907:3, 4400:1, 2181:6; HG725:6

Of divination -- The divination practiced by the Witch of Endor (1 Sam. 28:7-14) was of the same nature and through the same agency. R755:4*, 2172:1

The fallen angels, demons, have manifested their power all down through the ages, obsessing people, impersonation the dead, and otherwise deceiving mankind. Q804:3

God warns us against having anything to do with these occult powers. R5800:1

The instruction to Israel was very explicit; they should not have any communion with any who had occult powers. HG726:1

Masters -- Apparently a syndicate of influential men. R5907:6, 4400:1, 2182:1

Much gain -- Her affliction was a source of gain to her owners. R1556:3
Wealth always has been a power. R2182:1

Soothsaying -- Fortune telling. SM549:1; R5907:6, 4400:1, 3122:3
Giving intelligence of things that were lost, telling fortunes, etc.
R4400:1, 5907:3

Acts 16:17

Followed -- Satanic influence operated toward the work of Paul and Silas. R3541:2

And cried -- Possibly in a jesting voice, so as to indicate sarcasm and ridicule. R3122:3

Are the servants -- The girl did not know them, but the evil spirits did. R4400:2, 5908:1

Way of salvation -- As the fallen angels then confessed the truth, so now they are willing to confess the truth or any other doctrine if thereby they can gain power over the inquirer. R2180:1, 2014:1

Some of the fallen angels seemed desirous of spreading the glad tidings. R1680:1

Satan seeks to draw attention from the truth by counterfeiting it and using his counterfeit as a snare to mislead by erroneous teachings using the light as a trap and by disparaging the facts of the genuine. R867:5
"The devils also believe, and tremble." (James 2:19) And they would fain call some of us Spiritualists, to seek to offset the value and effect of our Bible teaching, by claiming us as one with themselves. R267:4, 2171:6

Acts 16:18

Being grieved -- That it should come from such a source. R5908:1, 4400:2, 3309:4

Paul was unwilling to receive testimony of the possessed woman. R3309:4

The Lord's people should resent the service of any who do not give evidence of heart union with the Lord. R3309:4

He seeketh not the evil one nor fallen angels nor evil men or women to be heralds of the good tidings. R3309:4

Any of the fallen angels who would have respect for God and for the principles of righteousness would not seek to obsess humanity. R5908:1

Said to the spirit -- The evil spirit being possessing the woman. E313; R2173:2

Notice the personality and intelligence attributed to these demons. R2171:6; HG725:5

These demons never denied their own identity. F625

Satan. R266:1

Paul refused to allow a young woman medium to proclaim him and Silas as servants of God--even though it was complimentary. R4969:6

I command thee -- Addressing the evil spirit; he said not a word to the young woman, assuming that she was not accountable. R4400:4, 5908:2

The power to cast them out was conferred upon the twelve apostles. R2173:2

The power of conferring those gifts was vested in the apostles, and in them only; hence they did "vanish away" (1 Cor. 13:8) when the apostles died. R1998:3

Come out of her -- And forthwith her power to foretell events was at an end. SM549:1

The Lord does not desire the testimony of devils: "Unto the wicked God saith, What hast thou to do to declare my statutes." (Psa. 50:16-17)

R3727:6, 3309:5

In cases where other assistance to an entrapped brother fail, we advise the exorcising of the evil spirit in the name of the Lord. R5355:1

Acts 16:19

Their gains was gone -- Their pocket-books were touched. R4400:4

Paul -- They could not legally attack the apostles, but they could have revenge and hence raised a riot. R4400:4, 5908

And Silas -- Whose full name was Silvanus. R2175:5

A worthy companion to the noble Paul. R4407:3

Market-place -- The public square, where trials were conducted and sentences imposed. R2182:2, 4400:4

Greek, agora, root of agorazo, elsewhere translated "to redeem." E429

Unto the rulers -- As soon as the world perceives that truth and righteousness are inimical to their earthly interests, the opposition becomes intense. R3122:6

Acts 16:20

Unto the magistrates -- They were falsely accused before the magistrates. R1556:3

Trouble our city -- This charge was false, as the teaching was done outside the city. R3123:1

Acts 16:22

Rose up together -- The Lord permitted all this. R4400:4, 2181:6

Magistrates -- They knew not that the evil spirits had to do with the arousing of the riot. R4400:5, 5908:4

Rent off their clothes -- As an indication of their distress and dissatisfaction that such a disturbance should be brought to their city.

R4400:4

Commanded to beat -- Presumably with rods. R4400:5, 5908:4, 3123:1
Thinking that the men against whom the populace would thus rise up must be guilty of something. R4400:4
Without even an opportunity to appeal for their rights as Roman citizens. R14556:3

Acts 16:23

Laid many stripes -- Received as a cost of their discipleship. R2076:3
The sufferings of the self-sacrificing class are for godliness, for righteousness sake. R1699:5
Such sufferings are accompanied by a joy and peace which make them, however severe, to appear but "light afflictions" and "but for a moment." (2 Cor. 4:17) R1699:5, 4592:4
Into prison -- It must have been, like other prisons of that time, a most unhealthful and disagreeable dungeon. R4406:2
The beating and imprisoning of them was merely to satisfy the public clamor. R4407:4, 5908:4
Permitted of God for contrasting the spirit of the truth with the spirit of error. R2181:6

Acts 16:24

Fast in the stocks -- Which were so constructed as to spread the limbs widely and make any movement very painful. R3123:2
The apostles surely did not act like lords over God's heritage. (1 Pet. 5:3) F231

Acts 16:25

And at midnight -- "He giveth songs in the night." (Job 35:10) R3123:3
Prayed -- "Ask, and ye shall receive, that your joy may be full." (John 16:24) R5382:1
Sang praises -- With feet in stocks and backs bleeding, they could rejoice in tribulation. R5758:4, 2182:4, 2076:3, 1556:3; Q613:2
Probably the first time hymns to God had ever risen from that prison. R4406:3, 2182:3
Thankfulness must be mixed with our songs of praise and prayers; it must fill our hearts to enable us to render faithful and efficient service to our Lord. R2076:3, 4592:4
While the flesh suffers, the spirit should rejoice always. (Phil. 4:4) Q613:2, 414:2; R5908:5
Heathen religions have holy books, and prayers, but no singing of hymns in worship. R2182:3, 4406:3

Their trying experiences were but "light afflictions" which would work out for them a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory. (2 Cor. 4:17) R4406:3

We must learn similar lessons of faith in the school of Christ. We must learn to rejoice in retribution as in prosperity. R5908:5

Acts 16:26

Great earthquake -- An earthquake is out of the ordinary course of his providences; but the case was an extraordinary one. R2182:6
An earthquake shock jarred the walls and loosed the staples of the chains whereby they were bound. R4406:6

Bonds were loosed -- It is not always that God interferes to liberate his persecuted saints. R1556:3
Their release was quickly and wonderfully accomplished when God saw fit to manifest his power. R1556:6

Acts 16:28

Do thyself no harm -- There was no vindictiveness in these abused servants: they were ready immediately to bless their persecutors. R1556:6
We are all here -- The jailer was convinced that these missionaries committed to his care were remarkable men--not ordinary criminals. R4406:6

Acts 16:29

Came trembling -- The manifestation of the spirit of forgiving love was the best sermon they could have preached to the jailer. R1556:6

Acts 16:30

Brought them out -- Presumably, into his own living quarters in the prison. He attended to their comfort and meantime heard from them something respecting their mission. R4406:6
What must I do -- Convicted of sin, he longed for a realization of forgiveness of his own sins and a reconciliation with his Creator. R4406:6
To be saved -- From sin, death and unrest of heart and mind. There are crises in the lives of men when one word will be more potent than a thousand words at another time, under different circumstances. R3124:1, 3123:5
With the great salvation which Paul and Silas preached. R1556:6
To come into relationship with God. R4407:1
His conduct indicated genuine repentance. R1556:6

Acts 16:31

They said, believe -- Implying a character consistent with the faith.

R3114:2

True belief must be acted upon. R5423:4, 2183:1

Make a full consecration of your life to God. R5133:6, 5423:4, 3066:3, 2183:4

Recognize that we are sinners under Adamic sentence, then by faith accept Jesus as Redeemer of Adam and his posterity. SM429:2

Whoever really believes will find that the conditions are very easy in comparison with the great reward. R5423:5

This implies a mental development capable of belief beyond that which infants possess. OV241:1

Thou shalt be saved -- An unequivocal promise of actual and permanent salvation to every individual who believes--heartily accepts. R1437:3

The grand outcome of the ransom sacrifice will be the Kingdom of God on earth. SM429:2

Acts 16:32

Spake unto him -- Explaining the divine plan of atonement by the death of Jesus, the just for the unjust, the resurrection processes, and the divine call now to joint-heirship with Jesus. R4407:1

Acts 16:33

And was baptized -- Symbolizing death to the world and to sin and to self, and a desire to walk in newness of life. R4407:1

Which our Lord and his apostles practiced and enjoined upon all followers. R1539:3

It was not in a river, but in a bath or some convenient arrangement in the prison. R1544:3, 1541:2

Acts 16:34

Believing in God -- The truth-seed sank into good soil. R4407:1

Acts 16:37

Beaten us openly -- The beating and imprisonment was merely to satisfy public clamor. R4407:4

Being Romans -- Paul more than once appealed to the law for justice and protection from his enemies. R954:3*

Fetch us out -- They were Roman citizens and had been unjustly dealt with and would have to be treated as would show they had done no wrong. This would avoid leaving a reproach upon the faith at Philippi. R4407:4

Seen the brethren -- The Lord's jewels. (Mal. 3:17) R4407:6

Comforted them -- They recounted the joy they had experienced in suffering for Christ's sake. R4407:6

And departed -- They did not demand that they be given legal protection in the exercise of their liberties. 4407:5

They acted upon Jesus' counsel, "If they persecute you in one city, flee to another." (Matt. 10:23) R4407:5

Acts 17

Acts 17:1

Amphipolis and Apollonia -- Two cities, where apparently they found no opening for their message. R4407:3

To Thessalonica -- A journey of about 100 miles to the southwest from Philippi. R4407:3

Two of St. Paul's epistles were addressed to the Christians of that city. R4407:3

The largest commercial city of that district, Macedonia. R3130:1

The capital of Macedonia. R2183:1

A synagogue -- They were seeking cities where there were considerable numbers of Jews; knowing they would be best prepared to understand and accept the Gospel. R2183:1

The Jewish synagogues were ostensibly conducted on a liberal plane, anyone of reasonable ability being free there to show what he could of the teaching of the Scriptures. R3130:2 17:2

As his manner was -- The Apostle's manner was not that of a "ranter" but of a logical and connected reasoner. R2183:2, 3130:6

In harmony with their usual custom, they attended worship there. R5913:1, 4407:6

So he also reasoned at Corinth (Acts 18:4), again at Ephesus (Acts 18:19), and so before Felix (Acts 24:25). R653:4

Three sabbath days -- Were all that the Jews as a whole could endure. R3130:6

Reasoned -- In the nature of a dialogue, according to the Greek. R3130:2, 5913;1, 4408:1

Out of the Scriptures -- Opening them before their minds gradually. R3130:4

This method of discussion was usual with the Jews, but they needed just what the Lord sent them--someone to explain the Scriptures. R4408:1
So today, a Berean Study should have a wise and intelligent leader of humble mind, calling attention to the truth through the Lord's channels.
R4408:1

Acts 17:3

Opening -- Carries the thought that these Scriptures had been closed previously. R3130:3

Must needs -- Before he could be the King promised. R4408:2

Have suffered -- Death; the Jews knew of the Scriptures which referred to his sufferings, but ignored them and grasped only those which referred to our Lord's Millennial reign of glory, honor and power. R4408:2

Acts 17:4

Believed -- The "wheat" amongst the Jews in Thessalonica must be separated from the "chaff" class, as elsewhere. (Matt. 3:12) R4408:3

Consorted -- Associated. R2183:3

Devout Greeks -- Who had been feeling after God and who probably realized that there was more true religion with the Jew than elsewhere.
R3130:4

Of the chief women -- Became followers of Christ. R3130:4

Acts 17:5

Which believed not -- Were not in proper condition of heart to receive the truth. R2183:4

Many seem to receive the truth not in the love of it; but rather in the love of controversy or in curiosity. R2183:6

Wherever the true Gospel went, the result was a division; and the same is true today. R2183:2

Moved with envy -- They became jealous of the success achieved by these strangers. R4408:3, 2183:4

Similarly today, some will be stirred up to antagonism, bitter envyings, jealousies, etc. R3130:4

They realized there was a conflict between Judaism and Christianity, and wherever the two come in contact there could be naught else than a clash and conflict. R4408:5

The spirit of compromise with error is the most subtle and dangerous spirit encountered by those who are called to forsake all and follow Christ. R2183:3

Lewd fellows -- Having no truthful argument, the Jews resorted to Satan's usual tactics of misrepresentation, slander, arousing prejudice, hatred, malice, etc. R4408:3

The baser sort -- Hoodlums. R2183:4

"Roughs and toughs." R3130:6

House of Jason -- With whom the missionaries were lodging. R4408:3, 2183:4

Acts 17:6

Jason -- A prominent believer. R3130:6

Upside down -- Wherever Judaism and Christianity come in contact, there would be naught else than a clash and conflict, and one or the other would be turned upside down. R4408:5

Whenever truth comes to any who have error and pride mingled with worldly religion, it becomes a rebuke to them. R4813:

The charges were inciting to anarchy and treason. R3131:2, 2183:5

It was the work of the spirit of truth. R2183:5

They preached the same Gospel which made a disturbance everywhere. R1633:4

Acts 17:7

Another king -- They are traitors to this government and its honorable Emperor Caesar, for they teach another King called Jesus. R4408:4, 3131:2, 2183:5

One Jesus -- The sum of Paul's argument was, "This Jesus, whom I preach unto you, is the Messiah." R4408:3

Acts 17:8

Troubled the people -- Who feared that the riot which had occurred might cause the Romans to take away some of the liberties of the city. R3131:4

And the rulers -- Who were in danger of being called to account unless they took active measures to suppress anything resembling treason. R3131:4

Acts 17:10

Sent away Paul -- "When they persecute you in one city flee ye into another." (Matt. 10:23) R2183:5

By night -- Quietly, secretly. R4408:6

Berea -- Sixty miles west of Thessalonica. R2183:6, 3131:5

Acts 17:11

These -- Applies specially to the Jews at Berea. R2183:6

They were but a little class, yet their faithfulness to God's Word caused them to be known as Berean Bible Students. PD77/90

Were more noble -- Of nobler birth and more reasonable mind. R3131:6, 5913:3

It applies specially to the Jews at that place. R2183:6
True nobility implies reasonableness, as distinguished from prejudice.
R5913:4

Readiness of mind -- Our ability to run the race set before us in the Gospel will be in proportion as we shall be obedient to the divine counsel. F729

And searched -- Accepting nothing with blank, unquestioning minds. F232
Proving even the teachings of the apostles. F245; D66, 161

They examined the Scriptures to see how well the Apostle's arguments were supported by the testimony of the law and the prophets. R5913:5

To know the will, the counsel of God. R2240:6

It is our duty as Christians individually to prove all things we accept.

"To the law and to the testimony; if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them." (Isa. 8:20) D66, 161;
HG717:3; R2240:6

A Berean study is a study by those who have the Berean spirit to search to know the truth of the matter before them, those who want to investigate with an honest heart. Q688:5

The attitude of true consecration is to know the Father's will; this implies being Bible Students, like the Bereans. R5375:6

The Scriptures -- The promise of being "filled with the Spirit" (Eph. 5:18) is not to those who merely possess the Word of God, but is to those who search it earnestly, seeking to understand it. E205

"We have a more sure word of prophecy, to which we do well that we take heed." (2 Pet. 1:19) E205

There was always an appeal to Old Testament Scriptures R434:5

We should have a judgment and a conviction respecting the divine Word, but it should not be so unreasonable a one as would hinder us from receiving a further knowledge from the same source. R4408:6, 5913:5

Daily -- Our memories are treacherous; if we are not imbibing the Word in some form, we are apt to lose valuable connecting links. R4409:2

Not merely on the Sabbath. R5913:5, 3131:6

Whether those things were so -- Whether or not their presentations fully accord with both the letter and spirit of the Word. F245

To see how well the Apostle's arguments were supported by the testimony of the law and the prophets. R3131:6, 2184:1

Prove it by the only correct and divinely authorized standard--God's own Word. A348

Having been once convinced, we should not be easily turned aside from a properly grounded faith. R5913:5

Acts 17:14

Abode there still -- Were left behind, to strengthen and encourage the believers, whose faith already had been established. R3138:3, 2190:1

Acts 17:15

Athens -- Famed for its literary and artistic genius, where Homer sang, Socrates, Plato and Aristotle philosophized, Solon promulgated his famous code of laws, and Demosthenes held his audiences spell-bound with his eloquence. R1557:1

Socrates, Plato, Aristotle, Demosthenes, Sophocles, Aristides, Phidias, Zeno, Epicurus, Xenophon and Themistocles, still of world-wide renown, were sons of this famous city. R2190:2

Not a commercial or manufacturing city R2190:2

Then the center of the world's culture, intelligence and worldly wisdom. R4409:2

The capital of the world in science, art, theology and schools of general instruction. R3138:3, 4409:3

They departed -- While not fleeing persecution in the ordinary sense; let us be ready to move when persecution may seem to indicate service in some other field of labor. (Matt. 10:23) R4409:4

Acts 17:16

His spirit -- Greek, pneuma; mind, feelings. E312

Was stirred -- As he beheld so intelligent a city utterly ignorant of the true God. R4409:3

Idolatry -- Many cultured minds have idols of selfishness, passions, earthly ambitions and love of falsehoods, to such an extent as to reject the sublime testimony of the Gospel. R2191:4

Acts 17:17

Disputed -- The thought of the original rather signifies "conversed" or "reasoned." R4409:3

In the market -- With the numerous students and others who gathered there. R3138:5

There were numbers in the market every day, so Paul preached there on other than the Sabbath day. HG584:4*

Acts 17:18

Certain philosophers -- This new philosophy soon attracted the inquiring minds of many of the two most distinguished schools of Greek philosophy--the Stoics and the Epicureans. R1557:2

This babbler -- Seed-picker; one who has picked up some seeds of thought from the great teachers and is setting them forth as his own. R3138:6
Implying that there was neither reason nor sense in his presentation.

R4409:3

Our Lord and his prophets and apostles were all accounted fools and cranks; and that same worldly climate will continue to the end of this age. R1873:1

Of strange gods -- Greek, daimonion; should be rendered demons. E70
A crime in Athens, it being held that they already had them in plenty, and to admit that any one could present a new god would be an insult to their learning. R3138:6

Preached unto them Jesus -- As the Redeemer of mankind from sin and death. R4792:3

The anointed Head of the spiritual Seed. R2580:4

And the resurrection -- With the Greek article showing emphasis and indicating the first, special or spiritual resurrection. R1512:1,2

Throughout the Scriptures the whole theme of salvation is "Jesus and the resurrection." NS234:4

There is no hope of a future life without a resurrection, and no hope of a resurrection except in Jesus--that he paid the death penalty. R2618:1

Jesus and the resurrection are indissolubly united. NS210:5

"As by a man (Adam) came death, so also by a man (the man Christ Jesus) comes the resurrection of the dead." (1 Cor. 15:21) R4792:2

"To proclaim liberty to the captives, and the opening of the prison to them that are bound"; (Isa. 61:1) "To bring out the prisoners from the prison, and them that sit in darkness out of the prison house." (Isa.

42:7) R4793:2, 2580:4

The grand result of that redemptive work. R4792:3

Faith in a resurrection is an integral and essential part of Scriptural doctrine; the only hope, the blessed hope, the consistent hope. R4791:1,6

A re-vitalizing or re-creation from the dead; but its everlasting continuance depends only upon obedience. R1642:5

Jesus' resurrection became the assurance of the justification of all who obey him. R4793:1

Only as we have confidence in God's Word could we exercise a faith in such a stupendous miracle. R4794:5

None but an infinite being could claim the power to reproduce the very thoughts of the billions of mankind who have died. R4794:5

Whoever holds that there is no death, cannot consistently believe in the resurrection of the dead. R4791:3

Satan's theory makes of the resurrection a curse. R4792:2

Many ministers merely mean an eventual resurrection of the body, to be reinhabited by the spirit which formerly parted in death. R4791:3

We have serious reason to doubt that a belief in the resurrection of the dead prevails amongst Christians to any considerable extent. R4791:1

The leading lights of Christendom today repudiate Jesus as Redeemer and the resurrection. R4792:3

Acts 17:19

Unto Areopagus -- The Council of the Areopagites, composed of the teachers of the various schools of learning, and at that time reputedly the wisest men in the world, invested with power to condemn to death any teacher of strange Gods. R3138:3,6

Acts 17:21

Hear some new thing -- In our day there are spiritual dyspeptics who eat and work not and manifest a greater eagerness for new ideas than to make good use of what they have already. R23:5*

Acts 17:22

Then Paul stood -- With his remarkable talent, learning, the spirit of the Lord, of a sound mind, of divine revelation. R3138:3

Mars hill -- Secured a hearing before the Athenian Council of the Areopagites. R3138:3, 2190:3, 1556:2

Where the supreme court of Athens convened; where Demosthenes and other eloquent orators had spoken. R1557:2

Probably in the great structure known as the Parthenon. R4409:5

Ye men of Athens -- The address usual with all Greek orators. R1557:4

Too superstitious -- Over-religious, and unwisely so. R4409:6

Have respect for whatever is divine. R3139:1

Reverential to an extreme. R2191:5, 2190:4

There were over 3,000 public statues to the gods in Athens at this time.

R3138:5, 2190:5

Acts 17:23

Your devotions -- Greece was noted as the center of learning, piety and wisdom. R318:5

The Unknown God -- Greek, theos; a mighty one, but does not invariably refer to Jehovah. B274

Unknown to the Athenians, as the author and sustainer of all life.

R1557:4, 3138:6, 2190:3

The mind that roams about and grasps innumerable gods is truly over-religious and under-wise. R4409:6

Paul preached the true God and Jesus Christ whom he had sent. R4409:6

Paul told them not to think of these idols as being God, but that God is the great Creator who made all mankind. Q513:1

Whom therefore -- By your own confession. R1557:4, 2190:4

Ye ignorantly worship -- Worship without knowledge of his name or character. R2190:4

The heathen peoples are so deceived that they really worship demons instead of God--ignorantly. SM548:3

These philosophers should first learn that instead of many gods, there is but one living and true God, the Father; and one Lord, Jesus Christ, his Son. R2190:3

Acts 17:24

Temples -- The true God was neither stone, nor wood, nor were there any such representations of Him. R4410:1

The truly consecrated saints are the living stones of God's great future temple, and each a miniature temple. R1402:1

Nominal Christian people erroneously think of the ornate temples of wood and brick and stone in which they worship as the houses of God. R1402:1

Acts 17:25

Hands -- Power. R2498:1, 4519:6*

Life -- The spark of life, which begins the creature at conception. R4519:6*

Breath -- The God of all life. R2498:1

The breath of life, which supports the creature after birth. R4519:6*

The spark of life, once started, is supported by breathing. E308

And all things -- Whose are all thy ways; who has full power to control your course. R2498:1

Acts 17:26

Made of one blood -- It declares the solidarity of the human family. F42

None can afford to be selfishly independent of one another. Mankind is one family. Each is a human brother to every other human being. All are children of the one father, Adam, a son of God. D310

Descended from Adam, no matter how different in color, stature, intelligence, etc., they may now be. R2344:6

The kings and rulers of earth have so long felt superior to others that they find it difficult to believe this. R683:4

All are of one flesh and blood, one common brotherhood. R5414:1, 1557:4

Including the negro. R3042:1; HG508:5

Divine love was not confined to one nation or people. R4410:1

There was no pre-Adamite man; the variety of human races is due to climate, customs, food and the mother's surroundings during gestation. F42

"As all in Adam die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive." (1 Cor. 15:22) R3519:2

We have opportunities every day with all mankind, to seek to do them good.
R5357:5

All nations of men -- He is the God that made the world and everything therein. He was not merely the God of one nation, a very different God from anything that had ever been suggested to the minds of these philosophers. R3139:2

Of the earth -- Aside from the Church. R1557:4

And hath determined -- The Lord's ordering of national affairs, the bringing of the world under successive empires--the Babylonian, Medo-Persian, Grecian and Roman. R3139:3

The times -- Greek, kairos; fixed times, as "Times of the Gentiles".
(Luke 21:24) B78

The appointed season in which they should come to a knowledge of himself.
R4410:1

A premeditated plan on God's part, in the best interests of humanity and most favorable for the outworking of the divine purposes. R5160:6

Their habitation -- According to the place of their residence. R4410:1

God confounded the language and scattered the people. (Gen. 11:7,8) PD22/33

Acts 17:27

Seek the Lord -- Not very many are in condition of heart to seek him at the present time. R4629:1

Those who do so, he guides, draws, influences. R4629:1

Israel was in darkness and other nations were in deeper darkness, though many of them were feeling after God. R5769:6

Feel after him -- Desiring righteousness, truth, goodness, justice.

R2404:6, 5583:2, 2751:3

After his plan. R2717:6

God draws only such as are in the right attitude of heart. R4355:4,
5583:2, 4657:4; CR435:1

This desire of the heart must come first. CR319:5

Only such will be ready for the Kingdom, fit for the Royal Priesthood.

OV206:1

Having a measure of peace, joy and blessing; going in the right direction.
R4657:4

Mankind are so constructed that the highest and noblest organs of our brain call for reverence for the Almighty God. CR487:6; SM131:2; R3313:1

In some more and in some less this desire for God still remains. CR392:5

Those who come into the Court of the Tabernacle are feeling after God with the desire to find him. Q310:4

Pious Gentiles seeking God frequently attended Jewish synagogues. R2141:2

And find him -- The Apostle would assist his hearers in finding this true God, whom they desired to know when they erected the altar. R3139:3
Rejoicing to see any evidence of repentance and reformation and desiring to assist back into harmony with God, must be the attitude of all the Lord's people. R2707:5
God wills that all men shall be saved. (1 Tim. 2:4) R4629:2
God leads them to the Lord Jesus Christ, the necessary way. (John 14:6) R4629:1
Satan's work has been the blinding and deceiving of men. R3313:1; NS521:6
Satan's struggles to retain control of mankind will be specially desperate at its close--before he is bound. (Rev. 20:1,2) R2189:2
Though he -- God. R4629:1
Every one of us -- To those who will seek or feel after him, he will manifest himself. R4629:1

Acts 17:28

For in him we live -- In his providence. E390
The privilege of living is dependent upon God, and only by his gift or favor can any hope to live forever. R1377:6
All life emanates from him alone. CR498:1
The God in whose hand thy breath is. (Dan. 5:23) HG519:6
His offspring -- In one sense of the word the entire human family are brethren, and all of the God's children or offspring. R4410:2
This should not lead us to make or worship images of any kind, all of which are professedly man's device. R3139:4
Paul wanted to address the Athenians along the line of their superstition. He would encourage them to know God who made them. Q512:2, 513:1

Acts 17:29

Offspring of God -- He is the Father, or Life-giver of all created in his likeness; but recognizes as sons only those who are in harmony with him, reconciled through the precious blood of Jesus. R2962:2; Q513:1
Godhead -- It is a meaningless word; and merely a bad translation. R1515:4, 249:1*
Like the word "trinity," it carries with it the idea of a society, which is not the idea of the original. R249:1*
Greek, ho Theios; the deity, usually rendered "Divine." E71; R1515:4
"That which is Divine." (Rotherham) R249:1*
Like unto gold, etc. -- Humanity should in some degree resemble him. Gold and silver and stone images must be very poor representations of the true God. R4410:2, 1557:5

Acts 17:30

This ignorance -- From Adam to the death of our Redeemer. SM150:1

God left men in ignorance. R4629:4

You are not responsible up to the present time. R4410:2

God winked at -- Their imperfections and flagrant wrong-doings. R4629:4; OV129:2

Tolerated, avoided taking notice of. R1463:3, 4629:4, 4410:2; SM148:4, 149:1

He did not interfere, did not chide, but proceeded with His own work of preparation for better things. NS13:6; OV129:2

He overlooked. R5083:5, 3139:5, 2191:1; HG684:3

Paid no particular attention to their conduct except when it went to an extreme. R5115:2, 3139:5; SM148:4

A definite statement, from an inspired source, that the millions who lived and died in heathen darkness prior to the coming of Christ are not held responsible and will not be punished for their ignorance. R2191:1, 1557:5

Now -- Implies God did not command men previously to repent. SM150:T; HG283:5

As soon as Jesus had died, God offered forgiveness and reconciliation to those who would believe in Jesus. SM150:1; R4629:4

Having appointed through Christ a day of trial for all. R1472:1

Until that day was appointed nobody was commanded to repent. That day was made sure when our Lord died. HG283:4

God could not reasonably command any to repent and return until the ransom was paid at Calvary. R3139:6

Commandeth -- Through those who were the representatives of his teaching, the apostles and the Church. R5083:3

God was sending his message to them, and to all who had ears to hear. R3139:5, 4410:2

Whoever hears and heeds this command is being prepared for his life or death trial in the Kingdom. SM155:2

Adam lived and died without any command whatever to repent and so did his children. R5083:1

Paul does not say that God commanded the Church to sacrifice; if so it would cease to be a sacrifice. SM154:4

All men everywhere -- But only those who hear the command have a responsibility respecting it. HG684:4

Who have an ear to hear. R2962:3, 5084:1, 2809:5

A new condition had been established and God would deal henceforth with the Gentiles. R5083:3

To repent -- But not until God had provided a Redeemer. R5083:6, 4207:4; SM149:3, 155:1

And so influence your future conditions: "In that day there shall be a fountain opened, for sin and for uncleanness." (Zech. 13:1) R5084:1

Cleanse themselves. R3037:6

Change of heart from sin to righteousness. R1437:2, 4410:2, 3139:5 The prerequisites on man's part, to salvation. R1437:2
There is a reward for repentance. R5083:1
To those who are willing to hear. R5083:4
Those who do not hear in the present time are not commanded by God to repent. R5084:1

Acts 17:31

He -- Jehovah. R4879:6, 2304:2

Hath appointed -- Arranged for in advance. SM150:2

Christ had redeemed Adam and his race from that death sentence and thus opened the way for the appointment of another day of judgment. R4410:3

A day -- Period, epoch, age. R2434:5, 2338:1, 891:3; NS181:1, 393:5

"One day is with the Lord as a thousand years." (2 Pet. 3:8) R3028:6, 3305:1, 2993:3, 2990:3, 2664:4; SM151:1

A thousand-year day. HG273:2; R5780:3, 5563:6, 2434:5, 2304:2; SM252:1; Q651:1, 794:4, 805:3, 830:T, 853:4; NS161:3, 748:3

Applies beyond this Gospel age; to the Millennial age. OV39:3; R2691:1; NS161:3; Q853:4

The Millennial age. A139; C125; F396; R3948:5, 3305:1, 3139:6, 2993:3, 2539:3, 2229:3, 1505:2, 1463:3, 1222:5; HG234:4; OV208:1

The entire Millennial age is to be a thousand-year Judgment day, in which the whole world is to be brought to a knowledge of the truth. R5363:5, 2733:5, 1601:2, 1452:6, 1383:6, 1261:3

A day of judgment for the whole world, aside from the Church, which has her judgment during this Gospel age. NS556:5; C125; OV39:3, 208:2; R1155:4

That day was future in the Apostles time, and is still future, though now about to dawn. R5443:5, 3167:5, 2990:3, 2691:1; SM151:T; HG148:5, 234:3; NS333:2, 423:5

God's time for dealing with the world is in the future under the terms of the New Covenant, at the hands of the greater mediator than Moses. R4013:5, 2351:5

This appointed day has not yet arrived. It is the Day of Christ, the Millennial day, 1,000 years long, in which the world will have its trial, its test, Christ and the Church being its judges. NS463:2; OV40:T; PD62/73

The Day of Christ; Messiah's Kingdom. R5083:3, 4996:6; OV39:3, 256:6; SM151:1; NS329:3

When he sets up his kingdom at his second coming. Q795:T

The Mediatorial Reign. CR486:1

A day of testing. R2624:1; OV207:2

The world's day of judgment, or day of trial. F396; R4207:4, 3139:6, 2624:1, 2539:3, 2191:1, 1601:2, 1219:1

The world's trial day of individual testing. OV207:2; R5443:6, 1222:5

Times of Restitution. (Acts 3:21) C125; R1450:3

A set time, in which he purposes to give to all men just the kind of evidence which their doubting and unbelieving condition of mind requires. 1450:3

"My Word shall judge you in the last day." (John 12:48) R2434:5

See also comments under Acts 3:21 "Of restitution." See also comments under Luke 11:2, "Thy kingdom come."

He will judge -- Greek, krino, (probationary trials); and krisis, (decisions), to the world. R2431:3, 2430:6, 2426:4, 2425:6*, 1853:4
Krino signifies to discern. The thought is that of trial rather than verdict. NS329:6

Signifies trial, testing. E479

Not condemn, for the world is condemned already. R3167:5, 4996:6

The process of trial, including also the decision or result of trial.

R408:3; Q794:4

He will righteously grant the world a new, individual trial for eternal life, having cancelled the sentence of the first trial by the propitiatory sacrifice of his Son. HG299:4; OV207:2, R5443:6, 1222:5

Grant another trial under more favorable conditions. A137, 143; R4629:5, 3948:5, 2351:5, 891:3

Future. R2733:5; Q591:T; NS181:1

The judgment or trial cannot begin until the eyes of their understanding are opened. NS332:6

There could be no judgment without a trial, and there could be no trial without knowledge, hence all must be brought forth from the condition of death for the purpose of being tried for life. HG514:3

If it were God's plan to coerce the world or to everlasting save every member, why call the coming age a Day of Judgment? E479; R1057:6

The world is not now on trial, is not being judged, rewarded or punished. R4013:5; OV40:T

This second judgment would not be merely for those living at the time, but for all of the race, of every nation, people, kindred and tongue, awakened from the dead. R4410:3

Under the conditions of the New Covenant. R1983:6

"The time of the dead, that they should be judged." (Rev. 11:18) R2993:3

Indirectly this will be God's judgment. R1853:6

"For the Father judges no man, but hath committed all judgment unto the Son." (John 5:22) R1261:3, 408:3

The saints are to be the judges with Christ. R5776:2, 4996:6

The world -- A fair trial that will take cognizance of their weaknesses and frailties. R3948:5

Grant the world a judgment or trial or test. OV256:6; R3167:5, 3028:6

Under full knowledge and opportunity. R1229:2, 4990:5, 1155:4

The dead in trespasses and sins, but redeemed by the precious blood of Christ. R2999:3; OV39:3

The final settlements with Tyre, Sidon, Sodom, Chorqazin, Bethsaida, and all the rest of mankind. R1618:6

And the fallen angels. R4879:3,4, 4880:1, 4292:3, 1680:4, 1073:4
The judgment of the fallen angels will be at the very beginning of this great day. R4880:1

In righteousness -- Equity; under a reign of righteousness when the besetments of the adversary will be at an end. R3140:1, 3167:5, 3028:6; NS181:1

Giving to each one a fair, just, righteous opportunity for attaining life everlasting. HG355:5, 148:5; R2624:2

All must come to a knowledge of the truth (1 Tim. 2:4) and be judicially set free from the original Adamic condemnation. OV39:4,5
Christ will give every assistance necessary and proper. R5925:4

Not in wrath, malice, or a desire to injure. R2624:2

"Discern between the righteous and the wicked, between him that serveth God and him that serveth him not." (Mal. 3:18) R1653:6

With rewards and punishments wisely administered, that the people may learn righteousness and abhor sin. R5780:3

By that man -- Jesus Christ. R2304:2, 2191:1, 1618:6, 1557:5, 1505:2, 1155:4, 568:3, 52:1*

The great Messiah, Prophet, Royal Priest and King. R1248:1, 3167:5; Q591:T; OV40:T

The Christ, Head and Body. E479; R5443:5, 3028:6, 2993:3, 2539:3, 2426:4, 1653:6; HG232:2, 273:2; NS423:2, 644:2; OV40:T; Q363:3

Jesus and his glorified Church, his Bride. R4996:6, 4986:2, 3948:5

"To make of twain (Jews and Gentiles) one new man"--the Mediator, the peace maker. (Eph. 2:15) R4879:6; Q363:3

"The Father judgeth no man, but hath committed all judgment unto the Son." (John 5:22) R1853:6, 408:3

"For he cometh to judge the earth; he shall judge the world with righteousness." (Psa. 96:13) R568:3

"The saints shall judge the world." (1 Cor. 6:2) R4990:6, 2733:6; HG273:2; NS393:5, 423:5, 748:3; OV40:T; Q651:T

He hath ordained -- Afore. R3028:6

The Christ, the righteous judge. R2191:1

Judge of all the earth. R1557:5, 1155:4

Paul declares that the only access to God is through faith in Christ's Sacrifice for our sins. D190

Given assurance -- An evidence. R2795:4, 1229:2

Grounds for hope. R3028:6, 1278:2

Confirmed unto us by the death of our Lord Jesus as the ransom price. R1278:2

Our Lord's resurrection becomes the pledge. R1395:1

The resurrection of Christ was God's attestation to men that his sacrifice has been satisfactory, God's assurance that he would ultimately carry out this great plan of blessing the world. R3140:1, 2133:4, 1989:1, 1591:3, 1248:3

Evidence to men that he is the one through whom God intended to judge the world. R1229:2, 5083:6; HG384:1

Of the carrying out of every feature of the divine plan, which centered in him and dependent upon his faithfulness even unto death. R2795:4, 4410:3

Some who were awakened before were only partial illustrations of resurrection, to assure men of the divine power to fully accomplish it in due time. R1591:3

In the resurrection of Jesus we have God's assurance of his ability and willingness to deliver all from the tomb. NS585:5

Unto all -- The guarantee that all those redeemed have an opportunity to attain a complete resurrection to all the blessings and favors lost in the fall. R1591:3

The whole world to be brought to a knowledge of the truth and of God. (1 Tim. 2:4) R5363:5

He hath raised him -- Christ could never have raised himself. R2795:2

When God raised Jesus from the dead it became a testimony that his was a sacrificial death, an acceptable offering. R5083:6, 1278:2, 1229:2; T88

From the dead -- Had his sacrifice been in any manner or degree imperfect he would never have been raised out of death. T88

Acts 17:32

Of the dead -- He was listened to as a great teacher by the philosophers until he touched on the resurrection of the dead. E350

And thus discerned Paul's disagreement with their theory that the dead are more alive than ever. E351; R3140:4

Faith in a resurrection is an integral and essential part of Scriptural doctrine; the only hope, the blessed hope, the consistent hope. R4791:1,6

Whoever would believe the resurrection, must also believe that death is the cessation of life. R4791:6

Only as we have confidence in God's Word could we exercise a faith in such a stupendous miracle. R4794:5

None but an infinite being could reproduce the very thoughts of the billions of mankind who have died. R4794:5

Jesus' death was the purchase price for the world, resulting in due time, in an awakening of the dead. R3138:6

Jesus' resurrection became the assurance of the justification of all who accept and obey him. R4793:1

"To proclaim liberty to the captives, and the opening of the prison";

(Isa. 61:1) "To bring out the prisoners from the prison." (Isa. 42:7)

R4793:2, 2580:4

By satisfying the demands of the divine law against the sinner. SM148:2

Coming forth to a judgment-resurrection, a perfecting obtainable only through judgments, discipline, etc. R1512:1

Many of all denominations have little or no faith in a resurrection of the dead; to whom death has become a delusion and not a reality. R4791:2,3

Many ministers merely mean an eventual resurrection of the body, to be reinhabited by the spirit which formerly parted in death. R4791:3

Satan's theory makes of death a blessing, and of resurrection a curse;

whereas Christ died to release man from the curse of death. R4792:2

No other religion than that of the Bible teaches a resurrection of the dead. R4410:3

Some mocked -- Sneered at the doctrine of the resurrection. R4410:4

Scoffed. R5016:4

Their objection rested on the resurrection. R3140:2

According to their philosophy there could be no resurrection of the dead;

for they believed that there were no dead. R2191:4; E351; SM35:2

All interest in the teaching of the apostle vanished for the majority when they learned that the entire philosophy rested on the resurrection of the dead. R4410:4

They considered themselves far in advance of the Jewish idea that the dead

can have no future existence except by a resurrection. E351

Being steeped in superstition and error, when they heard of the true God and his plan, they were not interested. CR488:4

We have nothing to say to those who "mock" at the divine promise, because of a lack of faith in the Almighty. SM38:1

Hear thee again -- If the truth did not appeal to them at once, it is quite doubtful if it would do so later. R4410:5

Their time to hear the message would be during the Millennium. R4410:5

Like a magnet, the truth attracts only those only who have an affinity for

it. R1557:5, 4410:5

The worldly wise of today are still inclined to stumble over the resurrection. R5016:4, 4410:4

Acts 17:34

Clave unto him -- Stuck to him. R4410:5

Dionysius -- One of the professors in the University of Athens. R5926:3

Acts 18

Acts 18:1

Athens -- The intellectual metropolis of the world. R1557:3

Athens was given over to religious philosophy and idol worship. R2191:2

Corinth -- About forty miles from Athens. R3143:2; CR278:5

A commercial city, noted for its manufactures, architecture, paintings,

Corinthian brass, or bronze, etc. R3143:2, 2191:2, 1557:3; CR278:5

Nicknamed the Vanity Fair of the World, because it was a center of frivolity, pleasure-seeking, etc.; a most licentious and profligate city. R4417:1, 2191:2, 1557:3; CR278:5

Acts 18:2

Aquila...Priscilla -- Aquila, A Jew, with his wife, Priscilla, a Gentile, were amongst those driven from Rome, who had received the message. R3143:3

Poor Jews, outcast for their religion. R2191:6

They were unable to preach in a public way. R647:4

Claudius -- The Emperor Claudius Caesar was reigning at this time. R3143:2

Depart from Rome -- Had been exiled from Rome, the seat of the Empire. R1557:3, 2207:2

The seat of the Empire. R2207:2

Because the Jews were raising dissensions respecting the principles of Christianity, which by this time had reached Rome. R3143:3

Acts 18:3

Of the same craft -- Tent-makers. R1557:3, 5935:2, 3143:3, 2191:6, 733:2, 619:1*

Enabling him to provide for his necessities, while preaching the Gospel of Christ. R3143:3, 5935:2, 3157:3, 2221:5, 2191:6, 1021:1, 733:2, 619:2*

Not only for his own support, but for the financial assistance of others in the Gospel work. R5935:2, 2221:5

The Apostle did not belong to a paid ministry. R3157:6

He never let his business run away with him, or interfere with his religious life. R619:2*

Occupation -- Every Jewish youth was required to learn a trade. R4416:2, 3143:3, 2191:6, 619:2*

Were tentmakers -- If it were necessary, in order to be a minister of the Gospel, to work with the hands, as did Paul, nearly all the ministers of Babylon would cease preaching. R2852:3

Acts 18:4

Reasoned -- He did not start out to preach Christ boldly to the Jews. R2192:1

But apparently he was under a measure of constraint and did not speak in his usual boldness and vigor, perhaps because of the lack of moral support. R4416:3

In the synagogue -- Any person of ability had the privilege of giving an exposition of the law and prophets. R3143:4, 1557:6

Every Sabbath -- If the earning of his daily bread hindered his preaching during the week, Paul at least took his Sabbath days for the more important work. R4416:3

The Jewish Sabbath and the privileges of the synagogue afforded special opportunities for the promulgation of the truth. R1557:6

Acts 18:5

Silas and Timotheus -- Their coming brought not only physical strength, but an energy of spirit, an increased earnestness and force to his preaching. R3144:1

Paul was refreshed by the arrival of Silas and Timothy. He needed their encouragement. R1557:6

It is still true that the strongest of the Lord's people need the help, encouragement, assistance of others. R3144:1

Pressed in the spirit -- Felt a fresh vigor urging him to still more vigorously present his message. R4416:3

Felt a pressure of earnest desire to make known the Lord Jesus. R2192:1

He was mentally energized. E312

And testified -- Encouraged, revived in spirit, he was bolder now. R3144:1, 4416:3

Acts 18:6

They opposed -- He was no longer made welcome in the synagogue and the opposition became violent. R3144:1

Shook his raiment -- As an indication that he had nothing further to present, and would discontinue the discussion. R3144:1

As though he would not even take from them the dust. R4416:3

Your blood -- The statement does not imply that they were already doomed to second death, but toward which such a wilful opposition to the truth surely tends. R1557:6

I am clean -- I have done my duty towards you and the responsibility is now with yourselves only. R1557:6, 4416:5, 3144:2

There are times when positiveness is absolutely necessary. R4416:3

I will go -- When positive bitterness and hatred are manifested, it is better to withdraw. R4416:4

Acts 18:7

A certain man's house -- The new meetings were held in the home of Justus. R4416:5

Justus -- A reverent man. R4416:5

A Greek convert first to Judaism, and now to Christianity. R2192:2

A Jewish proselyte. R1557:6

As a believer entertained Paul at Corinth. R2071:5

Worshipped God -- The Gospel sought first those who seemed to be earnest worshipers. R2071:5

"The Father seeketh such to worship him as worship him in spirit and in truth." (John 4:23) R2071:5

On this account was esteemed worthy of the truth and its spirit and its privileges. R2071:5

Joined hard -- Living next door to the synagogue. R1557:6

Resided near the synagogue. R4416:5

Crispus...believed -- Crispus decided for the Lord Jesus and took his stand with the Apostle and a few others. R4416:5

And were baptized -- The true baptism of consecration, also the outward symbolic water baptism. R3144:2, 4416:5

Baptism was the custom of all the apostles--not merely with the Jews, but also with the Gentiles. F448; R1539:3

Acts 18:9

Spake the Lord -- The Lord himself has supervision of his own work, and guides those who are truly his servants. R3144:3

Evidently the Lord saw that his servant Paul needed some special encouragement at this time, and hence another vision was granted. R4416:5, 3190:1

The Lord constantly witnessed with him. R1558:5

By a vision -- Greek, horama; not reality, correctly translated "vision." R4142:4*

Reassured of the Lord's personal care and supervision. R1557:6, 3190:1

Acts 18:10

I am with thee -- What an insight this gives us to the divine supervision of the Gospel message and its servants! R4416:5

No man -- The Lord will not suffer us to be tempted above that we are able, but will, with every temptation provide also a way of escape. (1 Cor. 10:13) R4416:6

To hurt thee -- God is able to shield and to deliver all of his servants. R4416:6

Much people -- To be reached by the truth. R2192:4,2

"The Lord knoweth them that are his." (2 Tim. 2:19) R2191:3

The Lord knows the hearts of all and has a care, not only for his saints, but also for those who have not heard of and received his grace, whose hearts are in a favorable attitude of honesty, sincerity. R4416:6, 3144:3

It gives us the thought that the objective point of this missionary tour in the divine program was Corinth. R2191:3

That vision and its message, we may be sure, was not for the Apostle merely, but for us also. R4416:6

Truth usually makes better progress today in places where irreligion has the upper hand, as in Corinth. R3143:2

Where sin stands out glaringly it has a repulsive effect upon the pure in heart, and this repulsion seems to prepare such hearts for a genuine consecration. R4417:1

Acts 18:11

A year and six months -- Providentially detained there. R4417:1

Teaching the Word -- Intention, plan or purpose. R338:1, 421:2

Acts 18:15

Look -- Greek, optomai; attend, recognize. R140:6

Acts 18:18

Priscilla and Aquila -- Who were about to make Ephesus their home. R4420:2

Priscilla is mentioned first, as if she were the more prominent and active of the two. R1549:3

Acts 18:19

Into the synagogue -- According to his custom. R4420:2

A part of the twelve tribes scattered abroad and living in the various cities of the Gentiles. R2069:2

Acts 18:20

He consented not -- He was urged to remain, but he hastened onward, promising, if possible, to return. R4420:2

Acts 18:21

This feast -- Feast of the Passover. R2206:1, 4420:2

Not the Jewish feast, but the substitute. "Christ our passover." (1 Cor. 5:7) R4420:2

Acts 18:22

Caesarea -- Philip made it his headquarters. R2222:3

And gone up -- To Jerusalem. R2206:1

It was eight years since Paul had visited the brethren at Jerusalem.
R1559:2

Saluted the Church -- Apparently the reception accorded the great Apostle was a rather cool one. R2206:1

Acts 18:24

Apollos -- A convert to Christianity. R4420:3, 3152:1, 1558:1

Born at Alexandria -- One of the chief cities of that time, noted for its libraries. R3152:2

An eloquent man -- The Greek indicates that he was both eloquent and learned. R3152:2

Paul, though a great reasoner and possessed of the eye and ear qualities, was inferior to Apollos and some others in oratory. R365:2

Mighty in the Scriptures -- Gave evidence of ability in presenting the truth to the minds of others. R2741:5

Acts 18:25

Fervent in the spirit -- Greek, pneuma; of ardent mind. E312

Baptism of John -- The baptism of repentance, which was for the Jews only. R4420:3, 1558:1; PD56/69

This was a mistake for Gentile converts; they needed to be baptized directly into Christ's death. (Acts 19:3-5) PD56/69

Apollos apparently had not learned respecting the new dispensation, and the gifts of the spirit by which it was introduced. R2206:4

Acts 18:26

Aquila and Priscilla -- Though not qualified to speak publicly in the synagogue. R3152:2, 2206:4, 647:4

They took him -- They recognized him as a Christian brother. R3152:2

Took him home and instructed him, so that he went away better equipped for the work. R1558:1, 4420:3, 3152:2, 2206:4

Aquila and Priscilla were able to instruct a public preacher. R3682:3

Expounded unto him -- Had Aquila and Priscilla not been students of the truth, what an opportunity they would have lost. R647:4

More perfectly -- More fully explaining to him, doubtless, respecting the Pentecostal blessing and the unction of the holy Spirit. R4420:3

Let us, too, be ready to accept further instructions as from the Lord, however humble may be the channels. R3152:4

Each doing with his might what his hand finds to do, using whatever talents he possesses, helping to understand the word of God more perfectly. R537:1

Acts 18:27

The brethren wrote -- Introduction by letter, as a safeguard against "false brethren" was the custom of the primitive Church. R1707:1, 3152:3, 1822:2, 1720:2
A letter of commendation. R1822:2

Mightily convinced -- Because of his thorough acquaintance with the Scriptures and his ability in expounding them. (18:24) R3152:3, 2206:4

Acts 19

Acts 19:1

Apollos was at Corinth -- When Paul arrived at Ephesus Apollos was gone. R2206:4

Came to Ephesus -- The Gateway, or Eye, of Asia Minor. R4432:1, 4421:1, 2206:3

One of the most important cities of that time, its population being chiefly Greeks. R2206:3

Paul spent about three years there. R3157:3, 3159:2, 2207:2, 2206:3

For two years and three months St. Paul was actively engaged in the service of the truth at Ephesus. R4432:1

His stay of two years at Ephesus. R4420:3

Accompanied by Timothy, Erastus, Titus and possibly others. R3157:3

Acts 19:2

Have ye received -- Paul perceived these men had none of the gifts of the spirit, then common to all believers. R5964:1, 4420:3, 3152:5

The holy Ghost -- The usual evidences of that time--a power to speak with tongues, to heal, etc. R4420:3

He merely wished to bring to their attention the fact that such gifts were possible to them. R3152:5

Not so much as heard -- They were deficient as respects the evidences of their discipleship. HG254:6

They were ignorant of the privileges of believers--of entire consecration and adoption as sons of God into the divine family, implied in the ordinance of baptism into Christ. R1558:1

Acts 19:3

Unto John's baptism -- Called by that name because John was the first one who used baptism. R5964:4

Applicable to Jews only, and never applicable to Gentiles. F428; PD56/69; HG600:2

Was to the Jews only, and signified the putting away of sins, and thus return to a condition of holiness and consecration already enjoyed.

Not original sin, but sins against the Jewish Law Covenant. R2825:5, 5964:1; HG732:5

By Apollos, who had not then been clearly informed as to the difference between the baptism of the Jews and that of the Gentiles. R5963:6, 2206:4; CR75:3

Apollos had explained the Gospel merely to the extent of repentance from sin and faith in Christ as the Redeemer. R3152:5; F428

There is a decided difference between John's baptism of repentance and Christ's baptism. HG254:6, 255:1

God would not recognize John's baptism for a Gentile. They had never been in covenant relationship with him. R5964:1

Acts 19:4

Baptism of repentance -- Unto repentance--reformation. R2565:2

The same now taught by the Disciples of Christ denomination. R1558:1, 2565:2, 2417:6; HG600:3

Was a special call to God's covenant people, to repent of their sins as a nation and as individuals, and to live up to their early covenant with the Lord. R1687:3, 2825:5

Never is it said of any Gentile that he was baptized unto repentance and remission of sins. HG255:2

Paul explained that their baptism was an improper one--that they as Gentiles required an immersion into Christ. CR75:3; OV240:7; R4420:5

On Christ Jesus -- Repentance is a first and important step; but those who would make their calling and election sure (2 Pet. 1:10) to joint-heirship with Christ (Rom. 8:17) must be sanctified with the truth. R1844:3

The Apostle instructed them more fully, assuring them that John's baptism was all right in its time and place, but that they should be baptized in the name of Jesus--baptized into Christ. HG732:6, 600:3

Paul opened the subject of the high calling of believers, probably in quite extended discourse, of which verse 4 must be understood as a mere synopsis. R1558:2

Acts 19:5

When they heard -- Being of proper and teachable spirit, they were not only willing but anxious to render obedience to every feature of the divine will. R2206:4

Baptized -- A baptism of consecration, to be dead with him. A participation in his sufferings, and by and by in his glory. (Col. 1:26:27) R3152:6, 2565:3, 1942:2,3, 1917:4, 1687:3

As members of his Body, to fellowship in his sufferings, even unto death. R3152:6, 4420:5, 2417:3,5; CR75:4

Which our Lord and his apostles practiced and enjoined upon all followers. R1539:3, 2565:3

In the beginning of this age, certain miraculous gifts were withheld until the water baptism had been properly performed. R1540:4

Name of the Lord Jesus -- Of entire consecration and full submission to the will of God. R1558:4, 1917:4

This brought them into full relationship with God. R5964:1

Christian baptism is only for believers in Christ--not for unbelievers, not for sinners. R2565:3

Signifies our introduction into the body of Christ as wild olive branches grafted into the approved stock, to be partakers of the richness of the Abrahamic promises through the root. (Rom. 6:3-5) R2931:4

Any Jew, seeking to come into Christ since the day of wrath upon his nation, could come in only under the same terms and conditions as a Gentile. R2931:5

It is our custom to use: "In the name (by the authority) of the Father and of the Son and of the holy Spirit, I baptize thee into Christ." R445:5

Acts 19:6

His hands upon them -- Not to give them authority to preach, but to impart the gifts of the spirit. F284; R3153:1, 1957:4, 812:3*

Only the apostles had the power to communicate these gifts of the spirit. R1957:4

These gifts were necessary to the Church then in its incipient stage, for their assurance of faith and also for the world's recognition; but were not intended to be continued beyond the days of the Apostles. R1558:4

A witness in the infancy period of the church; until the New Testament writings should be within reach, and until the fruits of the spirit could be developed. R3153:1

Acts 19:7

Twelve -- Those whom Apollos' ministry had reached. R3152:5

Acts 19:8

The Kingdom of God -- He did not stop to dispute heathendom nor Greek philosophers. R4420:6

Acts 19:9

Hardened -- To them the truth had an odor of death (2 Cor 2:16), self-sacrifice, contrary to all their hopes, aims and desires. R4421:1

He departed -- If the truth has no effect, its servants are not justified by any Scripture in intruding upon the rights of others. R1558:5

From them -- Not from the city, which had not persecuted him, but from the synagogue. R4421:1

Separated -- His advanced and clear teachings produced division among the Jews--the opposition of the unbelievers being very pronounced. R1558:4

Wherever truth is preached there is a division between those who respect God and his Word and those who deny the true God. R2206:5

It is better that sincere followers of Christ should meet by themselves than that they should meet with others whose opposition to the truth would make continual disturbance, or hinder advancement into further knowledge and grace. R2206:5

In the school -- In a rented public hall, used in the forenoons as a school. R3157:3, 2206:5, 1558:4

Acts 19:10

In Asia -- From Ephesus, the Word of the Lord was carried to various cities of Asia Minor by the traveling public, including Jews and proselytes. R4421:1

Acts 19:11

Special miracles -- As an offset to the blinding influence of witchcraft, magic, black art, etc. R3158:1

The power of God was with him, whose manifestation was so different from the power which was with the workers of magic and incantations. R2206:6

Served as an endorsement of him as an apostle, and his message of Jesus. R3158:1, 1745:4, 1558:5

He exercised this gift of healing upon many, yet the Lord did not relieve him from his own weakness. (2 Cor. 12:7-9) R2118:3, 4433:4, 2006:6, 1689:4

We nevertheless appreciate still more highly as from the same source his gift of interpretation of the divine plan of the ages. R4421:2

By the hands of Paul -- These demonstrations of divine power supplementing Paul's faithful use of his natural abilities were an endorsement of all he did. R1745:4

Acts 19:12

Unto the sick -- There is no record that the Lord or the Apostles ever healed the infirmities of the consecrated ones. Paul sent no napkin or handkerchief or anointing oil to Timothy when he was sick. R2364:6, 1689:4
We have no record of prayer for health by the apostles for themselves, except in the case of Paul (2 Cor. 12:7-9), and his request was not granted. R2006:6, 4433:2,4, 1689:4

We also have various thorns in the flesh: difficulties, trials, some mental, some physical, some understood, others unknown, which the Lord does not remove, but permits for wise and loving purposes. R4433:5
Physical restitution is not the hope set before the "Little Flock." They might be agents of God in blessing others as was Paul, and yet like him suffer from maladies they were instrumental in curing in others. R749:4

Or aprons -- Handkerchiefs and napkins which he had blessed, carried with them divine blessing and healing. R4433:2, 1689:4

The power of conferring those gifts was vested in the apostles only, hence they did "vanish away" when the apostles died. (1 Cor. 13:8) R1998:3

The evil spirits -- Greek, pneuma; invisible spirit beings. E313

Acts 19:13

Vagabond Jews, exorcists -- The same wily arts of the adversary, were general throughout the Roman Empire. R3158:1

Had evil spirits -- Greek, pneuma; invisible spirit beings. E313

Today such obsessed ones are styled insane and treated accordingly. R4421:4

The name of the Lord Jesus -- Certain of the magicians essayed to use the name of Jesus as a charm or magic word. R3158:1

Acts 19:15

And the evil spirit -- Greek, pneuma; a person, not a human propensity. E313; R2171:6

Answered -- The Apostle recognized these mediums, not as the mediums of the dead, but as of the demons, the fallen angels. In conference with the apostles these demons never denied their own identity. F625

Jesus I know -- Acknowledged Christ. R2014:1

They respected the true and opposed to the false. R1680:1

Notice the personality and intelligence attributed to these demons. R2171:6; HG725:5

Acts 19:16

Leaped on them -- Exercising through the possessed one demoniacal strength, the seven men were wounded and put to flight. R3158:2

Acts 19:17

Was known to all -- That the black arts were of Satan, while the Apostle's miracles were of divine power. R3158:2

Ephesus -- Was a great city for magic, incantations, divinations, etc. R2206:5

Acts 19:18

Many that believed -- The light of divine truth is "the light of the world," which alone will be capable of dispelling the darkness of the Adversary. F625

And confessed -- Confessed the truth, and publicly showed it in the reform of their conduct. R3158:3

Acknowledging that their works of magic were evil and from an evil source. R2207:1, 3158:3

Showed their deeds -- They exposed the fact that many of their deeds were by occult or hidden power and injurious. R4421:4
Publicly showed the reform of their conduct. R3158:3

Acts 19:19

Curious arts -- Magic, the miraculous powers of evil spirits. R2207:1; F624

And burned them -- The sincerity of some of the converts at Ephesus was manifested by the public burning of the books. R3158:6

They not only stopped the practice of the black art; they not only refused to use the books of magic; but they refused to sell to others, lest they should do injury to them. R4432:6, 4421:4, 3159:1,4, 2207:1,6

Everything throughout the Scriptures teaches that the Lord specially loves and appreciates those who are thorough-going, in their zeal for righteousness and truth, in their opposition to that which is unrighteous and erroneous. R3159:4, 4421:5

The destruction of the books, representing a considerable value, represented also a sacrificing condition of heart. R3159:1

50,000 pieces of silver -- Since each piece of silver then represented a day's wages, it was equivalent to a very large sum, then and now. R3158:6, 2207:1

Acts 19:20

So -- Thus. R4421:5

God -- Greek, kurios; Lord or Master. E70 And prevailed -- Over the evil influences opposing it. R3159:4

Acts 19:21

In the spirit -- Greek, pneuma; mind, will. E312

Must also see Rome -- Little suspecting that he would be sent to Rome as a prisoner. R3159:2

Acts 19:23

About that way -- Evidently the way of the Lord's people differed decidedly from the ways of others. R3159:2

Acts 19:24

Demetrius -- An active opposer of Christianity, and a supporter of Diana. R3159:3

The leader of the riot. R3159:3

There are even today so many of the same disposition as Demetrius and his fellow craftsmen! Their opposition is inspired by the same selfish spirit.

R3160:4, 2207:6

Who may afterwards have become an active Christian (3 John 12), even as Paul, the zealous persecutor of the church, became its zealous servant.

R3159:3

A silversmith -- The representative or head of the silversmith's guild or union. R4432:2, 3159:3

Silver shrines -- The finest of the shrines, or miniature temples of Diana, were made in silver. R3159:3

Not only for the people of Ephesus, but for export to various other cities and provinces where Diana was worshiped. R3159:5

It was thought that a vessel going to sea must have on board a miniature shrine of Diana. R2206:6

Reminding us of the coming "Image of the Beast." (Rev. 13:14-17) R2207:6

Diana -- The deity of Ephesus and Asia Minor. R4432:2

Those who wished for luck repeated certain words or prayers to Diana, and wore a charm or amulet marked with her likeness. Similarly, Roman Catholics may wear a scalpel blessed with prayers to the Virgin Mary, with holy water, masses, etc. R2206:6

Was merely the work of men's hands and not, as claimed, a divinity. R4433:1

Acts 19:25

We have our wealth -- The love of money is the root of all evil (1 Tim 6:10) and a frequent cause of opposition to the Lord's Word and plan.

R2207:5, 4432:6

He pointed out to the workers that the progress of Christianity meant the destruction of their trades. R207:2

Acts 19:26

Turned away much people -- The depression was laid to the charge of Christianity. R2207:3 Demetrius pointed out to them that the progress of Christianity meant the destruction of their various trades. R2207:2

Acts 19:27

Craft is in danger -- A religious business. R2207:6

He painted a black picture of how prosperity would shortly die, as a result of the preaching of this man Paul. R4432:3

If the people lost their respect of Diana and her temple, they would no longer purchase the shrines. R3159:5

Still there are religious bigots who correspond to those shrine-makers to Diana, ready to incite the people against us because their craft is in danger. R958:1

The temple -- One of the seven wonders of the world. R3160:1

Made of purest marble, 425 ft. long, 220 ft. broad; its columns of Parian marble were 60 feet high, 127 in number, 36 of them were magnificently carved; the hall adorned with the most wonderful statuary and paintings. R2206:3, 3160:1

Full of wrath -- They seemed to realize the ultimate discredit of Diana and ruin of their own business interests. R3159:5

Great is Diana -- The less intelligent being easily aroused by this cry. R2207:2

Her blessing was supposed to greatly increase the flocks and herds, and the birth of children. R4432:2

Of the Ephesians -- Just at the entrance of the harbor of Ephesus stood one of the "seven wonders of the world," an immense statue of Diana. R4432:2

Acts 19:29

Filled with confusion -- The whole city was in an uproar in the very tenderest spots, religion and worldly prosperity. R4432:3

Wherever the truth goes it has such an effect. The apostles preached the same Gospel which made a disturbance everywhere. R1633:3,4

Gaius and Aristarchus -- Paul's co-laborers. R2207:3, 4432:6

Theatre -- The coliseum, estimated to hold from 25,000 to 50,000 people. R3159:5, 2207:3, 2206:4

Whose capacity was 56,000 people, indicating that Ephesus must have been an immense city. R4432:4

Acts 19:30

Would have entered -- Would have courageously entered into the thick of the trouble in defense of his friends and in defense of his Master and his message. R4432:4, 2207:4

The disciples suffered him not -- The Ephesian converts would not permit him, knowing better than he the vicious and unreasoning spirit of the superstitious lower classes of Ephesus. R2207:4
Wiser counsels prevailed, and Paul remained away. R4432:4

Acts 19:31

Would not adventure -- Paul would have gone to reason with the mob; but leading men of the city cautioned him, in the interests of peace, not to do this. R3159:6

Acts 19:33

Alexander -- Probably Alexander the coppersmith, (2 Tim. 4:14) previously a convert to Christianity, but at this time a believer again in Judaism. (1 Tim. 1:20) His object in speaking would no doubt have been to clear the Jews and bring all the wrath upon the Christians, on the ground that they were renegades. R2207:4

Acts 19:34

Two hours -- Clearly manifesting the senselessness of their proceeding. R3159:6

Amongst Christians, some who have made little growth in grace and knowledge are content to spend hours in shouting or talking about that which has comparatively little meaning. R3159:6

Acts 19:35

The town clerk -- Recorder or mayor. R3160:1

Manifesting a far better spirit than the Papacy would have done under similar circumstances. R330

Appealed the people -- Now even more than then, the civil authorities protect our persons from violence. R958:1

Ye men of Ephesus -- First, he appealed to their patriotic sentiments. R3160:1

Acts 19:36

Do nothing rashly -- Let us mind our own business and not allow ourselves to be unduly excited over a matter of no moment. R4432:5

Acts 19:37

Which are neither robbers -- The town clerk's second argument was that these were not bad men. R3160:1

Nor yet blasphemers -- It was not necessary for the Apostle to say one unkind word about Diana. His commission was to preach the good tidings. R4432:6

Similarly, it is not necessary for us to do or say a single unkind word or act towards our friends in Babylon. R4433:1

Acts 19:38

The law is open -- His third argument was that this was a quarrel of Demetrius and his fellow-craftsmen; and if any injustice had been perpetrated there was a proper channel of redress. R3160:2

Acts 19:39

Lawful assembly -- The fourth argument was that they should bring their charges at the proper time, and in the lawful manner. R3160:4

The courts are open. While there were lawful assemblies provided for them, the present one was an unlawful one. R4432:5

The meeting was nothing short of a riot and if it were reported to the Roman authorities and an inquiry made of him, it would reflect to the discredit of the city. There might be danger of the city losing the privilege of being a "free city." R3160:4

Acts 19:40

This day's uproar -- Persecutions were not so much opposition on the part of the governments as a result of uncontrollable popular clamor. B330

Acts 20

Acts 20:1

After the uproar -- Instead of wavering and stopping, the apostles went right along and preached the same Gospel which made a disturbance everywhere. R1633:4

Acts 20:3

Three months -- During these three months in Corinth, Paul is supposed to have written his epistle to the Romans. R3171:3
His second visit to Corinth. CR278:5

Acts 20:4

Accompanied him -- Seven delegates, representatives of the Church at Thessalonica, Berea, Derbe and Ephesus. R4458:1

Acts 20:7

First day of the week -- All of the Lord's appearances to his followers after his resurrection were on the first day of the week, so it became known to them as the Lord's day. R4600:2
Was not only honored as the memorial of our Lord's resurrection, but was again marked by divine favor at Pentecost and became the memorial of the outpouring of the holy Spirit. R1942:6, 543:4
The question of Sabbath-keeping, like that of circumcision, is one that depends on the spirit or intent of the observer. We cannot gain life by keeping the Law. R543:5

To break bread -- An ordinary meal customary in the Early Church. The fruit of the vine is not mentioned in connection with these luncheons, while it is never omitted when the Memorial Supper is referred to. R1382:4, 1014:1, 839:6, 803:1, 466:3, 208:4; E472
These weekly celebrations were love-feasts, commemorative of Christ's resurrection. F472; R2771:4, 1014:1; NS77:2
Never intended to take the place of, nor in any sense to represent, our Lord's Memorial Supper. R2771:4, 1382:4, 1014:1, 208:4
In remembrance of Christ making himself known in "The breaking of bread."
(Luke 24:35) F384, 472; R4600:2,4

Acts 20:8

Upper chamber -- Their usual meeting places were private dwellings or rented upper rooms. R984:2
Those early gatherings did not resemble those of Babylon, mother or daughters, today. R984:2

Acts 20:10

For his life -- Greek, psuche; soul, being. E337
Is in him -- He has not yet expired. E337
These restorations of a faint spark of life are never called a resurrection in Scripture. R360:2

Acts 20:11

Was come up again -- The Lord constantly witnessed with Paul to the truth, by miracles and signs which mightily convinced the people. R1558:5
Had broken bread -- A plain meal. R1014:1, 1382:4, 839:6, 803:1, 466:3

Acts 20:15

Miletus -- About fifty miles south of Ephesus. R4458:1
About thirty miles distant from Ephesus. R3171:3
The seaport to Ephesus. R2220:6

Acts 20:16

Paul -- At this time Nero, aged 21, was Emperor of Rome, and the Apostle Paul was about 56 years of age, in the full prime of his Christian life and experience. R3171:3
Ephesus -- Symbolizing the first of the seven successive stages of the Christian Church (Rev. 2 & 3), covering the period during the lives of the apostles. This stage is commended for its faithful, patient labor and for its discernment of truth and true teachers. R5992:2, 491:1*
Day of Pentecost -- Paul and the other apostles subsequently had special trials at this special season, in the Spring. R3179:1

Acts 20:17

And from Miletus -- Because it was uncertain how long the vessel would be detained in changing cargo, etc. R3171:3
Called the elders -- Paul sent word to the elders that he would be there a little while and would be glad to meet them once more. R5388:3
That he might have as long as possible with them, without missing his vessel when it would be ready to start. R3171:3
The word "elders" here is the same as presbytery in 1 Tim 4:14. R3172:1, 3173:2
The faithful advanced and active ones. R1524:3
Whose duty it was to take the oversight of the Lord's flock in their vicinity, to feed them with the truth, to guard them from wolves in sheep's clothing, and to act as their representatives. R1890:3, 5388:3
As wise sheep--rams of the flock, leaders--that the sheep learn to follow in the absence of the shepherd. R5389:1

Acts 20:18

When they were come -- The elders came and held a lengthy conference with Paul. R5388:3 He said unto them -- An address from a general overseer to local overseers. R3171:6

Acts 20:19

Humility of mind -- Not boastfully. R2221:1, 4458:2

Many tears -- His was the grief of an unselfish heart yearning over the salvation of others. R1886:5*

Jews -- "False brethren." R4458:2

Acts 20:20

Kept back nothing -- Paul sought to impart to all the same knowledge of the divine character and plan which he himself enjoyed. R2221:1

Acts 20:21

Faith toward -- Or, in. R555:3*

Lord Jesus Christ -- There is only the one Gospel of Christ to be accepted through faith and turning away from sin. R4458:2

Acts 20:22

Bound in the spirit -- A bondage or restraint upon his mind that Paul could not shake off. R4458:2

He must go to Jerusalem; this was the Lord's providence for him. R4458:2

Acts 20:23

The Holy Ghost -- Nothing here necessitates the thought of the personality of the holy Spirit. E277; R373:1

Witnesseth -- He received assurances from others through the "gifts" that bonds and imprisonment awaited him at Jerusalem. R4458:2
Perhaps by prophecies like that of Agabus. (Acts 21:10, 11) E277

Bonds and afflictions -- Mobs and stripes and imprisonment were Paul's constant expectation. R1558:2

Abide -- Await. R4458:2

Acts 20:24

None of these things move me -- We never hear from him a complaint about the way the world rejected his message, spoke evil of him and maltreated him. R3820:4

He only rejoiced in the privilege thus afforded of testifying of his love to the Lord. R1884:6

"Because the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts." (Rom. 5:5) SM271:1

Neither count I -- Counting the things of this present time as "not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us." (Rom. 8:18) R5824:5

"I count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord." (Phil. 3:8) R3001:3, 5824:5

Paul's prompt transfer of his affections and desires and everything that he possessed to the Lord is most beautifully expressed in his own language. NS159:2

My life -- Greek, psuche; soul, being. E337

My earthly life. R3001:3; E191

Dear -- Precious, valuable. R3001:3

Unto myself -- These are courageous words. R4458:2

Finish my course with joy -- Under tests of great and ever-increasing severity his character developed into most graceful and beautiful proportions. R1885:2

And the ministry -- And fulfill the ministry. R2221:2

The gospel -- The same Gospel we are preaching today. R4458:3

The truth. R110:5

The grace of God -- Manifested in the gift of God's Son, that he should taste death for every man; and further manifested in an outline of how the death of Christ was designed to bring blessings to our race.

R4458:3

Paul was a miracle of grace. R1558:5

Acts 20:25

The kingdom of God -- For the rule of mankind; for the suppression of sin and death. The divine proclamation first calls out the "Little Flock" to be joint-heirs with their dear Redeemer in that Kingdom. R4458:3

See my face no more -- Parting with no hope of seeing each other again this side the veil is a doubly severe ordeal. R4458:3, 5388:3

Acts 20:26

Pure from the blood -- Paul was bearing in mind his personal responsibility as a steward of the Lord and the solemn significance of it as indicated by the Prophet. (Ezekiel 33:7-9) R1558:6

Acts 20:27

Not shunned -- Paul did not compromise the truth, nor mix it with human philosophy to make it more palatable to either Jews or Gentiles, or to avoid thus any measure of the otherwise inevitable persecution. R1558:6

Did not shrink from. R1151:2*

The gospel which the apostles preached was not such bad tidings and they were not ashamed of it, and had no need to blush or apologize for any part of it. R922:5

To declare -- This proves that Communism is no part of the Gospel, nor of the counsel of God for this age. R1862:4

Paul wrote more than one-half of the New Testament. R4552:2

All the counsel -- Whole counsel, or will. R1151:2*, 1572:1

Nor did the apostles keep back a part. R922:5

Nor can we imagine any need for more apostles; for we still have those twelve with us--their testimony and the fruits of their labors. F209

Yet Paul said not one word about there being one God and at the same time three Gods; nor that man cannot die but must live everlastingly in pleasure or woe. R1572:1

And not one word respecting eternal torment. R4458:4, 4552:2, 1572:1, 1085:5, 922:5; HG222:2, 306:6, 608:4; NS701:1

Nor does he anywhere recommend the Church to undertake the world's moral uplift and regeneration in the present time. R2515:1

Whatsoever, therefore, is additional to that which was stated by the Apostle is not the counsel of God. R2414:1

Revelings capable of elaboration under the Spirit's guidance, but quite sufficient for such elaboration. R2419:3

The Apostle exercised wisdom in his method of dealing with those whom he desired to bless, hiding from them for a time truths which at first they were not prepared to receive, but later he made plain to them. R3675:1

Strong meat for men and milk for babes. (1 Cor. 3:1, 2; Heb. 5:12-14) R3675:1

Of God -- In the strongest form. R5126:4

Not my own opinions. R1419:3; HG311:6

The same message which has come down to us in Paul's epistles. R4458:4

Acts 20:28

Take heed -- A watch of our motives, a watch of all that we do. CR124:1

Those who do not keep guard over their own hearts cannot faithfully serve the interests of the Church in general. R3171:6

The elders of the Church were not only consecrated to the Lord, but as teachers of the Church, they had a double responsibility--in respect to themselves and to the Church over which the Lord had made them overseers. R4458:6, 3943:3, 2221:2

Unto yourselves -- Written to the elders at Ephesus. R5388:2

His charge applied not only to such persons then living, but down even to our day. R1524:3

As those who should give account of their opportunities and responsibilities, which they must recognize as from both the Lord and the brethren. R5305:6

Lest, having preached to others, they themselves become castaways. (1 Cor. 9:27) R4459:1

Elders need first of all to watch themselves. F283; R4459:1, 3943:3, 2221:2

Because in every trial the most favored and most prominent have the severest besetments and tests. R4346:4

Elders are in danger of being carried away by a feeling of self-importance, self-conceit, of becoming arrogant. R5388:3

We should each first examine our own hearts. R3943:3; CR124:1

It behooves every one to take heed to himself more than to others. R5388:3

None can successfully care for the salvation of others who neglect their own. R3171:6

To all the flock -- The young, the advanced and strong, and the weak and delicate, who need special assistance. R2808:2

Not merely the well-favored financially, socially, educationally, or otherwise. R3172:1

The "sheep" and "lambs" are far better a little lonely in the "green pastures" and beside "still waters" than in communication with the "grievous wolves" of this evil day. R1851:1

Those who accept the ministry or service of the Church should realize that they have assumed a weighty responsibility, for which they must "give an account to God." (Rom. 14:12) R4459:1

To warn, to encourage, to assist all of these, as opportunity may offer. R4459:1

This does not mean fault-finding with the brethren; an elder, too, should follow Matt. 18:15. R4459:1

An elder, by his very election, has been asked to take an oversight of the affairs of the congregation. R4459:2

Over the which -- The Revised Version says, "In the which." The elders are not a superior class, but members of it--overseeing members. R5935:2, 4458:6, 3172:1, 2221:3

The Holy Ghost -- Elders are to realize they are chosen of the holy Spirit. R5388:3, 2221:2

By directing or overruling in the matter of their selection. E278

God, through his holy Spirit, sets apart men to various offices which he deems needful to the Church. R373:2

Whoever, by the grace of God, is placed in a position of opportunity to feed the Lord's flock should consider it one of the highest privileges of life. R2808:2

Made you overseers -- Elders, shepherds. R4122:4, 5935:2, 4184:3, 3143:1 Bishops. R5935:2, 4458:6, 4184:3, 4122:4, 1957:1; F244, 283 Caretakers. R2808:2

One charged with a duty respecting others. R3172:1

Every appointed elder was recognized as an overseer of a work great or small. F244

It means an oversight, a care of all the interest of the congregation and the individuals of it. R4459:1

The Lord does not raise up rulers from among our brethren; but he does raise up faithful leaders, to whom earnest heed should be given. R1559:4
The position of a bishop gives no authority over the Church, except that which properly comes from great piety, wisdom and experience. R3172:2
Whose duty it was to take the oversight of the Lord's flock in their vicinity, to guard them against the wolves in sheep's clothing, and act as their representatives. R1890:3

This applies in a still wider sense, every member is to some extent a keeper of every other member, and is commissioned to help in watching over the Lord's flock. R2221:2

Applies to all who are truly the Lord's; every one is to be a preacher of righteousness, a servant of the truth. R2229:5

A great mission, an important service, to be rendered in the name of the Lord. R5388:3

Wild animals choose as their leaders those who have shown themselves finding good pastures and guarding against enemies; a good illustration for us. R3172:2*

The most unbishoply character a man can have is to be blind. R3172:3*

To feed -- Teach. R4122:4

Neglect no part--feed the flock. R118:3*

Give them the meat in due season. (Matt. 24:45) CR124:3

The green pastures and still waters (Psa. 23:2) of divine truth. R2221:3, 1890:3

The responsibility for spiritual things properly rests in the hands of the elders. Q481:4

Applies to each member of the flock in proportion to his capacity and ability, but specially to the elders. R3136:1

The chief work of the Master's followers has been to minister to the needs of the spirit-begotten sheep. R5052:5

It is also necessary that each under-shepherd give attention to his own spiritual feeding and refreshment. R4184:3

Not to pen up in sects, nor as so much mutton to feed upon and from which to shear the golden fleece. R2221:3, 3142:2

The most unpastoral character a man can have is instead of feeding, to want to be fed. R3172:3*

The church -- Ecclesia. F81, 283

There is no recognition in Scripture of sects or factions in the one Church. F81

Of God -- The Church does not belong to the elders. R2221:3

They are to recognize their position as representatives, not only of the congregation, but also of the Lord. R5388:3

He -- Christ. R1524:3

Purchased -- This purchase value in the Lord's sight should be so deeply impressed upon their minds that they would be willing to lay down their lives for the brethren in any service. R4459:2

With his own blood -- With the blood of his own beloved Son. E51;

R5981:3, 3943:2, 3172:3, 1299:1*; CR124:2; NS859:1

"By the blood of his own." (Diaglott) R4168:1, 4085:2, 735:5

"Son" being understood. R4085:2

It was the giving up of Christ's life that paid our ransom price. (Matt. 20:28) R1336:1, 3142:6, 1230:3

"Being now justified by his blood." (Rom. 5:9) E446

His blood became the basis for the forgiveness of our sins, made peace, reconciliation, changing us from sentenced culprits to sons of God.

R1230:3 Not only for the "Church of God," but also for the whole world.

R1336:1

Acts 20:29

After my departing -- With the death of the apostles, there came upon the Church gradually a horror of great darkness. With the coming of the error of doctrine came multitudes of nominal Christians. NS633:5,6

"While men (the special servants, the apostles) slept, an enemy came and sowed tares." (Matt. 13:25) F201

Grievous wolves -- Self-seeking ones who never were true sheep. R3767:5, 5388:3

Ambitious for power, influence, etc., they would not hesitate to barter the interests of the flock for their own advancement. R3172:4, 1559:1

False teachers enslaved the people with fear through errors, then extorted money for the relief of the fears. OV361:2; R3142:3, 1558:6

The Papacy and destructive Higher Critics. F222

The docile, innocent sheep are deceived until these wolves begin biting and devouring and scattering the flock. R4459:3

The wolf does injury with his mouth, and so do these--slandering, back-biting. R4459:4

The faithful elders will be quick to discern and prompt to warn and defend the flock against all such influences. R1890:5

Ravenous, greedy, selfish: "Through covetousness shall they with feigned words make merchandise of you." (2 Pet. 2:3) R3747:1

"I send you forth as sheep in the midst of wolves." (Matt. 10:16) R3331:3

In sheep's clothing, of course; otherwise they would not be received.

R3142:5, 5388:6, 4459:3, 2221:3

"Beware of false prophets, who come to you in sheeps' clothing, but inwardly they are ravening wolves." (Matt. 7:15) R5388:6

Enter in among you -- The wolves are not part of the flock at any time.

A certain class of people of a wolfish nature would seek to associate themselves with the Church. R5388:3

Not sparing -- Destroying them as new creatures, and dragging them down to death. R5388:6

Such were the great and destructive papal powers. R1319:3

The flock -- Sheep are very timid, but among them are wise sheep which they follow as leaders. These old rams of the flock would represent elders of the Church of Christ. R5389:1

Whenever any one manifests the improper goat disposition, the ecclesia should strictly avoid making him a leader. R5389:4

Acts 20:30

Of your own selves -- From your own company, from those whom you have hitherto regarded as members of the Body of Christ and who still claim to be such. R1319:6

Especially amongst the elders, desirous of being leaders, they would not hesitate to produce a schism in the Church to help along their ambition. R4459:2

Our severest trials come not from without. R5118:3

Danger would be from within. R3172:4 Shall men -- Hymeneus, Alexander, Phygellus, Hermogenes and Philetus, all false teachers, had their rise in Ephesus. (1 Tim. 1:20; 2 Tim. 1:15, 2:17) R2221:4, 4459:4

Those who come under the power of the Adversary. R4477:4

Arise -- Be puffed up by ambition. R3172:4, 5118:3, 4459:2, 2221:3, 2219:6, 1524:3

"Heady." (2 Tim. 3:4) R2221:3

Pride may sink its possessor in ruin and death. R496:2*

Perverse things -- Wrong, misleading doctrines. F248

Signifies distorted, twisted. R4459:2

Things different from what I, Paul, have taught. R3142:5

"Many shall follow their pernicious ways; by reason of whom the way of truth shall be evil spoken of." (2 Pet. 2:2) R4477:5

They will distort the truth, to make it harmonious with some false theory. R2221:4, 4459:3

There seems to be a class who pervert the truth, injuring the flock, stirring up arguments that confuse the flock. R5388:6, 1319:6

Paul declared that many would "depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils." (1 Tim. 4:1-3) SM676:1; OV415:4

To draw away -- Taking for granted that some of the Lord's people are more stupid than the ass, they do their best to turn them from the Master's crib. R4044:3

Such, ministering to their own exaltation as teachers, would lead the flock into dangerous paths. R496:3*

To injure the flock in general through personal ambition. R5118:3, 4459:2, 3172:4

The tendency of knowledge is to puff up, make vain and conceited, and to become a temptation. R2219:6

Disciples -- Followers. R3142:5, 2219:6

Falsely claiming to be apostles. R5752:1

Their sentiment seems to be, "This is my class, my flock," not recognizing that the Church is the Lord's flock. R5389:1

After them -- Artfully attract followers after themselves. F248; R5389:1
The special trials of this "hour of temptation" (Rev. 3:10) begin with the leaders. R4473:6

Acts 20:31

Therefore watch -- Warning voices and wholesome counsel are necessary. R3331:2

It is the duty of the elders to watch against these evils. R4459:4

Watch for the interests of the flock as against the wolves. R4459:4

Watch also against those sure to arise "of your own selves." R4459:4

These ambitions do not suddenly germinate and bear fruit; the process is a gradual one, and hence more dangerous. R4459:3

Proper watching will begin with our own hearts, saying, Lord, is it I? R4459:4

The oneness of thought, mind and action is required of the Church of God. R1130:6*

To warn -- Admonish. R3172:5

The great Apostle felt properly the weight of responsibility resting upon him as a servant of God. R4459:5

With tears -- The Apostle did not remind them of the large number of entertainments, fairs, suppers, festivals and money-making schemes he had engineered. R3172:5

His entreaties on behalf of righteousness and spirituality, which, with tears, were much better backing than frivolities of any kind. R3172:5

Acts 20:32

Commend you to God -- God, is on our part, is on the part of all those who are seeking to cooperate with his arrangements. (Psa. 118:6, 7) R4459:5

Word of his grace -- The Gospel message. R4459:6

Faith is based upon the Word of God. (Rom. 10:17) R69:4*

The Word of God is able to build us up substantially. R3172:6

The Word of God is sufficient, "that the man of God may be thoroughly furnished." (2 Tim. 3:15-17) OV396:1

The Scriptures contain the power which leads us to consecration and setting apart to the Lord's service and to maintain our sanctified relationship. NS734:4

Neglect of God's Word of grace, means a deficiency of strength to bear the trial which is our portion. R4459:6

An inheritance -- Implies a gift or a promise--future. CR392:1; R985:5

These promises are indeed a great power of God unto salvation to all them that believe and obey them. R1009:5

Sanctified -- The true Church, the true Priesthood. R985:5

"Sons of God." (1 John 3:1, 2) R69:4*

Only the sanctified of the present age are to get the inheritance that is now offered--the heavenly inheritance with our Lord Jesus. NS734:4

Acts 20:33

No man's silver -- Following in the steps of Jesus will not lead us in the direction of salaries. F287

The Apostle was not serving them for the accumulation of wealth, nor to secure the comforts of the present life. R4460:4

Acts 20:34

These hands -- Paul had labored with his own hands. R3173:2; F287

Have ministered -- Used his trade as tent-maker for his own support, and for financial assistance of those associated with him in the Gospel work. R5935:2, 4460:4

He never let his business run away with him, or interfere with his religious life. R619:2*

My necessities -- He found it necessary to do so; thus showing them their duty. R449:6*

Them that were with me -- Apparently some others who were of St. Paul's company had no trade or could find no profitable employment. Apparently they were largely dependent on him for things temporal, as well as things spiritual. R4460:4

I have shewed you -- Illustrated to you in. R2221:5

The exhortation of a living example. R1559:1

In all things set before them an example of how they also as elders (presbyters) and overseers (bishops, episcopos) ought to help the weak. R3173:2

Support the weak -- The stronger of the brethren should take pleasure in helping the weaker up to the stature of manhood in Christ. R5926:2, 2221:6
Bear with the weaker ones. (Rom. 14:1; 15:1; 1 Thes. 5:14) R2163:4*

More blessed to give -- Where the giving is willing and voluntary. R4777:6

The art of giving himself is one of the secrets of a happy Christian life. R5935:5, 2221:6

Paul was happy, "joyful in tribulation" (2 Cor. 7:4), giving constantly for the good of others from his store of grace and truth. R4526:2

He was more blessed in the giving than any of his hearers in the receiving of his message. R4526:2

In the dark pathway of sorrow, there are abundant opportunities to be generous. R4526:5

A kind word of sympathy or advice, even a kind look, has sometimes been worth more to a discouraged brother than a handful of gold. R4526:5
God himself is the great Giver, even providing a ransom for all. R3173:2

Acts 20:36

When he had thus spoken -- When we may suppose the sailing of the vessel was announced. R3173:5

And prayed -- The apostles not only prayed to the Father in secret, but also prayed publicly before the Church. R2023:3
"The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much." (James 5:16) R1559:4

Acts 20:37

They all wept sore -- The thought that they should never see Paul again filled them with sadness.

R3173:5

Notice the strong affection with which Paul inspired those who came to know him. R1886:1*

Theirs were the tears of natural affection, mourning its own loss. R1886:5*

Paul found it necessary to labor with his own hands (verse 34). Whether they felt any compunction for laying this necessity upon him, might have had something to do with their weeping. R449:6*

Acts 20:38

Unto the ship -- Paul and his company were finally obliged to break away from them, to get aboard their vessel. R2222:1

Acts 21

Acts 21:1

That after we -- Paul, Luke, Trophimus and Aristarchus. R2222:1

Were gotten from -- Had torn ourselves away from the elders from Ephesus, breaking of very tender ties. R3182:1

Refers to the affectionate parting. R2222:1

Acts 21:2

Finding a ship -- They were obliged to take a cargo sailboat, which stopped here and there in the interest of business. R4466:3

Acts 21:4

Finding disciples -- This reminds us how the Lord's followers love to meet the pilgrims and how the pilgrims seek for those who know and love the Redeemer. R4467:1

We tarried there -- Those seven days were profitably employed by the Apostle in talking over with the Church at Tyre the gracious plan of God. R2222:3

Through the Spirit -- The message came to them that the Apostle at Jerusalem would be imprisoned, maltreated, etc. R3182:2
An illustration of the agencies by which the holy power of God informed Paul. R373:1

Nothing here indicates personality of the Spirit. R373:1; E277

Not go up -- They had a revelation from God that Paul would suffer violence, and on the strength of this information they themselves advised the Apostle not to go. R3182:3
